Ver. 29. And Balaam said unto the Afs,] One would have expected, that he should have been astonished, and struck as dumb as the Afs naturally was, to hear her speak so plain, and expostulate with him : But he was in a Rage, or rather Fury ; so that for the present he did not consider any thing, but her untoward Crossness. St. Peter observes so much, when he saith the dumb Afs rebuked the Madnes of the Prophet ; where the Word παροργισια is unusual in the Greek Language, signifying that he was besides himself, not knowing what he said or did ; partly out of Anger, and partly because he was possessed with an eager Desire and Hope to serve Balak, and get the Riches and Honour he promised him, now that he had got Leave of GOD to go to him.

[Because thou hast mocked me :] Or, as the Arabic Version, printed at Paris, translates it, thrown me in the Dirt. But they seem to have read the Word other ways than it is in the Hebrew ; where it signifies either Mocking, or exposing to Scorn and Laughter.

[I would there were a Sword in mine Hand, for now would I kill thee.] This shews the Height of his Rage, Rage, to be thus crossed in his Designs ; and, as the Jewish Doctors take it, the Height of his Folly also ; that he should pretend to be able to destroy the whole Congregation of Israel with his Incantments, who needed a Sword to kill a poor Afs.

Ver. 30. And the Afs said unto Balaam, Am not I thine Afs,] This does not prove that the Afs understood what Balaam said, and thereupon returned this pertinent Answer ; but that the same Power which made the Afs speak at first, continued to form such an Answer as might convince Balaam of his Error.

Upon which thou had ridden ever since I was thine, unto this Day ?] The Hebrew Words will not bear this Sense ; but are exactly rendered in the Margin of our Bibles, ever since thou wast, that is, a Rider ; ever since thou began to ride, as Aben-Ezra expounds it. Whence many render it, saom thy Youth ; which may be supposed to be a long time ; Balaam, in all likelihood, being now no young Man, but for many Years a famous Prophet.

Was I ever wont to do so unto thee ?] Hast thou not had sufficient Experience, in so many Years as I have served thee, of my sure going ? As much as to say, Thou shouldst have thought some unwonted Cause had forced me to do three times what I never did before.

And he said, Nay.] He could not but allow the Truth of what was spoken by the Afs.

Ver. 31. Then the LORD opened the Eyes of Balaam,] He was not blind before ; but his Eyes were held, as the Eyes of the Men of Sodom were, who could not see Lot's Door, tho' they found their Way to their own Home, Gen. xix. 1.

And he saw the Angel of the LORD standing in the Way, and his Sword drawn in his Hand :] He understood the true Cause of the Afs's turning aside, and falling under him.

And he bowed down his Head, and fell flat on his Face.] He first bowed his Head, and then his whole Body, in token of his most profound Reverence.

Ver. 32. And the Angel of the LORD said unto him, Wherefore hast thou smitten thine Afs these three times ?] This serves to teach us, saith Maimonides, not to use Cruelty towards Beasts, but to treat them gently and mercifully, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 17. or rather, as another of them makes the Angel say to Balaam ; If I am commanded to reprove thee for thy Injustice to thy Afs, how much more for thy wicked Intention to destroy a whole Nation ? But the Drift of this Speech seems to be, to reprehend the brutish Stupidity of the Prophet, in not apprehending some extraordinary Hand of God, which turned his Afs aside so oft, and at last made her speak.

Behold, I went out to withstand thee,] I was the Cause of thy Afs's turning out of the Way, and falling down, by my standing in the Path to oppose thee, and stop thy Proceedings, ver. 22.

Because thy Way is perverse before me.] His Intentions and Purposes were not sincere and honest : for pretending to obey God, he designed, if he could, to serve Balak. The Word we translate perverse, signifies perplexed and intricate in the Arabian Language : and so Bocbartus thinks it should be translated here.

Ver. 33. And the Afs saw me, and turned from me these three times :] I was merciful unto thee, in letting the Afs see me ; which saved thy Life : as it here follows.

Unless she had turned from me, surely now I had slain thee, and saved her alive.] It had cost thee thy Life, if the Afs had gone forward ; and thy Life alone ; for I would not have done any Hurt to her.

Ver. 34. And Balaam said unto the Angel of the LORD, I have sinned :] It is not certain that this refers to any Sense he had of the perverse Disposition of his Heart ; for it may have respect only to his Outrageousness against his Afs, which he confesses was without Cause.

For I knew not that thou stoodst in the Way against me :] Or rather, But I knew not, &c. for this seems to be said in Excuse of himself ; from his Ignorance, that the Afs was turned out of the Way by the Angel.

Now therefore, if it displease thee, I will get me back again :] He would not understand the Angel right ; who did not find Fault with his going to Balak, but with his going with such bad Intentions.

Ver. 35. And the Angel of the LORD said unto Balaam, Go with the Men :] As God had before bidden him, ver. 20. and did not send the Angel to forbid what he had allowed.

But only the Word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak :] These Words are something different from those in ver. 20. importing both that he should not presume to speak a Word but what he ordered, and that he should not forbear to speak what he had him.

So Balaam went with the Princes of Balak.] Whom he overtook after this Stop, either at the Place where they lodged, or where they staid for him ; but he did not tell them what he met withal in the Way.

Ver. 36. And when Balak heard that Balaam was come,] By some Messenger sent before, to acquaint him with his coming.

He went out to meet him] Partly out of Joy ; and partly out of Respect to him.

Unto a City of Moab, which is in the Border of Arnon,] This City seems to have been Ar, ch. xxi. 15.

Which is in the utmost Coast.] He did him the Honour to meet him, at the very Entrance of his Country ; and did not think it sufficient to send some of his Court to receive him.

Ver. 37. And Balak said unto Balaam, Did not I earnestly send unto thee to call thee ?] After this Compliment was paid to Balaam, the King could not forbear to let him know, he did not think himself well used by him, whom he had earnestly intreated to come to him, and at the first he would not.

Wherefore camest thou not unto me ?] As soon as I sent for thee.

Am I not able indeed to promote thee to Honour ?] Dost thou doubt of my Power to make thee a great Man, if thou gratifiest me in my Desire ? And his Readiness he shewed by this honourable Reception of him.

Ver. 38. And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee.] Say no more of that; but be satisfied that I am now come.

Have I now any Power at all to say any thing?] Yet he would not have him expect, that he should do all that Balak desired, or he himself was inclined to do; for he was under an higher, overruling Power, which he could not gainsay.

The Word that God putteth in my Mouth, that shall I speak.] He seems to acquaint him, that he had received such a Command from God, ver. 35. and he must be obedient.

Ver. 39. And Balaam went with Balak,] This did not discourage the King of Moab from carrying Balaam along with him into his Country; where he hoped he might be persuaded to do as he would have him.

And they came unto Kirjath-buzoth.] The royal City, it is likely; for it signifies in our Language the City of Streets; that is, a large City, which had many Streets, and consequently Inhabitants in it.

Ver. 40. And Balak offered Oxen and Sheep,] In Thankfulness that he had procured Balaam's Assistance, as he hoped, against his Enemies.

And sent to Balaam.] They were such Sacrifices, as the Jews called Peace-offerings; of which the Offerers had a Share for themselves, and for their Friends: and the Sacrifice being over, Balak invited Balaam to come to the Feast he made thereupon.

And to the Princes that were with him.] The Princes, I suppose, of Midian and of Moab, who were sent on the Embassy to him, and had succeeded in it, ver. 7, 15.

Ver. 41. And it came to pass on the Morrow,] Having rested one Night after his Journey, Balak would have him go about his Business, and see what he could do for him.

That Balak took Balaam,] Into his Chariot.

And brought him up into the High-places of Baal,] All Nations worshipped their Gods in High-places; and Baal was the God of this Country; who was worshipped in more High-places than one; unto all which he brought Balaam, that he might see where he could take the fullest View of the Israelites, and which of them would be fittest for his Purpose. These High-places were full of Trees, and very shady, (as I observed Lev. xxvi. 30.) which made them the fitter both for the solemn Thoughts and Prayers of such as were devout, and for the filthy Inclinations and Intentions of the Wicked. Baal was the Name of several Gods, both Male and Female, as our Selden shews in his Synagma ii. de Diis Syris, cap. 1. And I suppose Chemosh, the God of Moab, is here called by this Name, (signifying a Lord) tho' that great Man seems to take it for Baal-Peor, cap. 2. of that Book.

That thence he might see the utmost of the People.] i. e. All their Armies, to the very Skirts of their Camp.

CHAP. XXIII.

Ver. 1. AND Balaam said unto Balak, Build me here] Upon one of the High-places; which Balaam, it is likely, pitched upon as fit for his Purpose.

Seven Altars.] The Number Seven was much observed; we find, among the Hebrews, by God's Order, (see Lev. iv. 6.) but we never read of more than one Altar built by the Patriarchs, when they offered their Sacrifices; nor was more than one allowed by Moses. Therefore in this there was something of the Heathen Superstition; who worshipping the Sun, (who is principally meant by Baal) offered also to all the Seven Planets: Unless we allow the Conjecture of Fortunatus Scacchus, who imagines, that as Moses erected twelve Pillars according to the Number of the Children of Israel, when he entered them into the Covenant of God, (Exod. xxiv. 4.) so Balaam ordered Seven Altars to be erected, according to the Number of the principal Houses of Moab, Myrothec. Sacr. Elzeobrisin. P. ii. cap. 59. But there is no Ground for the Conceit of Abarbinel, who, in his Preface to Leviticus, Sect. 4. saith, Balaam ordered this in Emulation of the Seven acceptable Altars to God, built by Seven Men famous for Piety, viz. Adam, Abel, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Moses. There is more Certainty in this, that these Altars were erected in Honour either of the Most High, or of the greatest of their Gods: For according to the Account, which both Festus and Servius have given us of the ancient Times, they sacrificed to the Celestial Gods only upon Altars (which were so called, because they were aræ aliæ, built high and lofty) whereas to the Terrestrial they sacrificed upon the Earth; and to the Infernal Gods, in Holes digged in the Earth.

And prepare me here seven Oxen, and seven Rams.] To offer one of each upon the several Altars, as it follows ver. 2. This Number was used by pious Persons, both in these Days, Job xlii. 8. and in After-times, 1 Chron. xv. 26.

Ver. 2. And Balak did as Balaam had spoken,] Caused the Altars to be built (which was done, either of Stones, or of Turf) and the Sacrifices to be brought.

And Balak and Balaam offered on every Altar a Bullock, and a Ram.] Kings, in ancient Times, were Priests also; as appears by Melchizedech: But perhaps Balak only presented the Sacrifices to be offered for him, and for his People; and Balaam performed the Office of a Priest. The only Doubt is, to whom these Sacrifices were offered. I suppose each of them had their several Intentions: Balak supplicating Baal by them; and Balaam making his Prayer to the LORD, tho' with such superstitious Ceremonies, it is likely, as were used by the Worshipers of Baal; in one of whose High-places these Sacrifices were offered. But it may also be supposed, that Balaam telling Balak he could not effect any thing without the LORD, the God of Israel, persuaded him to join with him at present in his Worship, that they might prevail with him to withdraw his Presence from the Israelites: For there is no Reason to think, that Balaam would go to enquire of the LORD, when he had sacrificed to other Gods; and it appears evidently from ver. 4. that he pretended to sacrifice unto God; and would not have presumed surely to tell him so, if he meant otherwise.

Ver. 3.

Ver. 3. And Balaam said unto Balak,] When he had laid the Pieces upon the Altars.

Stand by thy Burnt-offering,] Attend thy Sacrifice, and pray to GOD to accept it. By this it appears, that these Sacrifices were of a different Nature from those mentioned in cb. xxii. 40. being Burnt-offerings which were wholly consumed. And one of them seems to have been offered particularly for Balak, which he calls his Burnt-offering; as the rest were for the Princes of Moab, who, it is likely, stood by them representing all the People.

And here it is to be observed, that in old Time, before the Law of Moses was given, Burnt-offerings served for all Purposes in Divine Worship; whether they gave Thanks for Blessings, or deprecated evil Things, or prayed for good. Thus Noah, when he returned Thanks to GOD for his Preservation in the Ark, offered Burnt-offerings, Gen. viii. 20. And when Job beseeched GOD to pardon his Sons, cb. i. 5. and his Friends, cb. xlii. 8. he offered Sacrifices of this sort: and so did Balak and Balaam here use them, to procure Blessings upon Moab, and a Curse upon Israel.

And I will go:] By myself, into some private Place, to consult with GOD, and to exercise his Inchantments (as may be gathered from cb. xxiv. 1.) whereby he thought he might prevail for such a Power as he desired, of cursing the People of Israel.

Peradventure the LORD will come to meet me:] He durst not be confident, because he had lately opposed his Proceeding (cb. xxii. 31.) in a frightful manner.

And whatsoever he sheweth me,] Whatsoever he reveals to me, either by Word or otherwise.

I will tell thee.] Deal faithfully with thee, and conceal nothing from thee.

And he went to an High-place.] Or rather, into a Valley; for he was now in an High-place when he sacrificed, and did not go into another High-place, but down into the Plain, (as the Hebrew Word properly signifies) where he might, in some solitary Retirement, address himself to GOD, and expect his Presence with him. So we translate it in the Margin, he went solitary. Therefore, if we retain the other Translation, it must be understood of some Part of the High-place, where he might be solitary, viz. into the Grove, which High-places seldom wanted. In these High-places they built their Temples, and had their Oracles: as we learn from Justin, lib. xxiv. cap. 6. where he saith, the Temple of Apollo positum est in monte Parnasso, &c. was seated upon the Mountain Parnassus: and from Pausanias, who speaking of the Cave of Trochonus in Bœotia, saith, ἐστὶ τὸ τὰ μαντεῖον ὑπὲρ τὸ ἄλσος ἐπὶ τῷ ὄρει, the Oracle is in a Grove upon a Mountain. The like might be observed of other Oracles; which may countenance this Conjecture, that some such pretended Oracle might be in this High-place, where Balaam went for Direction from GOD.

Ver. 4. And GOD met Balaam;] Appeared unto him, as he had been wont to do in other Places, cb. xxii. 9, 20. where the Word Elohim is constantly used, as it is here, and every-where else, till we come to ver. 16. which strengthens the Opinion, that the LORD hitherto spake to him only by an Angel.

And he said unto him,] i. e. Balaam said unto GOD, when he saw him appear.

I have prepared seven Altars, and I have offered upon every Altar a Bullock, and a Ram.] This shews he sacrificed unto GOD, and not unto Baal: and he represents it to GOD, that he might be moved thereby to condescend to his Desire. For Sacrificing was a Form of Supplication, as we find in other Places; particularly 1 Sam. xiii. 12. and that which he begged of GOD, was, in all likelihood, that he would give him Power to curse Israel.

Ver. 5. And the Lord put a Word in Balaam's Mouth,] Told him what he should say. And therefore, saith Maimonides, he spake by the Spirit of GOD: which he makes account was the second Degree of Prophecy. Whence that Description Balaam gives of himself, he hath said, who heard the Words of GOD, P. ii. More Nevochim, c. 45.

And said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.] He commanded him to speak unto Balak, at his Return to him, as he was instructed, and no otherwise. The Words he bad him speak, are those that we read below, ver. 7, 8, &c.

Ver. 6. And he returned unto him, and lo, he stood by his Burnt-sacrifice,] He found him in the very same Posture wherein he left him (ver. 3.): Which shews Balaam did not go far, nor stay long before he returned; and that Balak was earnest in his Supplications.

He, and all the Princes of Moab.] Who were concerned in the good Success of his Negotiation.

Ver. 7. And he took up] An Hebrew Phrase for speaking aloud.

His Parable,] Or, Prophetical Speech; which was sometimes delivered in Parables, properly so called: that is, not in plain Words, but in apt Figures and Resemblances, (concerning which see Maimonides, P. ii. cap. 43.) But here the Word Parable signifies, as it doth in the Book of Job, a weighty Speech, expressed in sublime and majestic Words, Job xxvii. 1. xxix. 1.

And said, Balak the King of Moab hath brought me from Aram,] See cb. xxii. 5.

Out of the Mountains of the East,] The Country of Mesopotamia lay Eastward of Moab: and that Part of it towards Arabia, was stony and mountainous. See Bochartus in his Phaleg. lib. ii. cap. 6.

Saying, Come, curse me Jacob, and come, defy Israel.] Two different Expressions for the same Thing; only the latter Word (which we translate defy) imports something of Fury; because he would have had him curse them in such a Prophetick Rage, as should have the most direful Effects upon them.

Ver. 8. How shall I curse, whom GOD hath not cursed, &c.] As much as if he had said, Balak desires of me that which is impossible. In the Hierusalem Targum this Verse is thus paraphrased, How shall I curse the House of Jacob, when the Word of the LORD hath blessed them? or how shall I diminish the Family of Israel, when the Word of the LORD hath multiplied them?

Ver. 9. For from the Top of the Rocks] Upon which he then stood, when he spake these Words.

I see him,] As Balak desired he might, (ch. xxii. 41.) tho' for another Purpose; that he might curse them.

And from the Hills I behold him:] The same thing again, in other Words, according to the Manner of the Eastern People. And both these may relate, not only to the present View he had of the Camp of Israel, but to their future Settlement in their own Land; wherein they were represented to him as dwelling securely, under the special Protection of the Almighty.

Lo, the People shall dwell] In the Land of Canaan.

Alone,] Not mingled with other Nations, but separated from them by different Laws, Religion, and Manners. It seems also to import their Security and Safety, by the Situation of their Country, and GOD's Care of them.

And shall not be reckoned among the Nations.] Be a peculiar People by themselves; and therefore not liable to the Power of my Curses, like other Nations. All this came to pass, partly by the natural Situation of their Country, which was surrounded with high Mountains, and rocky Precipices, so that the coming to it was very difficult; but more especially by their Rites and Customs; and particularly by their Diet, which restrained them from common Conversation with other Nations; because they could not eat of their Food (Swines Flesh, for instance, which was a delicate Dish among the Gentiles, was an Abomination to the Israelites). By which means they were the better secured from learning the Religion of the Gentiles, having so little Communication with them, that they were called by Diodorus Siculus, and others, an unsociable People, and thought to have an Enmity to the rest of the World.

Ver. 10. Who can count the Dust of Jacob,] This may refer either to their present, or their future Increase; which was so great, that they might be compared to the Dust of the Earth, or the Sand on the Sea-shore, which is without Number. Hereby he confirmed the Promise made by GOD to Abraham, Gen. xiii. 16. and to Israel, ch. xxviii. 14. where he saith expressly, Thy Seed shall be as the Dust of the Earth.

And the Number of the fourth part of Israel?] Any one of their Camps, every one of which was grown to a vast Number: For the whole Host of Israel was divided into four Camps, under the Standard of Judah, Reuben, Ephraim and Dan, (as we read in the second Chapter of this Book) one of which Camps lay more plainly before him than the rest, viz. that on the West, under the Standard of Ephraim.

Let me die the Death of the Righteous,] By the Righteous he means Israel, who were now a People free from Idolatry, which was the great Crime of those Days: And he desires either to be as happy as they in the other World; or that he might not die an immature and violent Death, but enjoy such a long Life here, as was promised to them. The Author of Sepher Cosri takes it in the former Sense; alledging this Place as a Proof that a future State was believed in ancient Times, though not so clearly expressed in the Prophetical Writings, as other things are: For there is a certain Prayer, saith he, of one that prophesied by the Holy Ghost, who desired that he might die the Death of the Righteous, Parsi. Sect. 115.

And let my last End be like his.] Or, Let my Posterity, (for so the Word we here translate last End, often signifies, Psal. cix. 13. Dan. xi. 4.) or, those that come after me, be like unto his Descendants.

Ver. 11. And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done unto me?] This is very surprising.

I took thee to curse mine Enemies, and behold, thou hast blessed them altogether.] Thou hast not only frustrated my Desires, in not cursing them; but, quite contrary, hast pronounced great Blessings upon them. For so the Hebrew Words signify, Blessed them with Blessings.

Ver. 12. And he answered, and said, Must I not take heed to speak that which the LORD hath put in my Mouth?] He had told him so before, more than once, (ch. xxii. 23. xxiii. 3.) and now makes him Judge, Whether it was safe for him to disobey the LORD, to comply with his Desires.

Ver. 13. And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me unto another Place,] He thought Balaam gave him a reasonable Answer; and therefore gently intreats him to make a Trial, whether GOD would be pleased to be more favourable to his Desires, if he sought him in some other Place. For whatsoever Balaam thought of this Matter, Balak was possessed with a superstitious Fancy, that the very Place or Prospect had been a Cause concurrent to produce the contrary Effect to what he desired; and therefore intreated he would come with him to another, where he might not see too many of them at once.

From whence thou mayst see them:] It seems this was thought necessary to make their Curses effectual; that they should have a Sight of those whom they cursed, and that they should look upon them.

Thou shalt see but the utmost Part of them,] The Skirts of their Camps.

And shalt not see them all:] He imagined perhaps that Balaam was affrighted at the Sight of their Multitude, and therefore durst not meddle with them.

And curse me them from thence.] He seems to desire him to curse only that small Parcel of the Israelites, whom he saw in the utmost Part of the Camp; hoping he might by degrees get them all, in like manner, destroyed.

Ver. 14. And he brought him into the Field of Zophim,] Or, as some translate it, unto Sede-Zophim; a Place by the very Name apt to enchant a superstitious Mind with Expectation of Success, as Dr. Jackson speaks. It is thought by some to be so called from the Watchers that were placed here; which the word Zophim imports.

To the Top of Pisgab,] A very high Mountain in the Country of Moab, from whence one might see a great Way, and take a View of all the Parts of Canaan, Deut. iii. 27. xxxiv. 1, 2, &c. But on that Side of it whither Balak brought him, Balaam could not see much of the Camp of Israel. It is likely he thought, by bringing him to a Place so exceeding high, he should be nearer Heaven, and so procure a more favourable Audience than before.

And built seven Altars, and offered a Bullock and a Ram on every Altar.] As he had done before at Balaam's Desire, in another High-place, (ver. 1, 2.) for there only he imagined their Sacrifices would be acceptable. From hence Conradus Pellicanus concludes Balaam to have been a Worshipper of the true GOD, (as Jethro was) because he still continues to offer only such clean Creatures, as were wont to be sacrificed to him by his own People.

Ver. 15. And he said unto Balak, Stand here by thy Burnt-offering,] The same Direction which he had given before, ver. 3.

While I meet the LORD yonder.] In a Place to which he pointed. Balaam made a Peradventure of it before, whether the LORD would come to meet him or no (ver. 3.); but now he confidently expects it; though he endeavoured (it appears from ch. xxiv. 1.) still to compass his bad Ends by his Inchantments.

Ver. 16. And the LORD met Balaam,] This is never said before, but only that GOD met him, (by his Angel, as the Jews interpret it) which I take to be much short of what is here said, that the LORD himself now met him; that is, there was a glorious Appearance of the SCHICHINAH to him, (though not in such Lustre, I suppose, as when it appeared to Moses) which so amazed him, that after this he never went so much as to enquire what he should say or do: For tho' he doubted, perhaps, of what the Angel said, yet now he was fully assured the Israelites must be blessed.

And put a Word in his Mouth,] Instructed him what he should say to Balak.

And said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus.] viz. All that we read ver. 18, 19, 20, &c. which is a great deal more than he had said before.

Ver. 17. And when he came to him, behold, he stood by his Burnt-offering, and the Princes of Moab with him.] See ver. 6.

And Balak said unto him, What hath the LORD spoken?] He was more solicitous to know his Doom, than he was before, when he asked no such Question; and plainly demonstrated, that he believed Balaam went to enquire of the LORD.

Ver. 18. And he took up his Parable,] See ver. 7.

And said, Rise up, Balak, and hear;] If this word rise up hath respect to the outward Reverence, which was wont to be shewn to all Messages brought from GOD, (which was expressed by rising up to receive them, as appears from the Story of another King of Moab, Judges iii. 20.) then, after the Sacrifice was ended, at which they stood, Balak sat down until Balaam could be ready to acquaint him with the Mind of GOD. But it may have respect only to the Mind, and signify, Stir up thyself to attend; awaken thy Thoughts, and listen to what I say.

Hearken unto me, thou Son of Zippor:) The same thing repeated with more Earnestness: For to give Ear, as the Word is in the Hebrew, imports something more than merely to hear, viz. diligent and earnest Attention of Mind to what is spoken.

Ver. 6. GOD is not a Man, that he should lie,] Do not imagine that GOD is like to one of us:

He can by no Sacrifices, or Prayers, or other Means, be induced to break his Word; and therefore it is in vain for me any longer to importune him to curse Israel, when he hath said he will bless them.

Neither the Son of Man,] An usual Variation of the Expression of the same Thing, Psal. viii. 4.

That he should repent:] Alter his Mind, when he hath absolutely resolved any Thing. Balak seems to have fancied, that by the Change of the Place where he sacrificed, (ver. 13.) he might procure a Change of the Divine Counsels.

Hath he said, and shall he not do it?] What should hinder? For he wants no Power to execute his Will; and he cannot be moved to revoke his Word by better Information; nor can any thing happen which he did not foresee, to make him do otherwise than he intended.

Or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?] This is the same with the former, after the prophetic Manner of speaking, Omnia per juga repetendo (as Conradus Pellicanus glosses) ad exaggerationem: Only the foregoing Words may be thought to refer to his Threatenings, and these to his Promises.

Ver. 20. Behold, I have received Commandment to bless; and he hath blessed, and I cannot reverse it.] In these Words he applies the general Proposition, in the foregoing Verse, to this particular Case: GOD hath ordered me to pronounce a Blessing upon Israel, for he himself hath blessed them; and I can neither reverse that Blessing, nor go against his Order.

Ver. 21. He hath not beheld Iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen Perverseness in Israel:] Both the word Aven (which we translate Iniquity) and the word Amal (which we translate Perverseness) signify frequently in Scripture the highest Wickedness, viz. Idolatry. And so Onkelos here understood it, when he thus paraphrased these Words, I see that there are none who worship Idols in the House of Jacob, nor any Servants of Trouble and Vanity (so they called Idols) in Israel. And accordingly the Vulgar Latin expressly translates this Verse thus, There is no Idol in Jacob, nor is there any Image seen in Israel: Which seemed so clear a Truth to Jobannes Forsterus, a famous Professor of the Hebrew Tongue in the Beginning of the Reformation, that in his Explication of both these Words in his Lexicon, he saith, From this Place all the Prophets borrow these Phrases, and translated them to express Impiety, i. e. Idolatrous Worship, devised according to Mens own Humours and Desires, and by the Instinct of the Devil: For Moses was the Fountain of all the Prophets. Thus he writes upon the word אין, and he repeats it again upon the word לֹא. So that this is the Reason Balaam gives, why GOD had blessed, and he could not curse them, because they were free from Idolatry; unto which unless they could be seduced, there was no Hope that GOD would deliver them unto the Power of their Enemies: For which Reason Balaam afterwards counselled this Prince to entice them to this Sin by beautiful Women, as the only Way to move GOD to be angry with them.

There are indeed a great many that take these Words in the common Sense, for all manner of Sin; which GOD is said not to see in this this People, i. e. so as to mark it out for Punishment; for though they were many ways great Offenders, yet he had such an indulgent Kindness to them, that he would not correct them for every Sin which they committed. But this returns to the former Exposition; that they were safe, as long as they kept themselves from the great Transgression, that is, Idolatry.

The LORD his GOD is with him.] They worshipping GOD alone, were therefore under his special Care and Protection. Onkelos renders it, the WORD of the LORD his GOD is his Help. And so the Hierosol. Targum.

And the Shout of a King is among them.] GOD being their King, he prophesies that they should always triumph over their Enemies: For he alludes to the Shouts which are made when a King, or great Captain, returns victorious, with the Spoils of those he hath vanquished. So the Meaning of the whole Verse is this, in Brief; Since they do not worship Idols, but cleave to the LORD their GOD, and serve him alone, he is present with them, not only to preserve them from their Enemies, but to give them glorious Victories over them.

Ver. 22. GOD brought them out of Egypt:] That they might be his Worshippers and Servants; which if they continue, he will not desert them. For GOD brought them forth from thence, that they might be his peculiar People, and he their King and their GOD, as he often saith himself, Lev. xi. 45. xxii. 33. xxv. 43. Numb. xv. 41. all which Places are observed by the Author of Sepher Cosri, Pars ii. Sect. 50.

He hath, as it were, the Strength of an Unicorn.] Some would have this referred to GOD, who brought them out of Egypt by a mighty Power; because he speaks in the Plural Number of those to whom the former Sentence belongs. But this is no good Reason; for the Scripture frequently varies the Number, when the same Person is spoken of. And in cb. xxiv. 8. it is expressly said, GOD brought him (i. e. Israel) out of Egypt; and he hath the Strength, &c. which every one allows is spoken of the Israelites, who are said to have the Strength of this Creature, with whom they are compared; or rather the Height, as the Hebrew Word certainly signifies, Psal. xc. 4. The Strength of the Hills (or rather, the Heights of the Hills, as it is in the Margin) is his also: and Job xxii. 25. The Almighty shall be thy Defence, and thou shalt have Plenty of Silver. So the Sense led our Interpreters to translate the Hebrew words חַי מוֹת, which may be literally here rendered great Heaps of Silver. These are the only Places where this Word is found. The only Difficulty is, what Creature it is which is here called Reem; which we translate (as many others have done) an Unicorn: which though most now take to be a fabulous Creature, that is not in Being, yet Tbo. Bartholinus, in his Anatomical Histories (Centur. ii. Hist. 61.) tells us, that an Ambassador from the King of Guiney to the Duke of Courland, assured him at Copenhagen, that there is a Beast in Africa of the Bigness of an ordinary Horse, very swift and fierce, which hath a Horn in its Forehead, about three Spans in Length; the dead Carcase of which he had seen, though never one alive. But if this be supposed to be true, it is not the Creature here meant; for it is plain by the Scripture, that the Reem hath two Horns, Deut. xxxiii. 17. where we read of the Horns of Unicorns, (as we translate it) to which the two Tribes of Epbraim and Manasseh are compared. See also Psal. cxxxii. 17. Therefore the famous Bochartus, after a long Discussion of other Opinions, thinks it most probable that the Reem is a kind of Goat, which the Arabians called Algazel, and is now called Gazellas; which is a tall Creature (some of them as high as a Stag) with long and sharp Horns. So that Balaam foretels the Israelites should be as eminent among other People, as the Reem was among other kinds of Goats: Unless we will think it refers to what the Arabians observe, that it is proper to this Animal to carry his Head very high, and to erect his Ears; which is an excellent Emblem of the People of Israel; who being lately oppressed in Egypt, were asserted by GOD into a State of Liberty, and raised to a great Height of Glory, in order to be advanced unto an higher, Hieroicoon, P. i. Lib. iii. cap. 27. At this Onkelos seems to have aimed, when he translates these Words thus, Fortitude and Exaltation are his: taking Reem not for a proper Name, but for an Appellative; as if it were derived from Ramam, which signifies to exalt. I shall only add, that there is one, who refers these Words neither to GOD, nor to the Israelites, but to Egypt before-mentioned; as if the Sense was, Though the Egyptians were as strong as an Unicorn, they were not able to detain the Israelites any longer in Bondage to them; but GOD brought them thence with a mighty Hand, and out-stretched Arm: So Joseph. Hispanus, Lib. iii. Ikaurim, cap. 8.

Ver. 23. Surely there is no Incantment against Jacob, neither is there any Divination against Israel.] Neither I, nor any body else, have Power to hurt them, by all the secret Arts of Sorcery and Soothsaying, which are practised in the World. It is not proper here to mention the various sorts of them; but it is manifest from ancient History, that these curious Arts (as St. Luke calls them) had got a kind of Sovereignty in the Eastern Nations, who for many Ages were much addicted to them. One of our own Church hath said many excellent Things concerning the Original of this Sorcery, and Idolatry, which commonly accompanied each other; to whom I refer the Reader: See Dr. Jackson's Original of Unbelief, &c. cap. 19. The Vulgar Latin takes these Words, as if they were spoken in Praise of the Israelites, that there were no Incantments or Divinations used among them, nor any other Diabolical Arts, which were forbidden by their Law in several Places. From these they being as free as from Idolatry, (mentioned ver. 21.) were secure of GOD's Favour to them. And so we acknowledge, in the Margin of our Bibles, the Words may be translated, There is no Incantment in Jacob, or among them: From which GOD intended in all Ages to preserve them by the Prophets he raised up to them. And thus R. Solomon expounds this Verse, either to signify that they could not be cursed, because they were not given to Enchantments and Divinations; or that they needed not to make Use of Diviners and and Magicians, having all that was needful for them to know, revealed to them by God's Prophets, and by Urim and Thummim, &c.

According to this Time it shall be said of Jacob, and of Israel, What hath God wrought !] The LXX translate the first Words καὶ αὐτὸν, When time shall be ; or, upon all Occasions : not only now, but in future Ages, Men shall relate, with Admiration, what God hath wrought for this People ; not only in bringing them out of Egypt, but in conducting them into Canaan ; in drying up Jordan, as he did the Red Sea ; and subduing the Canaanites, as he overthrew Pharaoh and his Host, &c. If there be any Difference between Jacob and Israel, the former signifies this People, when they were in their low Estate ; and the Latter, when they were eminently exalted : in both which God did wonderful things for them, which astonished all that observed.

Ver. 24. Behold, the People shall rise up as a great Lion,] The Hebrew word Labi certainly signifies a Lioness, which is no less, but rather more fierce than a Lion ; and so represented by Herodotus, Lib. iii. cap. 108. and many other Authors mentioned by Bochartus in his Hierozycon, P. i. Lib. iii. cap. 1.

And lift up himself as a young Lion :] The Hebrew word Ari is used in general for any Lion whatsoever, without respect unto Age. They that would have it signify a younger Sort, take it for a Lion full-grown and adult, (as they speak) of a middle Age, between Cephir, which signifies a young Lion, and Sachel, which signifies an Old. And the Israelites are here said to rise up, and to lift up themselves, like to these fierce Creatures, to signify their Assaulting their Enemies with an undaunted Courage.

He shall not lie down, until he eat of the Prey,] Which Lions rend and tear with their Claws and Teeth, irresistibly and speedily. So the Hebrew word Tereph (which we render Prey) imports ; the Flesh of Beasts torn in Pieces.

And drink the Blood of the Slain.] He alludes to the Ravenousness of Lions ; and signifies the intire and perfect Victory the Israelites should win over their Enemies. For this Prophecy hath a peculiar Respect to the Conquest of the Canaanites under the Conduct of Joshua.

Ver. 25. And Balak said unto Balaam, Neither curse them at all, nor bless them at all.] It seems he thought his Blessings to be as powerful as his Curses ; and therefore desires him to forbear both, if he could not have what he desired.

Ver. 26. But Balaam answered, &c. Told not I thee, saying, All that the LORD speaks, that I must do ?] As I cannot do any thing against the Mind and Will of God, so I must do as he bids me, ver. 3, 12.

Ver. 27. And Balak said unto Balaam, Come, I pray thee ; I will bring thee unto another Place ;] Still he fancies, according to the Superstition of those Days, there might be something unlucky in the Place, that made his Prayers unsuccessful ; which might prove acceptable in another. For as the Syrians imagined in future Ages, that some Gods were powerful in the Hills, who could do nothing in the Plains, (1 Kings xx. 23, 28.) so, it seems, there was such a Conceit at this Time in these Countries, that some Gods delighted more in one Hill, than they did in another ; for he still brings Balaam to another High-place. Such a Conceit we see remains to this Day in the Romish Church, where the Lady and the Rood of one Place are thought far more powerful, and therefore more frequented than those of another.

Peradventure it will please God, that thou mayst curse me them from thence.] He said nothing of God's Permission before, ver. 13. but now was convinced his Consent was to be gained ; and would not despair of it, but thought it possible, that very thing might seem right and good in his Eyes (as the Hebrew Phrase here is) in a new Place, which displeased him in both the former.

Ver. 28. And Balak brought Balaam unto the Top of Peor,] This was the most famous High-place in all the Country of Moab ; where, as Mr. Selden conjectures, Baal had a Temple, and was worshipped ; and thence called Baal-Peor. So Theodoret and Suidas, Βεῖλ ὁ Χρόνος, θεῶν δὲ ὁ τόπος ἐν ὁ τιμᾶτο. Beel signifies Saturn, and Phegor (or, as we pronounce it, Peor) the Place where he was worshipped. Just as the Greeks called Jupiter by the Name of Olympius, and Mercurius, of Cyllenus, &c. And in all likelihood, by Beth-Peor, (Deut. xxxiv. 6.) which in English is the House of Peor, in the Land of Moab, is meant the Temple of Baal which stood upon the Mountain ; for so the Word Beth signifies frequently among the Hebrews, not an ordinary House, but the House of some God : As Beth-Astharoth, 1 Sam. xxxi. 10. and Beth-Baal, 1 Kings xvi. 32. And there is often mention of Bethshemesb in the Holy Writings, (Joshua xv. 10. Judges i. 33. and many other Places) which signifies the Temple of the Sun ; from whence the word Baisan, among the Arabians upon the Red Sea ; which Stephanus (de Urbibus) expounds, ὁ οἶκος τοῦ ἡλίου, the House of the Sun. See Syntagma i. de Diis Syris, cap. 5.

That looketh towards Jeshimon.] See ch. xxi. 20.

Ver. 29. And Balaam said unto Balak, Build me here seven Altars, and prepare me here seven Bulls, and seven Rams.] He orders the very same Sacrifices he did at first, without any Difference, (ver. 1.) either not knowing any other Method of obtaining their Desires ; or thinking it in vain to devise any other.

Ver. 30. And Balak did as Balaam had said, and offered a Bullock and a Ram on every Altar.] He was wholly governed by Balaam in this ; and though he changed the Place, made no Alteration in the Sacrifice ; which were as complete and perfect as any in those Times offered.

Here is no Mention made of the Time when these things were done ; but we may be certain all the three forementioned solemn Sacrifices, in three several Places, were not offered upon one and the same Day. And superstitious People, as all Histories tell us, having been as curious in the Choice of Days, as well as Places, it is probable that Balak picked out some Day or Hour, which he thought might be more lucky to him than the foregoing.

C H A P. XXIV.

Ver. 1. AND when Balaam saw that it pleased the LORD to bless [Israel,] Of which he had given him a double Proof, ch. xxii. 5, &c. 16, &c.

He went not as at other Times,] See chap. xxii. 3, 15.

To seek for Incantments,] This implies that he had hitherto, in the Process of his Business, used some wicked Arts to effect his Ends, or desired to be directed to them; but being not able to obtain any thing but Commands cross to all his Designs, he gave himself up wholly to the Conduct of GOD's holy Spirit, and did not so much as offer to seek for Incantments. In the Hebrew the Words are, to meet with Incantments; unto which he hoped to be directed, that he might be able to curse Israel: For tho' he addressed himself to the true GOD, (whom he calls the LORD, ch. xxiii. 26.) yet it was in a superstitious Way; with such Rites and Ceremonies of Worship, as were not of GOD's Appointment; but either devised by evil Spirits, or very grateful to them; whereby he hoped to be shewn by what Means he might disable Israel, and deliver them into the Hand of Balaam. For the ancient Magick derived from Zoroaster, was nothing else, as Plato pretends (in Alcibiade i.) but the Knowledge of divine Things, and the right Way of worshipping GOD: And Apuleius faith the same of it, that it was Diis immortalibus accepta, colendi eos ac venerandi pergnara, &c. a Science acceptable to the Immortal Gods, very skilful how to worship and honour them; being pious, and knowing in divine Things; which sufficiently bewrays this divine Knowledge (as they call it) to be impious; for Zoroaster instructed his Disciples in the Worship of the Fire, as an Emblem, at the best, of the Sun; which they look'd upon as a visible Image of this invisible GOD, and upon that Account worshipped it. After his Time, it is manifest, this heavenly Knowledge, as they esteem it, degenerated into more uncouth Rites, and wicked Arts, whereby they pretend to be able to make the Gods do what they pleased. Pliny mentions an Herb, lib. xxiv. cap. 17. which he faith Magicians used, quum Deos velint evocare, when they would call out the Gods, and draw them to their Purpose. In which Power they so gloried, that the Witch in Apuleius threatened the Gods themselves with the greatest Mischief; and boasted she could deprive the Stars of their Light; and by her Charms controul, not only the Moon, but the Sun himself, and the Gods of all sorts. And as for Mankind, nothing is more known than those magical Words, devovere, defigere, obligare; which are proper to the Black Art, as Salmasius observes (upon Solinus, p. 1091.) which by Incantations, Deprecations, direful Execrations, Herbs, Fascinations, so confounded the Mind of him who was thus devoted, (as they term it) that he could remember nothing of what he was about, nor discharge any Function of Nature. The several Species of it are mentioned by Maimonides, who faith the Zabii pretended to exercise this Power, not only over particular Persons, but over whole Provinces, by certain Words, and Actions, and Things, which no body can understand to have any Virtue in them, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 37.

But he set his Face toward the Wilderness,] He stirred not from the Place where the Sacrifice was offered, as he had been wont to do, but only look'd toward the Wilderness, where the Israelites lay encamped, ch. xxii. 1.

Ver. 2. And Balaam lift up his Eyes,] To look round about him.

And he saw Israel abiding in his Tents, &c.] In the Order GOD had appointed in the second Chapter of this Book, ver. 52. where he commands them to pitch their Tents, every Man by his own Camp, and by his own Standard, throughout their Hosts.

And the Spirit of GOD came upon him.] From whence Maimonides concludes, he was a Prophet of the second Rank, who spake by the Holy Ghost, More Nevoch. P. ii. cap. 45.

Ver. 3. And he took up his Parable, and said,] He pronounced what follows with a loud Voice, that all might hear. For so the Hebrew Words may be interpreted, he lifted up his Parable. See ch. xxiii. 7.

Balaam the Son of Beor hath said,] Tho' the Spirit of GOD came upon him, which suggested the Words mentioned, ver. 5, 6, 7, &c. yet it did not alter the Temper and Disposition of his Mind; which was no less vain and ambitious, than it was covetous, and possessed with an Hatred of the Israelites; as appears by the Counsel which he gave at last, how to ruin them: This Vanity seems to be expressed in these, and in the following Words, wherein he magnifies himself more than the Spirit of GOD.

And the Man whose Eyes are open, hath said.] Who when he was awake, received Revelations from GOD, which was an extraordinary Favour; for commonly he appeared to Men in a Dream. Others translate it, whose Eyes were shut, i. e. who was in a Trance or Ecstasy, so that he saw nothing with his bodily Eyes, but only with his Mind. The Hierusalem Targum thus paraphrases these Words, (which shews he look'd upon them as a boasting of himself) The Man said, who was honoured above his Brethren; to whom that was revealed, which was hidden from all the Prophets.

Ver. 4. He hath said, which heard the Words of GOD,] Mark what he faith, who delivers the Words which he received from GOD.

Which saw the Vision of the Almighty,] With whom he was so familiar, that he himself, at last, appeared to him in a Vision, ch. xxiii. 16. as at first he appeared to him by an Angel, ch. xxii. 35.

Falling into a Trance,] There being in the Hebrew only the Word Nophel, which signifies falling, we supply the Sense by adding into a Trance; lest any one should think he fell to the Ground, or fell asleep; which seems not to be the Meaning; but that he was in a Rapture, perceiving nothing by his outward Senses. Yet the fore-mentioned Targum takes it as if he had fallen flat on his Face; and the LXX translate it, it, He saw the Vision of God in Sleep; according to that, Gen. xv. 12. A deep Sleep fell upon Abram; where the Word Naphela is thought by some to give a good Explication of Nophel in this Place.

But having his Eyes open:] His Mind being then possessed with a clear Apprehension of Things, which God revealed to him, when his Senses were all lock'd up, and could discern nothing.

Ver. 5. How goodly are thy Tents, O Jacob, and thy Tabernacles, O Israel!] The same Thing expressed in different Words; which was an usual Elegancy in those Countries: Wherein he declares his Admiration of the beautiful Order, in which he saw them pitched in the Plains of Moab.

Ver. 6. As the Valleys are they spread forth,] This refers either to their Tabernacles, which extended themselves on either Side of a wide Space, which, like a Valley, lay between; or rather to the Israelites themselves, whom he compares to those fruitful Valleys which abound with Water: For the Hebrew Word signifies either Valleys or Brooks.

As Gardens by the Rivers Side,] Which were far more green and flourishing, cool and pleasant, than those that lay in dry Places.

As the Trees of Lign-Aloes,] Growing in those Gardens, or by the River Side; which perfumed the Air by their sweet Odours. For there are two Sorts of Aloes observed by the Ancients; the one a Tree which was very odoriferous, called Καλαμὶς Ἰνδικός, and Ἰνδοδαίσιον, growing in India and Arabia; and the other a Plant or Herb, out of which was pressed a purging Juice: The former is often joined with Myrrh in the holy Scripture, and was burnt as a Perfume, and called by the Ancients Ευλαλίας, (as Salmasius observes in his Exercit. Plin. upon Solinus, p. 1053, 1054, &c.) which is the Lign or Wood-Aloes here spoken of. And Plutarch, in his Symposiacks, lib. vi. cap. 7. saith some were wont to colour their Wine, ἢ ἀλόαις, ἢ κινναμόμοις, either with Aloes, or with Cinamoms, (which is meant of this Wood-Aloes) which gave the Wine a pleasant Taste.

Which the Lord hath planted,] Which grew naturally of themselves (Solo Dei Nutu, as Bochartus glosses) without any Labour, Care, or Art of Man used about them.

And as Cedar-Trees beside the Waters.] The Cedar was one of the most goodly Trees in those Countries, upon many Accounts; particularly for its Fragrancy; the Greeks being wont to burn the Wood of it upon their Altars, as the same Salmasius there observes, p. 951, 952. By all these Metaphors, Balaam sets forth the present and future Prosperity of the Israelites, and their Fame, which spread itself into all Nations round about; and seems to be represented by the sweet Odours here mentioned.

Ver. 7. He shall pour the Water out of his Buckets,] I take this to be meant of God's pouring down Rain abundantly, out of the Clouds, upon the Valleys, Gardens and Trees, unto which the Israelites are compared; signifying that they should be exceedingly blessed by him: for they stood in Need of nothing more than Rain in those Countries.

And his Seed shall be in many Waters,] Or, by many Waters; i. e. be sown in a Ground well watered, and consequently bring forth a plentiful Crop, Isa. xxxii. 20. There are those who refer both these to their numerous Posterity; Procreation of Children being sometimes expressed in Scripture by the Metaphors of Waters, and Fountains, and Cisterns, as every one knows. And both the LXX and Onkelos interpret this of one particular Person that should arise of their Seed. For thus the former of them renders this Part of the Verse; There shall come a Man out of his Seed, who shall rule over many Nations. And the latter of them paraphrases in this manner; There shall be a great King, who shall be anointed of his Children, and shall have Dominion over many People; which the Hierusalem Targum saith expressly is CHRIST: For thus this Verse begins in that Paraphrase; A King shall arise out of his Sons, and their Redeemer from among them, &c. and thus concludes; and the Kingdom of the King MESSIAS shall be magnificently exalted.

And his King shall be higher than Agag,] This seems to have been the Name of all the Kings of the Amalekites, (for we read of one called Agag long after this Time, 1 Sam. xv. 8, 9.) as Abimelech was the Name of the Philistine Kings, and Pharaoh of the Egyptian. And at this Time, no Nation thereabouts was in greater Reputation than the Amalekites, (ver. 20.) who thought themselves able to obstruct the Israelites Passage into Canaan; and gave a very early Proof of the high Opinion of their own Power and Prowess, by attacking the Israelites as soon as they came out of Egypt. Balaam therefore foretells the King of Israel should be the greatest of all other, (for he was acquainted with none higher than Agag) which some think hath a peculiar Respect to their first King Saul, who subdued the Amalekites, and took Agag Captive. But his Successor was far greater than he; and the Jews themselves think this hath its full Completion in the LORD CHRIST.

And his Kingdom shall be exalted.] They shall increase and multiply, till their Kingdom be greatly enlarged; as it was in the Days of David and Solomon, who were but Shadows of the great King MESSIAH.

Ver. 8. God brought him forth out of Egypt; he hath, as it were, the Strength of an Unicorn.] All the Power of Egypt could not detain them in Slavery; but they came out from thence with a strong and high Hand, (Exod. xiii. 9. xiv. 8.) and are grown a mighty People. See the foregoing Chapter, ver. 22. where this hath been explained.

He shall eat up the Nations his Enemies,] Utterly destroy the Seven Nations of Canaan.

And shall break their Bones,] So that they shall never recover their Strength.

And pierce them through with his Arrows.] Having given them their deadly Wound: Or, as some translate the Hebrew Words, break their Arrows in pieces; i. e. quite disarm them.

Ver. 9. He couched, he lay down] He prophesies, that the Israelites, having conquered the Canaanites, should settle in their Land, and take their Rest, and live securely: Which he speaks of of with such Confidence, as if it were already done.

As a Lion, and as a great Lion :] See ch. xxiii. 24. the Signification of Ari and Labi.

Who shall stir him up ?] Give them any Disturbance. It is observed of Lions, that they do not betake themselves to remote or secret Places, when they go to sleep ; but lie down any-where, (as Oppianus describes them, lib. iii.) as if they understood, that let them sleep where they pleased, no body durst meddle with them : see Bochartus in his Hierozycon, P. i. lib. 3. cap. 2. and therefore being applied to the Israelites, signifies such an absolute and secure Possession of the Land of Canaan, that none should have the Boldness to assault, or give them any Disquiet : Which came to pass chiefly in the Days of David and Solomon.

Blessed is he that blesteth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee.] These are the very Words wherewith Isaac concluded his Blessing of his Son Jacob, Gen. xxvii. 29. which GOD now confirmed from the Mouth of one of their Enemies, who spake, at this time, by his Spirit.

Ver. 10. And Balak's Anger was kindled against Balaam,] He could no longer forbear to express his Indignation, to be thus treated by Balaam (whom he had sent for a great way, and entertained for some time) ; and therefore stopp'd him from proceeding, for the present, any further in his Prophecy.

And he [mote his Hands together :] A Token of vehement Anger, Ezek. xxi. 17.

And Balak said unto Balaam,] It is likely he was so full of Wrath, that he could not speak presently, but expressed it only in his Looks and Actions.

I called thee to curse mine Enemies ; and behold, thou hast altogether blessed them] Thou hast not said one Word to my Purpose, but all quite contrary.

These three times.] Tho' I have been at great Expence, and built Altars, and offered many Sacrifices, in three several Places : But at what Distance of Time, one from another, doth not appear.

Ver. 11. Therefore now flee thou to thy Place :] Get thee home immediately, and stay not a Moment longer here ; for that is imported in the Word flee, which indicates, that he could not endure the Sight of him, while he remained thus angry : And as he banished him his Presence, so he commanded him to make all possible Haste out of his Country.

I thought to promote thee to great Honour ;] And to bestow as much Wealth upon him as he desired ; which is included in the Word Honour, ch. xxiii. 17.

But lo, the LORD] Whom thou pretendest to obey.

Hath kept thee back from Honour.] By not permitting thee to comply with my Desire. It is uncertain whether these Words were spoke in Anger and Scorn, or seriously and in good earnest ; believing he was hindered by the LORD's Will and Pleasure from cursing Israel ; which he had more Reason to believe, than he had to hope he might obtain Liberty to curse them, (ch. xxiii. 27.) and therefore was, without all Reason, in this Passion against Balaam.

Ver. 12. And Balaam said unto Balak,] Prayed Balak to hear him patiently a few Words, before he departed.

Spake I not also to thy Messengers, which thou sentest unto me, saying,] Did I not, before I saw thee, tell those that came to invite me to thee, the very same which I told thee afterwards ?

Ver. 13. If Balak would give me his House-full of Silver and Gold, I cannot go beyond the Commandment of the LORD to do either good or bad] So he told his Messengers, ch. xxii. 18.

Of mine own Mind ;] According as I please.

But what the LORD saith, that will I speak ?] So he told Balak himself, ch. xxii. 38. All which he recalls to his Mind, to shew him that there was no Cause for his Anger, he having performed as much as he undertook ; which was to follow GOD's Directions, as he had done strictly. And it is likely, that by this just Representation of what had passed between them, he brought Balak to a cooler Temper, so that he suffered him to go on, to deliver what follows.

Ver. 14. And now, behold, I go to my People :] And now I will obey thee, as well as GOD, and be gone to my own Country.

Come therefore, and I will advertise thee, &c.] But before I go, permit me to give thee some Advice. So the Hebrew Word Jaatz constantly signifies, to give Counsel. And so the Vulgate here translates it ; but took it from the wicked Advice, which we read, in the next Chapter, was executed after Balaam's Departure, and of which he was certainly the Author, ch. xxxi. 16. and therefore thus translates the next Words, What thy People shall do unto this People. But the Hebrew Text and the LXX are directly contrary unto this ; being, as we translate the Words, What this People shall do to thy People. Therefore Onkelos, to take in the foregoing Sense, without altering the latter Part of the Verse, puts in one Word, and makes the whole run thus, I will give thee Counsel what to do, and (will shew thee) what this People shall do to thy People in the latter Days. And the Hierusalem Targum more largely and plainly, I will advise thee what thou shalt do to this People ; make them to sin : Otherwise thou shalt not have Dominion over them ; but this People shall domineer over thy People in the latter end of Days.

In the latter Days.] In future Ages. This shews the foregoing Words do not speak of what Moab should do to Israel by his Advice ; for that was done as soon as he was gone.

Ver. 15. And he took up his Parable, and said, Balaam the Son of Beor hath said, &c.] This was the Preface to his foregoing Prophecy : see ver. 3.

Ver. 16. He hath said, which heard the Words of GOD, &c.] This Verse also is the same with the fourth, only a few Words added, And knew the Knowledge of the most High ; which he adds, to shew his intimate Acquaintance with the Supreme LORD of the World. For he speaks of GOD in the very same Style which Moses doth, calling him both El, and Schaddai, and Elijon, and Jehovah ; which demonstrates that he was not a Stranger to the true GOD, tho' corrupted with bad Affections, and addicted also to foul Superstitions.

Ver. 17. I shall see him,] Or, I do see him, (for the Future Tense is often used for the Present) that is, he saw the Person of whom he was going to speak, represented to him in a Vision.

But not now:] He saw him not as in Being, now at present, but to come in future Times.

I shall behold him, but not nigh:] The same Thing in other Words; but more plainly telling them, they must not expect this Person in their Time, nor in the next Generation, but in remoter Ages.

There shall come a Star out of Jacob,] A Star denotes a great Person; and being understood to be spoken of CHRIST, it denotes his Celestial Original. And both Onkelos and Jonathan, and the Hierusalem Targum, take the MESSIAH to be here meant, and so doth R. Moses Haddarjan, and Bereſebith Rabbath; and a great many Christian Interpreters, (as Huetius observes in his Demonstr. Evang. Propos. vii. sect. 9.) particularly Eusebius and Cyril of Alexandria: Who, in his eighth Book against Julian, confutes his Exposition of these Words, which is this; Τὸ δὲ ὅτι τὸ Δαυὶδ σπέρμα ἐστὶν τοῦ ἀπ' ἐκείνου, προδιδόντος ἐς τὸν μέλλοντα χρόνον, ὅτι τοῦ ἀπ' ἐκείνου, προδιδόντος ἐς τὸν μέλλοντα χρόνον, ὅτι τοῦ ἀπ' ἐκείνου, προδιδόντος ἐς τὸν μέλλοντα χρόνον. That this belongs to David, and to his Successors, is sufficiently manifest. To which St. Cyril replies, That if Balaam had spoken of David, and the Kings of Israel, he would have said, There shall arise Stars out of Jacob, &c. whereas he speaks of one alone, ὅπου ἐν ἀστροῖς ἐκπρεπεί, as very illustrious among the Stars; which it is evident, can be none but CHRIST. Unto which I shall add the Words of a later Writer of the Jewish Nation, R. Isaac in his Illumin. Fidei, set forth not long ago by the learned Wagenſeil: Where he argues, this cannot be understood of David, or any other King of Israel, because none of them ever reigned all over the Earth (i. e. over all the Children of Seth, whom none of them destroyed); but it is meant, he concludes, of the MESSIAH; who is compared to a Star, because of the Perennity of his Kingdom, and the Splendor of his Dominion, and his great Acts throughout the World, p. 72, and 80. where he makes this a Prophecy of one Kingdom alone to be in the World, viz. that of the Israelites, who are called the People of the Saints of the most High, Dan. vii. 18. which is true enough, if he had understood the right Meaning of Israelites; who are those, not after the Flesh, but after the Spirit.

It is not fit to conclude this without one Observation more, that so long ago as the Time of the Emperor Adrian, this was understood by the generality of the Jews to be a Prophecy of the MESSIAH. For they followed one whose Name was Cibocab, (i. e. a Star) to whom the famous R. Akiba (a Doctor, who, they say, had four and twenty thousand Scholars) applied these Words of Balaam; and calling him Barcibocab, i. e. the Son of a Star, anointed him their King, and carried a Sword before him, crying, Behold the very King MESSIAH. This is reported by the Jews themselves in Tzenach David, and several other Books: all which, I think, doth not hinder, but that King David may be hereby signified in the first Sense; tho' as a Type of the MESSIAH, the great Son of David, in whom it was completed.

And a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel,] This, some think, may first have a respect to David, and then to the MESSIAH, the King of Israel. But the Chaldee Paraphrast refers the whole to CHRIST, whose Words are these, A King shall arise out of the House of Jacob, and the MESSIAH shall be anointed of the House of Israel. Nor is it any wonder that Balaam should prophesy of him so many Years before he was born; and so plainly, that Moses himself doth not speak in plainer Terms: but it is to be look'd upon as the Effect of GOD's infinite Goodness, who would not have those, that were not of the Seed of Abraham, to be wholly ignorant of what he intended to do for all Mankind. And this was necessary to be plainly told them, because otherwise they would not have understood it.

And shall smite the Corners of Moab,] The latter Part of this Prophecy, Huetius thinks belongs to David, as the former Part to CHRIST: Which was the Opinion of Maimonides, who divided the Prophecy between them. And this was indeed literally fulfilled in David, who subdued the Moabites intirely, as we read 2 Sam. viii. 8. Psal. lx. 8. cviii. 9. Some translate these Words, He shall smite through the Princes of Moab. So the LXX τὸ ἀρχηγὸς Μωάβ: which doth not alter the Sense. And it is no unusual Thing with the Prophets, when they intend to speak of something nearer to them, to be transported by the Spirit of GOD, to speak of things a great deal more remote: As Balaam here foretelling a great Ruler should come out of Jacob, first speaks of the greatest of all, above Fourteen Hundred Years after his Time; and then of David, who reigned about Four Hundred Years after this.

And destroy all the Children of Seth,] They who interpret this of David, take Seth to have been some great Person in that Country, or some Place of great Note, the Inhabitants of which are here threatened to be destroyed. But these are mere Conjectures, which have no Foundation in History: whereas, if we understand it of CHRIST, and translate the first Word, not he shall destroy, but (as Cassio and others do) he shall rule over, the Sense is very remarkable; it being a Prophecy, that in the Times of the MESSIAH, there should be no longer such a Distinction, as GOD now made between the Israelites and other Nations (by the peculiar Laws he gave them at their Entrance into Canaan); but all Mankind, who are equally descended from Seth, shall be united under his Government. And thus not only Lyranus, and Abulensis, and others interpret it, but Onkelos also, whose Words are, He shall have Dominion over all the Sons of Men. For he thought it reasonable by the Children of Seth to understand all Mankind who were propagated from him, who succeeded in the Place of Abel that was killed; all the Seed of Cain perishing in the Flood.

Ver. 18. And Edom shall be a Possession,] So it was in the Days of David, 2 Sam. viii. 14.

Seir also shall be a Possession] This was a famous Mount in the Country of Edom, Gen. xxxvi. 8. and being the strongest Part of the Country, may signify here, that no Place should be able to hold out, tho' never so strongly fortified by Nature or Art. And so we read they all became David's Servants, 2 Sam. viii. 14. 1 Chron. xviii. 13.

For his Enemies,] i. e. For the Israelites.

And Israel shall do valiantly.] For they subdued in those Days many other Countries; as we read in the fore-named Chapters, 2 Sam. viii. 1 Chron. xviii.

Ver. 19. Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have Dominion.] This may relate to Christ, as well as to David, in whom it was literally fulfilled. And so Baal-Hatturim observes, that, ver. 16. it is said of Balaam, that he knew the Mind of the most High, for he prophesied of the Messiah, when he said, Out of Jacob shall one come that shall have Dominion. The word jerd, as the Masora notes, is used only here, and in Psalm lxxii. 8. where the Psalmist describes the Universal Kingdom of Christ in these Words, He shall have Dominion from Sea to Sea, and from the River unto the Ends of the Earth.

And shall destroy him that remaineth of the City.] Not only rout them in the Field, but take their defended Cities: And, it is likely, he particularly aims at some great City, and best fortified, which was the Metropolis, and the strongest Hold in the Kingdom; such an one there was in Edom, as the Psalmist suggests, Psalm lx. 9.

Ver. 20. And when he looked on Amalek,] On the Country which the Amalekites inhabited.

He took up his Parable, and said,] See ver. 3.

Amalek was the first of the Nations;] The most eminent among the neighbouring Nations, or one of the most Noble, as Bochart renders it, Gens una è nobilissimis.

But his latter End shall be, that he perish for ever.] This God commanded Saul to execute (1 Sam. xv. 3.) according to the Doom passed upon them, after their Fight with Israel, Exod. xvii. 14, 16. and he lost his Kingdom for doing his Work imperfectly; which the Vulgar Latin takes to be the Meaning of the seventh Verse of this Chapter. Onkelos paraphrases the whole Verse in this manner: Amalek was the Beginning of the Wars with Israel; therefore his End shall be to perish for ever. The Targum Hieros. more plainly, The Amalekites were the first People that made War against Israel; and in the latter Days they shall make War against them, &c.

Ver. 21. And he looked on the Kenites, &c.] He standing now upon the Top of Peor, which was, it is likely, the highest Place of the Country, (for which Reason Balak brought him thither, after he had tried other High-places, ch. xxiii. 28.) might see a great Way, and possibly behold the very Rocks wherein the Kenites dwelt. But what People are meant by this Name, is not clearly evident: For there were a People called Kenites, who were part of the Nation that inhabited the Land of Canaan, Gen. xv. 19. these cannot be here intended; for they were too far off from this Place. And as for the Kenites mentioned in Judges i. 16. iv. 11. who dwelt among the Israelites when they came into Canaan, they had as yet no fixed State, but were with them in the Wilderness. Therefore it is likely, they were some of the Kindred of Jethro, (originally derived from the same Family that he was of) who remained in Midian; and adjoined so close to the Country of the Amalekites, that they are said to dwell among them, 1 Sam. xv. 6. For it is plain, the word Keni in Hebrew is the Name of a People, not of a particular Person; and there might be a great many of them; some in Canaan, others in Midian; and of these latter, some went with the Israelites into Canaan when they conquered it, and others remained still in their own Country: They seem all to have been descended from one Ken or Kain, mentioned Judges iv. 11. (as Scaliger conjectures in his Elenchus Tribæres. cap. 23.) Jethro's Posterity being but one Family of this People.

Strong is thy Dwelling-place,] They were but a small People, who dwelt upon steep Mountains.

And thou puttest thy Nest in a Rock.] This is but a further Description of their Country in other Words: For Nest signifies their Habitation; only it seems to import that their Dwelling was little, in craggy Mountains, where they look'd upon themselves as very safe and secure, the Access to them being very difficult: And from hence, I suppose, they were called Sbelamites, (as both the Hieros. Targum and Onkelos here term them, instead of Kenites) i. e. peaceable People; because no body meddled with them, nor they with any body.

Ver. 22. Nevertheless the Kenite shall be wasted,] By little and little diminished.

Until Asbur shall carry thee away captive.] Till at last they were all carried away by the Assyrians, when they over-ran Syria, 2 Kings xvi. 9.

Ver. 23. And he took up his Parable, and said,] Having rested a while, he sighed, and said aloud. See ver. 3.

Alas, who shall live when God doth this?] What miserable Times will those be, when the Assyrians shall over-run a great Part of the World? How few will escape their Devastation? Or, who would not desire rather to die, than live in those Days?

But some, I observe, refer this, not to what goes before, but to what follows; which relates to the Desolations made by the following Empires, especially the Roman.

Ver. 24. And Ships shall come from the Coast of Chittim,] Whether this Prophecy hath respect (in the word Chittim) to the Greeks or to the Romans, or to both, it was plainly fulfilled, as the learned Huetius observes. But it must be noted, that not only St. Hierom, but Onkelos, and Jonathan, and the Hierusalem Interpreter, and the Arabick, understand by Chittim the Country of Italy, or some Part thereof. And Bochartus proves, by many Arguments, that the People of that Country did descend from Chittim. See Gen. x. 4. Yet it is not likely that Chittim, being the Son of Javan who peopled Greece, went so far at first from the rest of his Brethren; but his Children peopled some part thereabouts: From whence, in after Times, when they were increased, they sent Colonies into Italy; particularly Macedonia is called by the Name of Chittim, in the Book of Maccabees, 1 Mac. i. 1. viii. 5. and therefore I take the Greeks under Alexander to be here intended in the first Place, and then the Romans in the next; each of them fulfilling the several Parts of this Prophecy.

And shall afflict Asbur,] This was done by Alexander, who overthrew the Persian Empire which ruled over the Chaldeans and Assyrians.

So Theodoret understands the word Chittim, to signify Alexander and his Macedonians, whose Country was anciently called Μακίδια, as Hesychius tells us, they being a Mixture (as Mr. Mede probably conjectures in his forty-eighth Discourse, p. 377.) of the Sons of Madai and Chittim. The Romans indeed afterwards overthrew the Greek Empire, but we do not read that they made War against the Affyrians till the Time of Trajan, who subdued them, and reduced them into a Province, as Dio relates Lib. lxxviii.

And shall afflict Eber,] This was done by the Romans, not by the Grecians. For we are to understand by Eber, the Hebrew Nation, called the Children of Eber, Gen. x. 21. So the LXX translate it, Ἑβραῖος: the Name of Hebrews being as plainly derived from Eber, as that of Jews from Judab. Now they were not afflicted by Alexander in his Conquests, but rather kindly treated by him: And therefore this cannot be meant of the Greeks; unless we will think it fulfilled in the Time of Antiochus, who descended indeed from the Macedonians, but did not come from that Country; nor did he afflict them long, much less make them desolate, as the Romans under Vespasian and Titus did; which seems to be here intended.

And he also shall perish for ever.] This doth not refer to Eber, but to the Nation that afflicted him, viz. the Roman Empire; which he prophesies shall not always afflict others, but at last be utterly destroyed itself. Aben-Ezra indeed refers it to the Kingdom of the Seleucidae, or the Greek Empire: but R. Isaac, before-mentioned, thinks the Destruction of the Romans is intended in this Prophecy; only he fancies it is to be accomplished by a Christ not yet come.

Ver. 25. And Balaam rose up, and went] As Balak had commanded him, ver. 11.

And returned to his Place:] Unto his Country, viz. Mesopotamia. But he was detained by the Midianites in his Passage thither; among whom he was slain, as we read in the thirty-first Chapter: For Men are said to do that which they design and endeavour to do, Exod. viii. 18. Numb. xiv. 40. If this be not the Meaning, then, after he came to his own Country, he returned to the Midianites, at their Intreaty, or by his own Inclination; and (either as he was going Home, or when he came back) gave that impious Counsel, which was executed not long after this, as we find in the next Chapter: For that he was the Author of it, we are assured by three Divine Writers. See 2 Pet. ii. 15. Jude, ver. 11. Revel. ii. 14.

It is a strange Exposition which Baal-batturim gives of his going to his Place; that is, saith he, he went down into Hell. But it may serve to confirm the common Interpretation of that which is said of Judas, Acts i. 25.

And Balak also went his Way.] To Kirjath Huzoth, I suppose, mentioned chap. xxii. 39.

C H A P. XXV.

Ver. 1. AND Israel abode in Shittim,] A Place in the Plains of Moab (where they lay, while the forementioned things were transacted, chap. xxii. 1.) called Abel-Shittim, chap. xxxiii. 49. but it is usual to cut off the former Part of a Place's Name, for Shortness sake: As in this very Book, ch. xxxii. 38. Baal-meon for Beth-Baal-meon, as it is called Josh. xiii. 17. and Hermion commonly for Baal-Hermion; and Nimrim for Beth-Nimrim. To which may be added Salem for Jerusalem, Psal. lxxvi. 2. This Station was the last which the Israelites made, while they remained in the Wilderness; in which the rest of the Things that follow, to the End of the Book of Deuteronomy, were done.

And the People begun to commit Wickedness] Both bodily and spiritual; into which they fell, not long after Balaam was gone from Balak: Tho' not all the People fell into this Guilt, but a great many of them; as appears from what follows, ver. 4, 5, 6.

With the Daughters of Moab.] And of Midian also, as we learn from ver. 6, 17, 18. But those of Moab are here alone mentioned; because, it is likely, they began this wicked Practice. I see no Ground for what Greg. Nyssen. saith, That the Israelites, having vanquished the Moabites in a Battle, fell in Love with the Captives which they had taken, being overcome by Lust, when they had been victorious in War; as he speaks, Lib. de vita Moysi, p. 186. It is something more probable, that the Prophecy of Balaam being spread abroad among the Moabites concerning the great Blessings GOD designed to bestow upon the Israelites, particularly that of the MESSIAH, it might excite in the Women of Moab a Desire to have Children by the Men of Israel, that they might partake in their Blessings; unto which they might think they had some Title, being descended from the eldest Daughter of Lot, the Son of Abraham's Brother. This might pass for Truth, if it were not very evident from the following Story, that the Daughters of Moab exposed themselves, by Balaam's Counsel, to the Lust of the Israelites, that by this means they might seduce them to Idolatry, and so make them lose the Blessing intended for them. For that this was done by Balaam's Advice, there is no Doubt. See ch. xxxi. 16. And the Jews have also a Conceit that he ever had been an Enemy unto Israel, being one of Pharaoh's Privy Council, who advised him to drown their Children; as the Tale is told in the Talmud, in the Title Sanbedrim. cap. ult. But this is to make him to have been now of a greater Age, than we have reason to believe, (viz. two hundred and ten Years old, according to their own Computation) and quite contrary to what others of them say, that he lived but half his Time, according to the Psalmist, Psal. lv. 23.

Ver. 2. And they] That is, the Daughters of Moab.

Called the People] Invited them to a Feast: For the ordinary Charms unto Idolatry, were good Victuals, and bad Women.

Unto the Sacrifices of their Gods;] To eat of the Sacrifices which had been offered to their Gods, particularly to Baal-Peor. These Feasts upon their Sacrifices were very magnificent among the Heathen, being accompanied with Musick and Dancing, and sometimes pompous Processions sions, which inticed youthful Minds to partake of them. Here the Israelites, casting their Eyes upon the Daughters of Moab, (which doubtless on this Occasion appeared in the best Dress, and richest Ornaments) were smitten with their Beauty, and courted their Enjoyment; who would not yield to this Motion, but upon Condition that they would first worship their Gods: whereupon, pulling a little Image of Peor out of their Bosom, they presented it to the Israelites to kiss it, and desired them to eat of the Sacrifices that had been offered to him. Thus the Jewish Doctors tell the Story. And indeed it hath been observed by the Writers of the Church, that Women have been the most dangerous Seducers of Men from the true Religion; being from the Beginning the Spreaders of the old Heresies. For Simon Magus advanced his Heresy, Helenæ meretricis adjutus auxilio, being assisted by the Help of the Harlot Helena. Nicolaus of Antioch also, iboros duxit femineos. The famous Marcion sent before him some Roman Ladies, to prepare his Way. Apelles, Montanus, Arius, Donatus, did all take the same Course; as St. Hierom shews in his Book adversus Pelagianos.

And the People did eat,] Which was an Act of Idolatry, (as to eat of the LORD's Sacrifices, was an Act of Divine Worship) whereby they owned themselves the Servants of the Gods of Moab. See Exod. xxxiv. 15.

And bowed down to their Gods.] This was still a more plain Act of idolatrous Worship, expressly forbidden by God in the second Commandment.

Ver. 3. And Israel joined himself unto Baal-Peor:] This seems to signify, that they were devoted to the Service of this Idol in great Affection; with which they performed the forenamed Actions. The Jews commonly take this Baal-Peor to have been no better than a Priapus; and the Worship of him to have consisted in such obscene Practices, or Postures at least, as are not fit to be named. Particularly their great Commentary upon Numbers saith, that the Israelites being unwilling to enjoy their Women upon those Terms, they told them they needed only to uncover their Nakedness before Baal-Peor, which was all the Worship required of them: unto which they easily submitted. This Maimonides himself relates for a Truth, that his Worship consisted in revealing their Secret Parts before him, More Nevochim, P. iii. c. 45. But Solomon Jarchi goes farther, making this Worship to consist in Actions as ridiculous as they were beastly. All which seems to me very unlikely; and so it doth to several Men of great Judgment, particularly Mr. Selden; who thinks, with great Probability, that Peor (as I observed before, cb. xxiii. 28.) being the Name of a Mountain in the Country of Moab, the Temple of Baal stood upon it, (by whom some understand Saturn, others the Sun, which is most likely) and thence he was called Baal-Peor, because there he was especially worshipped; as Jupiter was called Olympius, because he was worshipped in a famous Temple, which stood on the Mountain Olympus. And every one knows, that anciently they chose the highest Mountains, before all other Places, for the Divine Service; insomuch that at Jerusalem the Temple was set upon the Hill of Sion, which the Psalmist saith God preferred before all other Places, Psal. lxxviii. 68. Or Peor perhaps was the Name of some great Prince (as the same Mr. Selden conjectures) translated into the Number of the Gods: for the Psalmist saith, Psal. cvi. 28. that when they worshipped Baal-Peor, they ate the Sacrifices of the Dead; which seems to signify, that in him they worshipped some dead Man, who perhaps was the first Institutor of this Worship, whatsoever it was. Another great Man of our own Nation hath said much to strengthen this Opinion; having shewn at large, that the ancient Heathens were wont to deify the Souls of Men, and canonize them after Death; and these were called Baalim, being accounted an inferior sort of Deities, who, they fancied, were Ministers for them to their Celestial Gods. See Mr. Mede, Book iii. p. 724, &c. Yet it must be acknowledged, that there are others of great Note, who take all for Truth which the Jewish Writers report concerning the filthy Worship of Baal-Peor, and imagine that Fornication was a Part of it; as in future Times it was both among the Greeks and Romans, in the Worship of some of their Gods. For what the Jews found then practised, they fancied was done in these early Days; but it is observable, that the more ancient the Books of the Jews are, which speak of this Matter, the less they say of the Impurities in the Service of Baal-Peor. For Example, the Hierusalem Talmud hath none of that lewd Stuff in it, which Solomon Jarchi, upon this Place, took out of the Babylonian; which was composed long after the former.

And the Anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel.] As appeared immediately, by the severe Punishment he inflicted on them, both for their Idolatry, and for their Fornication.

Ver. 4. And the LORD said unto Moses, Take all the Heads of the People, and hang them up] The plain Meaning seems to be, that he should take, i. e. cause to be apprehended, the Heads of the People, i. e. the Rulers of Thousands and Hundreds, and other principal Persons in their Tribes, who had been guilty of the foul Idolatry before-mentioned; and by hanging them up, put a Stop to the People's Lewdness, when they saw these great Men made publick Examples of God's Displeasure. For it is very likely, more of the Princes of the People were guilty besides Zimri; especially if it be true which the Samaritan Chronicle affirms, that the Daughters of the chief Men of Moab were sent finely dressed to allure the Israelites; and one of the King's Daughters among the rest. But tho' the LXX, and the Vulgar, and Symmachus, thus understand it, that he commanded the Heads of the People to be hanged up; yet a great many other ancient Translators, and many famous Doctors, take the Word otbam (them whom he commanded to be hanged up) not to refer to the Heads of the People, but to such as had joined themselves to Baal-Peor: And they interpret the foregoing Words, as if he had bid him take unto him (i. e. to his Assistance) the Heads of the People, as they think he did, as is related in the next Verse. The Judges indeed there mentioned seem to me to be distinct from the Heads of the People; and Moses did not take them them to his Assistance, but commanded them to do their Duty. Yet it must be acknowledged, that there is a great Current of Interpreters which runs the other Way; as if Moses was commanded to order the Judges to assemble and call before them such as were suspected; and having examined the Fact, accordingly proceed against them, and punish such as had offended. Thus the Samaritan Copy reads it expressly, and so Onkelos, and the Paraphrast called Uzielides, and the Hierusalem Targum, and the Arabick Translation of Saadia Gaon: and both the Talmudists and Karaites agree in this Sense, as Mr. Selden shews at large, Lib. ii. de Synedriis, cap. 1. n. 10. and Job. Coch upon the Gemara of the Sanhedrim, cap. 4. sect. 4. where he observes, that Aben-Ezra and Solomon Jarchi thus interpret it, and takes the Meaning to be certain, that the Heads of the People should divide themselves into several Courts of Judgment, and examine who had committed Idolatry; and after Conviction cause them to be hanged. For there is great Reason to think the Constitution of Judges, by Jethro's Advice, continued all the Time they were in the Wilderness; who might easily find out the Guilty in their several Divisions.

Before the LORD] i. e. Before the Sanctuary; as Men who had forsaken the Worship of their God, and by his Sentence were adjudged to die.

Against the Sun,] Openly, that all the People might see, and fear to sin. So both R. Solomon and Aben-Ezra expound it. For this was a peculiar Mark of the divine Displeasure against Idolaters and Blphemers, that they should be hanged up, and publicly exposed, after they had suffered Death. For none were hanged alive among the Hebrews; but first stoned, (which was the common Punishment of the fore-named Offenders) and then hanged up in the Eyes of all; as R. Solomon expounds this Phrase against the Sun.

That the fierce Anger of the LORD may be turned away from Israel.] By their Zeal to vindicate the Divine Honour.

Ver. 5. And Moses said unto the Judges of Israel,] Some take these for the seventy Elders, mentioned chap. xi. 25.

Slay ye] By hanging them up, as some understand it. But the Hebrew Word imports killing with the Sword; which they commanded their Officers to do, with the Assistance of such as abhorred the Wickedness of their Neighbours.

Every one his Men,] The seventy Elders, being appointed to be Coadjutors to Moses in the Government, made a Division of the People, it is most likely into so many Districts: and each of them having the Charge of one, all the People therein are called his Men; of whom he was to give an Account.

That were joined unto Baal-Peor.] Who were so well known, that there was no Danger of slaying the Innocent.

Ver. 6. And behold,] This which follows, is the more wonderful, if the Judges had already begun to execute the foregoing Command; and argues Zimri to have been very impudently wicked, who thought himself so great a Man, that no Judge durst meddle with him.

One of the Children of Israel came, and brought unto his Brethren] In the Camp of Israel, or into the Tent where his own Family dwelt.

A Midianitish Woman,] By which it appears that both Nations, Moab and Midian, were in this Plot against Israel.

In the Sight of Moses,] A high Contempt of his Authority; and of God's also, whose Servant Moses was.

And in the Sight of all the Congregation of the Children of Israel,] This seems to be a farther Aggravation of his Sin, that he was not content to go to the Women, who invited them, (ver. 2.) but brought one of them along with him into the Camp of Israel; and this he did before the Face of all the People, as well as of Moses; and that when they were mourning for this Sin, as it here follows.

Who were weeping before the Door of the Tabernacle of the Congregation.] This shews, that tho' there were great Numbers engaged in this Defection, yet the Generality of the People clave unto the LORD, and bewailed the Wickedness of their Brethren, most earnestly imploring God's Mercy towards them.

Ver. 7. And when Phinebas, the Son of Eleazar, the Son of Aaron, the Priest, &c.] A Man of great Authority, being next to the High-Priest, whom he succeeded in his Office, as he did Joshua (if we may believe some Writers) in the Government of all Israel.

He rose up] His Spirit (as St. Luke speaks of St. Paul) was stirred in him; and being inspired with an holy Zeal, was moved to do what follows.

From amongst the Congregation,] Who were weeping at the Door of the Tabernacle; or rather, from among the Judges with whom he was assembled, being one of them: So Jonathan; he rose up from the midst of the Sanhedrim. For as Bonav. Cornel. Bertramus thinks, Eleazar, after the Death of Aaron, appointed his Son Phinebas to be Prince of the Levites; which he thinks appears not only from his rising up here, from the midst of the Judges of Israel, but from the Embassy, wherein he was employed by Joshua, unto the Reubenites, &c. beyond Jordan, Josh. xxii. 13. and from 1 Chron. ix. 20. where he is said to be Ruler over the Korathites; which signifies, he thinks, such a Preheminence as Eleazar himself had over the Levites, while his Father Aaron lived, de Repub. Jud. c. 15. And indeed the Psalmist saith, that Phinebas stood up, and executed Judgment, Psal. cvi. 30. which seems to import that he acted as a Judge, but by an extraordinary Motion; which made him kill the Offenders with his own Hands, without a judicial Process against them.

And took a Javelin in his Hand;] Or a Sword, as Josephus calls it; which he snatch'd out of the Hand of Moses, as the Tradition is in Pirke Eliezer, cap. 47.

Ver. 8. And he went after the Man of Israel into the Tent,] It is an unusual Word in the Hebrew, which we translate Tent; importing a private, secret Place like a Cave, as Kubba or Kobba is thought to signify, which the Arabians call Alcobba; from whence comes the Word Alcove; which signifies, as Bochart observes, conclave camerati merati operis, quo lectus circumdatur: A Room of arched Work, which incloses a Bed in it. See his Hieroicoicon, Pars i. p. ult.

And thrust both of them through, the Man of Israel, and the Woman] This he did, saith Philo, μεγαλειῶς Μωϋσῆως, by the Command of Moses; but should rather have said, by a divine Instigation; which he followed, when the rest of the Judges were afraid (as some conceive) to meddle with so great a Man as Zimri was. And upon this Fact the Jews ground that which they call the Judgment of Zeal, which authorized them, who were full of Zeal, to punish such as blasphemed God, or profaned the Temple, &c. in the Presence of ten Men of Israel, without a formal Process against them. Thus Matthias killed a Jew who sacrificed after the Manner of the Greeks, 1 Maccab. ii. 24. and three hundred others were killed by their Countrymen, as is related in the Book commonly called the Third Book of Maccabees. And upon the Pretence of such Zeal, St. Stephen was stoned, and St. Paul intended to be killed, &c. as Grotius observes, Lib. ii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 20. sect. 9. and see Selden de Jure Nat. & Gent. Lib. iv. cap. 4. But this Judgment (as they call it) seems not to be well grounded upon the Fact of Phinehas, who was a publick Person, and had an extraordinary Motion, not to be imitated by private Men; nor was it followed till the latter Times of the State of that Nation.

Through her Belly:] The Vulgate hath it, through her secret Parts. And so the Jews in Pirke Eliezer, c. 47. and in other Books, such as Pesikta and Siphri; where they make many Miracles to have concurred in this Fact; particularly, they say, that the Relations of Zimri going to fall upon Phinehas for killing their Prince, the Angel of the Lord smote them, and cut them off.

So the Plague was stayed from the Children of Israel.] It seems, a pestilential Disease (as Josephus calls it) swept away many of the Offenders, who could not so speedily be punished by the Judges: But it stopt immediately upon this pious Act of Phinehas.

Ver. 9. And those that died in the Plague were twenty and four thousand.] There were but twenty and three thousand, who died of the Plague itself, as the Apostle tells us, 1 Cor. x. 8. but there were a thousand more taken off in the Plague-time, or during the Plague, as the Hebrew Words may be read: For in the twenty and four thousand, Moses comprehends all those who were killed by the Sword, in the Day of the Plague, (as the Phrase is ver. 18.) whereas St. Paul reckons those only who died of the Pestilence, as many have observed, particularly Bochartus, lib. ii. Hieroz. cap. 34. P. i. It is probable that from hence it was, that the Author of the Samaritan Chronicle took up a Conceit, that the King of Moab sent Twenty-four thousand Damsels to seduce the Israelites; as Hottinger reports his Words, in his Smegma Orientale, cap. 8. pag. 448.

Ver. 10. And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,] After the Plague was stayed, it is likely Moses went into the Tabernacle to give God Thanks for his Mercy to his People; and then he spake to him what here follows.

Ver. 11. Phinehas the Son of Eleazar, the Son of Aaron the Priest, hath turned my Wrath away from the Children of Israel,] Tho' they wept and mourned before the Door of the Tabernacle, yet that did not prevail so much for Mercy, as this heroick Act of Justice.

While he was zealous for my sake among them,] With a fervent and courageous Affection vindicated the divine Honour, by a speedy Punishment of those notorious Offenders.

That I consumed not the Children of Israel in my Jealousy.] Did not proceed to destroy them by the Pestilence, when I was so highly incensed against them. For it is observed by Herodotus himself in his Euterpe, that ἡ μετ' ἄλλων ἀδικημάτων μέγιστα ἐστὶν ἡ τιμωρία καὶ τῷ Θεῷ, for great Crimes there are as great Punishments sent from God; which is necessary for the publick Good: For unless, by such Means, a Stop be put to open Impurities, to Murders, and such like Crimes, not only all civil Society will be overturned, but Nations become so wicked, that they will be fit for nothing but to be rooted out by the divine Vengeance, as the Canaanites were. Thus Cicero discourses, Philip. viii. In corpore, si quid ejusmodi est, quod reliquo corpori noceat, &c. "In the Body, if there be any thing which hurts the rest of the Body, it is necessary to cut it off," or to burn it, that some one Member, rather than the whole Body, perish: And so it is in the Body of the Commonwealth: Ut totum saluum sit, quicquid est pestiferum amputetur; that the whole may be preserved, let that which is infectious be lopped off.

Ver. 12. Wherefore say,] Unto Phinehas, or unto all the People.

Behold, I give unto him my Covenant of Peace.] The Word Peace, in Scripture, comprehends all manner of Blessings; and therefore this is a solemn Promise and Engagement to make him and his Family prosperous; the particular Blessing which he entails upon him, following in the next Verse. But some will have this to signify that he should be the great Reconciler of God to his People, and make Peace between them hereafter, as he had done at present. Philo seems to think this and the Priesthood to be two distinct Things; when he saith, God crowned his Piety, δίδωται δωρεάς, εἰρήνην καὶ ἱερεῖον, with two Gifts, Peace and the Priesthood. And the Jews make Peace to consist in a long Life of Prosperity; which was fulfilled in Phinehas's Person, who lived till the latter Times of the Judges, Judg. xx. 28. Pirke Eliezer interprets it, He gave him the Life of this World, and of the next.

Ver. 13. And he shall have it, and his Seed after him,] It shall continue in his Family.

Even the Covenant of an everlasting Priesthood;] This is the particular Happiness which God settled upon him and his Posterity, as long as their State lasted; which was with some Limitation, as appears by this, that after some Successions in the Line of Phinehas, the Priesthood came, for a Time, into the Family of Eli, who was descended from Ithamar the youngest Son of Aaron: The Reason of it is not mentioned in the Scripture; but some great Sin, it is reasonable to suppose, provoked God to set aside the Line of Eleazar for some Time, till Eli's Sons also became came so wicked, that the Priesthood was taken from them, and restored in the Days of Solomon to the Posterity of Phinebas, with whom it continued as long as the Priesthood lasted. What Sin this was, and when committed, we do not know. Some of the Hebrew Doctors are so bold as to say, it was because Phinebas would not absolve Jephthab from his Vow, as Mr. Selden observes, lib. i. de Success. in Pontif. cap. 2. But as there is no Ground for this, and such-like Fancies, which others of them have, so it is more probable that some of Phinebas's Successors offended, rather than he himself; his Posterity for four Generations holding the Priesthood, before it was translated to Eli, as Josephus and others (mentioned by Selden in the Place before-named) make account.

Agidius Camartus, in his Book de Rebus Eliæ, cap. iii. sect. 5. and Corn. Bertram, cap. 15. de Repub. Jud. imagine, that in those confused Times, none of the Priests were found fit to administer the Affairs of the Nation but Eli alone: and therefore he was appointed by GOD to it, as appears from 1 Sam. ii. 30. But l'Empereur in his Annotations upon Bertram well observes, That it being the constant Course of GOD's Proceedings, to continue his Mercies to the Israelites, according to his Promise, while they were obedient, but to take them away when they became disobedient; it is highly reasonable to conclude there was some great Offence given to GOD by some of the Race of Phinebas, which was the Cause that they lost this Dignity: But so constant was GOD to his Promise, that he preserved his Line in a continued Succession of twelve Persons, from Phinebas to Azariab, who executed the Priest's Office in the Temple that Solomon built in Jerusalem, as we read 1 Chron. vi. 4. to the 10th: From which Time to the Captivity of Babylon, there were nine more, as we read there in the following Verses: And after the End of the Captivity, unto the Time of Antiochus Eupator, the Jews reckon fifteen more, the last of which, Onias, was killed by Lysias: And after him there were eight of the Family of the Asmonæi; the last of which, Aristobulus, was killed by Herod, who after that made whom he pleased.

Because he was zealous for his GOD,] GOD, who searches the Hearts, saw that this Motion proceeded not from any private Passion; but out of pure Love and fervent Affection to him, and from Indignation to see his divine Majesty so affronted. For Zeal is a mixed Affection of Love and Anger.

And made an Atonement for the Children of Israel.] Procured a Pardon for all his Brethren, αἰτοῦντες καὶ ἐξελθόντες σπένοντες, (as Philo expresses it) by his uncommanded and spontaneous Diligence to vindicate GOD's Honour, flowing from his sincere Devotion to GOD's Service.

Ver. 17. Now the Name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish Woman,] GOD would have his Name stand upon Record, partly to make it infamous, and partly to do Honour to Phinebas, who durst attempt to set upon a Man, who had so great an Interest in his Tribe, as is mentioned in the next Words.

Was Zimri the Son of Salu, a Prince] Not the chief of the whole Tribe; but of a great Family in that Tribe.

Of a chief House among the Simeonites.] In the Hebrew the Words are, of a House of a Father. For the Tribes were divided into Families, and these into Houses, every one of which had a Head or Chief, (see the first Chapter of this Book, ver. 2.) and Zimri was one of those principal Persons, tho' not Prince of all the Simeonites.

Ver. 15. And the Name of the Midianitish Woman that was slain, was Cozbi, the Daughter of Zur;] This is set down also, to shew how little Phinebas feared the great Men, either in Israel, or elsewhere: For Zur is reckoned afterwards as one of the Kings of Midian, ch. xxxi. 8. or Princes, Josh. xiii. 21.

He was Head over a People, and of a chief House in Midian.] The Hebrew Word Ummoth (which we translate People) signifies Nations; so that if we translate these Words exactly, they sound thus, He was Head of Nations, of a House of a Father in Midian; that is, Chief of divers Families, who all sprung from the same Father or Original in that Country.

Ver. 16. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,] Some time after this, tho' not long, (as appears from chap. xxxi. 1, 2.) but a little before Moses's Death.

Ver. 17. Vex the Midianites,] Among whom this pernicious Contrivance was hatched: For Balak being so incensed against Balaam, that he bad him be gone, in all Haste, out of his Country, (ch. xxiv. 11.) Balaam would not stay to propound unto him this mischievous Advice which was in his Head, but went to the Midianites, and there discovered it; which was the same thing, he knew, as if he had acquainted Balak with it, there being a great Friendship between the two Nations, ch. xxii. 4. It is likely also, that the Midianites were the first that advised Balaam should be sent for, which made their Guilt the greater: but the Moabites did not escape, tho' (for Lot's sake, perhaps, Deut. ii. 9.) their Punishment was deferred till future Times, as Balaam prophesied, chap. xxiv. 17. and they were also excluded, by a Law made immediately after this, from the Society of the Israelites, for this very Fact, Deut. xxiii. 3, 4.

And smite them:] With the Sword; as we find they did, chap. xxxi.

Ver. 18. For they vex you with their Wiles,] Have sorely distressed you by their subtle Devices.

Wherewith they have beguiled you, in the Matter of Peor,] Drawn you in to commit foul Idolatry. Here Peor, which was a Mountain in Moab, where Baal had a Temple, (as I observed chap. xxiii. 28.) is used for the Idol itself, which was there worshipped, being a Contraction of Baal-Peor: And so it is chap. xxxi. 16. Josh. xxii. 17.

And in the Matter of Cozbi,] And into lewd Filthiness with idolatrous Women.

The Daughter of a Prince of Midian,] By whose Consent, no doubt, she went upon this wicked Design; that by her noble Garb and Attendance, she might the more powerfully intice the great Men of Israel to Idolatry.

Their Sister,] Whom the whole Family were content to prostitute, that they might compass the Destruction of the Israelites: But by Sister may be meant one of the same Country or Nation; the same kind of Language being used among among them that was among the Jews; who called one another Brethren and Sisters, (being descended from the same Stock) as Christians did all those that were of their Religion.

Which was slain in the Day of the Plague,] When so many Thousands fell by the Pestilence.

For Peor's sake.] For worshipping Baal-Peor; into which they were inveigled by the Women, who invited them to a Feast, and there by their Charms excited another fleshly Appetite in them; which they would not let them satisfy, unless they would both eat of their Sacrifices, and worship their Idols: And perhaps they told them, it was not lawful for them to consent to their Desire, unless they would be of their Religion.

C H A P. XXVI.

Ver. 1. AND it came to pass after the Plague,] Mentioned in the foregoing Chapter, ver. 9, 17. tho' some fancy it refers unto all the Plagues that had swept away all the former Generation, except two Persons. It is likely this may be done in the eighth Month of the fortieth Year, after they came out of Egypt.

That the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Eleazar the Son of Aaron the Priest, saying,] As GOD had formerly joined Aaron with Moses; (Numb. i. 1, 17. ii. 1. iv. 1, &c.) so now Aaron being dead, he joins his Son Eleazar with him; to shew that he succeeded not only in his Place and Office, but also in his Authority.

Ver. 2. Take the Sum of all the Congregation of the Children of Israel,] They had been twice numbered before this: Once, before the Building of the Tabernacle, in the first Year after they came out of Egypt, when they paid every Man half a Shekel towards it, (Exod. xxx. 11, 13. xxxviii. 25.) and again, when they were to be encamped, in the second Month of the second Year, Numb. i. 1, 2, &c. And now, all those Men who had been then numbered (thirty-eight Years ago) being dead, (as appears from ver. 64. of this Chapter) GOD commands them to be numbered a third time. Partly, that he might demonstrate his Faithfulness to his Word, in multiplying them vastly, notwithstanding all their Provocations, (for their Number was within eighteen hundred and twenty, as many as they were at their last Muster) and partly, that the Land they were now going to possess, might be the more easily divided among the Tribes in just and equal Proportions.

From twenty Years old and upward, throughout their Fathers House, all that are able to go to War in Israel.] All this is explained in the first Chapter, ver. 2, 3.

Ver. 3. And Moses and Eleazar the Priest spake with them] With the Heads of the several Tribes; who, it is likely, were to assist in this Numbering, as they did in the former, Numb. i. 4, 16, 17.

In the Plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying,] See ch. xxii. 1.

Ver. 4. Take the Sum of the People,] These Words are not in the Hebrew; but some Words of this kind are to be understood, that they spake with them about numbering the People, from twenty Years old and upward, as it here follows.

As the LORD commanded Moses, and the Children of Israel, which went forth out of the Land of Egypt.] He had them proceed according to the Directions GOD had formerly given, in the second Month of the second Year, after they came out of Egypt, Numb. i. 1.

Ver. 5, 6. Reuben the eldest Son of Israel,] This Numbering being performed as the former was, Moses uses more concise Language in the Account he gives of it; as he doth in the foregoing Verse, and in this, and those that follow; where he sets down the Number of every Tribe, and the Families from whence they sprung, without saying, Those that were numbered of the Tribe of Reuben were, &c. as he doth, Numb. i. 21, &c.

The Children of Reuben; Hanoch, of whom came the Family of the Hanochites, &c.] The four Sons of Reuben (whose Families here follow) are mentioned both in Genesis xvi. 9. and in Exodus vi. 14. and are here mentioned again; because he intends to set down the Names both of the Children and Grand-children of one of his Sons, which he did not before.

Ver. 7. These are the Families of the Reubenites;] The Word we translate Families, rather signifies Nations (Gentes) or Kindreds, as we translate it, Psal. xxii. 27. For all that sprung from those Seventy Persons, who came with Jacob into Egypt, are called by this Name of Mispeoth, which the LXX here translate συναγωγαι, People; which were divided into Houses, as the Hebrews call them: and those Houses into particular Persons: This is plain from Josh. vii. 14. where, for the Discovery of him that had sinned in the accursed Thing, GOD commanded the Israelites to be brought by their Tribes, and then that Tribe by the Families belonging to it; and that Family which the LORD took by Households; and that Household Man by Man.

And they that were numbered of them were forty and three thousand, and seven hundred and thirty.] This being compared with Numb. i. 21. it appears this Tribe was less than it was eight and thirty Years ago, by near three thousand Men: For some whole Households had been destroyed, as it follows ver. 9.

Ver. 8. And the Sons of Pallu; Eliab.] He speaks in the plural Number, when there was but one Son of Pallu, which is very usual in the Scripture Language: see Gen. xix. 29. xxi. 7. xlv. 7. and in this very Chapter, ver. 42.

Eliab.] He does not say, from him came the Family of the Eliabites; for he made only an Household in the Family (as we call it) of the Palluites.

Ver. 9. And the Sons of Eliab; Nemuel, and Datban, and Abiram.] The same must be observed of these, that Families did not spring from them; but they were Households belonging to the Family of the Palluites.

This is that Datban and Abiram] They are here again mentioned; partly to set a new Brand upon them, for their insolent Rebellion against Moses; and partly to shew how the Reubenites came to be so diminished.

Famous in the Congregation,] See ch. xvi. 2.

Who strove against Moses, and against Aaron, in the Company of Korab,] They joined with Korab, who seems to have been the chief Incendiary; for he is mentioned first in ch. xvi. 1.

When they strove against the LORD:] Who had appointed Aaron alone to be the High-Priest, and his Sons to minister in the Priests Office; which these Men would have usurped, ch. xvi. 11. where it is said expressly, They were gathered together against the LORD.

Ver. 10. And the Earth opened her Mouth, and swallowed them up together with Korab, &c.] These Words seem to import, that Korab was swallowed up with Datban and Abiram, as I have observed upon ch. xvi. 32. See there. But it must be acknowledged that these Words may receive another Interpretation, and that very natural, in this manner; The Earth opened her Mouth and swallowed them up, (viz. Datban and Abiram, and the rest, mentioned ch. xvi. 32.) and then the next Words, with Korab, may be thus translated, and as for Korab (who was the great Incendiary) when that Company died, i. e. he died, when the Company which offered Incense died: for there is in many Places a Defect of a Word, to be supplied from the Word that follows. This is a very easy Construction, and agrees with the Psalmist, Psal. cvi. 17. where he mentions only Datban and Abiram's Company as swallowed up; and then adds, ver. 18. A Fire was kindled in their Company, (i. e. in the other Company of Rebels) and the Flame burnt up the Wicked, viz. Korab, and those that were with him.

What time the Fire devoured two hundred and fifty Men:] ch. xvi. 35. If the Interpretation now mentioned, of the foregoing Words, be admitted, then Korab must be added to the Number of the Two hundred and fifty Men; which Moses takes Occasion to explain in this Place.

And they became a Sign.] A Monument of GOD'S Displeasure against those that affront his Ministers; to give Warning unto all Posterity not to follow their pernicious Courses.

Ver. 11. Notwithstanding the Children of Korab died not.] As those of Datban and Abiram did; but their Family continued famous in David's Time; for perhaps they left their Father, and departed from the Tents of those wicked Men; as Moses by GOD'S Command exhorted the Congregation, (ch. xvi. 24, 26.) and they obeyed, ver. 27.

Ver. 12, 13. The Sons of Simeon after their Families, &c.] His Sons are reckoned up here just as they are Gen. xlv. 10. and Excd. vi. 15. only one of them, viz. Obad, is here omitted; because, either he had no Children, or his Family was extinct before this Time. The first of them also, viz. Nemuel, is there called Jemuel; and Jachin, in 1 Chron. iv. 24. is called Jarib; there being some Reason, in Process of Time, for such Alterations.

Ver. 14. These are the Families of the Simeonites, twenty and two thousand, and two hundred.] There was a wonderful Decrease of this Tribe in the Space of thirty and eight Years: For they were fewer by above thirty-seven thousand, than they were at the last Numbering. See ch. i. 23. Many of them, it is probable, being in the same Crime with Zimri; and the Plague falling most heavily upon this Tribe, whom Moses in Deuteronomy xxxiii. doth not bless.

Ver. 15, 16, 17. The Children of Gad after their Families:] They are reckoned here next to the Simeonites, because they lay encamped next to them, under the Standard of Reuben, Numb. ii. 10, 11, &c.

Of Zepbon, the Family of the Zepbonites, &c.] They are reckoned up in the same manner, Gen. xlv. 16, only he that is here called Zepbon, is there called Zipbon: and Osi is there called Ezbon; and Arod called Arodi.

Ver. 18. These are the Families of the Children of Gad, according to those that were numbered of them, forty thousand and five hundred.] This Tribe also was less by above five thousand than before, chap. i. 25.

Ver. 19. The Sons of Judab were Er and Onan, &c.] These were his eldest Sons, but died without Issue, before the Children of Israel went down into Egypt, as it here follows. See Gen. xxxviii. 1, 2, &c.

Ver. 20. And the Sons of Judab after their Families were, &c.] Now he reckons those of his Sons, who made Families, which were three: as we read also Gen. xlv. 12.

Ver. 21. And the Sons of Pharez were; of Hezron, &c.] Here he numbers two of Judab's Grandchildren, as he did one of Reuben's, ver. 6. only with this Difference, that these two made Families in Israel, which his Grandson did not; they being substituted instead of Er and Onan, who died without Children. Or rather, the Family of Pharez growing very great, there was a Subdivision made of it into the other Families, who were all still Pharezites, (for Pharez had no other Children but these two, to make a Family of that Name) but called by these two Names of Hezronites and Hamulites, because the Pharezites were grown too big to be one Family, and therefore parted into two.

Ver. 22. These are the Families of Judab, according to those that were numbered of them, threescore and sixteen thousand and five hundred.] This Tribe was very numerous before, above all the rest; and now this new Generation, which sprung up instead of the old, (who were all destroyed except Caleb) exceeded them two thousand. So faithful was GOD to his Promise, that this should be a most powerful Tribe. See Numb. i. 27.

Ver. 23. Of the Sons of Issachar after their Families:] He and Zebulon are mentioned next, because they lay encamped together, under the Standard of Judab. See Numb. ii. 5, 6, 7.

Of Tola, the Family of the Tolaites:] A wonderful fruitful Family, and very valiant; there being of this one Family twenty-two thousand six hundred Men in the Days of David, 1 Chron. vii. 2.

Of Pua, the Family of the Punites:] He is called Phozab, Gen. xlv. 13.

Ver. 24. Of Jashub, &c.] Who is called Job in the same Place.

Ver. 25. Threescore and four thousand and three hundred.] This Tribe also was exceedingly increased; being near ten thousand more now than they were at their first Numbering, ch. i. 29. ii. 6.

Ver. 26. Of the Sons of Zebulun after their Families, &c.] There is no Change in their Names; which are the same, without any Alteration, as when they went into Egypt, Gen. xlv. 14.

Ver. 27. Those that were numbered of them, Three-score thousand and Five hundred.] This Tribe likewise was increased above Three thousand since the former Numbering. See ch. i. 31. And so the whole Camp of Judah was mightily augmented, as that of Reuben was diminished.

Ver. 28. The Sons of Joseph after their Families, &c.] See Gen. xlv. 20.

Ver. 29. Of the Sons of Manasseh: of Machir, &c.] This was his only Son; but those descended from him, by an usual manner of speaking, are called Manasseh's Sons also, being his Grandsons. Some think indeed that Manasseh had other Sons, which they gather from Gen. i. 23. but, if he had, their Families were extinct: for none but Machir and his Posterity had any Inheritance in the Land of Canaan, Josh. xvii. 1, 2. where the Grand-children are called his Children.

Machir begat Gilead: of Gilead come the Family of the Gileadites.] They were not a distinct Family from the Machirites, but the very same; Machir having no Son but Gilead. Therefore that Family, which at first was called Machirites, were afterwards called Gileadites: or they were indifferently called, either by the one or the other.

Ver. 30. These are the Sons of Gilead: of Jeezer,] Called Abiezer, Josh. xvii. 2.

The Family of the Jeezerites, &c.] The Posterity of Gilead grew so numerous, that his Sons made Families, and not only Households: So that the Name of Gileadites being too general to distinguish them all, they were called, at length, by the Name of his Sons.

Ver. 31, 32. Of Asriel, the Family of the Asrielites, &c.] This, and all the rest that follow, are mentioned as the Sons of Gilead; for each of whose Children there was a Lot in the Land of Canaan, Josh. xvii. 2.

Ver. 33. And Zelophehad the Son of Hepher had no Sons, but Daughters, &c.] Whose Case is considered in the next, and in the last Chapter of this Book; where they are ordered to have an Inheritance among their Father's Brethren, but to marry into their own Tribe. And their Posterity, I suppose, were called after their Grand-father's Name, Hepherites: for such a Family there was, as Moses tells us in the foregoing Verse.

Ver. 34. Numbered of them Fifty and two thousand and Seven hundred.] If this be compared with ch. i. 35. it will appear that this Tribe was increased above Twenty thousand: Which is the greatest Increase of any other; and made good the Prophecy of Jacob concerning the Children of Joseph, Gen. xlix. 22.

Ver. 35. These are the Sons of Ephraim after their Families:] He is mentioned after Manasseh, because he was his younger Brother: yet in their Encampment this Tribe had the Standard, under which Manasseh marched, Num. ii. 18, &c.

Of Shubelab, the Family of the Shubalbites, &c.] He is mentioned first also in 1 Chron. vii. 20. Where the next Son Becher is called Bered; and Taban called Tabath. For Time is wont to make great Alterations in the Names of Persons and Places.

Ver. 36. These are the Sons of Shubelab: of Eran, the Family of the Eranites, &c.] He had, it seems, but one Son; whose Children (after the usual Manner of Speaking before noted) were called the Sons of Shubelab; though they made a distinct Family, under the Name of Eranites.

Ver. 37. Those that were numbered of them, Thirty and two thousand and Five hundred, &c.] Though this proved a very numerous Tribe in future Times, yet for the present they were fewer by Eight thousand than they were in the former Numbering, ch. i. 33. which makes Moses's Prophecy, a little after this, the more remarkable, Deut. xxxiii. 17. where he makes the Ephraimites ten to one, in comparison with the Manassites.

Ver. 38. The Sons of Benjamin after their Families:] This Tribe also was under the Standard of Ephraim, and therefore mentioned here together with him and Manasseh. When they went into Egypt, the Sons of Benjamin were no less than Ten, Gen. xlv. 21. half of which either had no Children, or they were all extinct before this Time; for here are only Five named.

Of Bela, the Family of the Belaites, &c.] The two first, Bela and Ashbel, are there named as they are here: but the next, Abiram, is there called Ebi, and in 1 Chron. viii. 1. Abara; such an Alteration doth Time make in Names.

Ver. 39. Of Shupham, &c.] He is called Muphim in Gen. xlv. 21. and Hupham is there called Huphim.

Ver. 40. The Sons of Bela were Ard and Naaman, &c.] Tho' Five of his Sons were dead without Issue; yet two of his Grandsons, descended from his eldest Son, made distinct Families in Israel. And the Son of one of them was called after the Name of his Uncle, the youngest Son of Benjamin, Gen. xlv. 21. whose Name was Ard; and in 1 Chron. viii. 3. (by a small Transposition of Letters) is called Addar.

Ver. 41. There were numbered of them Forty and five thousand and Six hundred, &c.] This Tribe was grown to be Ten thousand more than they were at the last Numbering, ch. i. 37.

Ver. 42. These are the Sons of Dan, &c.] Thus he speaks, though he had but one. See ver. 8.

Of Shubam, &c.] Called Hushim, by a Transposition of Letters, Gen. xlv. 23. Just as the same Tree is called Almugim, 1 Kings x. 11. and Algumim, 2 Chron. ii. 8. And the same City in which Joshua was buried, called Timnath-Serach, Josh. xxiv. 30. and Timnath-Cheres, Judg. ii. 9. And, to come still nearer, the same Man is called Rechum, Nebem. xii. 3. and Cherim, ver. 15: of the same Chapter.

These are the Families of Dan after their Families.] That is, from these Shubamites came the rest of the Families of this Tribe, which are not here mentioned; but into which this Family was subdivided, when it grew very great; as it appears from the next Words.

Ver. 43. All the Families of the Shubamites, &c.] This shews there were more than one of them, who had Names from some of the Children of Shubam.

Were Threescore and four thousand and Four hundred.] A vast Number to spring from one Man ; when Benjamin, who had Ten Sons, wanted almost Twenty thousand of this Number : which is Seventeen hundred more than were in this Tribe at the last Numbering, chap. i. 39.

Ver. 44. Of the Children of Asher after their Families, &c.] They all retain the same Names which they had when they went into Egypt, Gen. xlv. 17. Only he that is here called Jeshui, is there called Ishui ; and another Son there mentioned is here omitted ; his Family, I suppose, being quite extinct.

Ver. 45. Of the Sons of Beriab, &c.] Instead of him, whose Family was quite lost, the youngest Son of Asher (Beriab) had two Families sprung from him.

Ver. 46. And the Name of the Daughter of Asher was Sarab, &c.] Or Serab, as she is called, Gen. xlv. 17. He doth not say that a Family sprang from her, which Corn. Bertramus (cap. 6. de Republ. Jud.) seems to think probable, instead of some that were lost ; but she was a Woman, it is likely, as eminent in this Tribe, as any of her Brethren, for some Virtue or other : Insomuch that the Cabbalists in the ancient Book Zohar, parting the heavenly Region, where the Souls of holy Women are, into four Palaces, make four great Women to be a kind of Presidents of them, viz. Pharaoh's Daughter, who educated Moses ; and this Serab the Daughter of Asher ; with Jochabed the Mother of Moses ; and Deborah the famous Prophetess. See Selden, Lib. ii. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 4.

Ver. 47. Were Fifty and three thousand and Four hundred.] This Tribe also fructified exceedingly, wanting but an Hundred of Twelve thousand more than they were at the last Numbering, ch. i. 41.

Ver. 48, 49. Of the Sons of Naphtali after their Families, &c.] There are Four of them, whose Names were not at all changed since they went into Egypt. See Gen. xlv. 24.

Ver. 50. Were Forty and five thousand and Four hundred.] They wanted Eight thousand of their Number, Numb. i. 43. These two Tribes, Asher and Naphtali, are mentioned together with Dan, because they were encamped under his Standard, Numb. ii. 25, 26, &c.

Ver. 51. These were the Numbered of the Children of Israel, Six hundred thousand and a Thousand Seven hundred and Thirty.] That is, the whole Number amounted to this Sum ; which was but Eighteen hundred and Twenty less than they were, when they were last numbered, Thirty-eight Years ago, ch. i. 46. So great was the Goodness of God, and such his Faithfulness to his Word, that when he destroyed all the former Generation, (who were above Twenty Years old) he multiplied their Posterity so fast, in that Space of Time, as to make them equal, in a Manner, to those that went before them.

Ver. 52. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,] After the People were thus numbered, and every Family, and the Persons it contained, exactly known, then the LORD ordered as follows.

Ver. 53. Unto these] i. e. These Families before-named.

The Land shall be divided] i. e. The Land of Canaan, into which they were going.

For an Inheritance,] Not to be alienated from those Families.

According to the Number of Names.] Of the Persons in the several Families, from Twenty Years old and upwards, ver. 2. So that Minors, who had not attained the Age of Twenty Years when this Account was taken, the Jews say, were not to have any Share in the Land, though they were come to that Age at the Time of the Distribution of it among them. But those Minors had Possessions, as Heirs of their Fathers, according to the Families.

Ver. 54. To many thou shalt give the more Inheritance, and to few thou shalt give the less Inheritance :] That is, order Joshua to assign them a Share in the Land, proportionable to the Number of Persons in every Tribe : Some of which were far greater than others, and therefore to have more Land, proportionable to the Largeness of their Families. But this was not measured merely by the Number of Acres, as we speak ; but by the Goodness of the Soil : for a little Ground, in a rich Country, would maintain more Persons than twice as much in a barren. So Josephus, Lib. v. Antiq. cap. 1. where, after he had said that Joshua made a Distribution of the Land, καὶ αὖ μεγίστους ἐκδούς ἕκαστον ὅσον οὐκῶν, according to the Bigness of each Tribe ; he adds, that in doing this, τιμωρὴς μᾶλλον ἢ μέτρον ἐστὶν κλήρος ἔσθαι δεῖν, it was necessary to consider rather the Value than the Measure of every Portion ; and gives this Reason why the Tribe of Benjamin had so narrow a Portion allotted them, because the Ground was so very fertile about Jerusalem : Στενὸν δὲ ὁ κλῆρος ἔσθαι διὰ τὴν τῆς γῆς ἀρετὴν, This Lot was very strait, because of the Goodness of the Soil.

To every one shall his Inheritance be given,] That is, to every Family.

According to those that were numbered of him.] According to the Account that had been now taken ; not considering who might be born after this, (and thereby increase a Family) or die (and thereby diminish it) before the Division of the Land was made. For several died, we may well think, in the Wars with the Canaanites, and others were born before the Country was conquer'd.

Ver. 55. Notwithstanding, the Land shall be divided by Lot :] When it was divided into so many equal Shares as there were Tribes, (a due Respect being had to their Number) they were not to chuse which Share they would have ; but that was to be determined by Lot. The Manner of which, they say, was this : Two Urns being placed before him that drew the Lots, in one of which were Scrolls of Parchment, containing the Names of the twelve Tribes of Israel ; and in the other, the Portions of Land ; he first put in his Hand into the Urn wherein were their Names, and drew out one, suppose that of Judah ; and then he put his Hand into the other Urn, and drew out the Portion that fell to his Share. Or perhaps there was only one Urn, wherein were the several Portions of Land ; and they began, suppose, with the eldest Son of Israel, viz. Reuben ; and pulling out a Scroll, said, This is the Portion of Reuben : and so with the

the rest. But which soever way they proceeded, there were two Distributions made; one of the whole Country into twelve Parts; and another of each of those Parts among the several Families that were in each Tribe. See Selden, de Successionibus ad Leges Hebr. cap. 21, 22.

According to the Names of the Tribes of their Fathers they shall inherit.] This seems to justify what I now said, that they first named the Tribe, whose Lot they would draw out; and that contained his Inheritance. But, after all this, it might happen that some of their Lots were too scanty for their Number, and others too large: In which case Eleazar and Joshua, and the rest appointed for this Office, chap. xxxiv. 17, &c. ordered some Portion to be taken from those who had too much, and given to those who had too little for their Families. This appears from Josh. xix. 9. where a Portion out of the Lot of Judab is ordered for Siméon; because the one was too large, and the other too small: and the same may be said of Dan, ver. 47.

Ver. 56. According to the Lot shall the Possession thereof be divided,] The first Words, which we translate according to the Lot, being in the Hebrew, Al pi bagoral, which literally signifies according to the Mouth of the Lot, (which is no more than, as the Lot shall declare) the Jews have a Conceit that the Land was divided, not merely by Lot, but by Urim and Thummim; which Eleazar the Priest then put on, (as the Talmud describes it in Bava Batra) and two Urns standing before him, in one of which were the Names of the twelve Tribes, and in the other the Names of the Portions of Land, he looked by the Holy Ghost upon the Urim and Thummim, and said, Let such a Tribe come up; which being done, he said again, Let such a Portion of Land come up for this Tribe: by which Means all the People (before whom this was done) were satisfied that their Portion was allotted to them by GOD; and all Cause of Murmuring and Contention taken away. Thus R. Solomon and others mentioned by Buxtorf in his Hist. Urim & Thummim, cap. 3. And Martinus Mauritius in his late Treatise de Sortitione veter. Hebr. cap. 29. sect. 4, 5. where he observes, how ancient the Way of dividing Goods and Lands by Lot was in other Countries. But there was no Need of this Solemnity, the Division of the Land by GOD's Order, after the Manner of Lots, sufficiently shewing, it was not by Man's Directions, but by GOD's, that such a Share fell to them.

Between many and few.] Every Tribe having its Land assigned them by the Lot, it was then divided among the several Families, in the same manner, (as these Words seem to signify) and then every Household had their Share allotted them, according to the Number of Persons that were in them; which, if they were many, had a greater Share; if few, a less. By which Means every Man had Reason to rest satisfied, because such was his Lot; that is, such was the good Pleasure of GOD, who directed the Lots, as we learn from Joshua xviii. 6, 8, 10. where we read expressly, that in the Division of the Land, he cast Lots for them before the LORD in Shiloh, that he might order every one his Portion.

Ver. 57. And these are they that were numbered of the Levites, after their Families:] It was fit an Account should be taken of this Tribe also, that it might be seen how GOD had blessed them, as well as the rest of the Tribes of Israel, with a numerous Issue; tho' he had cut off, in the Space of thirty-eight Years, all the former Generation, from Twenty Years old and upward.

Of Gersbon, the Family of the Gersbonites, &c.] The principal Families in this Tribe were three, descended from the three Sons of Levi, Gersbon, Kobath, and Merari; whose Names were not at all altered since their Coming out of Egypt, until this Time, Gen. xlv. 11. Exod. vi. 16.

Ver. 38. These are the Families of the Levites:] The three fore-named were the principal Families, divided into those lesser Families which here follow.

The Family of the Libnites,] Descended from Libni the eldest Son of Gersbon; who had another Son, whose Family is here omitted, (viz. Shimi) tho' mentioned Exod. vi. 17. But in this Place Moses doth not give a full Account of all the Families of the Levites, nor is it given in exact Order; because they were to have no Inheritance in the Division of the Land; which was the Reason that all the Families of the other Tribes are set down so punctually.

The Family of the Hebronites,] From Hebron, one of the Sons of Kobath, Exod. vi. 18. Numb. iii. 19.

The Family of the Mablites, the Family of the Mushtites,] From the two Sons of Merari, who were called Mabli, and Musbi, Exod. vi. 19. Numb. iii. 20.

The Family of the Korathites:] From the great Grandchild of Levi, Exod. vi. 21. Numb. xvi. 1.

And Kobath begat Amram.] Who was Grandchild of Levi, and Brother to the Father of Korah, Exod. vi. 18.

Ver. 59. And the Name of Amram's Wife was Jochebed, the Daughter of Levi,] See Exod. vi. 20.

Whom her Mother (viz. Levi's Wife) bare to Levi in Egypt:] See this there explained.

And she bare unto Amram, Aaron and Moses, and Miriam their Sister.] Who was born before Moses, if not before Aaron, Exod. ii. 4.

Ver. 60. And unto Aaron was born Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar.] Exod. vi. 23. where he tells the Name of their Mother.

Ver. 61. And Nadab and Abihu died, when they offered strange Fire before the LORD.] See Lev. x. 2. and the third Chapter of this Book, ver. 4. But Eleazar (who was the eldest next to them) was now alive, and made High-priest: And it is likely Ithamar also, being under Twenty Years old, when the People murmured upon the Report of the Spies; and so not cut off with that wicked Generation, chap. xiv. 29.

All this is here recounted, to shew that the Tribe of Levi was preserved, by the Blessing of GOD, as well as the rest of the Israelites; tho' they were to have no Inheritance in the Land of Canaan.

Ver. 62. And those that were numbered of them, were Twenty and three thousand, &c.] So they were a thousand more than at the last Numbering, chap. iii. 39.

For they were not numbered among the Children of Israel,] But by themselves, for the Reason following.

Because there was no Inheritance given them among the Children of Israel.] For GOD was their Inheritance, as he told them, chap. xviii. 20, &c. And therefore they were ordered not to be numbered thirty-eight Years ago, no more than now, Numb. i. 49, &c. The Jews are something curious in their Observations upon these Words, among (or in the midst of) the Children of Israel: From whence they conclude, that the Levites might have Lands out of the Bounds of the Land of Canaan, tho' not within it, among their Brethren.

Ver. 63. These are they that were numbered by Moses, and Eleazar the Priest, who numbered the Children of Israel in the Plains of Moab, &c.] By a special Command of GOD, ver. 1, 2, &c.

Ver. 64. But among these there was not a Man of them whom Moses and Aaron the Priest numbered, when they numbered the Children of Israel in the Wilderness of Sinai.] See the first Chapter of this Book, ver. 1, 2, &c. so exactly were GOD's Threatnings fulfilled, as well as his Promises.

Ver. 65. For the LORD had said of them, They shall surely die in the Wilderness.] He had pronounced this irreversible Sentence upon the whole Congregation, ch. xiv. 23, 28, 29. where he swears they should not enter into the Land of Canaan, because they had brought, or entertained an evil Report of it. See also Deut. ii. 14, 15.

And there was not left a Man of them, save Caleb the Son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the Son of Nun.] Whom GOD promised to spare, because they were of another Spirit, chap. xiv. 24, 30, 38. And their Survival was as remarkable an Instance of the Truth of GOD's Word, as the Death of all the rest.

C H A P. XXVII.

Ver. 1. THEN came the Daughters of Zelophebad, the Son of Hephher, &c.] Who are mentioned before, ch. xxvi. 33. just as they are here; only their Genealogy is here more fully set out, that their Father was the Grandson of Manasseh the Son of Joseph, from whom he was lineally descended, but left no Sons behind him. Now these young Women, hearing Moses say (as he doth in the foregoing Chapter) that the LORD commanded the Land of Canaan should be divided among those that were now numbered; and observing that only Males from twenty Years old, were numbered, (ver. 2.) presently apprehended, that they, being Females, were excluded from having any Inheritance among the Israelites (and so the Family of the Hephherites, ch. xxvi. 32.) would be extinguished. This was the Ground of what follows; whereby it appears that every body was immediately acquainted with the Laws which Moses received from GOD; and that there was a faithful Register kept of every one that was born in every Family and Tribe, to prevent all Disputes about the true Heirs to Mens Estates.

Ver. 2. And they stood before Moses,] To represent before him, and the rest of the Judges, who were now assembled, the Case which I have mentioned.

And before Eleazar the Priest, and before the Princes, and all the Congregation,] These made up the greatest Court of Judicature that at any time sat. For by Princes are meant, either the Heads of the Tribes, or the highest of the Judges appointed, Exod. xviii. called the Heads of the People, ver. 25. And by all the Congregation is meant the seventy Elders mentioned in this Book, ch. xi. 24. For they are called col ha edah (the whole Congregation, and sometimes only Edah, the Congregation) as R. Solomon observes: see Bertram de Republ. Jud. p. 72. Now at the Head of all these sat Moses, and next to him Eleazar the Priest.

By the Door of the Tabernacle of the Congregation,] Near to which this august Assembly, it is likely, was wont to sit when they met together; that Moses might presently, if there were Occasion, go and consult with GOD himself in any difficult Matter that came before them. And thus Mr. Selden observes out of Maimonides, that in future Times the great Sanhedrim followed the Tabernacle, sitting sometimes in one Place, sometimes in another, according as that was settled. As (after they came to Canaan) it was first at Shiloh, then at Mizpeh, and afterwards at Gilgal, Nob, Gibeon, the House of Obed-Edom; till at last it was fixed in Jerusalem, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 15. n. 4. As concerning that which the Talmudists say, relating to the Proceedings in this Case of Zelophebad's Daughters, nothing certain can be determined. But they give this Account of it, That they first brought this Cause into the Courts appointed by the Advice of Jethro, Exod. xviii. 21. and began with the Rulers of ten, who knowing not what to say to them, they went to those of fifty, and from thence to the Centurions, and at last to the Chiliarchs: None of which durst pretend to give Judgment, but referred the Cause, by reason of its Difficulty, to Moses; who brought it to the SCHECHINAH, as they speak, i. e. to the Divine Majesty, Seld. ib. cap. xvi. n. 1.

Ver. 3. Saying, Our Father died in the Wilderness,] Among the rest mentioned ver. 64, 65. of the foregoing Chapter. They seem to have drawn up their Cause in the Form of a Petition; or, as Mr. Selden speaks in the legal Phrase, presented a Libel to the Court, containing the intire Matter of their Petition, and that artificially enough.

And he was not in the Company of them that gathered themselves together against the LORD in the Company of Korah,] They use the very Words of Moses concerning that rebellious Company, chap. xvi. 11. and instance in this Sin, rather than any other; either to shew that their Father had a due Regard to the Authority of Moses, (who they hoped therefore would be the more favourable to his Posterity) or, rather to insinuate, that he was not guilty of such a Crime, as might make Men justly forfeit what they had, for their Children, as well as for themselves. For all the Family of Daiban and Abiram perished: and it is taken notice of as a singular Mercy, that the Children of Korah did not, chap. xxvi. 10, 11.

But

But died in his own Sin,] i. e. For his own Sin; which GOD had declared should not affect the Children, ch. xiv. 31. For to that general Sin, in which all the People were engaged, these Words seem to refer. And so, it was his own Sin, not with respect to the rest of the People, (for they were all alike guilty) but with respect to his Children; it being a personal Guilt, in which they were not concerned.

The Jews commonly say that Zelophebad was the Man that was stoned for gathering Sticks on the Sabbath-day: for which they have no Authority, but a Fancy of R. Aquiba, who is sharply reproved for it by another considerable Rabbi, who saith it is a rash Judgment; for if it were true, since the Scripture conceals it, he ought not to have revealed it: but hath reproached a just Man, for any thing that appears. See Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 1. sect. 9.

And had no Sons.] As was found when the People were numbered, chap. xxvi. 33.

Ver. 4. Why should the Name of our Father be done away from among his Family,] One Family of the Tribe of Manasseh, viz. the Hepherites, being in danger to be wholly extinguished. R. Judah will have the Word Name in this Place to signify as much as hereditary Possession; and so he thinks it signifies Deut. xxv. 6. as Mr. Selden observes out of Pesikta, lib. de Successionibus, cap. 14.

Because he hath no Son?] Merely for want of Issue-Male, when he hath left many Daughters.

Give unto us therefore a Possession among the Brethren of our Father.] Let us come in for a Share among those that are descended from Manasseh: Which if they did, the Name of their Father could not be thereby preserved, but by the Son of one of these Daughters taking upon him, not the Name of his Father that begat him, but of his Mother's Grandfather, viz. Hepher; which was ordered afterwards by a general Law, Deut. xxv. 6.

Ver. 5. And Moses brought their Cause before the LORD.] This was too difficult a Cause (tho' there seemed to be a great deal of Reason on their Side) to be judged by the great Court before-mentioned; and therefore it was referred to Moses alone, as other weighty Causes used to be; (see chap. xv. 32. xxv. 4.) for neither Eleazar, nor any other Person (before whom it was brought, ver. 2.) are here mentioned as the Judges of this Matter. And he durst not judge it, tho' the Equity appeared very plain, without bringing it before the LORD for his Direction, which he could have upon all important Occasions, Exod. xxv. 22. Numb. vii. 89.

Ver. 6. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,] This shews that the Cause was devolved upon Moses alone; for the LORD tells him, and no other Person, how it should be determined.

Ver. 7. The Daughters of Zelophebad, &c.] The LORD approves of their Claim; and gives a Sentence in their Favour.

Thou shalt surely give them a Possession of an Inheritance among their Father's Brethren;] Because the Word otham, them, in the Hebrew, is of the Masculine Gender, some think it signifies, they were to be considered as if they had been Sons.

And thou shalt cause the Inheritance of their Father to pass unto them.] So that they were to enjoy what would have fallen to his Share, had he been alive; ob indutam defuncti patris personam, as the Lawyers speak; because they stood in the Place of their dead Father, and represented his Person. And accordingly they put in their Claim at the Division of the Land, and had their Portion therein, according to this Decision, Josh. xvii. 2, 3, &c. How the Portion was divided among them, according to the Hebrew Doctors, Mr. Selden shews at large in his Book de Successionibus in bona defuncti, cap. 23.

Ver. 8. And thou shalt speak unto the Children of Israel, saying,] Upon this Occasion he passes this special Case into a general Law, to be hereafter observed.

If a Man die, and have no Son, then ye shall cause his Inheritance to pass unto his Daughters.] It being but Reason, as Maimonides observes (More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 42.) that what a Man leaves should come to his Family, and to those who are next of Kin to him: For the nearer any Person is to us, we are inclined, by natural Affection, to have the greater Regard to him. But all this is to be understood of Land: As for Money, and moveable Goods, (which were of his own getting) the Father might dispose of them, by his Will, to whom he pleased.

Ver. 9, 10. And if he have no Daughter, then ye shall give his Inheritance unto his Brethren, &c.] Unless his Father was alive, who undoubtedly, the Jews say, was the next Heir; but not mentioned, because it was not necessary; or, as some say, because it was too sad a Thing, to speak of a Father's burying all his Children, without Issue. See Selden de Succes. in bona defuncti, cap. 12. Where he observes that, according to the Rule, ver. 11. it must come to the Father, because he is nearest of Kin to it. And therefore the Jews interpret this, as if Moses had said, If he have no Daughter, he shall give his Inheritance to the next of his Kindred, (to his Father, for instance) and afterwards ye shall give it to his Brethren, i. e. the Children of his Father. And the same is to be said of the Grandchildren; unto whom the Brethren of a Father dying without Issue, are Heirs. For the Grandfather stands in the same Relation to a Father, that a Father doth to his Son.

Ver. 11. And if his Father have no Brethren, then ye shall give his Inheritance to his Kinsman, that is next of Kin to him of his Family, and he shall possess it:] To his Brother's Children; or to those who are descended from them, or from his Father's Brethren. But no Consideration was to be had of his Mother's Kindred, (as the Jewish Lawyers say) who could never be capable of the Inheritance: Which they gather not only from these Words, which determine the Inheritance to his Family, (i. e. the Family of the Father before-mentioned, not to the Family of the Mother) but from the frequent Mention of the Father of Miscbpackoth, which we translate Families, or rather Kindreds of the Fathers, in the Books of Moses, Chronicles, Ezra, and others. From whence this solemn Maxim of the Talmudists, The Family, or Kindred of the Mother, is never called by the Name of Kindred: That is, it hath not the Effect of a Kindred in Succession to Inheritances. Which is the same with that in the ancient Book Siphri, Families follow the Fathers; as Mr. Selden observes in the Place before-mentioned; who in the next Chapter (cap. 13.) gives an Example, drawn up by Maimonides, of such a Succession out of the holy Scriptures. Amram had two Sons, Aaron and Moses, as we read Exod. vi. 20. If they had both died without Issue, Miriam their Sister had inherited. And if she had died in like manner, the Inheritance of the Family would have reverted to Kobath, the Father of Amram: Or, he being dead, to his three Sons, the Brethren of Amram, viz. Izbar, Hebron and Uzziel, as the Heirs of Kobath. And there would have been no Consideration of Primogeniture; both because none of them was the First-born, and because the Inheritance was not in the Possession of their Father, at the Time of his Death, &c.

And it shall be unto the Children of Israel a Statute of Judgment, &c.] A Law whereby to determine such Matters in future Times, and to be observed inviolably: so that no Father should have Power to make any other Settlement; but if either by Word or Writing he declared his Will to be, that his Son should not inherit, his Act was null and void: As the Jewish Lawyers resolve from these very Words, a Statute or Decree of Judgment, i. e. as I said, a Rule whereby to judge of Succession into Inheritances. If therefore a Man made a Will, wherein he declared his Daughter, or Brethren, &c. should not inherit, in case he had no Son, it was void, because contrary to this Law. See Selden de Successionibus, cap. 24.

Ver. 12. And the LORD said unto Moses, Get thee up into this Mount Abarim,] Either these Words were spoken after all that follows here, and in the Book of Deuteronomy, or they were repeated again, when he had repeated his Laws, and enforced them by many excellent Discourses, and taught them that famous Song, Deut. xxxii. where, in the Conclusion of it (ver. 49.) it is said, that very Day he bad him go up this Mount Abarim. And there we learn also that Abarim was a long Tract of Mountains, one of which was called Nebo; and the very Top of it called Pisgab. See Deut. xxxiv. 1.

And see the Land which I have given unto the Children of Israel.] Take a full View of it, as he did from that high neighbouring Mountain, Deut. iii. 27. xxxiv. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Ver. 13. And when thou hast seen it, thou also shalt be gathered unto thy People, as Aaron thy Brother was gathered.] Upon Mount Hor, as we read in this Book, chap. xx. 23, 24.

Ver. 14. For ye rebelled against my Commandment in the Desert of Zin, &c.] See chap. xx. 1, 12, 24. where all this Verse is explained.

Ver. 15. And Moses spake unto the LORD, saying,] He did not speak those Words which follow, immediately after God bad him go up Mount Abarim, and die; but first desired he might be permitted to go over Jordan, &c. Deut. iii. 24, 25, 26. Unless we can think that he made the Prayer there mentioned, as soon as the Sentence was passed upon him, at the Waters of Meribah; which doth seem not so likely.

Ver. 16. Let the LORD, the God of the Spirits of all Flesh,] As soon as he found that God was resolved he should not conduct the People into Canaan, he was concerned for nothing, but for a fitting Person to take that Charge upon him. For he had a most generous publick Spirit, wholly intent upon the Good of this People.

The God of the Spirits of all Flesh,] Who hath not only made the Souls of all Men, but knowest their Dispositions, (see chap. xvi. 22.) and understandest who are fit for this weighty Employment.

Set a Man over the Congregation,] To be chief Ruler and Governor of the People in my Place.

Ver. 17. Which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in,] If the latter Part of these Words be not a mere Repetition of the former, (as is usual) then the one relates to the Conduct of War, and the other to the Management of all their Civil Affairs. And both of them seem to be a Metaphor from Shepherds watching over their Flocks.

That the Congregation of the LORD be not as Sheep which have no Shepherd.] Having none to govern and to take Care of them. This is a Description of the most miserable Condition a People can be in, and became a Proverb among the Hebrews, 1 Kings xxii. 17. Zechariah x. ii. xiii. 7. Matth. ix. 36.

Ver. 18. And the LORD said unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the Son of Nun,] Who had been a long time Servant unto Moses, and attended upon his Person, (Exod. xxiv. 13.) well known to Moses, and perfectly acquainted with his Administration.

A Man in whom is the Spirit,] Of Courage and Prudence, and the Fear of God, with all other Gifts necessary in an excellent Governor: Among which Onkelos reckons the Spirit of Prophecy; which is not unlikely.

And lay thine Hand upon him,] Which was a Ceremony usual in blessing, Gen. xlviii. 14, &c. and in setting Men apart, and consecrating them to an Office, chap. viii. 10. Upon which followed a more abundant Measure of the Spirit, as appears from Deut. xxxiv. 9.

Ver. 19. And set him before Eleazar the Priest, and before all the Congregation,] Being all assembled for this Purpose, that all might acknowledge him for the designed Successor of Moses, and be Witnesses of all that Moses commanded him.

And give him a Charge in their Sight.] He told him before them all, what God expected from him; and bad him be not afraid to execute it. See Deut. xxxi. 7, 8. where he sets down the Words of this Charge; unto which God presently after added one of his own, ver. 14, 15, 23.

Ver. 20. And thou shalt put some of thine Honour upon him,] Communicate some of thy Authority to him at present; and not let him be any longer as thy Minister, but as an Associate in the Government. The Word we translate Honour being Glory in the Hebrew, it made Onkelos, and other Hebrew Doctors, imagine these Words have respect to that Splendor which shone in Moses's Face, after he came down from the Mount: some of which they suppose was imparted unto Joshua, to to make him appear more venerable in the Eyes of the People. And R. Menachem observes, that it is not said, impart thy Glory, but of thy Glory to him. From whence came that ancient Saying, The Face of Moses shone like the Sun, but Joshua's only like the Moon. This might have passed for Truth, or at least that hereby was meant some great Increase of illustrious Gifts of Mind, which procured him such Reverence as Moses had, if it had been said, that GOD put some of Moses's Glory upon him; whereas Moses is commanded to do it, which makes the first Sense most reasonable.

That all the Congregation of the Children of Israel may be obedient.] That the People may begin to submit to his Authority, and learn to obey his Commands, as well as thine.

Ver. 21. And he shall stand before Eleazar the Priest,] For the Encouragement of Joshua to undertake this Charge, he assures him, he shall never want Direction from GOD what to do when he was in any Doubt; but, in the Manner he prescribed, most certainly receive it. And what is here said concerning him, belongs to all their succeeding Governors. And it is observed by Maimonides, and other Jewish Doctors, that the High-Priest stood before the Kings of Israel out of great Respect to them: but no King is said to stand before the High-Priest, but only in this Case, when he was to consult the holy Oracle; that it might appear the Honour was given, not to the Priest, but unto the divine Majesty, whom he consulted by the Priest.

Who shall ask Counsel for him, after the Judgment of Urim] Because the Word Thummim is here wanting, some understand these Words, as if he had said, the High-Priest shall ask Counsel for him, by the Illumination of the Spirit of GOD. So Conradus Pellicanus. But the Word Thummim, in all likelihood, is here to be understood, tho' not expressed, being always joined with Urim, except in this, and one other Place, where Urim only is named, after a short manner of speaking) in Exod. xxviii. Deut. xxxiii. Ezra ii. Nehem. vii. For they were inseparable from the Breast-plate of Judgment, as it is called Exod. xxviii. 30. (see there) with which the High-Priest appeared before GOD when he consulted him in great Affairs, concerning the Publick Safety; more especially in Times of War; of which we have many Instances in Judg. i. 1. xx. 18. 1 Sam. xiv. 18. xxviii. 6. David indeed is said to consult GOD by the Ephod, but it must be observed that the Breast-plate was annexed to it; which Abiathar brought along with him, when he fled from Saul, who commanded the Priests to be slain, 1 Sam. xxiii. 2, 9. xxx. 8. 2 Sam. v. 19. And it is further to be noted, that tho' David thus frequently consulted GOD this Way, being engaged in Wars; yet we never read that Solomon asked Counsel by it, being a peaceable King.

Grotius also observes, that Joshua now, and the Kings of Judab afterwards, therefore stood before the Priest, that they might be near to the Urim and Thummim, which he had upon his Breast; without which he could not receive any Answer, De imperii Sum. Potest. &c. cap. 6.

Before the LORD:] The High-Priest never inquired by Urim and Thummim, but standing before the LORD; that is, before the Ark, where the Schechina was.

At his Word shall they go out, and at his Word they shall come in,] That is, saith Grotius, in the Place fore-named, at the Word of the LORD, by the Judgment of Urim; which goes just before. Others, at the Word of the Priest: which comes to the same. And this the Hebrew Doctors understand, concerning the People of Israel making War; which is wont to be meant in Scripture, by the Words going out and coming in. And they distinguish between the War that was made by the divine Commandment (against the seven Nations of Canaan, and against Amalek) and that which was voluntary, against any of their Neighbours or others, as there should be Reason. In the former Case, they think there was no Need to ask whether they should make War or no, because it was commanded; and Joshua and the Kings afterward, did it when they pleased. But in the other, they were not to make War without this divine Order. See Selden, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 12. n. 4. But it is plain from Judg. i. 1. that they consulted the LORD also in the first sort of War (with the People of Canaan) how to manage it to the best Advantage.

Both he, and all the Children of Israel with him, even all the Congregation.] By the first Word [be] the Jews understand Joshua, and all the succeeding Princes of Israel, who were bound to advise with GOD by Urim and Thummim before they made War. And by the next Words [all the children of Israel with him] they understand the Priest that was particularly anointed to go with the People to War, Deut. xx. 2. And by the last Words [the whole Congregation] they understand the seventy Elders, or the great Sanhedrim. So Maimonides, Abarbinel, and a great many others, expound these Words (as Mr. Selden shews in the same Place); from which they have framed this general Maxim, That no private Man might consult this Oracle, but the King, and the Head of the great Sanhedrim, and he that was appointed by all the People in their Name. And that colbaedab [all the Congregation] signifies frequently the great Assembly of the Elders and Judges. See also Bertram de Repub. Jud. p. 72.

Here the Jews start a Difficulty, as they account it, why we never read in the whole Book of Joshua, that he consulted the LORD after this manner; but as soon as ever he was dead they did, Judg. i. 1. From whence Abarbinel concludes, that Joshua was bound to do this only at the first Entrance upon his Office, that all Israel might know he was Moses's Successor, and that GOD was with him: but that afterward the Spirit of Prophecy rested upon him, and conducted him without this Oracle. But if nothing was done that is not recorded in the Scripture, he might as well have said, that Joshua never consulted the Oracle at all; for we do not read he did, tho' he be here so ordered. R. Levi Ben Gersom therefore seems to me to speak more reasonably; when he says, that those Words in the Beginning of the Book of Judges, do not import that they did not consult GOD by Urim in the Life of Joshua; but only that after his Death, Death, the Children of Israel would not adventure to proceed in the War of Canaan without the same Direction.

And there is something else, which they might have observed from this Verse, with great Reason, which is, how much inferior Joshua was to Moses, tho' he succeeded him in the Conduct of the People. For Moses never made use of the Urim and Thummim to consult God by the High-Priest; but went directly and immediately to God himself: Whereas Joshua was not admitted to such Familiarity; nor had he such frequent Revelations from God as Moses had. Yet sometimes God vouchsafed him the Honour to speak to him, as we find in the Beginning of Joshua, chap. iii. 7. iv. 1, 15, &c. And there was a most illustrious Appearance of God to him before Jericho, chap. v. 13, &c.

Ver. 22. And Moses did as the LORD commanded him: and he took Joshua, and set him before Eleazar the Priest, and before all the Congregation.] According as he was ordered, ver. 18, 19. In this we see the great Integrity, the sincere Humility and Self-denial of Moses, that he readily submitted to have the Government of Israel translated from his own Family and Tribe unto another, who was of the Tribe of Ephraim; whereby his own Children were reduced to a mean Condition, being not so much as Priests, but mere Levites. This demonstrates he acted not from himself, because he acted not for himself; but was contented to have the supreme Authority placed where God pleased, both in Church and State; and to leave his own Family in an inconsiderable Employment. This shews him to have had a Principle, which raised him above all other Law-givers; who always took care to advance their own Families, and establish them in some Share of that Greatness which they themselves possessed. This likewise demonstrates, that the future Rulers of this Nation had no Temptation to advance the Credit of Moses beyond what it really was; since they were not descended from him, but were of other Tribes.

Ver. 23. And he laid his Hands upon him, and gave him a Charge, as the LORD commanded by the Hand of Moses.] He did all Things which the LORD required to create him his Successor, as the Jews speak: for thus (by laying on of Hands) they in After-times made a Man a Member of the Sanhedrim, both of the great and of the small; which continued to the Time of the Destruction of the second Temple; as Mr. Selden shews, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 7. n. 1.

And this solemn Designation of Joshua to the Government by the divine Authority, was a clear Indication that God continued to be their King, as he became in a special Manner, when he brought them out of Egypt, (as I observed upon Exod. iii. 10.) and he still reserved it to himself to appoint Governors under him out of what Tribe he pleased; as he did Joshua at this Time out of the Tribe of Ephraim; and not Caleb, who was of the Tribe of Judah, and also a Man as valiant as he was virtuous, Josh. xiv. 11. For there was no Tribe that could lay Claim unto this Dignity, without the Gift of God. And this is one of the principal Reasons, why the Government of this People, before they had Kings, was, as Josephus calls it, Θεοκρατία, (that is, the Empire of God) because he stirred them up Judges to rule them when he pleased; which being of his immediate Appointment, are so far acknowledged by him, that when they were weary of Samuel's Government, and desired a King, God declared, that it was not Samuel, but himself whom they rejected. And another Reason was (as our Mr. Thorndike observes) because God by his Oracle of Urim and Thummim, prescribed how they were to proceed in their Publick Affairs, Review of the Right of the Church, pag. 133.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Ver. 1. AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,] Having numbered the People, and appointed his Successor to bring them to their Inheritance, (which he had ordered to be divided among them, proportionable to the Number of each Tribe) nothing was more necessary than to persuade them to be truly religious, whereby they might be preserved in the Enjoyment of it. Unto which Moses is commanded to direct them, in this and in the following Chapters; which may be thought to have been delivered also in the eighth Month of the last Year of their Travels in the Wilderness.

Ver. 2. Command the Children of Israel, and say unto them,] These Commands had been given before, but are here repeated, because this was a new Generation, who either had not heard them when they were first delivered Eight and Thirty Years ago; or at least, had need to have their Memories refreshed. Some Things also are now more particularly explained, concerning the Sacrifices which were to be offered at certain Times: and they are reduced into a certain Order; some being daily, others weekly, others monthly, and some anniversary; all which were of such Importance, that Moses being shortly to leave them, thought good to repeat most of them once more in the Book of Deuteronomy.

My Offering, and my Bread] The Word and is not in the Hebrew; but the Words are, my Offering, my Bread: Which Isaac Abarbinel thus excellently explains: Concerning Offerings for Sin, and Trespas-offerings, and the rest, I shall not need to admonish you; but concerning my daily Sacrifices, which properly of themselves are my own Oblation, my daily Bread, or my Food (which the divine Presence dwelling among them required, Exod. xxix. 42, 43, 44, 45.) And so others by the Word Bread understand Meat or Food in general, as we translate it ver. 24. tho' it may have a particular Respect to the Meat-offering, which was made of Meal, and always accompanied the Burnt-offerings, which seem here to be peculiarly meant; tho' some think these Words relate to all the Sacrifices, some Part of which were God's Portion.

For my Sacrifices made by Fire,] The whole Burnt-offerings are most properly called Ische, (Sacrifices made by Fire) being all consumed upon the Altar; where the heavenly Fire burnt continually, ready for that Purpose.

For a sweet Savour unto me,] So the Burnt-offering is called, Lev. i. 9, 13, 17. See there. I shall only add the Paraphrase of the Hierusalem Targum, which is this, My offering of Bread which ye offer on the Altar, doth not the Fire devour it? And yet it is acceptable to me from you, as an Odor in which I am well pleased.

Shall ye observe to offer unto me] Be very careful to see it duly performed: This being the Food (saith Abarbinel) which, to speak after the Manner of Men, was offered by GOD's Fire, upon his own Altar, for his Dinner and Supper.

In their due Season.] For that Reason this Sacrifice was to be constantly offered, saith the same Author, that the Divine Fire which came down from Heaven to consume the Sacrifices, might not be disappointed, and burn there in vain without any thing to do.

From this Place the Jews endeavour to make out their Custom of having Stationary Men, as they call them, to attend the daily Sacrifice: taking Moatbo [in its Season] as if it had been Omatbo [in its Stations]; but chiefly relying upon the first Words of this Verse, Command the Children of Israel, who could not all be present at the daily Sacrifice, and therefore some particular Persons were chosen to represent all the rest. For they thought it very undecent to have a Sacrifice made for a Man, and he not stand by it; and therefore the first Prophets ordained Twenty-four Courses of Men, chosen out of the Priests, Levites and People, to stand in the Temple, when the daily Sacrifice was offered in the Name of all Israel; and pray that GOD would accept it for them, as if they were all present. This Account the Mishna gives of them in Taanith, and other Places; where they say these Men were held to necessary, that it was an usual Speech among them, Without Stations the World could not stand. For without Sacrifices, that is, the Worship of GOD, the World would be undone; and Sacrifices could not be maintained without Stations: See Voyssin de Jubilæo, cap. 25. and our Learned Dr. Lightfoot in his Temple Service, chap. 7. sect. 3.

Ver. 3. And thou shalt say unto them, This is the Offering made by Fire, which ye shall offer unto the LORD;] That Offering which he peculiarly speaks of, is the daily Sacrifice; which was appointed long ago, before the Tabernacle was set up, Exod. xxix. 38, 39. See my Notes there. And add this, that GOD's Promise to meet them there, ver. 42, 43. and afterward to dwell among them, ver. 45. seems to depend upon this constant Service which he expected should be paid to him; which if neglected, he withdrew himself from them.

Two Lambs of the first Year, without Spot, Day by Day, for a continual Burnt-offering.] This is expressly required in Exod. xxix. 38. Only here it is added, without Spot, or perfect in its Kind; which was required in all Sacrifices, particularly in the first Lamb which they offered, when they came out of Egypt, Exod. xii. 5. See there.

Ver. 4. The one Lamb shalt thou offer in the Morning, and the other Lamb shalt thou offer at Even;] The very Words in Exod. xxix. 39.

Ver. 5. And a Tenth part of an Ephab of Flour for a Meat-offering, mingled with the Fourth part of an Hin of beaten Oil.] This also is there explained, Exod. xxix. 40.

VOL. I.

Ver. 6. It is a continual Burnt-offering,] To be continued throughout all your Generations every Day; as it is expressed Exod. xxix. 42. For it was in the Nature of a daily Prayer to GOD, that he would graciously continue his Mercy unto Israel, (as Abarbinel observes) and increase their Corn, Wine and Oil, which they acknowledged hereby they received from him.

Which was ordained in Mount Sinai] There Moses received both this Law, and all the rest (which are mentioned in the Book of Exodus) concerning the Service of GOD, and the Place where it was to be performed, and his Ministers, &c. And this sufficiently shews, that he speaks here to those who were so young at the first Institution of these Laws, that they gave the less heed to them, or had forgotten them. And there are those who think that for eight and thirty Years they had disused them; which they gather from Deut. xii. 8. But I do not take it to be likely, that Sacrifices were wholly omitted during that Space; though perhaps not so regularly performed as when they came to Canaan. For to suppose that, is to suppose that the Fire from Heaven either went out, or burnt continually to no purpose; and that the Divine Majesty had no Entertainment set upon his Table; and consequently did not keep House, and dwell among them all that Time: In short, that there was no Worship of GOD at the Tabernacle. All these Arguments may convince any Man, there were offered, at least the daily Sacrifice, Morning and Even, and those on the Sabbath.

For a sweet Savour, a Sacrifice made by Fire unto the LORD.] See Exod. xxix. 41.

Ver. 7. And the Drink-offering thereof shall be the Fourth part of an Hin for the one Lamb:] So it was ordained also in Mount Sinai, as appears from the same Exod. xxix. 40. And in this very Book there is a general Rule given to this new Generation, that this should be the least Quantity of Wine, which should be offered with a Burnt-offering, or Peace-offering. See Numb. xv. 5. Which was a Thing so constantly practised, that the Heathen never sacrificed, but they poured Wine upon the Flesh, as it flamed upon the Altar. For tho' Water was sometimes poured upon the Sacrifices, yet Nonnus saith (Lib. iv. Dionysiac.) it was when Men knew not the Use of Wine; for after that was found out, they never sacrificed without it. See Fort. Scacchus Myrobec. 2. cap. 42.

In the holy Place] Upon the Altar of Burnt-offerings, which stood in the holy Place, near to the Door of the Tabernacle, Exod. xxix. 42.

Shalt thou cause the strong Wine to be poured unto the LORD for a Drink-offering.] The Hebrew word Schecar commonly signifies any sort of strong Drink, but here the noblest and most generous Wine; for it was not lawful to use any other Liquor in their Sacrifices. The Heathens had this Reverence to their Gods, that they always offered to them the most excellent Wine they had; which appears by those Words we meet withal so often in Homer (both in his Iliad and Odyssey) of Mens pouring out upon their Sacrifices — αἶθρα οἶνον, black Wine, or of the deepest Colour, red as Blood; which was the richest of all other. And Herodian, speaking of the the vast Profuseness of Heliogabalus, who offered hecatombs of Oxen every Morning, with great Multitudes of Sheep, upon which he heaped all manner of Spices, adds this also, (Lib. v.) οἶνον τὸν ἁλαιοῦς καὶ καλλίστην πολλὰς ἀμφορέας ἐκ ποταμῶν, &c. pouring out many Flaggons of the oldest and most excellent Wine on the Altars; so that Rivers of Wine and Blood ran mixed together.

Ver. 8. And the other Lamb shalt thou offer at Even, &c.] All the foregoing Verfes relate to the Morning Sacrifice; and this only briefly prescribes, that the other Lamb should be offered in the same Manner at Even, with the very same Meat-offering and Drink-offering. And as no Sacrifice was to precede the Morning Burnt-offering, but it was to be offered first; so this at Even was to conclude all the Sacrifices of the Day, and none to be offered after it.

A Sacrifice made by Fire, of a sweet Savour unto the LORD.] As acceptable to him as the Morning Sacrifice.

Ver. 9. And on the Sabbath Day, two Lambs of the first Year without Spot.] He doth not mean, that whereas every Morning and Evening they offered one Lamb, on the Sabbath-day they should offer two; but that there should be two Lambs offered on the Sabbath, over and above the daily Offering, as appears from ver. 10. Whether one of them was to be offered in the Morning, and the other added at the Evening Sacrifice, it is not said; but it is most probable the Sacrifices on the Sabbath were so ordered. For the Jews say, that at the Time of this additional Sacrifice in the Morning of the Sabbath, they sang at the Temple the Song of Moses, Deut. xxxii. dividing it into six Parts, and singing one Part every Sabbath; so that in six Weeks they had finished it, and then began again. And at the Evening Sacrifice they sang that Song of his, Exod. xv. at which time the Priest sounded the Trumpet three times more than they did at the ordinary Songs.

And two Tenth-deals of Flour for a Meat-offering mingled with Oil, and the Drink-offering thereof.] As the Burnt-offerings were double on this Day, so a double Quantity of Flour is ordered for the Meat-offering that attended the Burnt-offering, (for only a Tenth part of an Ephab, ver. 5. was offered on other Days) and consequently there was to be as much more Oil and Wine than daily. And here it may be fit to note, that as soon as the Drink-offering was poured out, then the Song before-mentioned began, with the Trumpets, and other Instruments of Musick; but not till then: For the Burnt-offering was not perfect, till the Drink-offering, which was to accompany it, was offered; whereby it was completed. See Dr. Lightfoot in his Temple Service, cap. 7. sect. 2.

Ver. 10. This is the Burnt-offering of every Sabbath, beside the continual Burnt-offering, and his Drink-offering.] The daily Sacrifice was not to be omitted on the Sabbath, but this was to be added to it; and thence by the Jews called Musaphim. Of which sort there were seven more; which were to be added to the Sacrifice of the Day; viz. that in the New Moon, ver. 11. at the Passover, ver. 16. and the Feast of Pentecost, ver. 26. in the Beginning of the Year, ch.

xxix. 1. on the Day of Expiation, ver. 7. On the Feast of Tabernacles there were peculiar Sacrifices for seven Days together, Lev. xxiii. 35. and on the last Day of the Feast another, Numb. xxix. 35, 36, 37. All these were called Musaphim, or additional Sacrifices to the daily Sacrifice.

Ver. 11. And in the Beginnings of your Months ye shall offer a Burnt-offering unto the LORD;] This solemn Sacrifice seems to have been ordained by GOD, to prevent the Idolatry which was usual among the Gentiles; who worshipped the New Moon with great Rejoicings, when it first appeared. Otherwise, the first Day of every Month was no Festival; but only a Day on which extraordinary Sacrifices were offered with blowing of Trumpets, as seems to be directed ch. x. 10. See there: Which was usual at all solemn Sacrifices (as I noted before); otherwise, the Feast of blowing with Trumpets was only on the New Moon of the seventh Month, and no other. And therefore it is observable, that there is no Mention made of the first Day of the Month among the Festivals appointed in Lev. xxiii. and consequently servile Work was lawful on this Day; and nothing more required but only the following Sacrifices. The Jews at this Day say, this Solemnity was appointed rather for the Women than the Men, (for which they give a fabulous Reason) who are bound to abstain from all Works; but the Men only from the most laborious, such as plowing the Ground, &c. See Buxtorf's Synag. Judaica, cap. 22.

Two young Bulls, and one Ram, seven Lambs of the first Year without Spot,] All these were Burnt-offerings, which were offered besides the daily Sacrifice, and besides the two Lambs, if the first Day of the Month fell out to be a Sabbath. In which Case, and all others, where several Solemnities met together on the same Day, the daily Sacrifice was offered first, and then the rest of the Sacrifices peculiar for that Day were to be performed, every one in their order. As for Example, If the Sabbath, and New Moon, and the Feast of Trumpets fell out on the same Day, they began with the daily Morning Sacrifice; after which followed the Sacrifices proper to the Sabbath; and after that the Sacrifice appointed on the New Moon; and then, those that belonged to the Feast of Trumpets; and all was concluded with the Evening Sacrifice, as Abarbinel observes in his Preface to the Book of Leviticus.

Ver. 12. And three Tenth-deals of Flour] That is, three Tenth parts of an Ephab, ver. 5.

For a Meat-offering mingled with Oil, for one Bullock,] i. e. For each Bullock there was to be this Proportion of Flour; which is exactly according to the general Rule before given, ch. xv. 9.

And two Tenth-deals of Flour for a Meat-offering mingled with Oil, for one Ram,] This is the Proportion there prescribed for a Ram, as the other for a Bullock, chap. xv. 6.

Ver. 13. And a several Tenth-deal of Flour mingled with Oil for a Meat-offering, unto one Lamb,] Unto each of the seven Lambs before-mentioned (ver. 11.) a Meat-offering was to be joined in less Proportion than the other; according to the Rule there given, chap. xv. 4.

For a Burnt-offering of a sweet Savour, &c.] See ver. 6.

Ver. 14. And their Drink-offering shall be half an Hin of Wine unto a Bullock,] See chap. xv. 10.

And the third Part of an Hin unto a Ram,] See there, ver. 7.

And a fourth Part of an Hin unto a Lamb:] See there ver. 5. They that allegorize these Things, think the New Moon signifies the Resurrection to a new Life in the other World, where every one shall receive a Reward according to his Measure. Thus Procopius Gazæus; in whom they that think such Expositions useful, may find Entertainment.

This is the Burnt-offering of every Month throughout the Months of the Year.] There are more Sacrifices appointed on the New Moons, than on the Sabbath itself; because they returned seldom. And the Gentiles multiplying Sacrifices on such Occasions, if the Jews had not been thus employed in the Worship of GOD, they might have been tempted to pay their Services to Idols.

Ver. 15. And one Kid of the Goats for a Sin-offering] This Sacrifice of a Goat for a Sin-offering, saith the same Procopius, is coupled with the rest, being a Shadow of the Passion of CHRIST, for whose Sake all our Sacrifices are acceptable unto GOD the Father.

Unto the LORD, &c.] It is well observed by Grotius, that these Words, unto the LORD, were added, to put them in mind at this Time of the right Object of Worship; when they were in Danger to offer Sacrifice to the Moon, after the Manner of the Heathens. This is the more to be regarded, because a Goat being appointed to be offered at two other Solemnities, and to be offered for a Sin-offering, (ver. 22, 30.) it is not said, unto the LORD, (though certainly so intended) because there was no Danger at those Times to direct their Sacrifices to a wrong Object, as there was upon the New Moons; when the Heathen offered a Goat unto the Moon, it being a Creature whose Horns are like to those of a New Moon. R. Bechai long ago observes this: A Goat, saith he, was offered, to extirpate the Religion of those who worshipped the Moon; which makes the Scripture say expressly, unto the LORD. And Maimonides more largely in his More Nevocchim, P. iii. cap. 46. where, after he had taken notice of the Difference between Sin-offerings and Burnt-offerings, the latter of which being wholly burnt, might be properly said to be unto the LORD, whereas Sin-offerings were commonly eaten by the Priests; he adds, "That this Sin-offering is peculiarly said to be unto the LORD, left any one should think this Goat to be a Sacrifice to the Moon, after the Manner of the Egyptians: Which was not necessary to be said of the Goats offered at other solemn Times, because they were not in the Beginning of the Month, nor distinguished from other Days by any natural Sign, but only by the Appointment of the Law; which uses these Words concerning this Goat peculiarly, to pluck out of Mens Thoughts those inveterate and pernicious Opinions of the Gentiles; who had long sacrificed to the Moon at this Time, as they did to the Sun at his Rising, and when he enter'd into the several Signs.

VOL. I.

Besides the continual Burnt-offering, and his Drink-offering.] This is so often particularly mentioned, left any should imagine it might be spared, when there were such liberal Offerings of several Kinds.

Ver. 16. And in the fourteenth Day of the first Month is the Passover of the LORD.] See Exod. xii. 6, 18. Lev. xxiii. 5. where it is called the LORD's Passover. See Exod. xii. 27.

Ver. 17. And in the fifteenth Day of this Month is the Feast.] The fourteenth day at Even the Feast of the Passover was kept, as appears from Exod. xii. 14. But on the fifteenth Day began another Feast, called the Feast of unleavened Bread. See Lev. xxiii. 6.

Seven Days shall unleavened Bread be eaten.] See Exod. xii. 19. xiii. 6, 7. Lev. xxiii. 6.

Ver. 18. In the first Day shall be an holy Convocation, ye shall do no manner of servile Work therein.] See Exod. xii. 16. Lev. xxiii. 7.

Ver. 19. But ye shall offer a Sacrifice made by Fire, for a Burnt-offering unto the LORD:] The Solemnity was ordained before, and Offerings also in general prescribed to be made seven Days, (see Lev. xxiii. 8.) but the particular Sacrifices not set down till now.

Two young Bulls, one Ram, and seven Lambs of the first Year; they shall be unto you without Blemish.] The same Sacrifices which were appointed to be offered upon every first Day of the Month, ver. 11.

Ver. 20. And their Meat-offering shall be of Flour mingled with Oil, three Tenths shall ye offer for a Bullock, and two Tenths for a Ram.] The very same which were appointed on the first Day of every Month, ver. 12.

Ver. 21. A several Tenth-deal shalt thou offer for every Lamb, throughout the seven Lambs.] Just as it was in the forementioned Sacrifice, ver. 13. And though the Drink-offerings be not mentioned, they must be understood to be the same; because they always accompanied the Meat-offerings of Burnt-sacrifices, which were not complete without them.

Ver. 22. And one Goat for a Sin-offering, to make an Atonement for you.] As it was in the New Moon, ver. 15. But Meat and Drink-offerings did not accompany Offerings for Sin, save only in the Case of a Leper; who was to bring three Offerings, a Sin-offering, a Trespas-offering, and a Burnt-offering for his cleansing, with three tenths Parts of an Ephah of Flour, Lev. xiv. 10, &c.

Ver. 23. Ye shall offer these beside the Burnt-offering in the Morning, which is for a continual Burnt-offering.] There are two Things that are here to be remarked; that these Offerings (as I noted before) should not put by the continual Burnt-sacrifice, but be added to it; and that all these were offered in the Morning, after the daily Morning Sacrifice; and were not Part of the Evening Sacrifice, which concluded all.

Ver. 24. After this Manner ye shall offer daily, throughout the seven Days,] Upon every one of the Days of unleavened Bread, ver. 17. which though it was a great Expence, yet was but a fitting Acknowledgment of GOD's wonderful Goodness to them, in bringing them out of the Land of Egypt, with all their Flocks, and their Herds; which was the Foundation of all their Happiness afterwards, by making them a free People.

The Meat of the Sacrifice made by Fire,] Here is the very same Word with that ver. 2. where he calls this Sacrifice his Lechem, which we there translate his Bread, but here very properly, his Meat or Food: Which was set upon his Table (the Altar) every Day; and by his Fire from Heaven consumed; which, according to the Language of Men, was called his eating of it: As the Heathen Gods also are said to eat the Fat of their Sacrifices, Deut. xxxii. 38.

Of a sweet Savour unto the LORD.] Very acceptable to him; as hath been often observed.

It shall be offered beside the continual Burnt-offering, and his Drink-offering.] There is the greatest Care taken, (by the frequent Repetition of this) that they should not think to save their daily Sacrifice by these others; which were to be added to it, and not to supply the Place of it. See ver. 15.

Ver. 25. And on the seventh Day ye shall have an holy Convocation, ye shall do no servile Work.] This last Day of the Feast was equal to the first, Lev. xxiii. 7, 8. and is called a Feast unto the LORD; Exod. xiii. 6.

Ver. 26. Also in the Day of the First-fruits,] Called The Feast of the Harvest, the First-fruits of their Labours, Exod. xxiii. 16. and the Feast of Weeks, when they brought the First-fruits of Wheat-harvest, Exod. xxxiv. 22. Deut. xvi. 10. The Jews in their Writings commonly call this Feast by the Name of Atzereth, and so doth the Chaldee Paraphrase upon this Place; though Abarbinel observes, that this alone, of all the three great Feasts, is never called so in the Holy Scripture. It is hard therefore to tell, why the Jews call it so in a singular Manner; but our Learned Dr. Lightfoot hath made several probable Conjectures about it; one of which (and most pertinent to this Place) is because there was a Restraint, as the Word signifies, upon the People, from bringing their First-fruits till this Feast. If any did, they received them not from them, but laid them by till this Day came. See Temple-Service, chap. 14. sect. 4.

When ye bring a new Meat-offering unto the LORD,] Mentioned Lev. xxiii. 16. which were two Loaves made of their first Corn, ver. 17. where they are called the First-fruits unto the LORD.

After your Weeks be out,] That is, the seven Weeks which they were to number from the Morrow after the Sabbath, Lev. xxiii. 15. i. e. after the first Day of unleavened Bread: When they offered another Sort of First-fruits, (which must be carefully distinguished from those here mentioned) viz. of the Barley Harvest, which began at the Passover; when they were to bring a Sheaf of their First-fruits unto the Priest, Lev. xxiii. 10. the presenting of which Sheaf was an Introduction to Harvest, and procured them Liberty to begin to put the Sickle into the Corn; which now, after seven Weeks, they reaped, and carried in at this Feast, when they brought these new First-fruits unto the LORD. All which is a Description of that which in the New Testament is called the Feast of Pentecost; being Fifty days, as we read there in Leviticus, after the other great Feast.

Ye shall have an holy Convocation, ye shall do no servile Work.] See Lev. xxiii. 21.

Ver. 27. But ye shall offer the Burnt-offering for a sweet Savour unto the LORD;] Over and above the Burnt-offering which was prescribed to be offered with the two Loaves before-mentioned, Lev. xxiii. 18. unto which this was an additional Sacrifice, plainly distinct from it.

Two young Bulls, one Ram, seven Lambs of the first Year.] The very same that were ordered to be offered upon every New Moon, and every Day of the Feast of unleavened Bread, ver. 11, 19, &c. whereas that in Leviticus is one young Bullock, two Rams, and seven Lambs.

Ver. 28. And their Meat-offering of Flour mingled with Oil, three Tenths unto one Bullock, &c.] The very same that is prescribed to accompany the Burnt-offering, on the New Moon, and in the Feast of unleavened Bread, ver. 12, 20.

Ver. 29. A several Tenth-deal unto one Lamb, throughout the seven Lambs:] So it is ordained before in the former Cases, ver. 13, 21.

Ver. 30. And one Kid of the Goats to make an Atonement for you.] Beside the Kid prescribed for the same Purpose, when the two Loaves were offered, Lev. xxiii. 19. which was accompanied with two Lambs for a Sacrifice of Peace-offerings. So that there were a great many Sacrifices offered at this famous Festival; though it did not last so long as that of the Passover.

Ver. 31. Ye shall offer them besides the continual Burnt-offering, &c.] He still takes Care, that this daily Sacrifice should not be omitted, by reason of such a Number of other Sacrifices, which were to attend upon it, but not to put it by, ver. 10, 15, 23.

They shall be unto you without Blemish, &c.] This might have been sufficiently understood, from what was said of the daily Offering, ver. 3. and of all the other prescribed in this Chapter, ver. 11, 19. But lest any profane Person might think there was no need to be so scrupulous about these Sacrifices, because it is only said, two young Bulls, one Ram, and seven Lambs of the first Year, ver. 27. these Words are here added, to take away all Doubt; they shall be unto you without Blemish, i. e. as perfect as all the rest are ordered to be.

It is observable, that there is not so much as one Peace-offering ordered in all this Chapter, which was a Sort of Sacrifice that was most for the Benefit of those that brought them to the Altar; but all Burnt-offerings (except a few Sin-offerings) which were wholly for the Honour of God, and Acknowledgment of his Sovereign Dominion over them, and of the Duty they owed him. And as the Sin-offerings were Shadows of that great Sacrifice of God's own Son, which was one Day to be offered for the Sins of Men, out of his infinite Love to them; so the whole Burnt-offerings (which were always of the most perfect Creatures, the finest Flour, the choicest Fruits of the Earth, and the best Liquor) were Shadows of that excellent Degree of Piety, which the Son of God intended to bring into the World; which would move Men, out of Love to God, to give themselves wholly up to him, and devote all they had, even their own Lives, to his Service.

C H A P. XXIX.

Ver. 1. AND in the seventh Month,] Which was anciently the first Month of the Year; but now the seventh, reckoning from that wherein the Passover was kept; which for a special Reason was made the first: see Exod. xii. 2. On the first Day of the Month, ye shall have an holy Convocation, ye shall do no servile Work:] So it was ordained before, in Lev. xxiii. 24, 25.

It is a Day of blowing the Trumpets unto you.] In that Place of Leviticus it is called a Memorial of blowing of Trumpets from Morning until Evening; which the Jews fancy was to awaken them to Repentance, upon the great Day of Expiation, which followed on the tenth Day of this Month. But it was manifestly intended quite contrary, to excite them unto Joy and Gladness: For Zicbron teruah is a Memorial of Jubilation, Triumph, and shouting for Joy; the Word teruah being never used in Scripture, but for a Sound, or Shout of Gladness; as the Chaldee Word Jabbaba, which is here used by the Paraphrast, always signifies. And this agrees with their Notion, who think it was a special Remembrance of the Creation of the World, at which the Angels rejoiced. Or, it might be ordained to stir up the People to a grateful Remembrance of all God's Benefits the Year past. Whatsoever was the Cause, certain it is, the seventh Month was very famous on this Account, that more solemn Days were to be kept in it, than in all the Year besides; and upon that Account, the People might be awakened, by this Blowing of Trumpets, to observe them aright.

Ver. 2. And ye shall offer a Burnt-offering for a sweet Savour unto the LORD,] Over and above all other Sacrifices, which were heretofore ordered upon this Day; as appears from ver. 6.

One young Bullock, one Ram, and seven Lambs of the first Year, without Blemish:] This is less than was appointed upon the foregoing Festivals, ch. xxviii. 19, 27. because those very Sacrifices were also to be offered upon this Day, on another Account; as I shall observe on ver. 6.

Ver. 3. And their Meat-offering shall be of Flour mingled with Oil, three Tenth-deals for a Bullock, and two Tenth-deals for a Ram,] This is the Proportion appointed, by a general Rule, for all Sacrifices of this kind: see the fifteenth Chapter of this Book, ver. 6, 9.

Ver. 4. And one Tenth-deal for one Lamb, &c.] So it is there appointed, ver. 4.

Ver. 5. And one Kid of the Goats for a Sin-offering, to make an Atonement for you.] As is appointed in the foregoing Festivals, chap. xxviii. 15, 22, 30.

Ver. 6. Beside the Burnt-offering of the Month and his Meat-offering,] It was appointed before, that in the Beginning of every Month there should be a Burnt-offering offered of two Bulls, &c. chap. xxviii. 11, 12. which was not to be omitted in the Beginning of this Month; but these other Sacrifices added to the Offerings of every New Moon: Which made this a greater New Moon than any other; being the first Moon of the old civil Year.

And the daily Burnt-offering, and his Meat-offering, and their Drink-offerings,] With which the Solemnity of the Day began; and then followed the proper Sacrifices belonging to it.

According unto their Manner,] Or, in the Order which God appointed: Which I observed before (on ch. xxviii. 11.) was this; That first, the daily Burnt-sacrifice was offered; then the Sacrifices appointed for the first Day of every Month; and then those appointed for this first Day of the seventh Month.

For a sweet Savour, a Sacrifice made by Fire unto the LORD,] Which was acceptable to the Divine Majesty, when performed according to his Directions.

Ver. 7. And ye shall have on the tenth Day of this seventh Month an holy Convocation;] This solemn Assembly is ordered twice before in the Book of Leviticus, ch. xvi. 29, xxiii. 27. and here repeated perhaps for the Sake of Eleazar and Joshua, who were newly advanced to their several Offices, that they might take special Notice of it, and see it observed.

And ye shall afflict your Souls;] That was the special Intention of it (as we read in both the fore-named Places) that they might receive the Benefit of the Atonement on this Day made.

Ye shall not do any Work therein,] It was to be observed, as strictly as a Sabbath, Lev. xvi. 31, xxiii. 32. wherein they were to abstain, not merely from servile Work, but from all manner of Work whatsoever, Lev. xvi. 29, xxiii. 28, 30.

Ver. 8. But ye shall offer a Burnt-offering unto the LORD for a sweet Savour,] Endeavour to procure Acceptance of the rest of the Sacrifices of the Day, with this whole Burnt-offering, beside the daily Sacrifice; as it follows, ver. 11.

One young Bullock, one Ram, and seven Lambs of the first Year, &c.] The same that were appointed on the foregoing Solemnity, ver. 2. (except the monthly Offering, ver. 6.) to which was added another Ram for a Burnt-offering, Lev. xvi. 5. as a devout Acknowledgment that they owned him alone for their Sovereign LORD.

Ver. 9, 10. And their Meat-offering shall be of Flour, &c.] The Meat-offering attending these Burnt-offerings was to be in the same Proportion as before ordered, ver. 3, 4.

Ver. 11. One Kid of the Goats for a Sin-offering,] As was appointed in the foregoing Solemnity, ver. 5.

Beside the Sin-offering of Atonement,] Mentioned Lev. xvi. 9, &c. whose Blood was carried by the High-Priest into the most holy Place; which was done in no other Sacrifice but that, and the Bullock which was offered as a Sin-offering for the Family of Aaron on the same Day, Lev. xvi. 14.

And the continual Burnt-offering, and the Meat-offering of it, and their Drink-offerings,] These were no more to be omitted on the great Day of Atonement, than on any other Day; but the Service of the Day was to begin with the continual Burnt-offering; and then followed the Burnt-offerings, with the Meat and Drink-offerings belonging to them, and the Sin-offering here prescribed; and then the Sacrifice of Atonement, and all that is ordered in the sixteenth Chapter of Leviticus, for the Expiation of the Sins of all the People of Israel: Which Sacrifice the present Jews now wanting, and yet being sensible of the Necessity of some Satisfaction, but not believing in our Blessed Saviour, who hath fully made it for all Mankind; they are in a lamentable Plunge, and are put to most wretched Shifts to devise something to supply the Place of the Sacrifice of Atonement, which was wont to be made for them. One is their own Death; it being the continual Prayer of every one of them, upon their Death-bed, Let my Death be the Expiation for my Sins. Another is (which is so absurd, that Leo Modena saith they do not use it now in Italy, nor in the Eastern Countries) the killing of a white Cock (if one can be got) by the Men, and a white Hen by the Women, on the Eve of this Day, saying, Let this Cock be an Exchange for me; let it come in my stead; let it be my Expiation; let it die, but I and Israel live happily; as Buxtorf shews in his Synagog. Judaica, cap. 25. Which I should not here mention, were it not to shew, that they have the very same Notion still of a Sacrifice for Sin (even now that they can only make an Imitation of it) which we have of the Sacrifice of CHRIST, who was put in our Place, and offered himself to GOD in our stead; and that it ought to be pure and innocent, which is offered instead of a Sinner.

Ver. 12. And on the fifteenth Day of the seventh Month, ye shall have an holy Convocation; ye shall do no servile Work.] See Lev. xxiii. 35.

And ye shall keep a Feast unto the LORD seven Days.] viz. The Feast of Tabernacles, Lev. xxiii. 34. which was after the Harvest and Vintage; Deut. xvi. 13. and kept seven Days with great Joy and Gladness of Heart; but they were not bound to abstain from servile Work all this time, but only on the first Day and on the seventh.

Ver. 13. And ye shall offer a Burnt-offering, a Sacrifice made by Fire, of a sweet Savour unto the LORD;] The same kind of Sacrifice which was prescribed on the other Festivals, to be offered up wholly in Honour of GOD: But here is a far larger Proportion than in any other Solemnity.

Thirteen young Bullocks, two Rams, and fourteen Lambs of the first Year, &c.] On the other Festivals two Bullocks sufficed, cb. xxviii. 11, 19, 27. and on the Festival in the Beginning of this Month only one was appointed; but here are thirteen; and so they continued to be offered seven Days successively, with the Decrease only of one Bullock every Day, till on the seventh Day only seven Bullocks were offered, which in all made seventy Bullocks. The Rams also and the Lambs were in a double Proportion to what was usual, throughout the whole Festival; which was a vast Charge, but more easy at this Time of the Year than any other, because now their Barns were full, and their Wine-presses over-flowed; and their Hearts might well be supposed to be more enlarged than at other times, in Thankfulness to GOD for his great Benefits. Yet this very gross, troublesome and expensive way of serving GOD, made the best Men among them groan, and long for the Coming of CHRIST; in whose Days, their own Doctors say, no Sacrifices shall remain, but those of Thanksgiving, and Praise, and Prayer. With which they have been forced to be content for above Sixteen hundred Years; and instead of these additional Sacrifices unto the daily, have added peculiar Prayers (which they also call Musaphim) unto the common Prayers they used every Day: see Buxtorf concerning the Feast of the New Moon, in his Synagog. Jud. cap. 22.

Ver. 14, 15. And their Meat-offering shall be of Flour, &c.] The same Proportions which are ordered, by a general Rule, to every Sacrifice of a Bullock, and of a Ram, chap. xv.

Ver. 16. And one Kid of the Goats for a Sin-offering, beside the continual Burnt-offering, &c.] There is no Augmentation of the Sin-offering; but it is the same with that on other Festivals, ver. 5. And all these Sacrifices, it appears by this, were to be added to the daily Sacrifice.

Ver. 17. And on the second Day ye shall offer twelve young Bullocks, &c.] Here one Bullock less, than on the Day before, is ordered to be offered; and so on every succeeding Day there is a Decrease of one Bullock; which is all the Difference between the Offerings on the seven Days of this Feast, upon every one of which there was the same Number of Rams and Lambs, without any Diminution. Which Moses thought fit to set down distinctly from this Verse to the thirty-fifth, that there might be no Mistake. But little need be noted upon them.

Ver. 18. According to their Number after the manner, &c.] Prescribed ver. 14, 15.

Ver. 35. On the eighth Day ye shall have a solemn Assembly;] There is a peculiar Word here used, to denote this to be a great Day; as I noted upon Lev. xxiii. 36: see there.

Ye shall do no servile Work therein.] It was to be observed at the first Day of the Feast of Tabernacles; both of them being called a Sabbath, Lev. xxiii. 39.

Ver. 36. But ye shall offer a Burnt-offering, a Sacrifice made by Fire, of a sweet Savour unto the LORD;] Here is a peculiar Sacrifice appointed upon this Day, in the same Terms, as upon the first Day of the Feast of Tabernacles, ver. 13.

One Bullock, one Ram, seven Lambs of the first Year, &c.] But tho' this was an extraordinary Day, and a distinct Festival (as I shewed upon Lev. xxiii. 39.) yet here are fewer Sacrifices prescribed on this Day, than upon any of the foregoing seven. For on every one of them two Rams were offered, and fourteen Lambs; and here but half so many; and seven Bullocks were the fewest that were offered upon any of those Days, (and on the first Day thirteen) but here only one. By which, GOD consulted, perhaps, the Weakness of Mankind, who naturally grew weary both of the Charge, and of the Labour of such Services, when they were long continued; and therefore he made them every Day less toilsome and expensive; and put them in mind likewise, that the Multitude of Sacrifices did not procure their Acceptance with GOD; and that, in Length of Time, they would come to nothing, and be utterly abolished, to establish something better in their room.

Ver. 37. Their Meat-offering, and their Drink-offerings, for the Bullock, for the Ram, and for the Lambs, shall be according to their Number, after the manner:] In such Proportions as GOD had before ordained, in the fifteenth Chapter of this Book, in the Beginning of it ; as I have often observed.

Ver. 38. And one Goat for a Sin-offering, beside the continual Burnt-offering, &c.] This is never omitted upon any Festival, ib. xxviii. 15, 22, 30. chap. xxix. 5, 11, 16, 19, &c. to put them in mind, that after all their Services they stood in need of Forgiveness.

Ver. 39. These Things ye shall do (or offer) unto the LORD in your set Feasts,] All these Feasts were fixed and stated at certain Times ; on which GOD was to be worshipped after the Manner here prescribed in these two Chapters. For all these Offerings (except one Sin-offering upon each set Day) were wholly Burnt-offerings (as I have already observed) which may properly be said to be done, that is, offered unto the LORD ; neither People nor Priests having any Share in them.

Besides your Vows, and your Free-will Offerings, for your Burnt-offerings,] Besides these, every Man might offer other Burnt-offerings ; either in Performance of a Vow, or freely out of his Affection to GOD. See chap. xv. 3.

And for your Meat-offerings, and for your Drink-offerings,] There are five several Sorts of Meat-offerings ; which were left to every Man's Free-will, to bring as he pleased. See the second Chapter of Leviticus, where they are described.

And for your Peace-offerings,] These are described in the third Chapter of that Book : A great Number of which, it is likely, Men offered voluntarily upon all the fore-mentioned Festivals ; for otherwise, they would have had no Means to feast with GOD at his House, nor to entertain their Friends and Neighbours, as the Custom was at such Times of publick Rejoicing ; which they did upon that Part of the Peace-offerings which was given them, after the Fat was offered to GOD, and the Wave-breast and Heave-shoulder given to the Priest, Lev. vii. 15, &c. 34.

Ver. 40. And Moses told the Children of Israel, according to all that the LORD commanded Moses.] He acquainted all the People (by the Heads of their Tribes perhaps, of whom we read in the Beginning of the next Chapter) with all these Commands of GOD, which concerned his Worship and Service.

C H A P. XXX.

Ver. 1. AND Moses spake unto the Heads of the Tribes,] There were wont to be extraordinary Assemblies of these, or other great Men, upon special Occasions, as Mr. Selden observes, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 14. n. 4. who are sometimes called, as they are here, the Heads of all the Tribes, and the Elders, Deut. v. 23. and in other places, the Heads of the People, Deut. xxxiii. 5. the whole Congregation of the Children of Israel, Josh. xviii. 1. xxii. 12. the chief of all the People, Judg. xx. 2. all Israel, 1 Sam. vii. 5. all the Princes of Israel, the Princes of the Tribes, 1 Chron. xxviii. 1. all the Elders of Israel, and Heads of the Tribes, and chief of the Fathers, 2 Chron. v. 2. the Counsel of the Princes and Elders, Ezra. x. 8. And it is commonly said by the Hebrew Doctors, concerning such Assemblies, that wheresoever the Children of Israel were met together, or the greater Part of them, there the SCHECHINAH (that is, the Divine Majesty, or the Holy Ghost, as they sometimes speak) was wont to rest.

Concerning the Children of Israel, saying,] Acquainted them with a Matter which concerned all the People ; willing them to communicate it to them.

This is the Thing which the LORD hath commanded.] It is very probable there had been some Case propounded to him about Vows ; concerning which he here gives such Rules, as might direct them in time to come.

Ver. 2. If a Man] It is reasonable to think, that this includes the other Sex also ; provided they be in their own Power, and not subject to another, and be in their right Mind.

Vow a Vow unto the LORD,] Promise solemnly unto GOD something that is for his Honour and Service ; for that seems to be meant by, unto the LORD : As, that he will offer some Sacrifice at the Feast above-mentioned, more than is prescribed ; or afflict his Soul on some other Day, besides the Day of Atonement. See ver. 13.

Or swear an Oath to bind his Soul with a Bond ;] Whether it be a simple Vow, or bound also with a solemn Oath ; which made a double Obligation, by calling GOD to witness the Sincerity of his Intentions.

He shall not break his Word,] In the Hebrew it is, he shall not profane his Word ; for it being solemnly passed to GOD, it made him vile and contemptible, if he did not keep it. The Jewish Doctors very prudently advise their Scholars not to accustom themselves to make Vows, but to content themselves with doing what the Law commands, and abstaining from what it forbids ; but if they did make them, to look upon it as an high Affront to GOD not to perform them.

He shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his Mouth.] If the Thing be lawful, and possible. And if he appointed no Time for the doing of it, he was to think himself obliged to do it presently without Delay, Deut. xxiii. 21.

Ver. 3. If a Woman also vow a Vow unto the LORD,] As most Interpreters think the Word Man, in the foregoing Verse, comprehends Women, who were in as perfect Liberty as the Men he speaks of ; so the Word Woman here comprehends all Men, who are in the same Circumstances with those Women, whom he here directs in their Vows : whom he considers in a threefold State ; before they are married, and after Marriage, and in their Widowhood.

And bind herself by a Bond,] By an Oath, where-with she confirms her Vow ; as it seems to be interpreted ver. 10, 13.

Being in her Father's House, in her Youth ;] That is, being a Part of his Family, and still under his Government, and not married. For the Father's Power lasts no longer, as Grotius observes, lib. ii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. v. n. 7. In which Condition likewise are all Sons, who remain in their Father's Family, undisposed of in Marriage ; and all Servants, who are manifestly in a Subjection to their Masters ; and therefore could no more resolve to do what they pleased, than the Women here mentioned.

Ver.

Ver. 4. And her Father bear her Vow, and her Bond, wherewith she hath bound her Soul,] The first of these may relate to her simple Vow; and the next to an Oath wherewith she binds it, to make it firmer; which her Father is supposed to hear, either when she spake the Words, or when she acquainted him with her Vow, as in Duty she was bound to do.

And her Father shall hold his Peace at her:] If he did not declare that he disallowed what she had promised, it was supposed he consented to it: Unless he said he would take Time to consider; and neither allow or disallow for the present; in which Case, in all Reason, she was to wait for his Resolution.

Then all her Vows shall stand, &c.] It was not in his Power afterwards to disannul any of them, if he did not contradict them when he was told of them, or after the Time he had taken for Deliberation.

Ver. 5. But if her Father disallow her in the Day that he beareth;] As soon as he comes acquainted with it.

Not any of her Vows, or of her Bonds, wherewith she hath bound her Soul, shall stand:] Tho' she had bound her Vows with an Oath, they were not to be performed, when her Father had declared his Will to the contrary.

And the Lord shall forgive her,] The not performing her Vow shall not be imputed to her as a Sin.

Because her Father disallowed her.] Whose Consent was supposed to be necessary, before the Vow could be binding; she being, while a Part of his Family, under his Power, and not her own. Some have fancied, that when her Father was dead, the Vow revived, because then she was at her own Disposal: But it is plain, her Father wholly disannulled the Vow, when he did not approve it; so that it could not recover a Force it never had, being made without his Consent. The same is to be said of a Guardian, who was supposed to be in the Place of a Father, when he died, and left his Children to his Care. And this Power was fit to be reserved to Parents, (as a late learned Man, Puffendorf, observes) not only lest Women, in their imprudent Years, should undo themselves by vowing more than their Fortunes could bear; but also lest the paternal Estate should be burden'd by such Vows, or the necessary Affairs of the Family hinder'd. So that this Power did not flow from positive Laws, but from natural Reason; no body that is subject to another having any Right to dispose of those Things which are under that Power to which they are subject.

Ver. 6. And if she had at all an Husband when she vowed,] Was a married Woman, or espoused to an Husband, tho' still in her Father's House, (as it appears from ver. 10. this must be interpreted) when she made this Vow, then it was to be consider'd, not what her Father, but her Husband (under whose Power she now was) should determine about it.

Or uttered aught out of her Lips, wherewith she bound her Soul;] Said any thing, which she confirmed by an Oath.

Ver. 7. And her Husband heard it,] Either was present when she spake it; or she told it him afterwards.

And held his Peace at her, in the Day that he heard it:] Said nothing to signify his Disallowance of it: see ver. 4.

Then her Vows shall stand, &c.] As before, ver. 4.

Ver. 8. But if her Husband disallow her, &c.] See ver. 5. where there is the same Case of a Daughter under the Power of her Father, as here of a Wife under the Power of her Husband.

Ver. 9. But every Vow of a Widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their Souls, shall stand against her.] The Reason of this is so plain, that one would think it needed not to have been mentioned, because such Women were wholly in their own Power, being free from their Husbands. Therefore, it is very probable, he speaks here of a Widow, or divorced Woman, returned to her Father's House, (as the manner frequently was, Lev. xxii. 13.) who might be supposed to recover his ancient Power over her, to disannul her Vows, as he might before she was married: which is here absolutely condemned; for tho' she lived with him, she was her own Woman, (as we now speak) and might dispose of herself, and her Goods, as she pleased, without his Consent.

Ver. 10. And if she vowed in her Husband's House, or bound her Soul by a Bond with an Oath;] i. e. Engaged herself in a Vow, and perhaps confirmed it with an Oath, while she and her Husband lived together, or before she was divorced from him.

Ver. 11. And her Husband heard it, and held his Peace at her, and disallowed her not: then all her Vows shall stand, &c.] She was bound in this Case, to make them good after he was dead, or she was divorced from him.

Ver. 12. But if her Husband hath utterly made them void on the Day he heard them, &c.] Then, when she was in her own Power, by his Death or by a Divorce, she was not bound to make them good; because when she made them, her Husband, under whose Power she then was, had utterly made them void.

Ver. 13. Every Vow, and every binding Oath to afflict the Soul,] This shews what the Matter of these Vows frequently was; to abstain from such or such Meats, tho' in themselves lawful; or to fast, and eat nothing at all on other Days, as well as on the great Day of Expiation; which was the only Fast ordained by the Law of Moses.

Her Husband may establish it, or her Husband may make it void.] There in an excellent Discourse of Maimonides in his More Nevochim (p. iii. cap. 48.) to shew that this is most reasonable; where he observes, that as the Law prohibited some Meats, so pious People sometimes vowed to forbear such as were not prohibited; that by this Means they might learn Contentment with a little, or Continence, and give a Check to an immoderate Appetite. From whence the Saying among the Doctors, That Vows are the Hedge of Separation; i. e. a great Guard to an holy Life. But since, thro' the Vehemence of their Affections and Passions, many Women are prone to act unadvisedly, if Vows were wholly in their Power, great Inconveniences, Dissensions and Confusions might arise in Families, whilst this fort of Meat is lawful to the Husband; but not to the Wife; this permitted to the Daughter, but prohibited to the Mother. For which Reason, saith he, this Authority was given to the Governors of Families; in all Things to order them, as they saw would be for their Profit, or Detriment.

Ver. 14. But if her Husband] Or, For if her Husband.

Altogether bold his Peace at her, from Day to Day;] When he knew what she had vowed; as it follows at the End of the Verse.

Then he establisheth all her Vows,&c.] His Silence was to be interpreted a Consent to allow what she vowed. There was no need to add the contrary; which is here to be understood: that if he said he did not allow them, then they should not bind her.

Ver. 15. But if he shall any ways make them void, after that he hath heard them,] Hinder her from performing her Vow, after he had given his Consent, by saying nothing against it, when he heard her make the Vow.

Then he shall bear her Iniquity.] GOD will punish him, not her, for not performing the Vow. Paulus Fagius thinks the Meaning is, that if the first Day he heard of her Vow, he did not disannul it, but attempted to do it the next Day, or the third Day after, he should bear the Blame, if the Vow was not made good.

Ver. 16. These are the Statutes which the LORD commanded Moses between a Man and his Wife, between the Father and his Daughter, being yet in her Youth, in her Father's House.] It is likely some Differences arose in some Families about these Matters; and therefore these Laws were made for the settling the Power of Husbands over their Wives, and Parents over their Children, while they were young, and continued a Part of their Family.

C H A P. XXXI.

Ver. 1. AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,] Not long before his Death, as appears from the next Verse.

Ver. 2. Avenge the Children of Israel of the Midianites.] This had been commanded before, but no Time set for it; which now is determined. The Moabites are not mentioned; because the Midianites seem to have been the first or chief Contrivers of that Mischief which befel the Israelites, by the Enticements of their Women: See chap. xxv. 17, 18.

Afterward shalt thou be gathered unto thy People.] When he had given a few other Directions, concerning their possessing the Countries already conquered, and the Land of Canaan, chap. xxxii, xxxiv, xxxv. and providing for the Levites there, chap. xxxvi. GOD had warned him to prepare for his Death before this, chap. xxvii. 13. but he first let him have the Satisfaction of seeing the Midianites punished; and gave him some Time to settle the publick Affairs; and to make also a long Exhortation to the Israelites, to observe all that he had commanded them.

Ver. 3. And Moses spake unto the People, saying,] He speedily put this Command in Execution.

tion; which might possibly be in the Ninth Month of the Fortieth Year.

Arm some of yourselves unto the War,] He doth not at first determine the Number; but as many as pleased might offer themselves voluntarily, to be ready to obey him.

And let them go against the Midianites, and avenge the LORD of Midian.] The LORD bad him avenge the Children of Israel, ver. 2. but Moses bids them avenge the LORD: for they had the same Interest, and were both injured at the same Time, and by the same Means. And as GOD was so gracious as to resent the Evil done to Israel, so Moses, in Duty and Gratitude to GOD, thought himself bound rather to consider the Dishonour that was done to him, whose War this was; not only because undertaken by his Command, but in his Quarrel, (with those who had drawn the Israelites to Idolatry) and for the Sake of his People.

Ver. 4. Of every Tribe a Thousand, throughout all the Tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the War.] When a great many, perhaps all the People, appeared ready to go to War, he ordered, that only a select Number should be sent, of a Thousand out of each of the Twelve Tribes.

Ver. 5. So there were delivered out of the Thousands of Israel, a Thousand of every Tribe.] Their Officers pick'd out this Number from among the rest; or they were chosen by Lot for this Service; or they stepped out and offered themselves Volunteers (as we speak); which the 27th Verse may seem to countenance, where they are called, those that took the War upon them.

Twelve thousand armed for War.] This was but a small Number, compared with the whole Nation of the Midianites (who had five Kings, ver. 8.). But GOD would have them rely more upon him, than upon the Multitude of an Host; and let them see, by their Success against this People, that they needed not fear the Conquest of Canaan.

Ver. 6. And Moses sent them to the War, a Thousand of every Tribe;] He gave them their Commission to fight the Midianites.

Them, and Phinebas the Son of Eleazar the Priest,] Who was not their Commander in Chief (or their General, as we now speak); for it did not belong to the Priestly Office to conduct Armies: and it is said expressly in the Words following, he went with the holy Instruments, &c. to be ready to perform all such sacred Offices, as should be required by the General, who, it is most likely, was Joshua. It is true indeed that Phinebas was a Man of great Courage, and had lately performed a singular Piece of Service, which had won him great Reputation. This hath made some think, he was the fitter to go and to avenge the LORD of Midian, as he had begun to do, chap. xxv. 8. In After-times also, in the Days of the Maccabees, who were of the Family of the Priests, the Armies of Israel were led by them against their Enemies. But then it must be considered, that they were also the supreme Governors of the People, and there were no other.

With the holy Instruments,] By which Jonathan understands the Urim and Thummim; which some think Phinebas carried along with him, wherewith to consult the Divine Majesty, in case of any Difficulty that might arise about the Management of the War. And to make out this, they suppose Eleazar to be old and crazy, or labouring under some Infirmary; which was the Reason that Phinebas his Son was substituted in his Room to perform this Office. See our very Learned Dr. Spencer, Dissert. de Urim & Thummim, cap. 6. sect. 2. But this may be justly doubted, whether Phinebas, being only the Son of the High-Priest, and not yet capable of that Office, could be substituted to perform this great Charge, which belonged to the High-Priest alone. Nor do we find any Warrant for consulting the LORD by Urim and Thummim, but only before the most holy Place, (see chap. xxvii. 21.) And therefore it seems to me far more likely, that he means the Ark, which was wont to be carried, in following Times, into the Field, when they went to fight with their Enemies, 1 Sam. iv. 4, 5. xiv. 18. 2 Sam. xi. 11. Yea, Joshua himself, not long after this Time, ordered the Ark to be carried, with Priests blowing the Trumpets before it, when he surrounded Jericho, Josh. vi. 4, 6, 7, &c. And therefore the holy Instruments being here joined with the Trumpets to blow in his Hand, it makes it the more probable, that the Ark may be here meant; there being also something in this very Book, to countenance this Opinion: See chap. xiv. 44. but especially chap. xxxii. 20, 22.

But it must be confessed, that it is never thus expressed in any other Place of Holy Scripture, but always called the Ark of God, or of the Covenant, or the Testimony, or the like. And therefore, perhaps, they give the truest Sense of these Words, who take the following Words to be an Explication of them; that is, the Trumpets were the holy Instruments, which he carried in his Hand.

And the Trumpets to blow, in his Hand.] Which he delivered to the Priests who followed him, to sound an Alarm, when they went to fight, according to the Direction, chap. x. 8, 9. and as the Practice was in future Ages, 2 Chron. xiii. 12.

Ver. 7. And they warred against the Midianites.] It is not certain whether the Midianites came out of their Country, to give them Battle; or they first broke into their Country, and then fought their Army.

As the LORD commanded Moses;] One would think this meant no more, but that they obeyed the Commandment of GOD before mentioned, ver. 2. But the Jews think he hath respect to another particular Commandment, which they say was given by Moses, when they went out to this War: That they should not, when they besieged any City, begirt it quite round, but only on three sides; leaving one naked, that the Besieged might flee away, if they pleased; by which means Effusion of human Blood was prevented. So Guil. Schickart observes out of Siphri in his Mischpat Hammelech, cap. 5. Theor. 18. and Mr. Selden since him, Lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 15. where he shews they understand this of all Wars but those against the Seven Nations in Canaan and Amalek; towards whom this Kindness was not shewn, as appears by the Siege of Jericho. But the Laws about managing Wars, which are mentioned in the Book of Deuteronomy, do not seem to have been yet given; though the Jews fancy this Law was now given about Midian, and observed ever after.

And they slew all the Males.] Who were in this Fight, and did not save themselves by Flight.

Ver. 8. And they slew the Kings of Midian,] Little Kings, called Princes, Josh. xiii. 21. where they are said to be Dukes of Sibon, i. e. great Men tributary to Sibon, while he continued King of the Amorites. But after the Israelites had conquered him, they took, perhaps, the Title of Kings.

Beside the rest of them that were slain:] They made not only a great Slaughter of the People, but killed their chief Commanders, who led them on.

Namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, &c.] They are particularly named, that all their Neighbours might be satisfied of the Truth of this History. And he that is called Zur, is thought to have been the Father of Cozbi, whom Phinebas slew.

Balaam also the Son of Beor, they slew with the Sword.] He had seen such good Success of his wicked Counsel, (which he gave either as he went Home, or returning again to them: See ch. xxiv. ult.) that, presuming the Israelites were forsaken of their GOD, he adventured to go along with the Midianites unto this Battle; hoping he might curse the Israelites, now that Iniquity (i. e. Idolatry) was found among them; which he could not do while they were free from it. Thus he perished by his own wicked Devices; and was so far from having his Wish, that he might die the Death of the Righteous, (that is, live long) that (as the Jews say) he was slain in the Thirty-fourth Year of his Age. The Doctors in the Gemara of the Sanhedrim, cap. 21. sect. 11. ask, What did he here? To which R. Johanan makes answer, He went to receive his Reward for the Death of the Twenty-four thousand Israelites, which he had procured, chap. xxv. 9. And thus, saith another; It happened unto him according to the Proverb, The Camel went to desire Horns, and they cut off his Ears.

Ver. 9. And the Children of Israel took all the Women of Midian captive, and their little ones.] After they were Masters of the Field (as we speak) by the Overthrow of their Armies, they fell upon their Cities; and, according to the ancient Custom in the most bloody Wars, they killed only the Men, but no Women, nor Children, Gen. xxxiv. 25. 1 Kings xi. 16. And so the Law of GOD afterward required they should do, when they took any City that did not belong to the Canaanites, Deut. xx. 13, 14. who were utterly to be destroyed, ver. 16, 17. where he saith, Thou shalt save nothing alive that breatheth.

And took the Spoil of all their Cattle, and all their Flocks, and all their Goods.] As belonging to them, by the Right of Conquest, in a just War.

Ver. 10. And they burnt all their Cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly Castles, with Fire.] Made the Country desolate, that they who fled might have no Encouragement to return again; nor be able, without great Hazard, to settle themselves there, where they had not a Fortrefs left to defend them. This was but a necessary Care; notwithstanding withstanding which, they had peopled the Country again so well, in the Space of about Two hundred Years, that they were able to oppress the Israelites; as we read Judges vi. 1.

Ver. 11. And they took all the Spoil, and all the Prey, both of Men and of Beasts.] They had possessed themselves of them before, ver. 9. but now they carried them away.

Ver. 12. And they brought the Captives, and the Prey, and the Spoil.] Here are three different Words to express their Booty, which they brought to the Camp of Israel: The first of which signifies the Women and Children that were taken; the second, the Cattle and the Flocks (though sometimes it includes in it, Men and Women); and the third, their Money and Goods.

Unto Moses and Eleazar the Priest, and unto the Congregation of the Children of Israel,] Unto the seventy Elders, and Princes of the Tribes, who were assembled with them, (see chap. xxix. 1.) as it seems to be expounded in the next Verse.

Unto the Camp at the Plains of Moab, &c.] From whence they marched against Midian; and had been encamped there a great while, chap. xxii. 1. xxvi. 3, 63.

Ver. 13. And Moses, and Eleazar the Priest, and all the Princes of the Congregation went forth to meet them, without the Camp.] Hearing they were returned victorious, they went to congratulate them, before they came at the Camp: for which there was also another Reason, mentioned ver. 19. This shews that Eleazar was not so infirm as some suppose; and affords an Argument to strengthen their Opinion, who think Joshua was now General of the Host; otherwise he would have been mentioned, together with Moses and Eleazar, as going to meet them; being chosen his Co-adjutor, and therefore superior to all the Princes that are here joined with them.

Ver. 14. And Moses was wroth with the Officers of the Host, with the Captains over Thousands, and Captains over Hundreds, which came from the Battle.] Who were more to blame than the Soldiers, whose Duty it was to obey, not to give Orders; which they received, no doubt, from the Officers, to kill only the Men. Here now is an Argument to the contrary, that Joshua did not command in chief: but this being only a Detachment (as they now speak) from the Host of Israel, was led by some inferior Officer, the first Captain of Thousands perhaps; for if Joshua had been there, Moses would have expostulated with him, or rather, there would have been no Cause for this Rebuke; he being a Man in whom was the Spirit, chap. xxvii. 18.

Ver. 15. And Moses said unto them, Have ye saved all the Women alive?] Unless he had commanded them to be killed, one cannot see that they deserved to be chidden; because they proceeded according to the Rules of all worthy Warriors, who killed only those who could bear Arms against them. But either he had given some Directions who should be killed, or he expected they should have considered, that the Women had killed more by their Blandishments, than their Husbands could do by their Arms (for they had not killed one Man, ver. 49.) and therefore should have been destroyed, as the most mischievous: for so it follows in the next Verse.

Ver. 16. Behold,] Reflect upon what is lately past, and consider.

These caused the Children of Israel, through the Counsel of Balaam, to commit Trespass against the LORD, in the Matter of Peor; and there was a Plague among the Congregation of the LORD.] By these they had been inveigled into an heinous Sin, and made obnoxious to a very heavy Punishment, which God inflicted upon them on that Account. For though the Moabitish Women had a great Hand in it, chap. xxv. 1. yet those of Midian seem to have been the chief Seducers, ver. 6, 17, 18. and, perhaps he feared, might be so again.

Ver. 17. Now therefore kill every Male among the little ones,] That the Nation might be extirpated, as far as lay in their Power.

And kill every Woman that hath known Man by lying with him.] For these, it is to be supposed, had been the most instrumental in the Crime before-mentioned; either by prostituting themselves, or their Daughters, to the Lust of the Israelites, and thereby drawing them to Idolatry; in which Sin they were so settled, that there was no Hope of reclaiming them; but they might rather (if they had been saved alive) have inticed the Israelites to commit the same again.

Ver. 18. But all the Woman-children that have not known a Man by lying with him, keep alive] Being young, there was some Hope they might be brought off from Idolatry, and become Profelytes to the true Religion.

For yourselves.] To be sold as Slaves to any other Nation; or to be kept as Servants; or taken to be their Wives, after such Preparation as the Law required, Deut. xxi. 10, 11, &c. This was a peculiar Case, wherein a middle Course was held between those that were of the seven Nations of Canaan, and those that were not. If they were not of those seven Nations, the Israelites might take the Women and little ones unto themselves, Deut. xx. 14, 15. If they were, every thing that breathed was to be destroyed, ver. 16, 17. But here the Midianites being guilty of a very great Crime against the LORD and against his People, are punished more heavily than other Nations; though not so heavily as those of Canaan were to be: For they killed all the Women that were not Virgins, as well as all the Males, both little and great; but spared the rest, together with the Cattle, &c. Such an Execution was made, in After-times, upon one of the Cities of Israel, upon an high Contempt of publick Authority, in a very great Exigency, Judges xxi. 11. There is a Rule in Deut. xx. 10. that when they came to fight against any City, they should proclaim Peace to it; and if they should accept it, they should only make the Inhabitants Tributaries to them. From whence, a Question arising, Whether this extended to the seven Nations of Canaan? It is resolved by Maimonides, that it did; which he proves from Josh. xi. 19, 20. But so great was the Sin of this People, that they neither sent Offers of Peace to them now, nor were they to make any Peace with them hereafter, Deut. xxiii. 6.

And the Reason is there given; because they hired Balaam to curse them: which is as true of the Midianites as of the Moabites. Notwithstanding which, Maimonides determines, that though the Israelites did not send Messengers of Peace to them; yet if they, of their own accord, sent to desire Peace of the Israelites, they were not to reject them: See Cunæus de Hebr. Repub. lib. ii. cap. 20.

Ver. 19. And do ye abide without the Camp seven Days.] As unclean Persons. For though it was lawful to kill Men, in a just War against them; yet διὰ τὴν ἀναιδέτην καὶ κυνὴν συγγένειαν (as Philo speaks) because of the most ancient and common Kindred between all Mankind, it was fit Men should use some Purification, to cleanse themselves from that, which looked like a Crime, tho' it was none.

Whosoever hath killed any Person, and whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves] The whole Army that went to the War, were to stay without the Camp seven Days: and such of them as had had their Hands in Blood, or had touched a dead Body, though killed by another, were to use a special Purification; which was made by the Water of Separation, mentioned chap. xix. 9, &c.

And your Captives.] Or the Prey that they had taken; of Garments, and other Things, mentioned in the next Verse: And so the Word is translated ver. 26. For we cannot think that the Persons they had taken, being Gentiles, were to be purified with that Water, which was peculiar to the Jews.

On the third Day, and on the seventh Day:] So the Law was, chap. xix. 11, 12. And such Purifications were common among the Gentiles, especially the Greeks, upon the like Occasions, as Mr. Selden observes, l. iv. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. ult. Grotius, l. ii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 24. n. 10. To whom add our late learned Dr. Spencer, l. iii. Dissert. 3. Sect. 1. where he takes this to have been a Custom, derived from ancient Time, before the Law of Moses (which may be questioned); and Bonfrerius, upon this Place, hath alleged the very same Proofs, and several more; particularly this out of the Scholiast upon Sophocles, in his Ajax Mastigoph. ἑβδὸν ἐν τοῖς παλαιοῖς ὅτε ἢ φόνον ἀνθρώπου, &c. it was the Custom among the Ancients, when they either killed a Man, or made any other Slaughter, to wash their Hands in Water, εἰς καθαρίσιν μιᾶσματός, for the Purification of the Defilement.

Ver. 20. And purify all your Raiment, and all that is made of Skins, &c.] With the same Water of Separation (or else by washing them in running Water, as the Manner was in other Cases, Lev. xi. 32, 33.); for they might all be supposed to be defiled by dead Bodies, and so come under the Law, chap. xix. 14.

Ver. 21. And Eleazar the Priest said unto the Men of War which went to the Battle, This is the Ordinance of the Law, which the LORD commanded Moses.] This Law was to be observed hereafter by those who went to War: For though the Law before was, as I observed, that he who touched a dead Body, should be purified with the Water of Separation; yet nothing is there said of him that killed a Man in War, but did not, perhaps, touch his Body; which now is brought under the same Rule.

Ver. 22, 23. Only the Gold and the Silver, the Bras, &c. every thing that may abide the Fire, ye shall make it go through the Fire, &c.] All sorts of Metals were to have this peculiar sort of Purification; which the other Things (mentioned ver. 20.) would not endure. And the same Bonfrerius observes, this was a Way of Purification among the Gentiles, as old as Homer's Time; but they used Sulphur with it. For so he makes Ulysses call to the old Women, to bring him Sulphur, and then Fire, that he might fume the House wherein the Wooers had been killed. Which is observed by Fort. Scacchus also, Myrothec. 2. cap. 30. where he also notes, that Ovid gives a long Account why these two, Fire and Water, were chosen for the Instruments of Purification, lib. iv. Fastorum; where he saith particularly of Fire.

Omnia purgat edax ignis, vitiumque metalli Excoquit. —

Nevertheless it shall be purified with the Water of Separation.] On the third Day, I suppose, before it went through the Fire.

And all that abideth not the Fire, ye shall make go through the Water.] All things that could abide the Fire, were to be purified both by that and by the Water of Separation. And such things as could not abide it, were to be purified, not merely by sprinkling them with the Water of Separation, but by making them go through the Water.

Ver. 24. And ye shall wash your Cloaths on the seventh Day, and ye shall be clean, &c.] Thus he that sprinkled an unclean Person with the Water of Separation, was bound to purify himself, chap. xix. 19.

Ver. 25. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,] After they were purified, and come into the Camp.

Ver. 26. Take the Sum of the Prey that was taken.] In the Hebrew the Words are, Take the Sum of the Prey of the Captivity: which, it is plain by what follows, signifies the Sum of the Prey, and of the Captives. For all that they took was of three Kinds, ver. 12. the Persons, called Captives: the Beasts, which are called the Prey: and Money and Goods (such as are mentioned ver. 20, 21.) which are called the Spoil.

Both of Man and of Beast,] Here an Account is ordered to be given of two Parts of what had been taken; but nothing said of the third (which was the Spoil) out of which they, who had it, made a voluntary Oblation, ver. 50, 53.

Thou and Eleazar the Priest, and the chief Fathers of the Congregation:] The same, perhaps, with the Heads of the Tribes, chap. xxx. 1.

Ver. 27. And divide the Prey into two Parts, between them that took the War upon them, who went out to Battle, and between all the Congregation.] By this Partition, a far larger Share was given to every one of the Warriors, who were but Twelve thousand, than to any of their Brethren, who were near Six hundred thousand: For they had hazarded themselves, which the others had not; who, notwithstanding that, enjoyed some Fruit

Fruit of their Labours; because it was a common Cause in which they engaged, and the rest seem to have been ready to fight; as well as they, ver. 3. This Division was made by a special Direction of GOD, but was not the Rule in After-ages; as appears from 1 Sam. xxx. 24, 25. nor had been in ancient Times; as the Jews interpret, Gen. xiv. 24. See Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 16. p. 707.

Ver. 28. And levy a Tribute unto the LORD of the Men of War, &c.] The LORD was their Sovereign, and therefore had a Tribute due to him, out of that which they had taken in War; as a grateful Acknowledgment that they owed their Success to him.

One Soul of Five hundred, both of the Persons] i. e. Of the Women and the Children.

And of the Beeves, and of the Asses, and of the Sheep.] The Hebrew Word tzon signifies Goats as well as Sheep; and both being here intended, the LXX expresses them both. Here is no mention of Camels, which it seems their Country was not stocked withal at this Time: see ver. 34. and what I have noted upon Gen. xxxvii. 25. This Tribute to GOD was but a very small Proportion, in Comparison with what their Kings challenged in following Times, if we may believe the Talmudists; who say, they had all the Gold and Silver, and such rich Things that were taken, and half of the rest of the Prey, which was divided between them and the People: see Selden in the Place above-named. But anciently they had only the tenth Part: see Gen. xiv. 20.

Ver. 29. Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the Priest, for an Heave-offering of the LORD.] For the Maintenance of the Priests, among whom this Part of the Tribute was divided. And it was just a tenth Part of what the Levites had, as they had a tenth Part of their Tribes, which was paid them for their constant Support. So the Law was, chap. xviii. 21, 24, 26, &c. which was observed in this Levy; which is called Trumab, as the Offering for the making of the Sanctuary is called, Exod. xxv. 2. where we translate it, as here, a Heave-offering.

Ver. 30. And of the Children of Israel's half, thou shalt take one Portion of fifty, of the Persons, of the Beeves, &c.] A far larger Share is demanded of the People, (ten times as much as was paid by the Soldiers) because they came more easily by it, without any Pains or Danger. And they pay it in a very just Proportion to the Number of those who went to the War, and of those who staid at home, but were able to go to War; who were above Six hundred thousand (chap. xxvi. 2, 51.) of which Twelve thousand, who were employed in this Expedition, were the fiftieth Part.

And give them unto the Levites,] Who were far more numerous than the Priests, and therefore had a greater Proportion of the Tribute.

Which kept the Charge of the Tabernacle of the LORD.] See chap. i. 50. iii. 6, 7, 8.

Ver. 31. And Moses and Eleazar the Priest did as the LORD commanded Moses.] This Command is peculiar to Moses, ver. 25. but Eleazar was to assist him in the Execution of it, ver. 26. and accordingly they took the Sum of the Prey both of Man and Beast, and divided them between the Soldiers and People; and levied a Tribute upon each for the LORD, who ordered them to his Ministers.

Ver. 32. And the Booty, being the rest of the Prey, which the Men of War had caught,] i. e. Besides what was necessarily spent for their Subsistence, during the War, and while they lay out of the Camp, ver. 19.

Was Six hundred thousand, and Seventy thousand, and Five thousand Sheep.] A vast Stock; far exceeding the Number of Men of War which were in Israel.

Ver. 33. And Threescore and twelve thousand Beeves.] It seems their Country had good Pasture in it, as well as Sheep-walks: For as Arabia Felix, it is certain, had agros latissimos & fertilissimos, (as Pliny speaks, lib. vi. cap. 28.) most spacious and fertile Fields; so Arabia Petraea (in which Midian was) did not wholly want them.

Ver. 34. And Threescore and one thousand Asses.] The Countries about Judea abounding with Camels also, particularly Arabia, in which Job had a great Number, it may seem strange that we read of none here; especially since they had vast Numbers in following Times, Judges vi. 5. vii. 12. and the Ismaelites (with whom they were Associates in Trade) had them long before this Time, Gen. xxxvii. 25, 28. But it is likely they did not yet find it for their Profit to feed Camels, (of which they learnt to make a Traffick afterward) no more than Mules, of which we read nothing here, nor indeed in Judea, till the Times of David. It may be supposed, that if they had Camels, they were of that Kind called Dromedaries, which were famous in this Country in After-ages, Isa. lx. 6. and that the People, who escaped the Slaughter, fled away upon them: and that there were other Beasts in this Country, besides Beeves, and Asses, and Sheep, and Goats, seems to be plain from ver. 30. where after the Mention of these, he adds, of all manner of Beasts, he should take a Portion for the Levites; but of Camels or Dromedaries, I suppose, none were found.

Ver. 35. And Thirty and two thousand Persons in all, of Women that had not known Man, &c.] It appears by this to have been a very populous Country, in which were so many Virgins.

Ver. 36. And the half which was the Portion of them that went out to War, was in Number Three hundred thousand and seven and thirty thousand and five hundred Sheep.] There is no Difficulty in this, or in the following Verses; this being exactly the half of the whole Number of Sheep mentioned ver. 32.

Ver. 37. And the LORD's Tribute of the Sheep was Six hundred and threescore and fifteen.] Which is exactly one in Five hundred, out of this half of the Booty; as GOD ordered ver. 28.

Ver. 38. And the Beeves were Thirty and six thousand, of which the LORD's Tribute was Threescore and twelve.] The very same Proportions are observed here, as in the Sheep, which appears by comparing this Verse with Verse 33. And the two next Verses (39, 40.) give the same Account of the Asses and the Persons, which were as exactly divided; and the LORD had the same Portion of them, as ver. 34, 35, compared with these, demonstrate.

Ver. 41. And Moses gave the Tribute, which was the LORD's Heave-offering, unto Eleazar the Priest, &c.] This is recorded, to shew how faithful Moses was, in performing Obedience to God's Commands, (ver. 29.) and far from desiring the smallest Portion for himself, out of so great a Booty: Which, if he had acted by his own private Spirit, he would scarce have avoided.

Ver. 42. And of the Children of Israel's half, which Moses divided from the Men that warred, &c.] There is nothing here, nor in the following Verses, to Verse 48. but a Repetition of what was said concerning the other Half before-mentioned; to shew that the same Exactness was observed both in the Division of the Prey among the People, and in taking out of it such a Portion as God assigned to the Levites; which was one out of Fifty; as out of the Men of War's Part, one out of Five hundred, ver. 28, 30.

Ver. 48. And the Officers which were over Thousands of the Host, the Captains of Thousands, and Captains of Hundreds, came near unto Moses:] The first Words of this Verse seem to suppose, that there were other great Officers, as well as the General, who were above the Captains over Thousands, and the Captains over Hundreds: which is very probable.

Ver. 49. And they said unto Moses, Thy Servants] The greatest Men speak with the greatest Reverence to Moses; who was in the Place of God.

Have taken the Sum of the Men of War, which are under our Charge;] Made a Muster of them (as we now speak) at our Return from the War.

And there lacketh not one Man of us.] A wonderful Victory; which shews the War was the LORD's, (ver. 3.) who struck such a Terror into them, that one would think they turn'd their Backs, and did not strike a Stroke against the Israelites.

Ver. 50. We have therefore brought an Oblation for the LORD,] For the Uses of the Sanctuary; either in purchasing Sacrifices, or maintaining God's Ministers, &c. For Korban signifies every thing that is given to God, tho' not sacrificed upon the Altar.

What every Man hath gotten,] All of them offered something to the LORD, out of the Spoil he had gotten, according to the Piety of ancient Times, Gen. xiv. 20. For we find no Precept in the Law for this; and yet it was constantly practised by David in After-times, 2 Sam. viii. 11, 12. and by the Officers of his Army, 1 Chron. xxvi. 26, 27. and by other Men, Samuel, Saul, Abner, &c. ver. 28, &c.

Of Jewels, of Gold,] Vessels, as the Hebrew Word signifies, or all manner of Ornaments made of Gold; the Particulars of which follow, viz. Chains, Bracelets, &c. but the Hierusalem Targum takes these Jewels (as we translate it) to have been the golden Attire about the Heads of their Women.

Chains,] These are commonly thought to have been the Ornaments of their Arms. But they may as well be thought to have been used about their Legs, or their Necks.

And Bracelets,] These, it is apparent, were Ornaments about their Wrists or Hands, Gen. xxiv. 47. Ezek. xvi. 11.

Rings,] They were Ornaments of the Fingers, Gen. xli. 42. Esther iii. 10.

Ear-rings,] Nothing more common in those Countries, especially among the Midianites and Ishmaelites; as we find Judges viii. 24, 25, 26. where there is a different Word used to express this Ornament; yet the Word Hagil, here used, certainly signifying something round, and the Ornaments encompassing the Arms and other Parts being before-mentioned, it cannot well be thought to denote any thing, but Rings in their Ears. And so we translate it, Ezek. xvi. 12.

And Tablets,] Some Ornaments about the Breasts: See Exod. xxxv. 22.

To make an Atonement for our Souls before the LORD, &c.] For the Guilt of which Moses accused them, ver. 14. or any other, which they had contracted in the War.

Ver. 52. And all the Gold of the Offering that they offered up to the LORD, &c. was Sixteen thousand Seven hundred and Fifty Shekels.] It hath been observed before, that Three thousand Shekels made a Talent: and therefore their Offering amounted to above Five Talents and an half.

Ver. 53. For the Men of War had taken Spoil, every Man for himself.] Or rather, had taken the Spoil, mention'd ver. 12. of which Part of the Booty no Division was made between the Men of War and the People, ver. 26. but they kept it intirely to themselves, and now very gratefully made a Present of a very considerable Part of it to the LORD: see ver. 12. where the Word Spoil is used strictly for a Part of the Booty, distinct from the other two, the Captives and the Prey: and so it signifies here.

Ver. 54. And Moses and Eleazar the Priest took the Gold] This was said before, ver. 51. and therefore the Sense here is, that, having receiv'd it as an Offering to the LORD, they brought it into the Tabernacle of the Congregation; as it here follows in the Conclusion of this Verse.

Of the Captains of Thousands, and of Hundreds,] It was not their Oblation only, but the Oblation of every one of the Men of War, ver. 50, 51. But the Commanders received it from the common Soldiers, and presented it unto Moses and Eleazar, from the whole Host.

And brought it into the Tabernacle of the Congregation, for a Memorial for the Children of Israel before the LORD.] That God might be mindful of them, i. e. propitious to them, who were so grateful to him for his Benefits.

The Hierusalem Targum, upon Verse 50. fancies these Officers to have represented to Moses their great Chastity, when they made this Offering; saying, "We broke into the Chambers and " Closets of the Kings of Midian; and there we " saw their beautiful and charming Daughters,
" from whom we took the golden Ornaments
" upon their Heads, and in their Ears, and on " their Arms, their Fingers, and Breasts; but " did not cast a wanton Look upon one of them:
" And therefore they hoped this Oblation they " made would rise up for them, in the Day of " the Great Judgment, as a Reconciliation for " their Souls before the LORD."

C H A P. XXXII.

Ver. 1. NOW the Children of Reuben and the Children of Gad.] Here the Children of Reuben, who was Jacob's First-born, are mention'd in the first Place; but in the rest of the Chapter (ver. 2, 6, 25, 29, 31.) the Children of Gad are constantly first mentioned, because they were the first Movers of that which follows, as the Hebrews conjecture.

Had a very great Multitude of Cattle.] More than any other Tribe.

And when they saw the Land of Jazer,] Which was lately taken from the Amorites, after they had slain Sibon their King, ch. xxi. 32. This City and Country belonging to it, were near to the Spring of the River Arnon; and there is frequent Mention of it in the Book of Joshua, and in Isaiab xvi. 8, 9. and Jeremiab xlviii. 32.

And the Land of Gilead,] A noble Country, so called from the Mountain Gilead, which bounded it on the East, as Jordan did on the West, the River Jabbok on the South, and Mount Libanus on the North.

That, behold, the Place was a Place for Cattle;] Which in the fourth Verse is called a Land for Cattle, γῆν κτηνοτροφίαν, as the LXX translate it, fit for feeding of Cattle; being famous for Pasture and other grazing Ground. For Basban was in this Country, (Deut. iii. 12, 13.) where every one knows the largest and fattest Oxen were bred, Psal. xxii. 12. and Sheep also, Deut. xxxii. 14. and therefore is joined with Gilead, Micab vii. 14. which, being woody and mountainous in some Part of it, was no less famous for breeding Goats, (see Cantic. iv. 1.) which delight to brouze on such Trees as Mount Gilead abounded withal: see Bochartus in his Hierozyicon, P. i. lib. ii. cap. 51.

Ver. 2. The Children of Gad, and the Children of Reuben,] Neither here, nor in the foregoing Verse, is there any Mention of the Children of Manasseh, (half of which had their Portion in this Country) because they were neither the Contrivers nor Movers of this; but it is most probable had a Lot assigned them here, because these Countries were too much for the other two Tribes alone; and they of Manasseh had much Cattle also.

Came and spake unto Moses and to Eleazar the Priest, and unto the Princes of the Congregation, saying,] Who were wont often to assemble to dispatch publick Affairs, chap. xxvii. 2. xxx. 1.

Ver. 3. Ataroth] A Place which was Part of the Portion of Gad; as appears by ver. 34.

And Dibon,] This is mention'd as a Place in the Kingdom of Sibon, ch. xxi. 30. and was given to Gad also; as we read ver. 34.

And Jazer,] See ver. 1. and 35. where we find this also belonged unto Gad.

And Nimrab,] Called Beth-Nimrab, ver. 36. and given to the same Tribe. It is usual, I observ'd before, for the Hebrews to cut off the first Part of the Names of Places, for Brevity sake, (ch. xxv. 1.) but this Place is elsewhere called at Length Beth-Nimrab, Josh. xiii. 27. where it is mention'd as a Part of Sibon's Kingdom, and signifies as much as Domus Pardorum, an Habitation of Leopards: So Bochartus, who observes, that when both Isaiab xv. 6. and Jeremiab xlviii. 34. speak of the Waters of Nimrim, they mean this very Place, which was given to Gad; but in the Days of those Prophets, mentioned as in the Country of the Moabites; who had usurped upon their Neighbours the Gadites, and taken this Place from them, as they had done Jazer also; as appears from the Place above-mentioned, Isa. xvi. 8, 9. Jerem. xlviii. 34.

And Hesbbon,] The principal City of Sibon King of the Amorites, chap. xxi. 26, 27, 28. and was given to the Reubenites, xxxii. 37.

And Elealeb,] This is frequently mentioned with Hesbbon, as a Place adjoining to it, ver. 37. Isa. xvi. 9.

And Shebam,] Called also Shibmah, ver. 37. and Sibmah, Isa. xvi. 8, 9. Jerem. xlviii. 32. where it appears to have been a Place famous for Vines; and in the Days of that Prophet was fallen into the Hands of the Moabites, as were Hesbbon and Elealeb also.

And Nebo,] Which was given to the Reubenites, ver. 38.

And Beon,] There is no Mention of this Place any-where else; but it is probable it was Part of the Reubenites Portion, being mentioned together with other Places that were given unto them; and possibly may be the Place called Baal-Meon, ver. 38. which they changed into Beon, because of the Name of Baal; but the Moabites, when it fell into their Hands, restored part of its old Name, calling it Beth-meon, Jerem. xlviii. 23.

Ver. 4. Even the Country which the Lord smote before the Congregation of Israel,] And gave it to them for a Possession, as he intended to do the Land of Canaan: see chap. xxi. 24, 25.

Is a Land for Cattle, and thy Servants have Cattle.] Is very fit for us, ver. 2.

Ver. 5. Wherefore, said they, if we have found Grace in thy Sight,] A Phrase often used by humble Petitioners; even by Moses himself, when he speaks to God, chap. xi. 15.

Let this Land be given unto thy Servants for a Possession.] The Israelites in common possessed it hitherto, as belonging to them all, chap. xxi. ult. but they desire to have it assigned to them, as their particular Portion.

And bring us not over Jordan.] We desire nothing in the Land of Canaan.

Ver. 6. And Moses said unto the Children of Gad, and to the Children of Reuben, Shall your Brethren go to War,] Can you think it reasonable, that the rest of the Tribes should fight still for what they are to possess?

And shall ye sit here?] And you take up your Rest here, and settle in their Conquests, which they have already made?

Ver. 7. And wherfore discourage ye the Heart of the Children of Israel, from going over into the Land which the Lord hath given them?] He seems to have suspected that mere Cowardice, and a vile Love of Ease, made them desire to stay where they were, and go no further: Which ill Example might dishearten all the rest of their Brethren, and make them have the same Inclination to settle in the Land they had conquered; and not engage in a War with the Canaanites.

Ver. 8. Thus did your Fathers,] i. e. They disheartened all their Brethren.

When I sent them from Kadesh-Barnea to see the Land.] Chap. xiii. 3, 26.

Ver. 9. For when they went up unto the Valley of Eschol,] Men do not go up into a Valley; therefore the Meaning is, they went up to search the Country, (as it is said they did, chap. xiii. 21, 22.) and went on in their Search, till they came to the Valley or Brook of Eschol, (chap. xiii. 23.) where they cut down a Branch with a Cluster of Grapes, to shew what Fruit the Country afforded.

And saw the Land,] Had taken a full View of the Country.

They discouraged the Heart of the Children of Israel,] Represented the People and the Cities to be so strong, that they should not be able to deal with them, chap. xiii. 28, 29.

That they should not go into the Land which the LORD had given them.] And therefore persuaded them not to attempt to possess themselves of it. For they said expressly, We are not able to go against the People, for they are stronger than we, chap. xiii. 31.

Ver. 10. And the LORD's Anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying,] Ch. xiv. 21, 28.

Ver. 11. Surely none of the Men that came up out of Egypt, from twenty Years old and upward,] Chap. xiv. 22, 29, 35.

Shall see the Land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob,] Chap. xiv. 23.

Because they have not wholly followed me:] See there ver. 22.

Ver. 12. Save Caleb the Son of Jephunneh] Chap. xiv. 24.

The Kenezite,] A great deal hath been said by many, to prove that Caleb is called a Kenezite, because his Father's Name was Kenaz. And this they prove, because Othniel's Father was Kenaz, and he was Caleb's Brother, Josh. xv. 17. his younger Brother, Judg. i. 13. iii. 9. So that their Father must have two Names, Kenaz and Jephunneh. But it is very strange, if this be true, that Caleb is no-where called the Son of Kenaz, but constantly the Son of Jephunneh (even there where Othniel is just before called the Son of Kenaz, 1 Chron. iv. 13, 15.); nor is Othniel any-where called the Son of Jephunneh, but always of Kenaz. And indeed there is a Demonstration against this Opinion; for Othniel married Caleb's Daughter, which by the Law of Moses was utterly unlawful, whatsoever the Practice might have been before the Law was given. Therefore others think it more probable that Othniel was one of his Brother's younger Sons, (for Uncles and Nephews are often called Brethren, as Abraham and Lot were) and that from this Brother, whose Name was Kenaz, Caleb is also called a Kenezite: But this is very absurd; for the Name of Kenezzi in the Hebrew, denotes the Descendants from one, who gave this Denomination to the Family; which one Brother could not do to another. It is most probable therefore, that Kenaz was some common Ancestor both of Othniel and Caleb, from whom Othniel's Father took also his Name. Accordingly we find Jephunneh called a Kenezite in Josh. xiv. 14. where it is said, that Hebron became the Inheritance of Caleb the Son of Jephunneh the Kenezite.

And Joshua the Son of Nun: for they have wholly followed the LORD.] Fully, chap. xiv. 24, 30, 38.

Ver. 13. And the LORD's Anger was kindled against Israel:] He had said this before, ver. 10. but repeats it again, to make them the more sensible of a Thing that was done Thirty-eight Years ago; and to deter them from giving him the like Provocation.

And he made them wander in the Wilderness forty Years, until all the Generation that had done Evil in the Sight of the LORD, was consumed.] Chap. xiv. 31, 32, 33. xxvi. 64, 65.

Ver. 14. And, behold,] Mark what I say.

Ye are risen up in your Father's stead, an Increase of sinful Men, to augment yet the fierce Anger of the LORD towards Israel.] Are multiplied to as great a Number as your Fathers, only to succeed them in their Sins, and thereby bring down still more heavy Punishments upon the Nation.

Ver. 15. For if ye turn away from after him,] As your Fathers did; who refused to go and possess the good Land which he had bestowed upon them.

He will yet again leave them in the Wilderness.] Lead them back again into the Desert, where your Fathers perished; and there forsake you.

And ye shall destroy all this People.] Who following your Example, will refuse to go over Jordan (ver. 5.) to take Possession of the Land of Canaan.

Ver. 16. And they came near unto him,] As Petitioners are wont to do, when they are assured of their Integrity, and hope to obtain their Request, Gen. xiv. 19.

And said, We will build Sheepfolds here for our Cattle,] There are five Words in the Hebrew Language for Folds for Sheep and Cattle; all signifying a Place fenced in, that they might lie safely, and be defended from wild Beasts. And so this Word gederā plainly imports: see Bochartus in his Hierozoic. P. i. lib. i. cap. 45.

And Cities for our little ones.] Which stood in need only of repairing and fortifying (ver. 17.) for they already dwelt in those Cities of the Amorites, chap. xxi. 25.

Ver. 17. But we ourselves will go ready armed before the Children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their Place.] That is, a considerable Number of them, as many as should be thought necessary, (Deut. iii. 18.) in all Forty thousand, Josh. iv. 12.

And our little ones shall dwell in the fenced Cities,] Where it was necessary to leave some Men to guard them from their bad Neighbours, and to take Care of their Cattle.

Because of the Inhabitants of the Land.] That is, the Moabites, who were the ancient Owners of this Country (chap. xxi. 26.) and the Edomites, who had shewed no Good-will to the Israelites, as they passed through the Wilderness.

Ver. 18. We will not return unto our Houses, until the Children of Israel have inherited every Man his Inheritance.] Be settled in the Possession of the Land of Canaan, as we desire to be in this Country.

Ver. 19. For we will not inherit with them on yonder Side Jordan, or forward.] We will not desire any Share in the Country beyond Jordan, tho' it lie near to us; nor in that Country which lies still further Westward.

Because

Because our Inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward.] We look upon this as our Inheritance (with which we shall be fully satisfied) here in the Land of Gilead: Which lay eastward of Jordan, and of the Land of Canaan.

Ver. 20. And Moses said unto them, If ye will do this Thing,] Be as good as your Word.

If ye will go armed before the LORD to War,] To go before the LORD was to go before the Ark; which was the Symbol of God's Presence, over which his Glory resided. And it is to be observed, that these two Tribes, Reuben and Gad, (together with Simeon) always lay encamped before the Sanctuary; as appears from the second Chapter of this Book, ver. 10, 14, 15, 16, 17. And accordingly, when the Camp removed, they marched immediately before it; as is particularly noted, chap. x. 18, 19, 20, 21. So that here he requires them only to hold their usual Place, when they went to the War against the Canaanites; and accordingly it is expressly said, they did (together with half the Tribe of Manasseh, who were joined with them) pass over before the LORD unto Battle, Josh. iv. 12, 13.

Ver. 21. And will go all of you] As many as shall be required, and can be spared, ver. 17.

Armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his Enemies from before him.] Not only bring us into Canaan, but continue with us, till we have expelled the Inhabitants of that Country: Which he encourages them to undertake, by representing the Canaanites as the Enemies of the LORD, who would therefore fight for them.

Ver. 22. And the Land be subdued before the LORD;] By this Expression, and that in the foregoing Words, it appears that the Ark was carried along with them to the War every-where, till it was ended; as it was when it begun, at the taking of Jericho, Josh. vi. 6, 7, &c.

Then afterward ye shall return, and be guiltless before the LORD, and before Israel, and this Land shall be your Possession] Not only be free from all Blame in this Desire, but have what you desire.

Before the LORD.] By his Order and Appointment.

Ver. 23. But if ye will not do so,] If this be not your Intention; or if you go back from your Word.

Behold,] Observe what I say.

Ye have sinned against the LORD; and be sure your Sin will find you out.] Your Guilt is exceeding great, and shall be most certainly punished as it deserves.

Ver. 24. Build ye Cities for your little ones, and Folds for your Sheep, &c.] As for the rest of their Proposals, about their Children and Cattle, he consented to them without any Exception.

Ver. 25. And the Children of Gad, and the Children of Reuben, spake unto Moses, saying,] The Word for spake, in the Hebrew, being jomer, in the Singular Number, instead of jomru, in the Plural, their Doctors take it for an Indication, that some one principal Person spake in the Name of all the rest. But there is no need of this; for the Singular Number in this Language is often used for the Plural; and they never spake all of them together, but some one in the Name of their Brethren. And it had been better, if they had observed, that this signifies one and all (as we now speak) were of the same Mind.

Thy Servants will do as my Lord commandeth.] And as they themselves had proposed, ver. 17.

Ver. 26. Our little ones, our Wives, our Flocks, and all our Cattle, shall be there in the Cities of Gilead.] Here they promise to leave all that was dear to them in this Country, and go to serve their Brethren.

Ver. 27. But thy Servants will pass over every Man armed for War, &c.] We ourselves will go, and fight for our Brethren. It hath been often said (ver. 17, 21.) that this doth not signify, all the Men of War among them should go, but as many as could be spared, and as were thought sufficient: For it is manifest, the far greater half of them were left in this Country to defend their Wives and Children, and look after their Flocks and Herds; as will appear by computing all the Men of War that were found in the Tribes of Gad and of Reuben, which were above Four-score and Four thousand (chap. xxvi. 7, 18.) to which if we add half the Tribe of Manasseh, (who were, in all, above Fifty-two thousand) there were much above an Hundred thousand Men, able to bear Arms; and not above Forty thousand of them marched into Canaan; as was before observed.

Ver. 28. So concerning them, Moses commanded Eleazar the Priest, and Joshua the Son of Nun, and the chief Fathers of the Tribes of the Children of Israel.] He left this in Charge with the principal Persons, who had the Government of Affairs under him; particularly Joshua, who was not unmindful of it, but remembered these Tribes what Moses had said, when he was about to attempt the Conquest of Canaan, Josh. i. 13, 14, &c.

Ver. 29. And Moses said unto them, If the Children of Gad, and the Children of Reuben, will pass with you over Jordan, &c.] He repeats to these great Men, who were to see it executed, what he had said to the Gadites and Reubenites themselves, ver. 21, 22.

Then ye shall give them the Land of Gilead for a Possession.] They had not a Right to it, till they had performed the Condition upon which it was granted, viz. till their Brethren were in Possession of their Inheritance in the Land of Canaan.

Ver. 30. But if they will not pass over with you armed,] Perform their Promise, ver. 17.

They shall have Possessions among you in the Land of Canaan.] Take what falls to their Share there; and this Country be disposed of, as God shall order.

Ver. 31. And the Children of Gad, and the Children of Reuben, answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy Servants, so will we do.] They confirm what they had promised to Moses, ver. 25. and here take all that he had said, as spoken by the Order of God, who bestowed this Land upon them, on the Condition often mentioned.

Ver. 32. We will pass over armed before the LORD into the Land of Canaan.] This they offered at first of themselves, ver. 17. and solemnly promised, when Moses accepted their Proposal, ver. 27. and again here ratify and confirm it before Eleazar and Joshua, and all the Princes, ver. 28.

[That the Possession of our Inheritance] which we have desired to have for our Inheritance.

[On this side Jordan] They were now in the Land of Gilead, and so might properly call it on this side Jordan; but when they were in the Land of Canaan, it was said to be on that side Jordan.

[May be ours.] Settled upon us, and our Posterity.

Ver. 33. And Moses gave unto them] Not an absolute Grant, but a conditional; if they did as they engaged, ver. 29, 30, 31, &c.

[Even to the Children of Gad, and to the Children of Reuben, and unto half the Tribe of Manasseh the Son of Joseph.] This half Tribe is not mentioned before, because they did not put in any Claim, till they saw how those of Gad and Reuben would succeed in their Petition: Which being granted, it is likely that thereupon they represented also what Store of Cattle they had; and that the Country would be more than enough for those who had desired it. This being found to be true, Moses thought fit to give them a Portion in it, rather than any other; because the Children of Machir, the Son of Manasseh, had by their Valour subdued part of this Country, ver. 39. Josh. xvii. 1.

[The Kingdom of Sibon King of the Amorites, and the Kingdom of Og King of Bashan] ch. xxi. 24, 29. Which were the first Countries that the Israelites possessed; and were the first that were carried captive out of their Land, 2 Kings xv. 29.

[The Land with the Cities thereof in the Coasts, even the Cities of the Country round about.] The Land with the Cities within such a Compass or Limits, and all the Towns within that Circuit.

Ver. 34. And the Children of Gad built Dibon, and Ataroth.] Repaired and fortified these Towns, which are mentioned before, ver. 3. for they were not destroyed, but only their Inhabitants, Deut. ii. 34, 35. and if they had, there was not Time now to rebuild them. Thus Jeroboam is said to have built Shechem, 1 Kings xii. 25. which was a City before, but gone to Decay; and Azariah to have built Elat, 2 Kings xiv. 22. which he restoreth to Judah, as a City formerly belonging to them.

[And Aroer.] A City of the Amorites, upon the Brink of the River Arnon; as Moses tells us, Deut. ii. 36. iii. 12. iv. 48. It formerly belonged to the Moabites; but was taken from them by Sibon.

Ver. 35. And Ataroth, Shophan, and Jaazer, and Jogbebab.] We do not read of any of these Towns elsewhere, but only of Jaazer; which seems to be that called Jazer, ver. 3.

Ver. 36. And Beth-Nimrab] Called, ver. 3. Nimrab for Shortness sake; as (it may be further observed) Jemini is put for Benjemini, Ester ii. 5. Sheba for Beer-sheba, Josh. xix. 2. where we find these two mentioned; but they do not signify two several Cities, but are two Names for one and the same City; as if he had said, Beer-sheba, which is also called Sheba. This is clear to a Demonstration; for otherwise there would be more than thirteen Cities in the Tribe of Simeon, contrary to ver. 6. of that Chapter.

[And Beth-haran.] A Place, some say, between Dibon and Jordan.

[Fenced Cities; and Folds for Sheep.] All these Cities the Children of Gad fortified, and built Folds for Sheep in the Pastures near to them.

Ver. 37. And the Children of Reuben built] Repaired and fortified; as I said, ver. 34.

[And Kirjathaim.] A Place where a Giant-like People formerly dwelt, called Emims, Gen. xiv. 5. who were expelled by the Moabites, as they were by the Amorites.

Ver. 38. And Nebo.] This City is mentioned in Jerem. xlviii. 1. when it was fallen again into the Possession of the Moabites, as was also Kirjathaim. It seems to have been near Dibon, being mentioned together with it, Isa. xv. 2. At least there were in these Places two famous Temples; for the Destruction of which, the Prophet represents the People making Lamentation. So the LXX. ἀπλεῖται ὁ Νεβὼν, ὁ ὁ βῶμ' αὐτοῦ, Nebo is destroyed, where your Altar is. And Hesychius faith of Διβὼν, (i. e. Dibon) that it was τῆς ἐν αὐτῇ ἱερῆς τοῦ Μοαβιτῶν, a Place where a Temple of the Moabites was built. And St. Hierom suspects, that there was an Oracle at this Place; the Word Nebo importing Prophecy, or Divination, as he speaks.

[And Baal-Meon.] Another Place, where it is likely Baal was worshipped; which made them change the Names of these Places, as it here follows.

[Their Names being changed;] For Nebo, as well as Baal, was the Name of a God; as we learn from Isaiah xli. 1. and seems to have been an Affyrian Deity; there being Footsteps of it in the Names of several great Men there; such as Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzaradan, and many others. And it is not likely, that they therefore changed the Names of these Cities into some other, because they would abolish all Remainders of Idolatry in this Country, according to the Precept Exod. xxiii. 13. that they should not take the Name of their Gods into their Mouth: but notwithstanding this, they still retained their ancient Names; as appears from Josh. xiii. 17. Ezek. xxv. 9. so hard it is to alter any thing for the better.

[And Shibmah.] See ver. 3.

[And gave other Names unto the Cities which they builded.] If this refer to all the Cities here mentioned, it is manifest they either retained, or recovered their former Names: For we read of them all in future Times; particularly in the xvth and xviii Chapters of Isaiah; and Kirjathaim is mentioned in the Place I now quoted out of Ezekiel.

Ver. 39. And the Children of Machir, the Son of Manasseh, went to Gilead, and took it.] Here Gilead is used in a strict Sense, not so largely as before, (ver. 1, 26, 29.) where it is taken for all the Country on that side Jordan where Gilead was; but here, for a Part of it about Mount Gilead. This is plain from the next Verse; and Gilead the Son of Machir, one would think, was the Person that took it, Josh. xvii. 1.

Ver. 40. And Moses gave Gilead unto Machir, the Son of Manasseh;] i. e. To the Children of Machir, Machir, (for he was dead long ago) who had a considerable Portion of that half of the Land of Gilead, which was given to the half Tribe of Manasseh. For one half was given to the Reubenites and Gadites, and the other half to them, Deut. iii. 12, 13. where Gilead signifies all that Country properly so called; neither so much as the whole Territory, which these Tribes demanded, ver. 1. nor so little as was given to Machir, Deut. iii. 15. where Moses says, And I gave Gilead unto Machir, i. e. to that Family of Manasseh, which were properly called Machirites Numb. xxvi. 29. and to that Family descended from his Son, which from him were called Gileadites. For as Manasseh had only this Son Machir, so Machir had only Gilead; but he had many, chap. xxvi. 30, 31, 32. who all raised Families. And as to the Machirites (and I suppose the Gileadites) was given a Portion in this Country, Josb. xiii. 29, 30, &c. so Josbua gave to the rest an Inheritance in the Land of Canaan, chap. xvii. 2. And he gives a Reason in the foregoing Verse, why he gave Gilead and Basban to the Posterity of Machir, because they were a warlike People, inheriting their Father's Valour, who was a Man of War, and therefore fit to be placed in the Frontiers of that Country.

Ver. 41. And Jair the Son of Manasseh, &c.] One of the Posterity of Manasseh, by his Mother's Side: For he was the Grandson of Gilead, the Son of Machir, by his Daughter, 1 Chron. ii. 21, 22. but his Father was of the Tribe of Judah. It seems he joined with the Children of Machir in their Expedition against Gilead, (mentioned ver. 39.) and was so successful, that he took several small Towns in that Country, and so had his Inheritance among the Children of Manasseh, on this side Jordan, where they now were. There were Threescore of them in the whole, which were afterward called Cities, Josb. xiii. 30. 1 Kings iv. 13. but he had only Twenty-three for his Possession, 1 Chron. ii. 22, 23.

And called them Havoth-Jair.] That is, the Habitations of Jair. For Havab is a Dwelling, as Bochartus observes in his Phaleg. Lib. iv. cap. 29. And among the Arabians the Word Havoth properly signifies many Tents orderly disposed in a Ring or Circle; which in those Countries made that which we call a Village. For Hava in their Language signifies to compass. The same he observes in his Hieroicoicon. P. i. Lib. ii. c. 44. p. 466.

Ver. 42. And Nobab] Who he was we find in no other Place; but an eminent Person, no doubt, in some of the Families of the Manassites; either of the Machirites or the Gileadites. For they only, as I take it, inherited on this Side Jordan.

Went and took Kenath, and the Villages thereof;] At the same Time, I suppose, that Jair took the Towns abovementioned; of which this was one, 1 Chron. ii. 23. But though Jair was the chief Conductor in that Expedition, yet he kept, as I said, only Twenty-three Towns to himself: the rest were given to them who accompanied him, of whom, it is probable, Nobab was one.

And called it Nobab after his own Name.] But it retained its old Name also: for St. Hierom says, in his time there was a City called Canatba, in the Region of Trachonitis, not far from Bosra.

Thus this Country being settled upon these two Tribes and an half, the Land of Canaan was divided, by God's Command, for an Inheritance to the remaining nine Tribes, and the other half of the Tribe of Manasseh, Josb. xiii. 7.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Ver. 1. THESE are the Journeys of the Children of Israel, which went forth out of the Land of Egypt,] A brief Recapitulation of the Travels of the Children of Israel through the Wilderness; whereby the wonderful Providence of God over them appears, in their Protection and Preservation, from the Time they departed out of Egypt, till they came to the Borders of the Land of Canaan.

With their Armies,] For they marched in an orderly Manner, as Armies do. See Exod. xii. 41, 51. xiii. 18.

Under the Hand of Moses and Aaron.] By whom they were conducted, as the Ministers of God, Exod. xii. 1, 28, 50.

Ver. 2. And Moses wrote their Goings out according to their Journeys,] Every Removal which they made from the Place where they were, unto another whither they journeyed.

By the Commandment of the Lord.] This may refer either to their Journeys, (which were by God's Commandment, chap. x. 13.) or rather to Moses's Writing this Epitome of their Travels; of which God ordered him to give a distinct Account: Which was no unnecessary Work, but most useful to Posterity; there being no History extant in the World, as David Chytraeus well observes, (except that of the Birth, Life, Death, and Resurrection of Christ) which contains so many wonderful Instances of Divine Providence, as this of bringing the Children of Israel out of Egypt, and leading them through the Red-Sea, and through the Wilderness; concerning which Maimonides hath an excellent Discourse, in his third Part of More Nevochim, cap. 50. the Substance of which is this; That it being impossible any Miracles should continue throughout all Generations, due Care should be taken that the Memory of them be not lost, but faithfully preserved by the History and Narration of them in future Times. Now there being no greater Miracle than the Subsistence of the Children of Israel in the Desert for Forty Years; a Desert full of Scorpions and Serpents, destitute of Water, uninhabited, through which no Man had been wont to pass, (as Jeremiah speaks, chap. ii. 6.) where they eat no Bread, nor drank Wine, or strong Drink, Deut. xxix. 6, &c. God would have the particular Places set down distinctly where they pitched in that howling Wilderness; that all Men might be satisfied (who would take the Pains to examine Things) by what a marvellous Providence such a Multitude of People were fed every Day, for Forty Years together; and none might be able to cavil, and say, that they travelled through a Country good enough; and pitched in habitable Places, where they might plough, and sow, and reap; or where they might have Herbs and Roots for their Sustenance; or where Manna ordinarily came down from the Clouds for Mens Support.

And these are their Journeys, according to their Goings out.] As if he had said, Having received this Commandment from GOD, this is a true and exact Account, which here follows, of their Travels from Place to Place.

Ver. 3. And they departed from Rameses,] See Exod. xii. 37. Here in all likelihood they sacrificed the Paschal Lamb, and were preserved from the destroying Angel; which made this Place very remarkable: for they seem to have been all summoned hither, to meet here as in a common Rendezvous (as they now speak) to be ready to march away, when GOD gave the Word of Command.

In the first Month, on the Fifteenth Day of the first Month: on the Morrow after the Passover,] Which they had kept in Egypt on the Fourteenth, Exod. xii. 6.

The Children of Israel went out of Egypt with an high Hand,] Exod. xiv. 8.

In the Sight of all the Egyptians:] Who thrust them out, Exod. xii. 39.

Ver. 4. For the Egyptians buried all their First-born,] They were so terrified with the sudden Death of all their First-born, that they pressed them to be gone, lest they should be slain also, Exod. xii. 33. And were so employed in mourning for them, and giving them decent Burial, that they thought not of pursuing the Israelites till some Days after.

Which the LORD had smitten among them.] At Midnight, between the fourteenth and fifteenth Days, Exod. xii. 29.

Upon their Gods also the LORD executed Judgments.] Which still more astonished them, Exod. xii. 12. xviii. 11. 2 Sam. vii. 23. just as he did with Babylon afterwards, Isa. xxi. 9.

Ver. 5. And the Children of Israel removed from Rameses, and pitched in Succoth.] Exod. xii. 37. Here they received the Command to set apart all the First-born unto the LORD, in memory of GOD's sparing them when he slew all the First-born of the Egyptians, Exod. xiii. 1, 2, 12, 13, &c.

Ver. 6. And they departed from Succoth, and pitched in Etham, &c.] See Exod. xiii. 20. where it immediately follows, That they were conducted hither by a miraculous Cloud, which ever after led them in all their Journeys.

Ver. 7. And they removed from Etham, and turned again unto Pi-babiroth,] So it is expressly recorded Exod. xiv. 2. Hither they were led, on purpose that they might see the wonderful Power and Goodness of GOD, in a Place where they had high Mountains on each Side of them, and the Army of Pharaoh behind them, and the Red Sea before them; through which GOD made them a Passage, rather than let them fall again under the Egyptian Tyranny. Here is also the Singular Number for the Plural, in the Word turned again (as was observed before in another Word, chap. xxxii. 25.); but the Observation of the Hebrew Doctors upon it, seems to be frivolous. That with one Heart they did what Moses commanded.

Ver. 8. And they departed from before Pi-babiroth, and passed through the midst of the Sea,] Exod.

xiv. 23. Where Pharaoh and his Host were drowned; as they could not but call to Mind when they read this brief History: Which, it might be expected, would also call to Remembrance their own Distrust of GOD, notwithstanding which he most graciously delivered them, Exod. xiv. 11, 12, &c.

Into the Wilderness, and went three Days Journey in the Wilderness of Etham,] Called, in Exod. xv. 22. the Wilderness of Shur: where they were very much distressed for want of Water.

And pitched in Marah.] Where GOD obliged them by a new Miracle, in making the bitter Water sweet, Exod. xv. 23, 25.

Ver. 9. And they removed from Marah, and came unto Elim, and in Elim were twelve Fountains of Water, &c.] See Exod. xv. ult.

Ver. 10. And they removed from Elim, and encamped by the Red-Sea.] Not by that Part of it, where they lately came out of it; but by a more Southerly Part of it, where it bends towards Arabia. For the Red-Sea, which Ptolemy calls the Arabian Gulph, runs a long Way, like the Adriatick, now called the Gulph of Venice, or the Baltic Sea, as David Chytraeus observes; who compares these three together, as much of a Length; and all in some Places broader, and some narrower. This Station is not mentioned in the Book of Exodus.

Ver. 11. And they removed from the Red-Sea, and encamped in the Wilderness of Sin.] Exod. xvi. 1. where Manna first began to rain upon them, with which GOD fed them Forty Years.

Ver. 12. And they took their Journey out of the Wilderness of Sin, and encamped in Dopbkab.] This and the next Station (Alush) are not mentioned in Exodus; because nothing remarkable (it is supposed) fell out in these two Places, as there did in the next; and they made no long Stay there.

Ver. 13. And they departed from Dopbkab, and encamped in Alush.] The Jewish Doctors find something remarkable here, though Moses saith nothing of it. For as the Sabbath was first commanded at Marah, which was their fifth Station, so it was first observed here at Alush, as they fancy, which was their Tenth. And more than that, this was the only Sabbath in their Opinion, which they exactly kept; the very next being profaned. See Selden, lib. iii. de Jure Nat. & Gentium, &c. cap. 11. & lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 1. The Author of Sepher Cosri saith, the ancient Tradition is, That at this Place the Manna first descended, P. 2. sect. 20.

Ver. 14. And they removed from Alush, and encamped at Rephidim,] Exod. xvii. 1.

Where was no Water for the People to drink.] And thereby an Occasion given to the Almighty Goodness to shew his wonderful Power, in bringing Water out of a Rock for them, Exod. xvii. 5, 6. And here also Amalek lay in wait for Israel, in the way when they came out of Egypt, 1 Sam. xv. 2. and smote some that lagged behind, Deut. xxv. 18. but were vanquished by Joshua in a pitched Battle, Exod. xvii. 8, 9, &c. And here Jethro also came to see Moses, and gave him Advice about the Government of the People, with more Ease both to himself and them, Exod. xviii.

Ver. 15. And they departed from Rephidim, and pitched in the Wilderness of Sinai.] Exod. xix. 1, 2.

This

This was forty-seven Days after they came from Rameses, on the first Day of the third Month; three Days after which, (viz. on the fiftieth Day after they came out of Egypt) GoD gave them his Law from Mount Sinai; where Moses was called up to him, and staid with him twice forty Days; and was instructed there how to make the Tabernacle, and set it up when it was made, with all the Furniture belonging to it. All sorts of Sacrifices were ordered while they remained in this Place; Priests consecrated; Laws given about clean and unclean Things; and about Marriages, and Feasts, and the Year of Jubilee, with several other Things, mentioned in the Book of Leviticus. Here also the People were numbred; their Encampment ordered; a second Passover kept; Laws given about the Water of Jealousy and the Nazarites, with several other Matters: And then, after they had lain here eleven Months and twenty Days, they are commanded to leave this famous Station; the most remarkable of all other, Numb. x. 11, 12.

Ver. 16. And they removed from the Desert of Sinai, and pitched at Kibroth-battaavab.] A Place in the Wilderness of Paran, three Days Journey from Mount Sinai, Numb. x. 33. xi. 34. where there was a dreadful Slaughter of the People, that wantonly despised Manna, and lusted after Flesh. Yet here GoD was pleased to vouchsafe to send his Spirit upon the seventy Elders, for the Assistance of Moses.

Ver. 17. And they departed from Kibroth-battaavab, and encamped at Hazeroth.] See chap. xi. 35. Where Miriam was punished for her Envy at Moses, chap. xii. 1, 10.

Ver. 18. And they departed from Hazeroth, and pitched at Ritmab.] A Place also in the Wilderness of Paran, as appears from this Book, chap. xii. 16. and was not far from Kadesh-barnea, from whence the Spies were sent to search out the Land of Canaan: see chap. xiii. 26. In which Place they lay a long time, Deut. i. 46.

Ver. 19. And they departed from Ritmab, and pitched at Rimmon-Parez.] This and the following Stages are no-where else mentioned; and seem to have all been in the Wilderness of Paran before spoken of; which was a very long Tract of Ground, from Elana, a Port in the Arabian Gulph, to Kadesh-barnea; which, as David Chytræus computes it, was thirty German Miles.

Ver. 20. And they departed from Rimmon-Parez, and pitched in Libnab.] This and the rest to ver. 31. are Places of which, as I said, we no-where else read, and so can give no Account of them. They were all uninhabited, and out of the Road of all Travellers; and perhaps had no Names, till they were given them by the Israelites; who encamped in so many various Places, (sometimes in Mountains, as appears from ver. 23. and sometimes in the Plain) that they might be taught, that GoD was alike present every-where to protect, defend and provide for them; even there where no Man dwelt. The Jews made this Use of their Travels, here recorded by Moses, thro' so many unknown Places,* by which he brought them at last to Canaan; to keep up their Spirits under this long Captivity (as they call it) wherein they now are, and have wandered uncertainly, from Mountain to Mountain, from Kingdom to Kingdom, from Banishment to Banishment, (as they themselves speak) till their Messiah come to redeem them: Which he will do, when their Eyes are opened to see what one of their ancient Rabbins (Moses Hadarschan) hath told them, as he is quoted by Paulus Fagius, That the Redeemer was born before him who reduced Israel into this last Captivity.

Ver. 31. And they departed from Moseroth, and pitched in Bene-Jaakan.] In Deut. x. 6. Moses seems to say the quite contrary, that they took their Journey from Beeroth of the Children of Jaakan, to Mosera. But there he may be thought to speak of a different Place, as Drusus notes upon those Words: Or if he doth not, it is no Wonder if, while they wandered in this tedious Wilderness, they went backward and forward, from Bene-Jaakan to Moseroth, which he mentions in Deuteronomy; and from Moseroth back again to Bene-Jaakan, which he mentions here.

Ver. 32. And they removed from Bene-Jaakan, and encamped at Hor-bagidgad.] This Place was also called Gudgodab, Deut. x. 7. if Moses speaks there of the same Places he doth here.

Ver. 33. And they went from Hor-bagidgad, and pitched in Jotbathab.] Called Deut. x. 7. Jotbath.

Ver. 34. And they removed from Jotbathab, and encamped at Ebronab.] All their Removals mentioned from ver. 16. to this and the next Place, are an Account of their Wanderings in the Wilderness, from the second Year after their coming out of Egypt till the fortieth; in which Time all the Congregation, above twenty Years of Age, were consumed, and buried in some Part or other of this great Desert.

Ver. 35. And they departed from Ebronab, and encamped at Ezion-gaber.] A Place on the Red-Sea, unto which they were brought before they ended their Travels, 1 Kings ix. 26. xxii. 48. It had its Name from the snagged Rocks, like to the Back-bone, which stretched out a great way on that Shore, as Bochart observes: Which Rocks made this Part so dangerous, that it was forsaken in After-times, and Elab frequented as a safer Harbour: see lib. i. Canaan, cap. 44. It is not recorded how long they remained in any of these Places; but it is likely a considerable Time in some of them; for they spent Thirty-eight Years in these Removals.

Ver. 36. And they removed from Ezion-Gaber, and pitched in the Wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh.] See chap. xx. 1. He doth not mean Kadesh-barnea, which was on the Borders of Canaan; but another Kadesh in the Skirts of this Wilderness, towards the South, not far from the Port I now mentioned (which the Greeks call Elana) on the Border of Edom; where Miriam died, and where Water was brought out of a Rock: see chap. xx. 8, 14, 16.

Ver. 37. And they removed from Kadesh, and pitched in Mount Hor, in the Edge of the Land of Edom.] See chap. xx. 22.

Ver. 38. And Aaron the Priest went up into Mount Hor at the Commandment of the LORD.] Chap. xx. 23, 24, 27. Deut. xxxii. 50. The Hebrew Doctors are too conceited in their Observation, that because it is said of him, and of Moses, that they died at pi (or the Mouth) of the LORD, the LORD took took their Souls out of their Bodies with a Kiss. But Maimonides endeavours to make a sober Sense of this, by making their Meaning to be, that they expired with the transcendent Pleasure of divine Love, More Nevoch. P. iii. cap. 51.

And died there in the fortieth Year after the Children of Israel were come out of the Land of Egypt, in the first Day of the fifth Month.] A few Months before his Brother Moses.

Ver. 39. And Aaron was an Hundred and Twenty and three Years old, when he died in Mount Hor.] He was just Eighty and three Years old, when he and Moses first went with a Message to Pharaoh, Exod. vii. 7. By which it appears, that they were not long in working all the Miracles in Egypt, before they brought the People forth; for now Forty Years after, he was but an Hundred and twenty-three Years old.

Ver. 40. And King Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the South, in the Land of Canaan,] See cb. xxi. 1.

Heard of the Coming of the Children of Israel.] Had News brought him, that the Israelites were coming towards his Country; whereupon he went out to oppose them; and GOD gave them (as we read there) a glorious Victory over him. This shews that Moses intended, in the Recital of all these Places where they had been, to bring to Remembrance the most remarkable Passages of GOD's Providence over them; some of which he expressly sets down.

Ver. 41. And they departed from Mount Hor, and pitched in Zalmonab.] We read in the 21st Chapter of this Book, ver. 4. that they journeyed from Hor, to compass the Land of Edom; but are not told there, where they pitched; which is here supply'd, the Name of the Place being Zalmonab; which carries in it the Signification of an Image; and therefore here, perhaps, the brazen Serpent was erected. See chap. xxi. 9.

Ver. 42. And they departed from Zalmonab, and pitched in Punon.] Where Bochartus rather thinks the brazen Serpent was set up; because after Moses hath given us the History of that, he saith, they set forward and pitched in Oboth, chap. xxi. 10. which was the Place of their Abode next to Punon, as it here follows, Hierozyic. P. i. lib. iii. cap. 12. in the latter End of it.

Ver. 43. And they departed from Punon, and pitched in Oboth.] See chap. xxi. 10.

Ver. 44. And they departed from Oboth, and pitched in Ije-abarim, in the Border of Moab.] See chap. xxi. 11. This Name is translated in the Margin, Heaps of Abarim; which may possibly signify many Heaps of Stones, which lay not far from the Mountains of Abarim, ver. 47.

Ver. 45. And they departed from Iim, and pitched in Dibon-gad.] Here half the Name of the first Place is omitted; as is usual when the Names are long. This may seem not to agree with chap. xxi. 12. where it is said they removed from thence, and pitched in the Valley of Zared; near unto which, in all Probability, was this Dibon-gad: see what I have noted there.

Ver. 46. And they removed from Dibon-gad, and encamped in Almon-Diblathaim.] See chap. xxi. 13.

Ver. 47. And they removed from Almon-Diblathaim, and pitched in the Mountains of Abarim before Nebo.] We read no-where, when they came to this Mansion: But, it is plain, they were not far from it, when GOD bad Moses go into one of these Mountains, and take a View of Canaan. See chap. xxvii. 12. But this followed their last Mansion; and therefore it is most likely this is the Place mentioned, chap. xxi. 20. See there; where I have observed other Places mentioned, ver. 18, 19. of which there is no Notice taken in this Catalogue. But they seem to have been Places where they only touch'd, and made no Encampment in them; which is the Thing of which Moses here gives an Account.

Ver. 48. And they departed from the Mountains of Abarim, and pitched in the Plains of Moab, &c.] See chap. xxii. 1.

Ver. 49. And they pitched by Jordan, from Beth-Jesimoth.] A Place where there was a Temple, in all likelihood, to some Deity: For so Beth denotes in many Compositions; as Beth-Peor (the House, or Temple of Baal on the Top of Peor) Beth-Astaroth, and Beth-Baal-berith, Judg. ix. 4. And Beth-Shemesh is often mentioned; where the Sun was worshipp'd. And possibly Jesimoth may be the same with Jesimon, chap. xxi. 20.

Even unto Abel-Shittim, &c.] Called simply Shittim, chap. xxv. 1. which some fancy had the Name of Abel added to it (which signifies Mourning) because of that Lamentation which was made there, by some for the grievous Sin there committed; and by others, for the heavy Punishment inflict'd in that Place. But it seems to have been anciently called Abel-Shittim, before this Time: see there.

Ver. 50. And the LORD spake unto Moses in the Plains of Moab, &c.] After he had prepared them for their Entrance into Canaan, he ordered the first and principal Work they should there undertake.

Ver. 51. Speak unto the Children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye are passed over Jordan, into the Land of Canaan,] Accordingly Moses did deliver this Command unto them, Deut. vii. 1, 2.

Ver. 52. Then ye shall drive out all the Inhabitants of the Land from before you,] Not suffer them to dwell in the Land any longer; but either destroy, or expel them; because they were abominable Idolaters, devoted to Extermination, (Exod. xxiii. 33. Deut. xx. 16, 17, 18.) by whom the Israelites would have been in Danger to be corrupted, if they were not rooted out.

And destroy all their Pictures.] Or their Temples, or Houses of Worship, as Onkelos interprets it. But others (particularly the Hierusalem Targum) understand it of the Idols or Statues set up in those Temples; or some Representations of their Gods. See concerning the Hebrew Word Maskeb, Lev. xxvi. 1.

And destroy their molten Images,] Exod. xxiii. 24. xxxiv. 13. for if they suffer'd them to remain, they might be inticed to worship them. These were Idols, perhaps, in publick Places, or private Houses, out of their Temples.

And quite pluck down all their High-places,] They could not throw down the Mountains, upon which the People of Canaan worshipp'd: But the Meaning is, that they should cut down the Groves which were there planted, and demolish all the Altars that stood in them. For there were no other Temples, at first, but these Groves upon upon Mountains; where the ancient Heathen worshipped the Sun, Moon and Stars: Unto which they thought the Mountains approached nearer than the rest of the Earth; and therefore their Sacrifices there would be most prevalent. But of this I have said enough elsewhere.

Ver. 53. And ye shall dispossess the Inhabitants of the Land, and dwell therein: for I have given you the Land to possess it.] Yet he did not intend they should dispossess the old Inhabitants all at once, but by degrees; as he himself saith in Exod. xxiii. 29, 30. Deut. vii. 22.

Ver. 54. And ye shall divide the Land by Lot, for an Inheritance among your Families.] Follow the Directions I have already given for the dividing of the Land, after the old Inhabitants are expelled, chap. xxvi. 53, 55.

And to the more ye shall give the more Inheritance, and to the fewer ye shall give the less, &c.] See chap. xxvi. 54, 56.

Ver. 55. But if ye will not drive out the Inhabitants of the Land from before you;] At the first they could not drive them all out; nor was it God's Design, as I before observed. Therefore Joshua would not attempt it while he lived; but left several Nations, or Part of them, unsubdued, Judges ii. 21, 23. Of which he himself takes notice a little before he died, Josh. xxiii. 4, 7. where he warns them to have nothing to do with them; promising them that God would in time expel them quite, ver. 5. But when the Israelites grew slothful and cowardly, and negligently suffered the People of Canaan to dwell among them, and made Friendship with them, (as they did after Joshua and all that Generation were dead) then followed what is here threatned in the next Words.

Then it shall come to pass, that those which ye let remain of them] Voluntarily permit to live among you, without endeavouring to dispossess them.

Shall be Pricks in your Eyes, and Thorns in your Sides,] Bring very fore Calamities upon you; as grievous and as mischievous as a Wound made in the Eye, which is a most tender Part; or in the Side, when a Thorn sticks and festers in it. Some are so curious, as by the first Part of these Words (Pricks in your Eyes) to understand their being stimulated to Idolatry, by beholding their Rites of Religion, and Manner of Worship: And the next they take to signify the Effect of it, in sharp Punishments, which should befall them, for their forsaking God. Joshua threatned the same before he died, ch. xxiii. 13. Of which an Angel, or Messenger of the LORD, minded them, Judges ii. 3. And so it came to pass, as we read there, ver. 14. and throughout that whole Book.

And shall vex you in the Land wherein ye dwell.] Make you very uneasy, nay, sigh and groan, in the good Land which God gives you, by reason of their Oppression, Judges ii. 18. iv. 3. vi. 6, &c.

Ver. 56. Moreover, it shall come to pass, that I shall do unto you, as I thought to do unto them.] As I purposed to do unto them; i. e. make you their Slaves: as they were to several People, whom they served many Years, Judges iii. 8, 14. vi. 2. and many other Places. Or make you flee before them, and at last expel you from the Land I give you.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Ver. 1. AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,] In the same Place, where they were when he last spake to him; for they made no other Removals till they marched for Canaan.

Ver. 2. Command the Children of Israel,] Charge them to take notice of this.

And say unto them, When ye come into the Land of Canaan, this is the Land that shall fall unto you, for an Inheritance.] Having spoken to them concerning their dispossessing the Canaanites, and dividing their Land among their Tribes; it was fit to describe the Bounds of their Country, that they might know whom they were to destroy, and into whose Possessions they were to enter.

Even the Land of Canaan, with the Coasts thereof.] The Land beyond Jordan, and the Limits or Bounds thereof.

Ver. 3. Then your South-quarter shall be from the Wilderness of Zin.] Mentioned in the foregoing chapter, ver. 36.

Along by the Coast of Edom,] Which bordered upon this Wilderness, chap. xx. 1, 14.

And your South-border shall be the utmost Coast of the Salt-sea,] From the very Tongue of it, as it is expressed Josh. xv. 2. where it appears, this was the Portion of the Tribe of Judah. The Salt-sea is that which is called sometimes the Dead-sea, and in other Authors, Lacus Asphaltites: see Gen. xiv. 3. The Hebrews call all great Lakes by the Names of Seas; and this is called the Salt-sea, because the Water of it is very salt, or, as some express it, bitter; and the Dead-sea, propter aquæ immobilitatem, as Justin speaks, lib. xxxvi. because of the Immoveableness of the Water, which is never stirred by the greatest Winds: see Vossius de Orig. & Progr. Idolol. lib. ii. cap. 68.

Eastward.] Where the eastern and southern Border meet.

Ver. 4. And your Border] That is, this South Border.

Shall turn] Not go on in a strait Line; but bending toward the West.

From the South to the Ascent of Akrabbim,] Or to Maale-Akrabbim, a Mountain on the South-end of the Dead-sea, Josh. xv. 3. Judg. i. 36. so called, as Bocbartus conjectures, from the vast Multitude of Scorpions found here: From which Mountain also, it is probable, the Region called Acrabtena, near to Idumaea, had its Name, 1 Maccab. v. 3. See Hierozoicon, P. ii. lib. 4. cap. 29.

And pass on to Zin:] Either to a Place called Zin, or Part of the Wilderness of Zin; which lay on the South of the Land of Canaan, chap. xiii. 21.

And the Going forth thereof shall be from the South] That is, still on towards the South; as appears from what goes before, and follows after.

To Kadesh-barnea,] From whence the Spies were sent to search out the Land; and are said expressly to have gone up by the South, chap. xiii. 22, 26.

And

And shall go on to Hazar-addar,] Or, to the Village of Addar, as the vulgar Latin renders it; which seems to be justified by Josb. xv. 3. where it is simply called Addar. There is indeed a Place called Hezron joined with it, which may be thought to be the same with Hazar: But so is another Place also called Karkaa; both which may as well be thought to be here omitted, for Brevity-sake.

And pass on to Azmon.] A Place lying on the West-end of the Mount of Edom.

Ver. 5. And the Border shall fetch a Compass] There shall be a greater Turn than that mentioned ver. 4. bending still more westward.

From Azmon unto the River of Egypt,] By the River of Egypt is properly understood Nile; and so Jonatban here renders the Hebrew Word Nabal (River) by Nilus: Which may seem to have taken its Name from the Word Nabal; which the Ancients did not pronounce as we now do, but called it Neel, as we find in Epiphanus; from whence Nilus was very easily made, as Bochartus observes, Hieroziic. P. ii. lib. v. cap. 15. But if Nile be here meant, it must be the more northerly Mouth of it, where Pelusium stood: see Gen. xv. 18.

And the Goings out of it shall be at the Sea.] This Border ended at the Sea, called the great Sea in the next Verse.

Ver. 6. And as for the western Border, you shall even have the great Sea] That is, the Mediterranean, or Midland Sea, which lay on the West of Judea; and is called by the Hebrews the great Sea, in Comparison with the Lake of Genesaret, and Asphaltites, which they also called Seas.

For a Border:] On the West, as it here follows.

This shall be your West Border.] From the River of Egypt as far as Zidon, which was a Part of the promised Land, as appears from Josb. xiii. 6. Judg. i. 31. All the Cities indeed on the Shore of this Sea, were held by the Philistines and others, till the Time of David; but the Israelites had a Right to them. And the famous Rabbi Juda understands these Words, as if they should have the western Ocean itself for their Portion, as well as the Land adjacent to it: For so he expounds these Words, as if Moses had said, This shall be your western Border, viz. The Border of the Sea, and the Isles near unto it. And the Hierusalem Targum more plainly, And let the great Sea be your Border; i. e. the Ocean, and the Isles thereof, and the Cities, and the Ships with the ancient Waters, that are in the midst of it. See Selden in his Mare Clausum, lib. i. cap. 6. where he alledges this as a Proof, that Men anciently thought they might have a Dominion over the Sea, as well as the Land.

Ver. 7. And this shall be your North Border from the Great Sea.] From the Mediterranean, which lay on the West.

Ye shall point out for you] Mark out for your Direction.

Mount Hor.] Not that Mount where Aaron died; for that was on the South of the Land of Canaan, towards Edom; but this was diametrically opposite, on the North of it; and therefore must in all likelihood be some Part of Mount Libanus, which with Antilibanus (more towards the Great Sea) bounded the promised Land on the North. But there were several Parts of Mount Libanus, which were called by several Names; and probably one of them was called Hor, because of its Eminency or Height above the rest. So the Vulgar translates it; reading, I suppose, the Hebrew, not Hor babar, i. e. Hor, the Mountain; but Har babur, the Mountain of Mountains, i. e. the highest Mountain. The Jews generally by this Mount Hor understand Amanus, which is a Part of Taurus, (as Mr. Selden observes in the Place before-named) which the Hierusalem Targum calls more briefly Manus.

Ver. 8. From Mount Hor ye shall point out your Border unto the Entrance of Hamath.] There were two Hamaths; one called, by the Greeks, Antiochia; the other Epiphania. The former called Hamath the great, Amos vi. 2. to distinguish it from the latter; which is the City that is always meant, when we read the Bounds of Judea were to the Entrance of Hamath northward; as here, and chap. xiii. 21. For it is certain, as Bochartus observes, they did not reach to Antiochia, but came near to Epiphania, lib. iv. Phaleg. cap. 36. And this makes it probable, that Hor, as I said before, may be a Promontory of Libanus; because in Josb. xiii. 5. Hernon is joined with the Entrance of Hamath, as Hor is here. Now Herman was certainly a Part of Libanus; by some called Sirion; by others Senir, Deut. iii. 9. and by others Sion, Deut. iv. 48.

And the Goings forth of the Border shall be to Zedad.] Which in Ezekiel's Time was reckoned the northern Border (together with Hamath) from the great Sea; just as it is here. Ezek. xlvii. 15, 16.

Ver. 9. And the Border shall go on to Zipbron:] Another Town in those Parts; of which I find no Mention any-where else.

And the Goings out of it shall be at Hazar-Enan, &c.] Here it ended; which was a Place that retained its Name till Ezekiel's Time, ch. xlvii. 17. David Chytræus seems to have given a full Account of this northern Border in a few Words. It extended, saith he, from the Mediterranean, by the Mountains of Libanus, to the Fountain of Jordan; in which Tract are the Towns of Hamath, Zadad, (in the Tribe of Naphtali) Zipbron, (in the same Tribe at the Foot of Libanus) and Hazar-Enan, which he takes to signify a Village at the Fountain, viz. of Jordan.

Ver. 10. And ye shall point out your east Border from Hazar-Enan] From the Fountain of Jordan, as was said before.

To Shepbam.] A Place not far from thence; for the River Jordan was certainly the eastern Limits.

Ver. 11. And the Coast] The Limits, or Bounds.

Shall go down from Shepbam to Riblab,] A Place, no doubt, near to Jordan; with which River the eastern Limits go along. St. Hierom takes Riblab to be Antiochia; but that was in Syria, to which the promised Land did not reach.

On the East Side of Ain;] The Vulgar reads it, the Fountain of Daphne. And indeed Ain signifies a Fountain: and both Jonatban and the Hierusalem lem Targum take Riblab for Daphne, as they do Shepham before mentioned for Apamia. But this is only a vain Conceit of the Jews, who would extend their Bounds beyond what God gave them. For it is certain the Land of Canaan never extended to these Places, as Bochartus observes, lib. i. Canaan, cap. 16. And therefore Daphne (which was in the Suburbs of Antiochia) cannot be here meant, unless we understand another Place mentioned by Josephus, lib. iv. de Bello Judaico, cap. 1. which lay near the Lake of Semehonites, through the Middle of which Jordan ran. And then Ain must signify another Fountain of Jordan; for it had more than one. And thus David Chytraus explains this Part of the Verse, and the foregoing: The eastern Bounds were the River Jordan, near to which were these Places; Enan, which had its Name from the Fountain of the River; and Shepham, not far from thence; Riblab, which was also near to Jordan, lying between the Lake of Semehonites and Genesari.

And the Border shall descend, and shall reach unto the Side of the Sea of Chinnereth eastward.] To the East-side of this Sea, or Lake, which had its Name from a City so called, Josh. xix. 35. and a Country, 1 Kings xv. 20. or else it gave them their Names: For David Chytraus will have it called Cinnereth, from the Hebrew Word Cinnor, which signifies an Harp, or Lute, the Lake being of that Shape and Figure, about four German Miles long, and two and a half broad. It is called the Sea of Galilee, or Tiberias, in the Gospel.

Ver. 12. And the Border] i. e. this Eastern Border.

Shall go down to Jordan,] That is, to the River which was eminently so called, (and was on the East Part of Canaan, Gen. xlii. 11.) for it was very small till it came to the Lake of Genesari before mentioned. From whence, being augmented by several Torrents and Rivulets, it ran in a wider Stream, till it fell into the Salt or Dead-Sea. See Bonfrerius out of Josephus, lib. iv. de Bello Judaico, cap. i.

And the Goings out of it shall be at the Salt-Sea.] There was the End of this Border; where it met with the Southern, as was observed above, ver. 3. This shall be your Land, with the Coasts thereof, round about.] As was said before, ver. 2. therefore they were not to extend their Right any farther; this being the Country he promised Abraham, when he had him lift up his Eyes, and look from the Place where he was, Northward, and Southward, and Eastward, and Westward, and walk through the Length of the Land, and Breadth of it, which he assures to his Posterity, Gen. xiii. 14, 15, 16, 17. which now he lays out for them, with the exact Limits of it, in all those four Quarters.

Ver. 13. And Moses commanded the Children of Israel, saying, This is the Land which ye shall inherit by Lot,] He repeats it so often, that they might know what People they were to dispose, and with whom they might make Friendship; and not extend their Desires beyond the Bounds of God's gracious Grant to them. By which they were placed in a very fertile and pleasant Country, bounded, as appears by the foregoing Description, on the South, (ver. 4, 5.) by great Mountains, which sheltered them from the burning Air of the Deserts of Arabia; on the West by the Midland Sea, which sent to them refreshing Breezes; and on the North by Mount Libanus, which kept off the colder Blasts from that Quarter; and on the East, the delightful Plains of Jordan, abounding with Palm-trees, especially about Jericho, which yielded them a great Revenue.

Which the LORD commanded to give unto the nine Tribes, and to the half Tribe.] This he had not said plainly before, though it was necessarily inferred, from his granting to two Tribes and an half their Inheritance beyond Jordan.

Ver. 14. For the Tribe of the Children of Reuben, according to the House of their Fathers, and the Tribe of the Children of Gad, &c. have received their Inheritance.] Upon Condition they performed their Promise, to help the rest of their Tribes to win their Inheritance in Canaan. So those Words are to be understood, I observed xxxii. 33. Moses gave unto them the Kingdom of Sibon, &c.

Ver. 15. The two Tribes, and the half Tribe have received their Inheritance on this side Jordan, &c.] By the Gift of God, as they themselves understood it, xxxii. 31. The Bounds of which the Hierusalem Targum here undertakes to set down, and makes them extend eastward, as far as the great River Euphrates, having respect, I suppose, to Genesis xv. 18. and Exod. xxiii. 31. Where he sets down the utmost Bounds of the Countries he intended to bestow upon them in future Times, (see there) but here only describes the Limits of that Land, which they were to enjoy in present Possession; and was all that God granted to Abraham, when he brought him out of Chaldea, and made his first Promise unto him, Gen. xii. 1, 7. xiii. 14, 15, 17, xv. 7.

Ver. 16. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,] Having told them what they should divide, it was proper to appoint some Persons to take care to see the Division made.

Ver. 17. These are Names of the Men which shall divide the Land unto you.] Though the Land was to be divided by Lot, yet it was fit there should be some Persons to oversee the Business, and take Care there should be no Fraud in the drawing of them: And when they were drawn, to prevent all Quarrels, by determining what Portion those who had too much, should give to those who had too little, xxvi. 54, 55.

Eleazar the Priest, and Joshua the Son of Nun.] These were the principal Persons concerned in this great Affair; who were so conscientious therein, that they did it in the Presence of God, at the Door of the Tabernacle, Josh. xviii. 6, 8, 10. xix. 51.

Ver. 18. And ye shall take one Prince of every Tribe, to divide the Land by Inheritance.] They are called, in the Place last named, The Heads of the Fathers of the Tribes of the Children of Israel.

Ver. 19. And the Names of the Men are these: of the Tribe of Judah, Caleb the Son of Jephunneh, &c.] I have nothing to observe upon this, and the following Verses, to the End of the Chapter, but that the Tribes are not mentioned in such Order as they were at their first Numbering, (i. 5, 6, &c.) or at their second, xxvi. 5, &c. yet great Exactness, and a particular Direction of GOD may be noted in their placing here; for they are set down according to their Situation which they had afterwards in the Land of Canaan; as if Moses foresaw who should be next Neighbours one to another. For Judah having his Inheritance given him first, (Josh. xv.) Simeon, who is here next mentioned, was so near him in the Land of Canaan, that he had a Portion given him out of the Lot of Judah, which proved too large for that Tribe, Josh. xix. 9. Judges i. 3, 17. Then Benjamin, who here follows, in the third Place, was so near to Judah, that they never separated when the ten Tribes were rent from them. Dan was not far from Judah; and the Children of Joseph also were their Neighbours. And the rest of the Tribes, Zebulun, Issachar, Asher, Naphtali, are set down here, just in the Order wherein their Lots fell to them in Canaan, Josh. xix. 10, 17, 24, 32. An Evidence that Moses was guided by a Divine Spirit in all his Writings.

C H A P. XXXV.

Ver. 1. AND the LORD spake unto Moses, in the Plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,] See xxii. 1. Hitherto nothing hath been said of the Levites; but that they should have no Lot in the Land of Canaan. But now GOD provides that they should have Habitations assigned them to dwell in, though they had no Fields, nor Olive-Yards, &c. as the rest of their Brethren had. They might indeed have been able to purchase Houses for themselves out of the Tithes, and other Things which GOD had long ago bestowed upon them for their Portion. But it was not fit that GOD's Ministers should be left without any certain Dwelling. And besides, GOD would have them live comfortably, and not only have Houses, but a little Ground about them, for their more commodious Subsistence.

Ver. 2. Command the Children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites of the Inheritance of their Possession,] Out of their Share that shall fall to them in the Land of Canaan, and on this Side Jordan.

Cities to dwell in:] That they might not be in Danger to wander up and down to seek an Habitation.

And ye shall give also unto the Levites, Suburbs for the Cities round about them.] Some Ground lying round about their Cities, the Reason of which is given in the next Verse.

Ver. 3. And the Cities shall they have to dwell in,] That they may build Houses for themselves to dwell in. Which did not make it unlawful for them to hire or purchase Houses in any other City, particularly at Jerusalem, or the Place where the Tabernacle was settled; for we find in Scripture many Proofs of their dwelling in other Cities, beside these which are here assigned to them. And in like Manner, other People, with their Permission, might dwell with them in these Cities, without any Breach of this Law.

And the Suburbs of them shall be for their Cattle,] To afford Pasture for their Oxen and Sheep.

And for their Goods,] The Hebrew Word signifies, not only all kind of Household-Stuff, but whatsoever was necessary for them and their Cattle without Doors.

And for all their Beasts,] Horses, Asses, Mules, and all Sorts of living Creatures, as the Hebrew Word signifies. But it was not lawful for them to build Houses in these Fields, nor plant Vineyards, nor sow Corn: But they were given them only to make their Dwellings more sweet; and that they might have the Convenience of Cattle about them, for Provisions, and all other Uses.

Ver. 4. And the Suburbs of the Cities which ye shall give unto the Levites,] To be their Possession, by as good and full a Right, as their Brethren of the other Tribes had in their Lands, which fell to them for their Inheritance by Lot: See Lev. xxv. 31, 32, 33. where they themselves are disabled to alienate either the Houses or Fields of their Cities. But if they sold a House, it was to revert at the Jubilee; and the Fields they could not so much as sell till that Time.

Shall reach from the Walls of the City, and outward, a thousand Cubits round about:] This Space was for their Outhouses; as Stables, Places for Hay and Straw, and such like Things, and, perhaps, for Gardens of Herbs and Flowers. The Gemara, upon the Ninth Chapter of Sota, Sect. 9. saith, That under the second Temple, the Levites had no Suburbs; which were not restored to them after the Captivity of Babylon. But there being great Care taken, that the People shall pay all the Tithes of their Ground unto the Levites, Nehem. x. 37. it is unreasonable to think that Care was not taken for Places to lay them in.

Ver. 5. And ye shall measure from without the City,] It is not said, as in the foregoing Verse, from the Wall of the City; therefore I take it to signify from the Outside of the Suburbs before mentioned.

On the East Side Two thousand Cubits, and on the South Side Two thousand Cubits, &c.] So there were in the whole Three thousand Cubits round about the City: A thousand for the Suburbs, properly so called; and Two thousand more for their Pasture, called properly the Fields of the Suburbs, Lev. xxv. 34. This is the most natural and easy Explication of this Place.

And the City shall be in the Midst:] So that there was exactly, every Way, such a Circuit of Ground about it.

This shall be to them the Suburbs of the Cities.] Here the Word Suburbs comprehends the Fields also. And Maimonides saith, That by the Constitution of the Elders, they set forth also a Burying-Place for every City beyond these Limits: For they might not bury their Dead within their Suburbs or Fields; which they ground upon the foregoing Verse, which appoints them for other Uses, Schemita ve Jobel, cap. 13.

Ver. 6. And among the Cities which ye shall give unto the Levites, there shall be six Cities for Refuge.] Three in the Land of Canaan, and three on the other Side Jordan, ver. 14. The Names of which are set down, Josh. xx. 7, 8. And those on the other Side Jordan were set apart by Moses himself before he died, Deut. iv. 43. The Reason of their being called Cities of Refuge is given in the next Words.

Which ye shall appoint for the Manslayer,] Such a Manslayer as is afterward described; who killed another against his Will.

That he may flee thither:] And there be preserved, and kept in Safety, if he was not found guilty of wilful Murder. The Cities of the Levites were appointed for this Purpose, rather than any other, because they were a kind of sacred Places, inhabited by sacred Persons. And here Men might spend their Time better, than in other Cities, being among God's Ministers; who might make them sensible of the Negligence which Men were commonly guilty of in such Cases, and of such Sins as they might have otherwise committed.

And to them ye shall add Forty and two Cities.] Which had all the same Privilege, if we may believe the Hebrew Doctors; but not equally with the Six. For in the Six a Manslayer was to have an House to dwell in for nothing; but in the other Forty-two, he was to pay for it. And the Levites could not refuse him Entrance into the Six; but as for the rest, it was in their Choice whether they would receive him, or no. Thus Maimonides out of their ancient Authors. See Selden Lib. iv. de Jure Nat. & Gent. juxta Discipl. Hebr. cap. 2. where he observes, that the Altar also was a Place of Refuge, according to Exod. xxi. 14. but with many Exceptions; both with Relation to the Parts of the Altar, and to the Persons who fled thither, and to the Quality of the Offence, and their Stay there; which very much lessened the Privilege of this Refuge.

Ver. 7. So all the Cities, which ye shall give to the Levites, shall be Forty and eight Cities, &c.] Accordingly we read Joshua gave them so many, Joshua xxi. 41. Thirteen of which the Priests had; and the rest the Levites. And in the Days of the Messiah, (whom they vainly still expect) other Cities shall be added to them, (saith Maimonides) which shall belong to the Levites.

Ver. 8. And the Cities which ye shall give, shall be of the Possession of the Children of Israel:] And so it is said, Josh. xxi. 3. that the Children of Israel gave unto the Levites out of their Inheritance, these Cities and their Suburbs. Where we read also, they were given them by Lot, as the Children of Israel had their Inheritance given them.

From them that have many, ye shall give many; but from them that have few, ye shall give few:] According to the Rule in distributing their Inheritances to the Israelites, xxxiii. 54.

Every one shall give of his Cities unto the Levites, according to his Inheritance which he inheriteth.] Thus they gave nine Cities out of the two Tribes of Judah and Simeon, Josh. xxi. 16. and but four out of Benjamin, which was a small Tribe, ver. 18. out of the Tribes of Issachar and Asher four apiece, ver. 28, 31. and out of Naphtali, no more than three, ver. 32.

Ver. 9. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,] This being a Matter of great Importance, that guiltless Men should not suffer, nor the Guilty escape Punishment, the LORD gives Moses farther Direction about it, as he promised he would in Exod. xxi. 13.

Ver. 10. Speak unto the Children of Israel; and say unto them,] Repeat this Command to them; which God himself repeated to Joshua xx. 1, 2.

When ye be come over Jordan, into the Land of Canaan:] When they had Possession of it, and divided it, and were settled in it: So it is explained Deut. xix. 1, 2.

Ver. 11. Then ye shall appoint you Cities to be Cities of Refuge for you:] This seems to signify that all the Cities of the Levites were in some sort a Protection to the Manslayer, as I said upon ver. 6. Such Places the Temples were among the Athenians, as Sam. Petitus observes in Leges Atticas, p. 12, 13. yet not all of them; for he can find only Six; that of Mercy, and that of the Eumenides and Minerva, and those dedicated to Theseus, (one of them within the City, the other without the Walls) and that in Munychia.

That the Slayer may flee thither, which killeth any Person at unawares.] Or as it is Josh. xx. 3: unwittingly, Deut. xix. 4. ignorantly; that is, beside his Intention, having no such Design; nor Hatred to him, as is there expressly said, and here below, ver. 22. This is repeated ver. 15. And the Instances of it are such as these, mentioned by Georg. Ritterbusius de Jure Asylorum, cap. 4. If a Man cutting Wood, the Hatchet flying from the Helve, should hit a Man, and kill him; or a Huntsman shooting at a Deer in a Ticket, should kill a Man, whom he did not see lying there: An Example of which we have in Adrastus, mentioned by Herodotus, Lib. i.

Ver. 12. And they shall be unto you Cities for Refuge from the Avenger:] From him who had a Right to call a Murderer to Account for the Blood he had shed, and is therefore called the Revenger of Blood, ver. 19. who being stimulated with Anger and Grief for the Death of a near Relation, might, in a Heat of Rage, hastily kill him who was not guilty of Murder. And therefore this Provision is made for the Preservation of an innocent Person against the violent Prosecution of the Avenger. In the Hebrew, the Word for Avenger is Goel, which signifying a Redeemer, plainly denotes, that the next of Kin to him that was slain, is here meant. For to that Person belonged the Right of Redemption of Estates, Lev. xxv. 25. and of marrying the Wife of a Kinsman deceased without Issue, Ruth iii. 12, 13. And consequently such a Person, that is, the nearest of Kin, is here intended to be the Revenger of Blood: And therefore no Man might undertake this Office, but he alone who was the next Heir to him that was slain; as Mr. Selden observes, Lib. iv. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 1. p. 469. Grotius observes the like Custom among the ancient Greeks, of private Men taking Revenge for the Death of their Relations, or Friends, Lib. ii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 20. sect. 8. n. 6.

That the Manslayer die not,] By a sudden Heat of Passion. This was a merciful Provision, (as Maimonides observes) both for the Manslayer, that he might be preserved, and for the Avenger, that his Blood might be cool'd by the Removal of the Manslayer out of his Sight; by his Flight to another Place, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 40.

Until he stand before the Congregation in Judgment.] The City of Refuge protected him that fled thither, Salvo tamen juris & justitiæ examine, (as the Lawyers speak) yet so that the Matter should be brought to a fair Trial before proper Judges. They of the City of Refuge examined him, before his Admittance into the Place, Josb. xx. 4. But they were not Judges, nor could they examine Witnesses. And therefore he was delivered, upon Demand, to the Senate, or Court of Judgment, of that City where the Fact was committed, that they might try whether he were guilty, or no, of wilful Murder. So the Hebrews understand the Word Edab, Congregation, in this Place, (as in many others) to signify the Sanhedrim of XXIII. as Mr. Selden observes, Lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 5. n. 2. and Lib. iii. cap. 8. n. 3. And as by Congregation is meant the Court where Causes were tried, so it is reasonable to interpret it of that Court which sat in the City where the Fact was committed, and not that in the City of Refuge; because there the Witnesses were; and it is expressly said, ver. 25. that if the Congregation found him to be innocent, he should be restored to the City of Refuge. Which evidently supposes he was not judged there, but in another Place; and none so proper, as that before-mentioned.

Ver. 13. And of these Cities which ye shall give, six Cities shall ye have for Refuge.] They might flee unto any other Cities of the Levites; but in these six they were most certain to find Protection. See ver. 6. And the best Provision was made for the Manslayer's easy and safe flying thither: For the Ways that led thither were to be made very plain and broad, (thirty-two Cubits wide) and to be kept in good Repair; for which they alledged (in the Title Maccoth, cap. 2. sect. 5.) those Words Deut. xix. 3. Thou shalt prepare the Way, &c. And two Students in the Law were to accompany him; that if the Avenger of Blood should overtake him, before he got into the City, they might endeavour to pacify him by wise Persuasions; and that he might not miss his Way to the Place whither he intended to flee, there were Posts erected, where two or three Ways met, with this Inscription, MIKLAT, i. e. the City of Refuge, to direct him into that Road which led to it. A certain Day also was appointed, which was the Fifteenth of February, for the repairing of the Highways, and of the Bridges; which might have been broken by the Winter Rains or Floods.

Ver. 14. Ye shall give three Cities on this side Jordan, and three Cities shall ye give in the Land of Canaan, &c.] This seems not to be an equal Partition; the Land of Canaan being far bigger than the Territory beyond Jordan; for it contained above three Parts of four of the Tribes of Israel. But it is to be considered, that the Country beyond Jordan was as long as the Land of Canaan, though not so broad: And they also beyond Jordan might flee to any of the Cities in Canaan, if they were nearer to them. And besides, GOD commanded those in Canaan, if he enlarged their Coast, to add three Cities more, besides these, Deut. xix. 8, 9.

Why six Cities are appointed for this Purpose, and no more; and why three on one Side of Jordan, and three on the other, Piklo alledges some mystical Reasons; but so far fetched, that I do not think fit to mention them.

Ver. 15. These six Cities shall be a Refuge] They all began to be so at the same Time, according to the Talmudists. For till those three in Canaan were set out, these three on the other side Jordan (though set out by Moses before they went into Canaan, Deut. iv. 43.) did not receive any Manslayer. Which they prove in the forenamed Title, Maccoth, cap. 2. sect. 4. from these very Words, these six shall be Cities of Refuge; that is, when the other three were appointed, then they all received those that fled to them.

Both for the Children of Israel, and for the Stranger, and for the Sojourner among them;] Both Strangers and Sojourners had renounced Idolatry, but had not equally embraced the Jewish Religion; yet both of them had the same Share in this Benefit, with the native Israelites; it being a natural Right, that every Man who was innocent should be protected. The Difference between a Stranger and a Sojourner hath been often observed, particularly upon Lev. xix. 33, 34. Numb. xv. 15, 16.

That every one that killeth any Person unawares may flee thither.] That is, every one before-mentioned, whether Israelites, Strangers, or Sojourners. But as for such as were mere Gentiles, and not so much as Profelytes of the Gate, if they killed another, though a Gentile, they had not the Benefit of this Law; because they were not suffered to dwell among them, tho' they trafficked in the Country. And if a Profelyte of the Gate killed an Israelite, or one that was circumcised, he also, if we may believe the Jewish Doctors, was denied Protection in these Cities. But if he killed one like himself, (i. e. a Profelyte of the Gate) then he had the same Privilege with the Israelites, as they explain it. See Selden, lib. iv. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 2. p. 477.

Ver. 16. And if he smite him] Or rather, but if he smite him.

With an Instrument of Iron, so that he die, he is a Murderer:] For it was to be presumed, that he who run at a Man with a Sword, or any such Weapon, intended to do him a Mischief; though perhaps he had no Malice to him before-hand, but did it in a Passion.

So that he die,] He never going abroad after he was wounded, Exod. xxi. 19, 20.

The Murderer shall surely be put to Death.] Be taken away by the Judges, though he were in a City of Refuge; and, the Fact being proved, condemned to die for it.

Ver. 17. And if he smite him with throwing a Stone,] In the Hebrew it is, with a Stone of the Hand. That is, say the Jews, with a great Stone that fills the Hand; not with a small Stone, with which he could not be presumed to intend to kill him; though he chanced to do it, by hitting him in the Eye, or some other very tender Part.

Wherewith he may die,] With a Stone big enough to kill him.

And he die,] So that it appears he died of that Blow.

He is a Murderer: the Murderer shall surely be put to Death.] He is as guilty, as the forenamed Person, who smote with an Instrument of Iron; and his Fleeing to the City of Refuge, shall not protect him from Death.

Ver. 18. Or if he smite him with an Hand-Weapon of Wood,] Such as a Batoon, (as we now speak) or a Club, or any such kind of Instrument, as is likely to kill him.

Wherewith

Wherewith he may die, &c.] It made no Difference with what kind of Weapon or Instrument he was killed, whether it were of Iron, Wood, or Stone; if he were killed wittingly and knowingly, it was Murder: and the guilty Person was to suffer for it. Aul. Gellius hath collected the Names of the several Weapons which were mentioned in ancient History; of which there are near thirty, lib. x. Noct. Attic. c. 25. one of which, called Ligula, he is pleased to explain, being then not common; and saith, it was a little Sword, in the Form of a Tongue, like our Poniard, I suppose, or Dagger, or long Knife; which was a dangerous Weapon; because Men might hide it under their Cloaths, and kill others while they were in familiar Discourse with them.

Ver. 19. The Revenger of Blood himself.] See ver. 12.

Shall slay the Murderer:] This is thought by many to be a mere Permission, not a Precept; but the Jews think otherwise: That the next Kin (i. e. the Heir of him that was slain) stood bound to do his Endeavour to avenge his Blood. If he would not, (saith Maimonides) or if he was not able, or if no such Avenger was to be found, (i. e. the Murderer himself was the next Heir, or the Man slain was a Profelyte of Justice without Issue) he was to be prosecuted, and put to Death by the Court of Judgment, and that by the Sword: See Selden, lib. iv. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. i.

When he meeteth him, he shall slay him:] He was not bound to stay for the Sentence of the Court, but might kill him wheresoever he found him: see ver. 31.

Ver. 20. But if he thrust him of Hatred, &c.] Or rather, for if he thrust him, &c. that is, if by any Means, besides those mentioned ver. 16, 17, 18. he killed a Man wittingly, either by pushing him down violently from an high or steep Place; or throwing him into the Water; or hurling a Stone at him; or letting any Thing fall down upon his Head, tho' never so silyly; if Death followed, and it appeared he bore a Hatred to him, he was to suffer Death, as in the former Cases: see Deut. xix. 11. Now this was a sufficient Proof of Hatred to him; if being a Neighbour, and they having some Difference, he had not spoken to him for three whole Days together.

Ver. 21. Or in Enmity smite him with his Hand that he die, he that smote him shall surely be put to Death, &c.] If he gave him only a Blow with his Fist, of which he died, and it was proved he had Enmity to him, it was sufficient to make him a Murderer; and it warranted the Avenger of Blood to kill him, or obliged him to prosecute him, so that the City of Refuge should not save him.

The Revenger of Blood shall slay the Murderer when he meeteth him:] The Civil Law declared him to be unworthy to enjoy the Inheritance of one that was murdered, if he neglected to prosecute the Person that killed him in some Court of Justice. But the Jewish Law allowed, or rather required a great deal more; that the next of Kin should kill the Murderer with his own Hands, if he met him. And thus the Abyssines, at this Day, (as Ritterbusius observes out of Alvarez) deliver the Murderer into the Hand of the next Kinsman, to torture him. The Reason of which Law, among the Jews, was, (as the same Ritterbusius observes de Jure Asylorum, cap. iv.) because they, being all descended from one and the same Stock, and equally taking of the same Right, were all concerned in the Shedding of the Blood of any one of them, especially they who were nearest to him in Blood, who seemed to be all struck at, and injured in him. So that the Law, with great Reason, allowed them to avenge the Blood of him that was slain. With which these Verses of Ovid, he thinks, agrees:

*Cum tibi sint fratres, fratres ulciscere læsos;
Cumque pater tibi sit, jura tuere patris.*

Ver. 22. But if he thrust him suddenly without Enmity,] Killed him (after the Manner fore-mentioned, ver. 20.) in a violent Passion, having no such Intention, and being perhaps highly provoked by him, or by Chance, as we speak, and unawares, it being proved that there was no Enmity between them, no Signs of Hatred before this Fact.

Or have cast upon him any Thing, without laying of Wait:] Happen to hit him with any Thing, without Design to hurt him: see Exod. xxi. 13. Deut. xix. 5.

Ver. 23. Or with any Stone wherewith a Man may die,] See ver. 17.

Seeing him not; and cast it upon him, that he die,] Throwing it at something else, or playing with it; and having no Thought of him, because he did not see him.

And was not his Enemy, neither sought his Harm:] Not having any Quarrel with him, not threatening, or any other Way discovering, that he sought to do him Mischief.

Ver. 24. Then the Congregation] That is, the Judgment to whom the Trial of such Causes belonged: see ver. 12. Where I observed, that the Elders of the City of Refuge judged whether the Manslayer, who fled thither, should be received or not, upon a summary Hearing of the Cause, and such Examination as they could make at present. But the full Examination of it was reserved to the Judges of the Place where the Fact was committed.

Shall judge between the Slayer and the Revenger of Blood,] They sent for him out of the City of Refuge, to be brought before them; who heard what could be alledged against him, and what he could say for himself.

According to these Judgments.] Upon Trial they proceeded to give Judgment according to the foregoing Rules; which, in brief, are these: If a Man had no Intention to kill another, but it was purely involuntary, he was to be acquitted. If there appeared any Design upon his Life, or such Hatred and Enmity as might move them to conclude he had an Intention to kill him, he was to be put to Death. But here the Hebrew Doctors (as Mr. Selden observes) distinguish the Killing of a Man into three Kinds: The first was, when, tho' it was from pure Ignorance and Error, yet there was some Negligence in it, which a prudent Man might have avoided. The second, when a Man kills another ignorantly, and cannot not be blamed for any Negligence, because such a Thing seldom happens. An Example of the first they make to be, when a Man, coming down a Ladder, falls upon another, and kills him. An Example of the second, when going up a Ladder, a Man happens to do the same. The former is more frequent, and therefore they say, hath some kind of Blame in it; the other seldom, and therefore hath none. A third kind, when any Man kills another out of Ignorance and Error also; but it approaches nearer to voluntary Murder: As when a Man, intending to kill one Man, happens to kill another with a Stone, or otherwise. In none of these Cases, they say, the Court of Judgment could put any Man to Death. And the Cities of Refuge were not provided for the second or third Sort, but only for the first; and that, when the Man died presently, and did not lie and languish of the Wound: For if he did, it might be supposed he died by his own Negligence, or otherwise, as well as by the Wound. In which Case, there was no Need that the Man who wounded him, should flee to the City of Refuge; nor could the Avenger of Blood meddle with him, no more than he could with a Father, when he gave his Son, or a Master, when he gave his Scholar, Correction, and happened to kill him. The same was the Case of him, whose Office it was to arrest Men, by publick Authority, and bring them before the Judges, if he struck a Man that refused to go along with him, and killed him: see Selden, lib. iv. de Jure Nat. & Gent. juxta Disciplin. Heb. cap. ii.

Ver. 25. And the Congregation shall deliver the Slayer out of the Hand of the Revenger of Blood;] If the Court found the Man was killed casually, as the Person accused pretended, (Josh. xx. 4.) then they charged the Avenger of Blood not to prosecute any further.

Both here, and in the foregoing Verse, and in the next Words to these, by Congregation is meant the Judges of the City, (as I observed, ver. 12.) who were to determine in the Presence, and in the Behalf of the People, whether the Manslayer was capable of the Privilege of the City of Refuge, or not; as we read Josh. xx. 4, 6. Now these Things, (as a very learned Person of our own argues) which were done by the Elders, (or Judges) being said to be done by the Congregation, or Assembly of the People, in whose Behalf they were done; it is no Wrong to the holy Scriptures, when we say, that which they report to have been done by the Church, was acted by the chief Power of the Apostles and Elders, with the Consent of the People. For it is manifest in the New Testament, that in the Apostles Time all the publick Acts of the Church were passed at the publick Assemblies of the same. As Ordinations, Acts i. 23. vi. 6. Excommunications, Matth. xviii. 18, 19, 20. 1 Cor. v. 4. 2 Corinb. ii. 10. Councils, Acts xv. 4, 22. other Acts, 2 Corinb. viii. 19. And herewith agrees the primitive Custom of the Church for divers Ages; whereby they gave Satisfaction to the People of the Integrity of their Proceedings, and by the same Means obliged Superiors to that Integrity, by making the Proceedings so manifest, and so to preserve the Unity of the Church.

And from this Interest of the People in such Acts, it is at this Day, that the People of the Church of England are demanded, what they have to say against Ordinations and Marriages to be made. See Mr. Thorndike, in his Rites of the Church in a Christian State, c. iii. p. 159, &c.

And the Congregation shall restore him to the City of his Refuge, whither he was fled:] They were to send him back again, from the Place where he was tried, to the City where he had taken Refuge, there to remain till the Time prescribed in the next Words. This was more merciful than the Punishment inflicted by the Atick Laws (which plainly shews they were borrowed in great Part from Moses); for he who slew a Man involuntarily, was forced to fly his Country. So the Scholiast upon the last of Homer's Iliads, ἔθετο δὲ ὡς τὰ τοῖς παλαιοῖς τὸ ἀέσιον τὸν ἐργασάμενον, φεύγειν ἐν τῇ πατρίδι, &c. It was the Manner in ancient Times, for a Man that had killed another involuntarily, to flee his Country; and betaking himself to some neighbouring Place, to sit with his Face covered, begging to be expiated. But this was only for a certain Time, as Demofibenes tells us (in his Oration in Aristocratem); ὁ νόμος κελεύει τὸ ἀλόβητα ἐπ' ἀκσίῳ φόνῳ ἐν τῇ αἰσχρονομίᾳ χεῖρας ἀπέναντον ταχὺν ὁδόν, καὶ φεύγειν, &c. The Law requires him that is condemned of killing a Man involuntarily, for some limited Time to go away, and keep at an appointed Distance, till he can make his Peace with the Kindred of him that was slain: After which he may return again, &c.

And he shall abide in it] Not stir out of the Limits of the City, that is, beyond the Suburbs, and the Two thousand Cubits, which encompassed them, (ver. 4, 5.) within which Bounds he was to keep.

Unto the Death of the High-priest, which was anointed with the holy Oil.] This looks like a Punishment to the Manslayer; whereby others were taught to be very watchful over themselves, lest by Negligence they chanced to kill any Body, and so be forced to leave their own Home. “But Maimonides takes it for a prudent Charity to the “Manslayer, and to the Relations of him that “was slain: For by this Means the Manslayer “was kept out of the Sight of the Avenger of “Blood, who might have been tempted some “Time or other to fall upon him, if he had “come in his Way: but by long Absence his “Anger might be mitigated, at least by the “Death of the High-priest, the most excellent “of all other Persons, and most dear to every “one in the Nation. Which made the publick “Grief so great when he died, that Men forgot “their private Resentments: For nothing could “fall out more grievous to all People, (saith he) “than the Death of the High-priest, which “swallowed up all other Grief,” More Nevoch. P. iii. cap. 40. And in the mean Time, the Jews say, that the Citizens of the Place were bound to teach him some Trade, whereby he might provide himself with Necessaries: And he had this Comfort also, during his Absence from his own Family, that the Mother of the High-priest sent him many Gifts, that he might remain there more contentedly, and not pray for the Death of the High-Priest. So they tell us, in the Place fore-mentioned, Maccob. cap. ii.

sect. 6. Where they also observe, that if a Man killed the High-priest, or the High-priest himself happened to kill a Man involuntarily, they were to stay in the City of Refuge as long as they lived: yet they found this Temperament, that if one who had been High-priest, but removed from his Office, was alive when the Slaughter was committed; after his Death, both he that killed the High-priest, or any other unawares, and the High-priest himself, who had done the same, were set free from the City of Refuge. See Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 9. sect. 6. and lib. iii. cap. 8. sect. 3.

There may seem to be some Inequality in this Law, because as some High-priests lived long, and others but a short Time, so some Manslayers fled to the City at the Beginning of their Priesthood, and others just before their Death. But it must be considered that this could not be better ordered than to make the Manslayer's Liberty depend upon the Death of the High-priest, whensoever it fell out; that an higher Value might be set upon him; and that it might represent our Deliverance only by the Death of the Son of God; of which many great Men look upon this as a Type, or Shadow; tho' it must be confessed, there is not the least Signification of this in the New Testament. And since the great Expiation, which the High-priest made every Year on the Day of Atonement, did not procure such Men their Liberty, I cannot look upon it as the Effect of the High-priest's Death, but only as that which followed upon it, by Virtue of this Law. For the High-priest having a great Power every-where, and particularly in these Cities of the Priests and Levites, over whom he was the Chief, it is possible the Manslayer might be confined here by some peculiar Act of his Authority; which expiring together with himself, he was released.

Ver. 26. But if the Slayer shall at any Time] During the Life of the High-priest.

Come without the Border of the City of Refuge, whither he was fled,] If he went beyond the Bounds of the Fields, in which he had Liberty to walk, and might not be touched. For if a Tree was planted (as the Misna resolves in Maccotb) within the Borders of the Fields of the City, tho' the Boughs stretched themselves beyond the Borders, yet the Manslayer was safe under the Tree. In like manner, when Churches became Places of Refuge, the Civil Law allowed the Privilege to extend to the Church-gate: and the Council of Toledo, to thirty Paces from the Church; which Pope Nicolas enlarged to forty. Thus, among the Heathen, the Bounds of the Refuge at the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, were sometimes more, and sometimes less, as Ritterbusius observes in his Book before-named, where he shews how far it was extended by Alexander, and afterwards farther by others. And Tacitus, lib. iii. Annalium, mentions a Temple of hers, to which was granted, by several Emperors, duobus millibus passuum eandem sanctitatem, the same Sanctity for two Miles round about it.

Ver. 27. And the Revenger of Blood find him without the Borders of the City of his Refuge, and the Revenger of Blood kill the Slayer, he shall not be guilty of Blood;] The Court of Judgment were not to put him to Death; tho' perhaps he was obnoxious to the Judgment of God, because he had killed an innocent Person: but he was free from the Punishment of the Law, that Manslayers might be the more careful to keep within their Bounds; which was a profitable Restraint upon them, for the publick Good. All Men seeing how much God hated Murder, by the Confinement of him who had slain a Man unawares, to a kind of Imprisonment.

But it may be said, on the other Side, that he who killed a Manslayer in this Case, was perfectly guiltless; because he did not herein act as a private Person, but executed a Sentence against him, who was condemned by publick Authority. Which gave no Protection to the Manslayer, but within the Borders of his City of Refuge; leaving him to the Avenger of Blood, if he came out of those Bounds, till the Death of the High-priest. After which, if the Avenger of Blood killed him, no doubt he was to be punished as a Murderer.

Ver. 28. Because he should have remained in the City of his Refuge, until the Death of the High-priest.] These Words give the Reason, why the Avenger of Blood was not to be punish'd in this Case; because the Manslayer was guilty of breaking another Law, and so in some sort accessory to his own Death; for he might have been safe, if he had pleased.

But after the Death of the High-priest, the Slayer shall return into the Land of his Possession.] Where he was not only to remain safe, but to be restored to all his Honours, if he had any before he fled to the City of Refuge.

Ver. 29. So these Things shall be for a Statute of Judgment unto you] A Rule, whereby to judge between Manslayers and Murderers.

Throughout your Generations,] The like Clauses are usual in the ancient Civil Law: Hoc perpetua lege sancimus. Hoc generali & in perpetuum vultura lege decernimus, &c.

In all your Dwellings,] This the Jews interpret as an Obligation upon them, to have Courts of Judgment wheresoever they dwell. Thus R. Solomon, upon these very Words, They teach us, saith he, the Use of Courts of Judgment, which ought to be even out of the Land, all the Time that they were used in the Land. So the ancient Book Siphri, and many others mentioned by our most Learned Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 5. n. 1.

Ver. 30. Whoso killeth any Person, the Murderer shall be put to Death by the Mouth of Witnesses:] This Direction for their Proceedings in this Case, was to be the Rule in all others of like Nature, by examining Witnesses, who were to be competent, Upon which Account ten sorts of Persons were incapable to be Witnesses, according to the Hebrew Doctors, viz. Women, Servants, Minors, Fools, the Deaf and Dumb, the Blind, Impious, and audacious People, near Relations, and those that had been convicted of bearing false Witness. And they endeavour, after their Manner, to find Reasons against all these in the Law itself: see Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 13. n. 11.

But one Witness shall not testify against any Person to cause him to die.] This was such an established Rule in the Civil Law, that it saith, ubi numerus testium non adjicitur, sufficiunt duo, where the

the Number of Witnesses is not mentioned; two suffice; Pluralis enim locutio, duorum numero contenta est, for, where Witnesses in the Plural Number are spoken of, two are enough to answer the Intention of the Law. Which Number therefore are frequently mentioned expressly in Scripture, as necessary in all Cases, Deut. xvii. 6. particularly in this of Murder, xix. 15. Yet where there was but one Witness, or not two, who both together saw the Man killed, so that he who was accused of the Murder, could not be put to Death, he was thrown into a very strait Prison, and there fed with Bread and Water of Affliction, till his Bowels were sorely pinched, &c. if we may believe the Jewish Doctors, mentioned by Selden, lib. iv. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 1.

Ver. 31. Moreover, ye shall take no Satisfaction for the Life of a Murderer, &c. If a Murderer would have given all his Estate to save his Life, or the Avenger of Blood would have accepted a Compensation, or freely let him go, the Judges (when they had found him guilty) could not restore him to the City of Refuge, but he was to suffer Death. For the Life of him that was slain, was not (as Maimonides speaks) Part of the Goods of the Avenger of Blood, but belonged to Almighty God; who set such a Value on a Man's Life, that he would not suffer any Price to be taken for it. See Selden in the same Chapter, p. 470.

Ver. 32. And ye shall take no Satisfaction for him that is fled to the City of his Refuge, that he should come again to dwell in the Land, until the Death of the Priest. No Money was to purchase his Liberty to dwell any where else but there, till the Time appointed by the Law. But this Punishment for Manslaughter, was as indispensable as Death for Murder. And therefore, if any Man happened to kill another in the City of Refuge, to which he was confined, he was forced to flee to another City of Refuge, and there abide till the Death of the High-priest.

Ver. 33. So ye shall not pollute the Land wherein ye are; for Blood is defileth the Land. By this it appears, that the next of Kin was bound to prosecute the Murderer unto Death, for the Good of his Country, which otherwise would have had a Guilt upon it, and that very grievous. For they are the greatest Crimes, as Maimonides observes, which are said to pollute the Land, or them, or God's Sanctuary, viz. Idolatry, Lev. xx. 3. all the Filthiness that is forbidden, xviii. 24, 25. and Murder here mentioned. More Necess. P. iii. cap. 47.

And the Land cannot be cleansed of the Blood that is shed therein, but by the Blood of him that shed it. The same Maimonides observes, in the Forty-first Chapter of that Book, "That it is a Piece of Universal Justice, to make a Man suffer, what he hath made another suffer. If he hath hurt his Body, he must suffer for it in his own Body; if in his Money, his own Purse must pay for it; if he have taken away his Life, he must die for it himself. And the Punishment can neither be mitigated, nor any Compensation accepted for it. For which he quotes these Words; and upon this Account resolves, that if he that was murdered should live a few Days or Hours after his deadly Wound, and being in sound Understanding, should desire he that killeth him might not die for it, declaring that he freely forgave him, his Desire was not to be granted, but Blood was to be punished with Blood. Whether he that was slain was a great Man, or a mean, a Freeman, or a Slave, a wife Man, or a Fool; because there is no Sin committed by Men greater than this is.

Ver. 34. Defile not therefore the Land which ye shall inhabit. By suffering a Murderer to live.

Wherein I dwell. This is given as a Reason elsewhere, (see Ver. 3.) why they should put all polluted People out of their Camps, because God dwelt in them, viz. in his Sanctuary, which made this Land be called the Holy Land, and God's Possession, 1 Chron. xx. 11.

For I the Lord dwell among the Children of Israel. See Exod. xxvi. 8. The very same was practised among the Athenians, with some little Alteration. For Demosthenes says, it was one of their Laws, ἐν ἀγορᾷ καὶ ἐν κρίσει δαπάνη μὴ ἔσται, that he who out of Revenge killed a Man, should be put to Death. And he tells us also, that it was not lawful for the Judges to take Money to remit the Punishment, after he was condemned. Though if the Prosecutors compounded with him or his Friends before-hand, and desisted from the Prosecution, his Life was saved. If he fled from Justice, all his Goods were confiscated, and he forfeited all the Rights of a Citizen, both Civil and Sacred. See Sam. Petrus's Comment. in Leges Atticas, lib. vii. tit. 1.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Ver. 1. AND the chief Fathers of the Families of the Children of Gilead, the Son of Machir, the Son of Manasse, &c.] Not the Fathers of those Families, whose Inheritance had been assigned them already on this Side Jordan, in the Land of Gilead; but the other half of the Tribe of Manasse, who were to have their Inheritance in Canaan, where the Daughters of Zelophebad also had their Portion, as appears from Josh. xvii. 3, 4, &c.

Came near, and spake before Moses, and before the Princes, the chief Fathers of the Children of Israel. Who were met together in a great Assembly, as they used to do, about publick Affairs: see xxvii. 2. xxxi. xxxii. 2.

Ver. 2. And they said, The Lord commanded my Lord. This shews that one of them was the Mouth of the rest.

To give the Land for an Inheritance by Lot to the Children of Israel. See xxvi. 52, 53. For there the Foundation of all these Doubts was laid.

And my Lord was commanded by the Lord to give the Inheritance of Zelophebad, Which should have fallen to Zelophebad, had he been alive.

Our Brother; So they called their near Relations.

Unto his Daughters. Who petitioned him for the Possession which should have been their Father's, and it was granted them: see xxvii. 6, 7.

Ver. 3. And if they be married to any of the Sons of the other Tribes of the Children of Israel, They being being rich, many, it might be supposed, of the other Tribes, as well as their own, would court them for their Wives: And if they should chuse an Husband that was not of their own Tribe, they represent to Moses the Inconveniencies which from thence would follow.

Then shall their Inheritance be taken from the Inheritance of our Fathers,] i. e. Go out of our Tribe, to which it originally belonged.

And shall be put to the Inheritance of the Tribe, whereunto they are received:] Become a Part of the Inheritance of that Tribe into which they married.

So shall it be taken from the Lot of our Inheritance,] For it must have descended unto their Children, who were of another Tribe by the Father's Side; which alone was considered, and not the Mother's, in this Case.

Ver. 4. And when the Jubilee of the Children of Israel shall be,] Which was ordained for the preserving Estates in the Tribes and Families to which they originally appertained, Lev. xxv. 10, 13.

Then shall their Inheritance be put unto the Inheritance of the Tribe whereunto they are received:] The Jubilee will not help us in this Case, by making their Inheritances return as other Lands do; because they are become the Inheritance of another Tribe, by the Right of Marriage.

So shall their Inheritance be taken away from the Inheritance of the Tribe of our Fathers,] So will their Estate go out of our Tribe without Remedy, because the Jubilee itself will give us no Relief.

Ver. 5. And Moses commanded the Children of Israel, according to the Word of the LORD, saying,] Whom, I suppose, he consulted about the Matter, (as he did when the first Doubt was moved about the Inheritance of these Women, xxvii. 5.) and received the Answer by which he here commanded the Israelites to govern themselves.

The Tribe of the Sons of Joseph] In whose Name the chief Fathers of their several Families made this Representation to Moses; as became Men who took Care of the Concerns of the whole Tribe.

Hath said well,] In desiring the Inheritance of these Women might not go out of their Tribe; which was prevented by the following Law.

Ver. 6. This is the Thing which the LORD doth command, concerning the Daughters of Zelophebad, saying, Let them marry to whom they think best;] They were not confined to any peculiar Persons; but might have their Choice among those who were descended from the same Stock, as it immediately follows.

Only to the Family of the Tribe of their Fathers shall they marry:] Only with these two Limitations, that they might not marry a Man of another Tribe; nor a Man of another Family in their own Tribe. For it is very manifest, that they are tied to marry into the Family of their Father; and accordingly they did actually marry their Cousin-Germans, as we now speak, Verse 11. For this Law was made for the Preservation of Families, (as well as of Tribes) as the Law for the Redemption of Lands was. And therefore these Words, the Family of the Tribe of their Fathers, are well translated by Grotius (upon Matt. i. 16.) Familia stirpis paternæ, the Family of the Stock of their Father, which was that they defired might not perish, xxvii. 4. and was the Ground of the Law, which commanded a Man to marry the Wife of his Brother, who left no Issue, Deut. xxv. 6. Therefore there being several Families in the Tribe of Manasseh, xxvi. 29, 30, 31, 32. these Women could marry only into the Family of the Hepherites.

Ver. 7. So shall not the Inheritance of the Children of Israel remove from Tribe to Tribe:] For by preserving it in the Family to which it was given, it was necessarily preserved in the Tribe.

For every one of the Children of Israel shall keep himself to the Inheritance of the Tribe of his Fathers;] And not endeavour to get any Part of the Inheritance of another Tribe, by marrying an Heiress in it. Plato himself took Care of this, that when a Man left only a Daughter, his Estate should not be carried by her to a Stranger, but she should be bound to marry κατὰ ἀσχεσίαν, one that was nearest of Kin to her. And if there was a Want of near Kindred, μεχρὲ μὲν ἀδελφῆ υἱῶν, &c. it should descend to the Children of her Father's Brother, or to the Children of the Grandfather, some of which he ordains should marry her, lib. xi. de Legibus, p. 924, 925. Edit. Sarraui.

Ver. 8. And every Daughter that possesseth an Inheritance in any Tribe of the Children of Israel,] Here this Law is made general, that all Women who were Heiresses, as the Daughters of Zelophebad were, should do as they are here commanded. And this was one of the Attick Laws, which, as Grotius observes, were plainly borrowed from the Law of Moses, Μὴ ἐξέναι ταῖς ἐπι- κλησί: ἕξω τῆς ἀσχεσίας γαμῶν, &c. That an Heiress should not marry out of her Kindred, but dispose of herself and Estate, τῷ ἐσυντάτῳ γένει, to one nearest of Kin to her; which was one of the Laws of Solon, as Sam. Petitus observes out of Isæus, Pollux, and others, in his Comment. in Leges Atticas, lib. vi. tit. i. p. 441.

Shall be Wife unto one of the Family of the Tribe of her Father, &c.] Here she is confined to her Family, and not merely to her Tribe. But this concerned only such as were Heiresses. All other Women might marry into what Tribe they pleased; as appears by those very Books, wherein we read that Aaron himself married the Sister of the Prince of Judab, Exod. vi. 23. And if any object, that this was before the giving of the Law, it is evident that Jeboiada, a Priest, and consequently of the Tribe of Levi, married King Jehoram's Sister, who was of the Tribe of Judab, 2 Chron. xxii. 11. And long before this, all the Tribes of Israel, being in great Solicitude how to find Wives for their Brethren of Benjamin, did not scruple their having them out of any Tribe, if it had not been for their Oath, Judg. xxi. 18. And, to add no more, David himself, of the Tribe of Judab, married Michal the Daughter of Saul, who was of the Tribe of Benjamin.

The Talmudists add, That even these Heiresses might marry into what Tribe they pleased, after the first Division of the Land by Joshua: To which they imagine this Law was restrained; it being a common Saying among them, That it did not belong to any Age, but that in which it was made. In the following Ages they pretend a Man might purchase Land in any Tribe, and possess it al-way ; or have the Inheritance of it by Marriage, tho' he were of another Tribe, as Selden shews their Opinion to be, lib. de Successionibus ad Leges Hebr. cap. 18. and lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 4. n. 1. and Buxtorf. de Sponsal. & Divortiis, sect. 44. But this is well confuted by Grotius in his Annotations upon Matth. i. 16.

Ver. 9. Neither shall the Inheritance remove from one Tribe to another Tribe ;] This establishes in general what he had said before, ver. 7. with particular Respect to the Daughters of Zelophebad. But Moses ben Nachman, upon these very Words, asserts the Talmudick Opinion before-mention'd, that this concerns only the present Time, not future Ages. And puts this Case, (which is the strongest that can be thought of) If a Woman were married into another Tribe, after which Marriage, her Father and all her Brethren dying without Children, the Inheritance fell to her, and consequently, saith he, the Possession must devolve from one Tribe to another, into which she had married. But, according to the Letter of these Words, the Inheritance was rather to descend to the next of her Kindred, than by her be carried out of the Tribe to which it belonged.

But every one of the Tribes of the Children of Israel shall keep himself to his own Inheritance.] Shall cleave or stick close to his own Inheritance, as the Hebrew Word signifies ; and as the Greek and Latin expresses it. The Reason of the Command was, as Procopius Gazæus observes, to prevent the Confusion of Tribes. How the vulgar Latin came to deviate so much from the Hebrew Text, and from the Intention of this Law, (as it hath done in this and the two preceding Verses) I shall not here examine. It is sufficient to note, that Onkelos hath expressed the Hebrew Text Word for Word ; and the LXX do not depart from the Sense of it.

Ver. 10. Even as the LORD commanded Moses, so did the Daughters of Zelophebad.] Accordingly they followed this Direction when they came into the Land of Canaan, and had received their Portion there. Now there being no such Words added here, as there are in other Cases, this shall be unto the Children of Israel a Statute of Judgment, xxvii. 11. much less a Statute of Judgment throughout your Generations, xxxv. 29. it led, I conjecture, the Talmudick Doctors into the fore-mention'd Opinion, that this Law concerned only the present Generation.

Ver. 11. For Mahlah, Tirzah, and Hoglah, and Milkah, and Noah, the Daughters of Zelophebad,] Thus they are called both in xxvi. 33. and xxvii. 1. tho' they are not there mention'd in the same Order ; for Tirzah is there named last, who here is nam'd in the second Place. Perhaps they are set down here in the Order wherein they were disposed in Marriage ; and Tirzah, who was the younger, was married in the second Place.

Were married unto their Father's Brother's Sons.] For Hepher, no doubt, had other Sons besides Zelophebad, who had Issue-male, tho' Zelophebad had not. What their Names were, or how many of them, we do not know ; but some suppose them to have been six ; one of which died in the Wilderness without Issue. See Selden de Successionibus, cap. 23. where he discourses at large of the Portion which fell to them in the Land of Canaan.

Ver. 12. And they were married into the Families, &c.] In the Margin, more exactly out of the Hebrew, to some that were of the Families ; i. e. to one of the Families of Manasseh, from whom several Families descended, xxvi. 29, &c.

And their Inheritance remained in the Tribe of the Family of their Father.] The Word for Tribe signifies sometimes merely a Family in a Tribe. And so the LXX (as Grotius observes in the Place before-named) in this very Business, uses sometimes the Word σῆμα, and sometimes φυλή ; the former of which signifies a Part of a whole Tribe. And thus Josephus also uses the Word φυλή to signify a Family. Mr. Selden hath the same Observation in his Book de Successionibus, cap. 18. that tribus is sometimes translated φυλή ; and then it signifies not a Tribe, but παῖς, συγγένειαν, familiam, cognationem, seu genus sanguine proximum ; a Family, a Kindred, or those that are next in Blood. But there is no Need of these Observations, if the Words be translated, as they may, rightly ; and their Inheritance remained in the Tribe, and the Family of their Father : see ver. 6.

Ver. 13. These are the Commandments, and the Judgments, which the LORD commanded by the Hand of Moses, unto the Children of Israel in the Plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.] He began to deliver the Precepts here intended at Chapter xxvi. (see ver. 3.) and continues them to this Place. By Commandments, seem to be meant the Precepts about the Worship of God, chap. xxviii, xxix, xxx. and by Judgments, the Civil Laws about dividing their Inheritances, and regulating their Descent to their Posterity, and establishing Cities of Refuge for Manslayers, which are expressly called a Statute of Judgment, xxvii. 11. xxxv. 29. Some other Things are interspersed, as God's Commandment to number the People, (which was in order to the assigning them their Inheritances proportionable to their Families) to execute Judgment on the Midianites ; and to set down in Writing their Travels in the Wilderness ; of which I have given an Account in their proper Places.

The Fifth Book of MOSES,

CALLED

CHAP. I.

THIS Book had the Name of DEUTERONOMY given it by the Greeks, from the principal Scope and Design of it; which was to repeat unto the Israelites, before MOSES left them, the chief Laws of GOD, which had been given them: That they who were not then born when they were first delivered, or were incapable to understand them, or had not sufficiently regarded them, might be instructed in them, and awakened to attend them. See Ver. 1. & 5. In order to this, he premises a short Narrative of what had befallen them since they came from Mount Sinai unto this Time, in the Three first Chapters; and then in the Fourth urges them by a most pathological Exhortation; to the Observance of those Laws which he had taught them, especially the Ten Commandments, with which he begins the Fifth Chapter; where he makes a solemn Rehearsal of the Covenant GOD made with them in Horeb; and what immediately followed upon the Delivery of the Law by GOD himself, from Mount Sinai. And then, having earnestly pressed the Observation of the First Commandment, in the former Part of the Sixth Chapter; and in the latter Part of it, and in the several Chapters that follow, (to the End of the Eleventh) reminded them of a great many Things which GOD had done for them, and given them several Cautions, lest they let them slip out of their Minds, and used many Arguments from several Topicks, (as we call them) to move them to be obedient to all the other Commandments; he proceeds in the Twelfth Chapter, and so forward to the Twenty-eighth, to remember them of a great many other Laws besides the Ten Commandments, which he had delivered to them. Some of which he explains; others he enforces with further Reasons; and in several Places adds new Laws for the greater Security of the Whole (particularly, he orders the Writing of GOD's Law upon Stones, when they came into the Land of Canaan, Chapter xxvii.); and then pronounces those Promises which GOD had made to the Obedient, and his Threatnings to the Disobedient, more largely, and with greater Force, than he had done in the xxvith of Leviticus. After which he again remembers them of several wonderful Works of GOD for them, (Chapter xxix.) and renews the Covenant between GOD and them; using several Arguments to persuade them to a dutiful Observance of GOD's Law: Which he commands (Chapter xxxi.) to be read to all the People in the Conclusion of every Seventh Year, that none might pretend Ignorance of it. And then concludes all with a most admirable Song, which he orders every one to learn; and with a Blessing upon the Twelve Tribes.

All this was done in the two last Months of the last Year of Moses's Life. But not all at once; as plainly appears by several Parts of the Book; in which he writes what he delivered to them, at several Times. Which is the Reason of the Repetition of the very same Thing, over and over again: That he might make it sink into their Minds by being often inculcated. Some have been so foolish, as to make this an Objection against this Book being composed by MOSES. But it shews their great Ignorance; all wise Men having ever judged it necessary to say τα αὐτὰ περὶ τῶν αὐτῶν, the very same Things, concerning the same Things; that they might be thoroughly understood, and fixed in the Memory of their Auditors, and settled in their Hearts and Affections. Particularly Epistetus (as David Chytraeus long ago observed) delivered this as a profitable Rule in all Studies; Εἰδέναι χρὴ, ὅτι ἡ ῥᾶδιον δόγμα παρεχενόσθι ἀνθρώπων, εἰ μὴ καὶ ἐκείνην ἡμίεον τὰ αὐτὰ καὶ λέγει τις καὶ αἰσθῇ, καὶ ἅμα χρᾶτο πρὸς τὸν βίον. This must be known, as a certain Truth, that it is not easy for a Man to attain the solid Knowledge of any Thing, unless he both read and hear the same Things every Day; and also set himself to the Practice of them. This Course Moses took with the Children of Israel: Spending every Day, it is likely, of the latter End of his Life, in calling to their Mind, again and again, what he had taught them; and the Reason they had to do accordingly.

Ver. 1. THES E be the Words] This Book contains the Words

Which Moses spake unto all Israel,] All the People could not hear what he said, but he ordered the Elders and Heads of the several Tribes, to communicate to the whole Congregation what he delivered to them, in the Audience of many of the People who were assembled with them. Thus these Words are commonly understood. But considering the great Weight of what is here said, I rather think that Moses himself, at several Times, spake what here follows, in the Ears of the People. See Verse 1.

On this Side Jordan,] The Vulgar Latin having translated the Hebrew Words [Beeber] on the other Side Jordan, it hath furnished some ill-disposed Minds with an Argument, that Moses was not the Author of this Book: For he that wrote, plainly shews that he was in Canaan when he wrote it. But a very little Consideration would have prevented this frivolous Objection; there being nothing more certain, than that the Hebrew Words signify indifferently, either one Side or the other; and may be literally translated in the Passage over Jordan, or as they were about to pass over it; as Huetius observes, and proves by plain Examples, that the Hebrews have no other Word to express their Mind, when they would say either on this Side or beyond. See Demonstr. Evang. Propos. iv. cap. xiv. To which another learned Writer since him (Hermannus Witsius, lib. I. Miscel. Sac. cap. xiv.) hath added several other Places, which evidently shew that Beeber is a Word that indifferently belongs to either Side of any Place, (See 1 Sam. xiv. 40.) and must be determined by the Matter in Hand, to which it is to be applied. And here undoubtedly it is to be rendered on this Side Jordan. See iii. 8.

In the Wilderness, in the Plain] In the Plain of Moab, where they had remained a long while; as appears from the foregoing Book, Numb. xxii. 1. xxvi. 3, 63. xxxi. 12. xxxiii. 48, 49. xxxv. 1. xxxvi. 13.

Over-against the Red-Sea,] There is no Word in the Hebrew Text for Sea; and therefore the Marginal Translation is to be preferred, which is, over-against Suph; which was a Place in the Country of Moab, (See Numb. xxi. 14.) over-against which they now lay encamped; but were so far distant from the Red-Sea, that there can be no Respect to it here.

Between Paran,] He doth not mean the Wilderness of Paran, frequently mentioned in the foregoing Book (for that was as remote from hence as the Red-Sea); but some Place in the Country of Moab, as Suph was, and the rest of the Places which here follow.

And Tophel, and Laban, and Hazeroth, and Dizabab.] There was a Place called Hazeroth, where they had encamped a long Time ago, Numb. xi. 35. xxxiii. 17. but it was in another Wilderness far from this Place, as appears by the Account Moses gives of their Removals from that Place, to this, where they now lay, Numb. xxxiii. 17, 48, 49. And therefore I take this, and the other three Places here mentioned, to have been Frontier-Towns in the Country of Moab, which lay upon the Borders of this Plain. The last of which, Dizabab, is translated by the LXX. and the Vulgar, as if it signified a Place where there were Mines of Gold.

Onkelos and the Hierusalem Targum, who take Suph to signify the Red-Sea, and Paran for the Wilderness through which they had come many Years ago, &c. are forced to add several Words to make out the Sense of this Verse in this Manner; These be the Words which Moses spake unto all Israel on this Side Jordan, &c. reproving them because they sinned in the Desert, and provoked God in the Plain over-against the Red-Sea; and murmured in Paran about Manna; and at Hazeroth for Flesh, &c. And so they proceed to mention other Sins committed in other Places; but not in these here named: Which they force, from their natural Sense, to comply with this Conceit.

Ver. 2. There are eleven Days Journey from Horeb, &c.] Or eleven Days (we were a coming) from Horeb, by the Way of Mount Seir, unto Kadesh-Barnea. Which cannot be understood of the whole Time they spent between these two Places, but only of the Time they spent in travelling: For they stayed a Month at Kibroth-Hataavah, and a Week more at Hazeroth, Numb. xi. 21. xii. 15, 16. before they came to Kadesh-Barnea. This he represents to them, to make them sensible, they had been kept in the Wilderness so many Years, as had passed since they came out of Egypt; not because it was a long Way to Canaan, but for the Reason mentioned in the xivth of Numbers. For from Horeb (whither he ordered them to go, when they came out of Egypt) they came in eleven Days, and took no long Journeys, to the Borders of the Land of Canaan; where Kadesh-Barnea lay. So Maimonides; the Way was plain and known between Horeb (whither God brought them on Purpose to serve him) and Kadesh: Which was the Beginning of an habitable Country; according to what he saith, Numb. xx. 16. See More Nevochim, pag. iii. cap. i. See Numb. xiii. 26.

By the Way of Mount Seir,] The Country of the Edomites. Chap. ii. Ver. 12.

Unto Kadesh-Barnea.] How they were ordered to come hither, and what they did here, he relates, ver. 6. 19. and so proceeds to give an Account of several remarkable Things which befel them, unto the Time when he wrote these Things; which he sets down in the next Verse.

Ver. 3. And it came to pass in the fortieth Year,] After they came out of Egypt.

In the eleventh Month, on the first Day of the Month,] In the first Month of this fortieth Year, they came into the Wilderness of Zin, unto another Kadesh, Numb. xx. 1. From whence they removed removed to Mount Hor; where Aaron died on the first Day of the fifth Month of this Year. See there, ver. 28. Where it appears, ver. 29. they mourned for him thirty Days, that is, till the Beginning of the sixth Month. In which they fought with King Arad, Numb. xxi. and from Mount Hor travelled from Place to Place, (as we read there, and Numb. xxxiii.) till they came to these Plains of Moab. In which Journeys, and in the rest of the Transactions, mentioned in the latter End of the Book of Numbers, they spent the other five Months of this Year; as I have observed in their proper Places. And now began the eleventh Month, when Moses, being to leave the World before the End of this Year, spake all that follows in this Book. And this Speech (which he begins ver. 6. and continues to the fortieth Verse of the fourth Chapter) the great Primate of Ireland thinks, he made to the People on the twentieth of February, and on the Sabbath-day; as the Reader may find in his Annals.

That Moses spake unto the Children of Israel, according unto all that the LORD had given him in Commandment unto them.] Made a Rehearſal of all that at ſeveral Times he had received from the LORD, and delivered unto them.

Ver. 4. After he had ſlain Sibon the King of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heſhbon,] About five Months ago; for it was after Aaron's Death, which was the first Day of the fifth Month, Numb. xxxiii. 38. and they mourned for him all that Month. See Numb. xxi. 29, &c.

And Og the King of Baſhan, which dwelt at Aſtaroth] This was a City in the Country of Baſhan, (Joſh. xiii. 31.) and a City it was of very great Antiquity, as appears from Gen. xiv. 5. See there. From whence ſome think the famous Goddeſs Aſtarte had her Name, being here worſhipped. But whether that Goddeſs took her Name from this City, or the City from the Goddeſs, is not certain; as Mr. Selden obſerves in his Syntagma ii. de Diiſ Syris, cap. 2. But that the Heathen Deities were wont to have their Names from the Groves, Mountains, Cities, and Caves, where they were worſhipped, is as certain, as it is uncertain from whence Aſtarte, or Aſtaroth (as the Scripture-Name is) was ſo called.

In Edrei ;] His Royal Palace was at Aſtaroth (as Sibon's was at Heſhbon) ; but he was ſlain in Edrei, Numb. xxi. 33.

Ver. 5. On this Side Jordan, in the Land of Moab,] In the Plains of Moab; before they paſſed over Jordan. See ver. 1.

Began Moses to declare this Law, ſaying,] To call to Remembrance that which any one had forgotten; and to explain that which any one did not underſtand. So Maimonides expounds theſe Words in Seder Zeraim. “ In the End of the fortieth Year, in the Beginning of the Month Shebat, Moses called the People together, ſaying, “ The Time of my Death draws near, if any one “ therefore hath forgot any Thing that I have “ delivered, let him come and receive it; or if “ any Thing ſeem dubious, let him come, that “ I may explain it. And ſo they ſay in Siphri, “ If any one have forgotten any Conſtitution, let “ him come and hear it the ſecond Time; if he “ need to have any Thing unfolded, let him come “ and bear the Explanation of it.” For which he quotes this Verſe; and ſays that Moses ſpent all his Time in this, from the Beginning of the Month Shebat, to the ſeventh Day of Adar. And what he now ſaid was likely to be the more regarded, becauſe theſe were, in a Manner, his dying Words; for he lived but till the ſeventh Day of the next Month; and ſeems to have compoſed this Book as a Compendium of his whole Law, for the familiar Uſe of the Children of Israel; from whence it is called Deuteronomy, i. e. a ſecond Law. See Huetius in his Demonſtr. Evang. Propoſ. iv. cap. 1.

Ver. 6. The LORD our GOD ſpake unto us in Horeb, ſaying,] Numb. x. 13.

Ye have dwelt long enough in this Mount:] From the third Month of the first Year (Exod. xix. 1.) to the twentieth Day of the ſecond Year after they came out of Egypt, (Numb. x. 11.) they ſtayed at Mount Sinai, which is the ſame with Horeb, they being only two Tops of the ſame Mountain, one of them ſomething higher than the other, as they are deſcribed by thoſe who have taken a View of them. For Moses was twice with GOD, for the Space of forty Days, in this Mount: And here the Tabernacle, and all Things belonging to it were made, according to the Orders he there received; and then was erected and conſecrated; and the People all numbred and diſpoſed under ſeveral Standards, to march in ſuch Order as GOD appointed, Numb. ii. 3, 10, 17, &c. x. 14, 15, &c.

Ver. 7. Turn you,] From this Mountain.

And take your Journey,] Reſume your Journey, which you have ſo long intermitted.

And go to the Mount of the Amorites,] A Mount on the South Part of Canaan, inhabited by the Amorites, together with ſome Canaanites and Amalekites, Numb. xiv. 25, 43, 45. But the principal Poſſeſſors of it were Amorites, as is expreſſed more than once in this Chapter, ver. 19, 20, 44. This is the Mountain to which Moses bid the Spies go up, Numb. xiii. 17. and ſo they did, ver. 22.

And unto all the Places nigh thereunto,] And ſo paſs into all the Neighbouring Country, which lies near it.

In the Plain, in the Hills, and in the Vale,] This is a Deſcription of the Country nigh unto this Mountain: Some of which was Champain, (as we ſpeak) and other Parts of it conſiſted of Hills and Dales.

And in the South, and by the Sea-side, to the Land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great River, the River Euphrates.] And ſo go into all the reſt of the Land of Canaan: The ſeveral Quarters of which he here ſets forth. The Southern Part lying toward this Mountain; the Western upon the Sea (where the People properly called Canaanites dwelt); the Northern toward Lebanon; and the Eaſtern towards the River Euphrates. Which by other Authors, as well as Moses, is called the great River. So Callimachus in his Hymn to Apollo, ver. 103.

ἡ ἄνωγος ποταμὸς μέγας ὅς ἐστιν ———

The great Flood of the Aſſyrian River; which the Schooliaſt obſerves is meant of Euphrates. And Lucan, ————— cum Tigride magnus

Euphrates ——— J. iii. ver. 253.
Ver. 8.

Ver. 8. Behold, I have set the Land] In the Hebrew, Given the Land, i. e. bestowed it upon you; and am ready to bring you into the Possession of it.

Before you:] That every one of you may have his Share of it: Or, that you may go whither you please, and settle yourselves in it, Gen. xiii. 9. xxxiv. 10.

Go in and possess the Land,] Therefore make no longer Stay here in the Wilderness; but go and take Possession of my Gift.

Which the LORD swore unto your Fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, &c.] Gen. xv. 18. xvii. 7, 8. xxvi. 3. xxviii. 13.

Ver. 9. And I spake unto you at that Time, saying,] About the Time of their coming to Horeb, or mount Sinai. For the Story of Jethro, unto which this relates, preceded that immediately, Exod. xviii. Many great Men place it after the giving of the Law: Of which see Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 2. n. iv.

I am not able to bear you myself alone,] We do not read, before now, that Moses spake thus to the People. But Jethro spake in this Manner to him, Exod. xviii. 18. and gave him Advice to take some others to his Assistance, ver. 21. which Advice he followed, ver. 24. And then spake to the People what Jethro had said to him; and enlarged upon it in the Words we read here, in the following Verses: Where he gives them the Reason why he could not perform the Office of a Judge alone.

Ver. 10. The LORD your God hath multiplied you; and, behold, you are this Day, as the Stars of Heaven for Multitude,] Increased unto a greater Number than can easily be told.

Ver. 11. The LORD God of your Fathers make you a thousand Times so many more as you are,] As if he had said, I am not troubled at your vast Increase, but bless GOD for it; and beseech him to make you a thousand Times more numerous than at present you are.

And bless you, as he hath promised you,] In the Promise often repeated to their Fathers, Gen. xii. 2. xv. 5. xvii. 5, 6. xviii. 18. xxii. 17. xxvi. 4. xxviii. 14.

Ver. 12. How can I myself alone bear your Cumbrance, and your Burden, and your Strife?] But how is it possible for one Man alone to undergo the Labour of hearing all the Complaints of such a Multitude; and of remedying all their Grievances, and determining all their Controversies? So the last Word signifies, Suits at Law, (as we speak) as the two former signify other Differences, which arose between one Man and another, about such Things as are mentioned in the xxist, xxii^d, and xxiii^d, Chapters of EXODUS. The first Word, which we translate Cumbrance, signifies tediosam litigantium serram, (as Hottinger interprets it, in his Smegma Orientale, lib. i. cap. 6.) the tedious Pleadings of those that manage Causes before a Judge, by Bills and Answers, (suppose) and Rejoinders, &c.

Ver. 13. Take ye] In the Hebrew it is, Give ye, i. e. Present unto me such Persons as you think fit, according to the following Characters.

Wise Men, and understanding, and known among your Tribes, &c.] Men of known Wisdom, Prudence, and Integrity; skilful in Divine and Human Laws. See Exod. xviii. 21. Some take Wise Men to signify such as knew much; and Understanding, such as had Prudence to make use of their Knowledge, being Men of Experience; and they were to be noted for both these, otherwise the People would not have revered them.

Ver. 14. And ye answered me, and said, The Thing which thou hast spoken, is good for us to do,] This Consent of the People is not recorded before; but sufficiently implied in their Submission to this Regulation, mentioned Exod. xviii. 26.

Ver. 15. So I took the chief of your Tribes, wise Men, and known,] From among those Men that they presented to him, he took, I suppose, such Persons among the Chief of their Tribes, as were endowed with the Qualities here named, and were known by all so to be. For obscure Persons, either for Birth, or Experience in Affairs, would have been contemned: And therefore he chose the Noblest of those that were presented to him, (called here the Chief of their Tribes) if they were no less worthy than others. For some such, no doubt, there were among their great Men, as might be thought fit for this high Employment. And they were the fitter, because being Men of Quality, (as we speak) they were less liable to be corrupted by Bribery; from which Moses took Care all Judges should be so free, that he expressly requires they should be Men hating Covetousness, Exod. xviii. 21. And Solon did not forget to make this a Part of the Oath, which every Judge in Athens took, (which is mentioned at large by Demosthenes in his Oration against Timocrates) ἰδὲ δῶκε δέξομαι τῆς ἡλπίσεως ἐνεκα, ἐτ' αὐτὸς ἐγὼ, ἐτ' ἄλλοι ἐμοί, &c. I will receive no Gift upon the Account of my Sentence; neither I myself, nor any Body else for me, nor others with my Knowledge, by any Artifice or Device whatsoever.

And made them Heads over you,] Set them to govern and rule the People, (as it is expressed ver. 13.) by deciding all Causes which were brought before them; as far as they were able to understand them.

Captains over Thousands, and Captains over Hundreds, and Captains over Fifties, and Captains over Tens,] It is a Question, whether they were Commanders over so many Families, or Persons; as I observed upon Exod. xviii. 25. Hermannus Conringius thinks they were Rulers (as the Word signifies) over so many Fathers of Families, understanding by a Family, that which we now call an Household, De Republ. Hebræorum, sect. xviii.

And Officers among your Tribes,] The same great Man, in the xxvith Section of the same Book, takes Schotrim to have been Judges, as well as the Rest. His great Reason is, because the Seventy Elders were ordered to be chosen out of them, among others, Numb. xi. 16. Now it is altogether improbable, he thinks, that such a Propbetical College as that was, should be chosen out of such mean Officers, as the Hebrew Doctors make these Schotrim to have been. But see what I have noted upon Exod. v. 14. and Numb. xi. 16. And let me here add, that if they were Judges, (and not Attendants upon them) they were very mean ones, being put below the Rulers of Ten. But howsoever this be, it is certain tain some of these Judges had greater Authority than others, being intrusted with a larger Jurisdiction; and it's likely, greater Abilities were required in those over Thousands, than in those over Tens. As in the great Sanhedrim afterwards, the Jews make more Things necessary to qualify Men for a Place in it, than were requisite for those in lower Courts; where no Man could fit, (much less in the highest) unless these seven Things were remarkable in him (as Maimonides faith, Halacab Sanhedrim, cap. iv. sect. 7.); Wisdom, Humility, the Fear of God, Contempt of Riches, Love of Truth, a good Fame; and he was beloved also of others.

Ver. 16. And I charged your Judges at that Time, saying,] As the Quality of their Persons, and their Endowments, made them considerable, so they were dignified with the honourable Name of Schofetim, and were also called Elders, which had been, a long Time, a Title of Honour among the Jews, and in other Nations.

Hear the Causes between your Brethren,] This was a necessary Quality in a good Judge, to give Audience to every one that brought a Cause before him; and not to delay any Man. But the Jews infer from these Words, that it was not lawful to hear any Man, when his Adversary was absent; but both Parties were to be there present. And they were also to be heard speak for themselves, if they pleased: which was Part of the fore-named Oath, which Solon ordered all the Athenian Judges to take, Ἀκράτομαι τῷ τε κατηγορῶντι καὶ τῷ ἀπολογουμένῳ ὁμοῦς ἀμφοῖν, I will hear the Accuser and the Defender both alike.

And judge righteously] The next Thing required of a Judge, was to be upright and impartial, not considering what the Man was, but his Cause. This is implied in the following Words:

Between every Man and his Brother,] i. e. Between one Israelite and another.

And the Stranger that is with him.] i. e. Between an Israelite and a Profelyte: whether he were received into the Covenant by Circumcision, or not. For of this latter Sort there were, no doubt, a great Number amongst that mixed Multitude, who came with them out of Egypt, Exod. xii. 38. And while they were in the Wilderness, there was not a distinct Court for Israelites and Profelytes; but their Causes were tried in one and the same, as Mr. Selden observes, lib. ii. de Synedriis, cap. iii. n. 1.

Ver. 17. Ye shall not respect Persons in Judgment,] Not be swayed by particular Affection or Interest; but judge sincerely, without Respect to Relation, or any Benefit or Injury received.

You shall hear the Small, as well as the Great:] Be equally disposed patiently to attend to the Cause of a poor Man, as of a great; and to do him as speedy and impartial Justice: see Lev. xix. 15. And here the Hebrew Doctors tell us of some singular Practices in their Courts, to preserve the Dispensation of exact Justice: For if one of the contending Parties came into them richly clothed, and the other poorly, they would not hear them till both were clothed alike. Nor would they suffer one of them to sit, and the other stand; but both of them either fat, or stood. And if they fat, one of them was not permitted to sit higher than the other; but they sat by each other's Side, &c. See Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. xiii. n. 10.

You shall not be afraid of the Face of Man,] Courage and undaunted Resolution is another necessary Qualification in a Judge; who must not be over-awed by what any Man can do unto him; but remember, (as it here follows) that he is in God's Place.

For the Judgment is God's:] God gave them their Commission by Moses; so that they were his Ministers, and acted by his Authority: and therefore might be confident he would defend them in the Discharge of their Office. This shews, that tho' Moses alone acted by immediate Authority from God, yet these always being constituted by him, were to be look'd upon as pronouncing Sentence in his Name; who, after a peculiar Manner, was the King and supreme Governor of the People of Israel.

And the Cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it.] Another Quality, is Humility, in not adventuring to judge of Things above their Reach. Some think there were certain Causes reserved to the Cognizance of Moses, (as I observ'd upon Exod. xviii. 22.) but the contrary appears by these Words, that all Manner of Causes were brought before these Judges; and they, not the People, brought such Causes before Moses, as they found to hard for them to determine. So that they, not the Person whose Cause it was, judged of the Difficulty of the Cause: see Selden, lib. i. de Synedriis, cap. xvi.

Ver. 18. And I commanded you at that Time all the Things which ye should do.] As he rightly informed their Judges, so he instructed the People also in their Duty, before they went from Horeb; by delivering to them the Judgments which God commanded him to set before them, Exod. xxi. 1. contained in that and in the two following Chapters, whereby both they and their Judges were to govern themselves.

Ver. 19. And when we departed from Horeb,] See Numb. x. 12.

We went through all that great and terrible Wilderness,] It may well be called great because it extended a great Way. For after three Days Journey (Numb. x. 33.) they settled at Kibroth-bataavab; which was in this Wilderness of Paran. From whence they went to Hazereth, which is still said to be in this Wilderness, Numb. xi. 35. And when they went from thence, they were in the same Wilderness, xii. 16. where Kadesh was, xiii. 26. and see xxxiii. 17. And this Wilderness was very terrible, or dreadful; because there were no Inhabitants in it, but wild Beasts.

Which you saw by the Way of the Mountain of the Amorites,] All the Way you went towards that Mountain: see ver. 7.

As the Lord our God commanded us;] According to the Direction which God gave them, by the Motion of the Cloud that went before them.

And we came to Kadesh-Barnea.] Where they rested at the Foot of that Mountain, in the Wilderness of Paran, Numb. xiii. 2, 26.

Ver. 20. And I said unto you, Ye are come unto the Mountain of the Amorites, which the Lord our God doth give unto us.] For this was Part of the Country, which God bestowed upon them, for their Possession; as appears from Numb. xxxiv. 4. Where Kadesh-Barnea is mentioned as a Frontier Place in their South-Border. And indeed the Amorites, wheresoever they found them, were to be expelled; as they had already dispossessed them of the whole Kingdom of Sibon, who was King of the Amorites, Numb. xxi. 21, 25, 26.

Ver. 21. Behold, the LORD thy GOD hath set the Land before thee:] All the Country beyond this Mountain, ver. 8.

Go up,] For there was a great Ascent to it, Numb. xiii. 17.

And possess it,] Enter upon the Possession of it.

As the LORD GOD of thy Fathers hath said unto thee;] According to the Promise made by GOD long ago, to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, (see ver. 8.) which he is now ready to perform.

Fear not, neither be discouraged.] Do not dread either their Number, or their Strength; but trust in the LORD, (whose Name he repeats four Times in these three Verses) that he will make good his Word.

Ver. 22. And ye came near unto me every one of you,] The Heads of every Tribe, in the Name of the whole Congregation; whose Desire this was.

And said, We will send Men before us,] Some select Persons.

And they shall search out the Land,] Give us an Account how it lies, and what kind of Country it is.

And bring us Word again by what Way we must go up,] Inform us which Way to direct our March into it.

And into what Cities we shall come.] What Cities we shall first attack, to make our Way the clearer into the Country. Moses also charges the Men that went to search the Land, with many other Inquiries, (Numb. xiii. 18, 19, 20.) that the People might receive the fullest Satisfaction.

Ver. 23. And the Saying pleased me well:] He thought this a reasonable Motion, proceeding only from a prudent Caution; whereas, in Truth, they were timorous, and distrustful of GOD's Promise.

And I took twelve Men of you, one of a Tribe,] That every body might be satisfied, when they heard the Report of their Brethren, Numb. xiii. 2, 3, 4, &c. and GOD directed him so to do, as we read there.

Ver. 24. And they turned,] From Kadesh-Barnea.

And went up into the Mountain,] Numb. xiii. 17, 21.

And came unto the Valley of Eshcol,] It appears by the Relation, Numb. xiii. 21, 22, 23. that this was the last Place unto which they came, when they had ended their Search.

And searched it out.] After they had gone through all the Quarters of the Country.

Ver. 25. And they took of the Fruit of the Land, in their Hands, and brought it down unto us;] Both Grapes, Pomegranets, and Figs, Numb. xiii. 23.

And brought us Word again, and said, It is a good Land which the LORD our GOD doth give us.] So they all said unanimously, and brought along with them a Demonstration of it, Numb. xiii. 27. only they added, that they were not able to deal with the Inhabitants of it.

Ver. 26. Notwithstanding ye would not go up, but rebelled against the Commandment of the LORD your GOD.] Who bad you go up, and not be afraid, ver. 8, 21. Which was the greater Sin;

because he had not only brought them to the Borders of the Land, but convinced them, that he had not deluded them with fair Promises of a better Country than really it was: for they all saw the goodly Fruit which it produced; and ought therefore to have believed he would fulfil his Word, and give them the Possession of it.

Ver. 27. And ye murmured in your Tents,] After great Lamentations for a whole Night together, Numb. xiv. 1.

And said, "Because the LORD hated us, he hath brought us forth out of the Land of Egypt,] Unto which therefore they desired and conspired to return, Numb. xiv. 4.

To deliver us into the Hand of the Amorites to destroy us.] Nothing can be more pernicious, (as Grotius here observes) than a Persuasion that GOD doth not love us, but hath a Design upon us, to destroy us.

Ver. 28. Whither shall we go up?] Moses, I suppose, still pressed them to go up, and take Possession of the Land: To which they give him this snappish Answer.

Our Brethren have discouraged our Heart,] The Men that you yourself sent to search the Land, dispirited us by the Report they have brought us. Which would not have had that Effect upon them, if they had minded one Part of it, as much as the other, and calmly considered what Caleb and Jeshua said, who made no Doubt of Success.

Saying, The People is greater and taller than we;] More numerous, and of far greater Stature and Strength, Numb. xiii. 28, 33.

The Cities are great, and walled up to Heaven;] The Spies only told them, that their Cities were walled, and very great, Numb. xiii. 28. but their Fear and Confusion of Thoughts augmented the Danger of attempting the Conquest of them: Yet Moses himself thinks good afterwards, to use the same Hyperbole, ix. 1. which is common in the best Authors. For thus Homer in Odyss. E. ver. 239. speaks of a Fir-Tree as high as Heaven, i. e. exceeding tall:

— ἐλάτῃ δ' ἵν' ὑπερομήκῃς.

Many other Instances may be seen in Bochart's Pbleg. lib. i. cap. xiii.

And moreover, we have seen the Sons of the Anakims there.] See Numb. xiii. 28, 33. Const. l'Empereur will rather have it translated the Sons of the Giants, as the LXX and Onkelos take it. Yet he acknowledges that Anak seems to have been the first Parent and Propagator of the Race of Giants after the Flood; and therefore it may be properly translated as we do: see Annot. in Itiner. Benjamini Judelensis, p. 136.

Ver. 29. Then I said unto you,] Moses here at large relates what he said unto their Fathers, upon this Occasion; which he doth not mention in the Book of NUMBERS, (where we read only of his falling down before GOD) that he might awaken this Generation to a greater Confidence in GOD, and a Dread of his Judgment.

Dread not, neither be afraid of them;] Do not consider so much how strong they are, as how powerful the LORD your GOD is, who hath promised you this good Land.

Ver. 30. The LORD your GOD, which goeth before you,] In a glorious Pillar of Cloud and Fire.

He

He shall fight for you,] As he had done hitherto, Exod. xiv. 14. xvii. 8, &c.

According to all that he did for you in Egypt before your Eyes :] Why should you think he is less able to bring you into Canaan, than he was to redeem you from Egypt, where you were oppressed by very powerful Enemies ?

Ver. 31. And in the Wilderness,] Ever since they came from thence through the Wilderness of the Red Sea, Exod. xiii. 18. and the Wilderness of Sin, Exod. xvi. 1. and the Wilderness of Sinai, Exod. xix. 1, 2. and then through that terrible Wilderness of Parān. See above, ver. 19.

Where thou hast seen how that the LORD thy GOD bare thee, as a Man doth bear his Son,] The long Experience they had of the tender Care he had over them, (which was as indulgent as that of a kind Father towards his only Son, when he is a Child, whom he carries in his Arms) should have made them confident of his gracious Providence for the future.

In all the Way that ye went, until ye came into this Place.] He made Provision for them in the most desolate Places; bringing them Water out of a Rock; sending Bread down to them from Heaven; defending them from wild Beasts, and from their fiercer Enemies, &c.

Ver. 32. Yet in this Thing ye did not believe the LORD your GOD,] He could not prevail with them to trust GOD; and go up, as he commanded, in his Power and Might to possess the Land. Nor could all that Caleb and Joshua said, at all move them, Numb. xiv. 7, 8, 9.

Ver. 33. Who went in the Way before you,] Never failed constantly to direct and guide you in your Journeys, Exod. xiii. 22.

To search you out a Place to pitch your Tents in,] But always mark'd out your Encampments, where they should be, Numb. ix. 17.

In Fire by Night, to shew you by what Way ye should go, and in a Cloud by Day.] That they might be able to travel by Night, as well as by Day: Which was most convenient in Summer-time, when the Sun was very scorching in a Wilderness, where there was no Shelter, Exod. xiii. 21. Numb. ix. 16, 21.

Ver. 34. And the LORD heard the Voice of your Words,] They not only distrusted GOD, (ver. 32.) but murmured against their Leaders, and against GOD, in a mutinous Manner; consulting to return into Egypt, Numb. xiv. 1, 2, 3, 4. And moreover spake of stoning Caleb and Joshua for their good Advice, ver. 10.

And was wroth, and swore, saying,] Which so provoked the Divine Majesty, that he irrevocably determined what follows; confirming it with an Oath, Numb. xiv. 21.

Ver. 35. Surely there shall not one of these Men of this evil Generation, see that good Land, &c.] See Numb. xiv. 23, 28, 29.

Ver. 36. Save Caleb the Son of Jephunneh;] And Joshua the Son of Nun. See Numb. xiv. 24, 30. And see below, ver. 38.

He shall see it, and to him will I give the Land that he hath trodden upon, &c.] This was as exactly fulfilled, as their disinheriting was, Josh. xiv. 9, 12. Where the particular Portion of Land is mentioned, which GOD promised to him, and which Joshua gave him in the Mountain where the Anakims dwelt. For such was the wonderful Faith and Courage of Caleb, that he doubted not to dispossess those, whom the rest of the Israelites dreaded as invincible.

Ver. 37. Also the LORD was angry with me] Not at that Time, but afterwards; when they came into the Wilderness of Zin, to another Kadesh, Numb. xx. 1, 14.

For your Sakes,] By Occasion of their fresh Discontents, and mutinous Upbraidings of him, (Numb. xx. 2, 3, 4.) which provoked him so, that he spake unadvisedly with his Lips, as the Psalmist observes, Psal. cvi. 32, 33. This was an high Aggravation of their Guilt; that they not only undid themselves, but brought great Displeasure upon their worthy Leader and Governor, whom they wearied with their Tumults and Rebellions. Or the Meaning may be, (which doth not much differ from the Account now given) that they murmuring in a tumultuous Manner; when they saw the Water did not flow out of the Rock at the first Stroke, he himself also was put into such a Commotion, that he began to doubt, and say GOD would do nothing for such a rebellious People, though he had declared he would. If this be true, he soon recovered himself, and smote the Rock again, in Confidence GOD would be as good as his Word. But GOD was so angry at the Words he had spoken, that he so far punished him for them, as to deny him Entrance into Canaan.

Saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither.] Which Threatning is renewed a little before his Death, Numb. xxvii. 13, 14. and he could not get repealed by any Entreaties, as we read in this Book, iii. 26.

Ver. 38. But Joshua the Son of Nun, which standeth before thee,] i. e. Waits upon thee.

He shall go in thither;] So GOD promised, when he, as well as Caleb, endeavoured to put Courage into the People to go and possess the Land, Numb. xiv. 6, 7, &c. 30.

Encourage him; for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.] Not only go thither, and have his Portion there, but be the Captain of Israel, and conquer the Land for them, and divide it among them. This intimates as if Joshua was afraid, he might be excluded as well as his Master, being extremely troubled, it is likely, that he was not suffered to reap the Fruit of his long Labours. Therefore GOD bids Moses encourage his Hope, and command him to take Heart, (as we speak) for undoubtedly he should do more than go into Canaan. Which may be the Reason, why his Name is not put into the Exception, (ver. 35, 36.) together with Caleb's; but they are mentioned separately; because there was something to be said peculiar to each of them.

Ver. 39. Moreover, your little ones, which ye said should be a Prey,] See Numb. xiv. 31.

And your Children, which in that Day had no Knowledge between Good and Evil,] And consequently did not provoke GOD by their Disobedience.

They shall go in thither, &c.] Their Innocence moved Pity towards them: Though Children, in some Cases, were cut off for their Fathers Sins.

Ver. 40. But as for you, turn ye,] From the Land of Canaan; to which they were not permitted to go.

And take your Journey into the Wildernes,] And get you back again into the Wildernes, out of which I have brought you, Numb. xiv. 25.

By the Way of the Red Sea,] Thus they had their Desire, in some Part, of returning into Egypt, (Numb. xiv. 4.) which was not far from the Red Sea.

Ver. 41. Then ye answered, and said unto me, We have sinned against the LORD;] They repented, when it was too late to do them any Good. See Numb. xiv. 40.

We will go up, and fight, according to all that the LORD our GOD commanded us.] Now they resolve to encounter those Enemies, of whom they were before so afraid, as to speak of stoning those who exhorted them not to fear them, Numb. xiv. 9, 10.

And when ye had girded on every Man his Weapons of War, ye were ready to go up into the Hill.] They not only made a stout Resolution, but actually prepared themselves for the Onset: As if there were no Difficulty in that, which a little before they dreaded to think of. So de Dieu translates the last Words, Ye thought it an easy Matter to ascend the Hill; or, ye despised going up the Mountain; in our Language, made nothing of it.

Ver. 42. And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, Go not up,] Numb. xiv. 41, 42.

Neither fight;] Much less think of fighting.

For I am not among you;] By my powerful Presence to subdue your Enemies, or to defend you from them (so the Phrase is often used); for the Ark of the Covenant, the Token of GOD's Presence, did not go with them, Numb. xiv. 44.

Left ye be smitten before your Enemies.] Which would be a far greater Disgrace, than marching away from them.

Ver. 43. So I spake unto you,] Numb. xiv. 42, 43.

And ye would not bear,] No more than before; when he bad them go up.

But rebelled against the Commandment of the LORD,] For now it was against his Will, as before it was his Will, that they should go up.

And went presumptuously up into the Hill.] Would venture against the express Command of GOD; which was the highest Presumption.

Ver. 44. And the Amorites, which dwelt in that Mountain, came out against you,] As soon as they saw the Israelites ascend to assault them, they came down upon them, Numb. xiv. 45.

And chased you as Bees do,] Which pursue those that disturb their Hives in great Swarms, and with great Fury, Psal. cxviii. 12. For though Bees have very small Bodies, yet they have great Spirits, and a vast Force, as Bochart observes in many Instances, to make out the Aptness of this Comparison, in his Hieroicoicon, P. II. lib. iv. cap. 10.

And destroyed you in Seir,] It seems they fled toward that Part of Idumea where Mount Seir was; which they afterwards compassed many Days, (ii. 1.) when they removed from Kadesh-Barnea. And there some of them fell by the Sword of the Amorites, who were the fiercest of all the People of Canaan; and might, on that Account, be well compared to Bees; who cease not their Pursuit, till they have fixed their Stings.

Even unto Hormab.] See Numb. xiv. 45.

Ver. 45. And ye returned,] After the Amorites retreated.

And wept before the LORD;] Beseeching him to go along with you, and assist you to conquer the Land.

But the LORD would not hearken to your Voice, nor give Ear unto you.] To consent that they should now go and possess the promised Land, or stay near to it; but remained fixed in his Resolution, that they should go back again, and wander in the Wildernes as long as they lived.

Ver. 46. So ye abode in Kadesh many Days,] GOD had commanded Moses to lead them into the Wildernes, by the Way of the Red Sea, the very next Morning after their Mutiny upon the Return of the Spies, Numb. xiv. 25. But they prevented this, by their early rising next Morning to assault the Amorites in the Mountain, Verse 40. After which they being discomfited, he permitted them to stay some Time here, to bemoan themselves. But how long, is not certain: For sometime the Cloud stayed but two Days, sometime a Month, sometime a Year, before it stirred from the Tabernacle; which was the Sign of their Removal, Numb. ix. 22. And in some Stations, it's likely, they stayed several Years: For from the Time of their Removal from Kadesh-Barnea, till they came to Mount Hor, which was Thirty-seven Years, we find but Nineteen Stations. See Numb. xxxiii. from ver. 18. to ver. 37.

According unto the Days that ye abode there.] Some expound it, as long as they did in all the rest of their Stations, i. e. Nineteen Years, as the Jews compute in Seder Olam. But, as the learned Dr. Lightfoot thinks, it signifies, as long as they did at Mount Sinai: And so they stayed near a whole Year, as they had done at Sinai. But the most simple Explication seems to be, that they tarried here so long after this, as they had done before it, at least Forty Days; which was the Time the Spies spent in searching out the Land. Though there is no Necessity to confine it to that Number, but simply to interpret it, that as they stayed there many Days before this Mutiny, so they did as many after it.

CHAP. II.

Ver. 1. THEN we turned, &c.] From the Borders of the Land of Canaan, to go Southward, till they came to the very Shore of the Red Sea. Which, as David Chytraeus computes it, was Thirty German Miles from Kadesh-Barnea.

As the LORD spake unto me:] According to the Command formerly mentioned, Numb. xiv. 25.

And we compassed Mount Seir] The mountainous Country of Edom; whereof Mount Seir was but a Part. For when they came to Ezion-Gaber, which was upon the Red-Sea, they were still in the Country of Edom, 1 Kings ix. 26. 2 Chron. viii. 17. For it stretched a long Way; from the Confines of Canaan, unto Elate and Ezion-Gaber, on the Red-Sea.

Many Days.] Some think that they were marching to and fro along the Borders of this Country, Country, all the Time they spent from this Removal, till they returned to go towards Canaan again. So that by many Days, they understand the whole thirty-eight Years which passed between their Departure from Kadesh-Barnea, till they came over the Brook Zered, ver. 14. For when they were at Ezion-Gaber, (which was farthest from Canaan) they were, as I said, upon the Borders of Edom: and so they were when they came back again, seven and thirty Years after at Mount Hor, Numb. xx. 23. xxi. 4. But this must not be understood, as if all the Stations, mentioned Numb. xxxiii. after they left Kadesh-Barnea, till they came hither again, were near to the Country of Edom: Some of them might be remote, tho' they all lay in that Wilderness, which reached from one End of Idumea to the other.

Ver. 2. And the LORD spake unto me, saying,] This was in the End of the thirty-ninth Year after their coming out of Egypt; when they had spent thirty-seven Years, going to and fro since their Departure from Kadesh-Barnea. In all which Time he gives us no Account what passed, either in the foregoing Book, or in this: but only sets down the Places of their Abode, as I observed in the thirty-third of Numbers.

Ver. 3. Ye have compassed this Mountain long enough:] i. e. The mountainous Country of Edom, mentioned ver. 1.

Turn you northward,] From Ezion-Gaber, which was in the South, towards the North, that is, directly towards the Land of Canaan.

Ver. 4. And command thou the People, saying, Ye are to pass through the Coast of your Brethren the Children of Esau, which dwell in Seir;] For they went from Ezion-Gaber to Kadesh, Numb. xx. 1. and from thence to Mount Hor, ver. 22. (which was in the Edge of the Land of Edom, Numb. xxxiii. 37.) and from thence they travelled to compass the Land of Edom, xxi. 4. i. e. the eastern Quarter of it. So that tho' they did not pass through the Coast of Edom, as we translate it, yet they passed by it, and very near unto it; as the Particle beith frequently signifies, Gen. xxxvii. 13. Josh. v. 13. 1 Sam. xxix. 1. Tho' they may be truly said to pass through their Coast; if thereby we understand their Border, or the Confines of their Country.

And they shall be afraid of you:] Left, wanting a Settlement, the Israelites should seize upon their Country. Accordingly we find, they raised all the Force they could make to oppose them, Numb. xx. 20.

Take ye good Heed unto yourselves therefore,] Let not that encourage you to assault them.

Ver. 5. Meddle not with them;] Make not the least Attempt upon them.

For I will not give you of their Land; no, not so much as a Foot-breadth,] i. e. Not the smallest Portion.

Because I have given Mount Seir unto Esau for a Possession,] So Joshua saith expressly, Josh. xxiv. 4. wherein he made good the Blessing of Isaac, Gen. xxvii. 39.

Ver. 6. Ye shall buy Meat of them for Money, that ye may eat, &c.] If you have a Mind to any Provision that their Country affords, you shall not take it, but purchase it; as they did their very Water, (ver. 29.) which was a scarce Thing in those dry Countries. And so the Israelites offered to do, when they treated with them about a Passage through their Country, Numb. xx. 19.

Ver. 7. For the LORD thy GOD hath blessed thee in all the Works of thy Hand:] Or, tho' the LORD hath blessed thee, &c. that is, tho' there is no Need of it, GOD having abundantly provided you with all Things necessary. But if we follow our Translation, the Sense is plain; You have wherewith to buy of them what you need or desire; therefore do not take it away by Force.

He knoweth thy Walking through this great Wilderness:] Hath directed and prospered thee (as the Word knoweth signifies in many Places, Psal. i. 6. xxxi. 7.) in thy Travels through a dangerous Wilderness.

These forty Years the LORD thy GOD hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing,] He had mercifully provided for them so constantly, that he let them want nothing necessary for their Support. This was the Sum of the Argument why they should not molest the Edomites, nor take any Thing by Stealth from them; because they were in no Need; and GOD hath given that Country to the Children of Esau, as he intended to give Canaan to the Israelites.

Their being in the Wilderness forty Years, is mentioned also viii. 2. xxix. 5. besides other Places of Scripture. For from the fifteenth Day of the first Month, in which their Fathers came out of Egypt, (Numb. xxxiii. 3.) to the tenth Day of the same Month in which they went over Jordan into Canaan, (Josh. iv. 19) there were but five Days wanting of complete forty Years. I cannot but here note also, that this is one of those Places wherein Onkelos mentions the MEMRA, i. e. WORD of Jehovah, which can signify nothing but a divine Person: for thus he translates these Words, The WORD of the LORD thy GOD hath been thy Helper; thou hast not wanted any Thing.

Ver. 8. And when we passed by from our Brethren the Children of Esau, which dwell in Seir, through the Way of the Plain,] i. e. Through the Wilderness of Zin.

From Elath, and from Ezion-Gaber,] Two Places upon the Red-sea; the last of which [Ezion-Gaber] signifies as much as the Spine, or Back-bone of a Man. So called, because there were great ragged Rocks in that Port, (as Bochart observes) like those at Dyrrachium in Macedonia; which had its Name also from thence, lib. i. Canaan, cap. 44.

We turned,] After they were denied Passage through their Country, and had gone through those Stations mentioned Numb. xxxiii. 41, 42, &c.

And passed by the Way of the Wilderness of Moab,] See Numb. xxi. 11. Going by the East-side of their Country, Judg. xi. 18.

Ver. 9. And the LORD said unto me, Distress not the Moabites, neither contend with them in Battle:] He would not have them force their Way through his Country; because the King of Moab refused them a Passage, as the King of Edom had done, Judg. xi. 17. For their Country now was but small, since Sihon King of the Amorites had taken from them all the best of it, which lay between Arnon and Jabbok; of which the Israelites had possessed themselves by the Conquest of Sibon. So that they had only that Portion remaining, which lay upon the Dead-sea; which David, in After-times, subdued.

For I will not give thee of their Land for a Possession,] No more than of Edom, ver. 5.

Because I have given Ar] It is likely the capital City gave Name to the whole Country about it. At least Ar (which was the chief City of Moab, Numb. xxi. 15, 28.) is put here for all the Land of Moab; as Mount Seir for all the Land of Edom, ver. 1.

Unto the Children of Lot for a Possession.] Though the Moabites were now a wicked People; yet for their pious Ancestor's sake, from whom they were descended, God would not have them dispossessed.

Ver. 10. The Emims dwell there in Time past, &c.] A terrible People, as the very Name imports, both for their Number, and for their Strength, being of a large Size, like Anakims: see Gen. xiv. 5.

Ver. 11. Which also were accounted Giants, as the Anakims, &c.] Which seems to have been their Name; or else Rephaim: but to distinguish them from others of that Name in Canaan, the Moabites called them Emims.

Ver. 12. The Horims also dwell in Seir before-time;] They were the ancient Inhabitants of Mount Seir; as the Emims were of the Country of Moab, Gen. xiv. 6. xxxvi. 20.

But the Children of Esau succeeded them,] Planted themselves in that Mountain.

When they had destroyed them from before them, and dwell in their stead,] When the Children of Esau expelled the Horites, or the Children of Lot the Emims, is no where recorded; nor who were their Leaders in these Expeditions. But they seem to be here remembered, as an Encouragement to the Israelites to hope, that they might drive out the Inhabitants of Canaan, (who were not stronger than these) as they had already driven the Amorites out of the Country of Sibon, as it here follows.

As Israel did unto the Land of his Possession, which the Lord gave unto them.] Some have argued from hence, that this Book was not written by Moses, but by some-body else, after they had got Possession of the Land of Canaan. But it is manifest, this may relate to what they had done already in dispossessing Sibon King of the Amorites, and Og King of Bashan, of their Country: which, it is expressly said, Moses had given for a Possession to the Tribe of Reuben and Gad, and the Half-tribe of Manasseh; and that by God's Direction, Numb. xxxii. 33. xxxiv. 14, 15. and in this Book, xxix. 8. This hath been observed by many; particularly by Huetius, in his Demonstratio Evangelica, Propos. iv. cap. xiv. n. 15.

Ver. 13. Now rise up, said I, and get you over the Brook Zered, &c.] Which elsewhere we translate the Valley of Zered: see Numb. xxi. 12.

Ver. 14. And the Space in which we came from Kadesh-Barnea, until we were come over the Brook Zered, was thirty and eight Years;] For it is evident, by the Story in Numbers, that they came to Kadesh-Barnea about the fourth Month of the second Year after they came out of Egypt. See upon Numb. xii. 16. And if we suppose that they removed from hence in the seventh or eighth Month of that Year, it is certain that they could not come to this Brook till the seventh or eighth Month of the fortieth Year. For Aaron died at Mount Hor on the first Day of the fifth Month of this Year; and we must allow two or three Months Time, for all that followed between that and this, viz. the Conquest of King Arad, and of Sibon, and Og, &c.

Until all the Generation of the Men of War] So they were called, who were above twenty Years old, Numb. i. 3.

Were wasted out from among the Host,] Utterly consumed, so that not one of them was left, Numb. xxvi. 64, 65.

As the Lord sware unto them:] See Numb. xiv. 28, 29.

Ver. 15. For indeed the Hand of the Lord was against them, to destroy them from among the Host,] Some of them, it is likely, died a natural Death; but many of them might, in the Course of Nature, have lived longer, if God had not several Ways cut them off before their Time.

Until they were consumed.] By one Plague or other, which God sent among them: so that a great deal of their Time, in the thirty-eight Years before-mentioned, were spent, it is likely, in burying, and mourning for their Dead.

Ver. 16, 17. So it came to pass, when all the Men of War were consumed and dead from among the People, that the Lord spake unto me, saying,] This was spoken, it is probable, just as they passed over the Brook Zered, or in their next Station, at Dibon-Gad, Numb. xxxiii. 45.

Ver. 18. Thou art to pass over through Ar, the Coast of Moab, this Day;] Or rather, to pass by the Border of Moab: for they were not permitted to come into their Country, ver. 9. See upon ver. 4.

Ver. 19. And when thou comest nigh over against the Children of Ammon,] As they did after the Conquest of Sibon King of the Amorites; whose Country bordered upon the Ammonites, Numb. xxi. 13, 24.

Distress them not, nor meddle with them:] The same Command with that about the Edomites and Moabites, ver. 5, 9.

For I will not give thee of the Land of the Children of Ammon any Possession,] As he had said before of the Land of Moab, ver. 9.

Because I have given it unto the Children of Lot for a Possession;] To the Descendants of his youngest Son; as he had done the Country of Moab to the Children of the eldest.

Ver. 20. That also was accounted a Land of Giants, &c.] Was called the Country of Giants, or Rephaim: for People so called inhabited it.

And the Ammonites call them Zamzummins,] Changed their Names, it is probable, from Zuzims, (see Gen. xiv. 5.) as they were called before, into Zamzummins. But why they were called either by the one Name or the other, it is but conjectured. Some conceive they were called Zuzims, from their Swiftnefs, or nimble Running, which, in Warriors, was a Quality always highly valued; and Zamzummins from their abominable Wickednefs, or their Craft and Cunning in doing Mischief.

Ver. 21. A People great, and many, and tall as the Anakims ;] The same Description which he gave of the Emims, ver. 10.

But the LORD destroyed them before them,] i. e. Before the Ammonites; who expelled them out of their Country, and, it's like, cut off the most of them.

And they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead :] This is so often repeated, to possess the Minds of the Israelites with a Sense of God's Providence, which rules every-where; displacing one People, and settling another in their stead; and fixing their Bounds also, which they shall not pass without his Leave.

Ver. 22. As he did to the Children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir; when he destroyed the Horims from before them, &c.] He repeats this (which he had said before, ver. 12.) because it was a fresher Instance of God's Disposal of Countries unto what People he pleases; and nearly touched the Israelites, because they were their Brethren.

Ver. 23. And the Avims which dwell in Hazerim, even unto Azzah,] Unto which he adds an Instance, which seems to be elder than any of the former, concerning a People called Avims; who inhabited some Part of the Land of Canaan, whither they were going. For tho' we do not read of Hazerim in any other Place, yet Azzah, i. e. Gaza, was in the Country of the Philistines, who expelled these Avims. And David Chytraeus thinks, that Hazerim was a Town afterward in the Tribe of Judah, called Hazagaddab, Josh. xv. 27.

The Caphtorims, which came out of Caphtor,] That is, some People of Cappadocia; who were near of Kin to the Philistines: see Gen. x. 14.

Destroyed them, and dwelt in their stead.] Concerning which, see in the Place above-named. Unto which I shall only add, that the Avims being expelled out of Canaan by the Caphtorims, went, it is very probable, over Euphrates, and settled there; till the King of Affyria brought some of them back again, to plant the Country of Samaria, 2 Kings xvii. 31. where we translate this Word Avites: see Bochart, in his Phaleg. lib. iv. cap. xxxvi.

Ver. 24. Rise ye up, take your Journey, and pass over the River Arnon :] see Numb. xxi. 13, 14.

Behold I have given into thy Hand Sibon the Amorite King of Heshbon, and his Land, &c.] You yourselves shall do to him, what your Brethren the Children of Esau did to the Horites, and the Moabites to the Emims, and the Children of Ammon to the Zamzummims, and the Caphtorims to the Avims. By which their Faith might still be more confirmed, that the People of Canaan, tho' never so mighty, should not be able to stand before them.

Ver. 25. This Day will I begin to put the Dread of thee, and the Fear of thee, upon the Nations that are under the whole Heaven,] Especially upon the Canaanites, who were struck, no doubt, with Terror by this Conquest, as they had been by all that befel the Egyptians, Josh. ii. 10, 11.

Who shall hear Report of thee,] This explains what he means by the hyperbolical Expression before going, the Nations under the whole Heaven, that is, as many as shall hear of these Things.

And shall tremble, and be in Anguish because of thee.] As Women in Travail are.

Ver. 26. And I sent Messengers out of the Wil- derness of Kedemoth,] There is a City of this Name mentioned by Joshua, xiii. 18. from whence this Wilderness had its Denomination. Some take it to be the same with that called Jeshimon, Numb. xxi. 20.

Unto Sibon King of Heshbon with Words of Peace, saying,] A friendly Meslage, desiring there might be no Quarrel between him and the Israelites, who desired nothing but the common Offices of Humanity.

Ver. 27. Let me pass through thy Land :] Which was the direct Way to the Fords of Jordan.

I will go along by the Highway,] Not turning into the Fields or Vineyards, as it is expressed Numb. xxi. 22. In the Hebrew the Word is doubled, bederech bederech, by the Way, by the Way: which seems to be a vehement Affirmation, to assure them they would not stir out of the Highway.

I will neither turn unto the Right Hand, nor to the Left.] Not step aside out of the common Road, (called the King's Highway) which was free for all People.

Ver. 28. Thou shalt sell me Meat for Money, that I may eat, &c.] They offered to pay for whatsoever they wanted; which is included in Meat and Drink.

Only I will pass through on my Feet :] Barely have a Passage through his Country.

Ver. 29. As the Children of Esau, which dwell in Seir, and the Moabites, which dwell in Ar, did unto me :] He doth not mean that they granted Israel a Passage through their Country; but that they did not deny to sell them Meat and Drink for their Money, as they passed by their Coasts.

Until I shall pass over Jordan, into the Land which the LORD our GOD giveth us :] This was said to move Sibon to consent to their Desire, by letting him understand, they intended nothing against his Country; being secure of a Settlement in the Land of Canaan, unto which they prayed him to let them pass quietly.

Ver. 30. But Sibon King of Heshbon would not let us pass by him ;] Refused to agree to this reasonable Demand.

For the LORD thy GOD hardened his Spirit, and made his Heart obstinate, &c.] Gave him over to his own inflexible Humour, which was set upon violent Courses; from which God did not divert him, (because he intended to destroy him) but rather ordered Things so, that his Mind should be enraged and disturbed, and so unable to consider Things prudently, and discern what belonged to his Peace; which is the utmost that can be meant by hardening his Spirit, and making his Heart obstinate. Which, as it is a Sin, cannot be ascribed unto God; but as it is a Punishment, might justly be inflicted by him upon Sibon for his former Sins.

Ver. 31. And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have begun to give Sibon and his Land] This was said when Moses saw him coming out to Battle against them, (as it here follows in the next Verse) at which Time he is said to begin to give them his Country, because he had absolutely resolved it; and, it's probable, so confounded his Forces, that they were as good as already conquered.

Before thee :] Into their Power; that they might go into it at their Pleasure.

Begin to possess, that thou mayst inherit his Land.]

Land.] (In the same Sense he bids Moses begin to possess) i. e. prepare to take Possession of it: see iii. 2.

Ver. 32. Then Sibon came out against us, he and all his People, to fight at Jabaz:] See Numb. xxi. 23.

Ver. 33. And the LORD our GOD delivered him before us, and we smote him and his Sons, and all his People.] They won the Field, and killed him, his Sons, and all that came out to fight with them. And R. Solomon saith, his Sons were like himself, very great Men.

Ver. 34. And we took all his Cities at that Time,] After this Victory, they took his whole Country, as is related Numb. xxii. 24, 25. and the Cities belonging to it, are mentioned xxxii. 34, 35, &c.

And utterly destroyed the Men, and the Women, and the little ones of every City; we left none to remain:] They being Part of those wicked People the Amorites, whom GOD had condemned to utter Destruction: for the Amorites came out of Canaan, and took this Country from the Moabites, and the Children of Ammon.

Ver. 35. Only the Cattle we took for a Prey unto ourselves, &c.] They had the divine Warrant for this, no doubt; as they had for the Extirpation of the People.

Ver. 36. From Aroer, which is by the Brink of the River of Arnon,] This River divided Moab from the Kingdom of Sibon, (Numb. xxi. 13, 24.) upon which the City of Aroer stood; which was now in the Possession of Sibon, tho' belonging formerly to the Moabites.

And from the City that is by the River,] This some take to be the City Ar, Numb. xxi. 15. But I think these Words should rather be translated, even the City in the River; meaning Aroer still, as a remarkable Place, being encompassed with the River, Josb. xii. 2. For, Ar, I think, was never in the Possession of the Amorites, being the capital City of Moab.

Even unto Gilead, &c.] For half of Gilead belonged to the Country of Sibon, Josb. xii. 2. and was given to the Tribe of Gad, Josb. xiii. 27. And the other half belonged to the Kingdom of Og, (as we read in the same Place, Josb. xii. 4, 5.) and was given to the Half-tribe of Manasseh, Josb. xiii. 31.

Ver. 37. Only unto the Land of the Children of Ammon thou camest not,] That is, into no Part of their Country, which was then in their Possession: But all that the Amorites had taken from them, was given to the Gadites, Josb. xiii. 25.

Nor unto any Place of the River Jabbok,] To no Place beyond that River, which was the Border of the Children of Ammon, Numb. xxi. 24. Josb. xii. 2.

Nor into the Cities of the Mountains,] Much less into the mountainous Parts of the Country of the Ammonites.

Nor unto whatsoever the LORD our GOD forbade us.] The Words in the Hebrew are, And all whatsoever the LORD our GOD commanded us, i. e. not to meddle withal.

C H A P. III.

Verse 1. THEN we turned, and went up the Way to Bashan; and Og the King of Bashan came out against us, &c.] See Numb. xxi. 33. where there are the very same Words, Ver. 2. And the LORD said unto me, Fear him not; for I will deliver, &c.] The same Words in Numb. xxi. 34. Only there he saith, I have delivered him into thy Hand, that is, resolved to do it. Which may interpret what is said in the foregoing Chapter of this Book, ver. 31. concerning Sibon.

Ver. 3. So the LORD our GOD delivered into our Hands Og also the King of Bashan, &c.] See Numb. xxi. 35.

Ver. 4. And we took all his Cities at that Time, &c. Threescore Cities,] See upon Numb. xxxii. 41.

All the Region of Argob,] A small Province lying between Jordan and the Mountains of Gilead, a little above the Sea of Tiberias: Which Region was afterwards called Trachonitis, from the Asperity of the Mountains.

The Kingdom of Og in Bashan.] Belonging to his Kingdom in Bashan, ver. 13. and 1 Kings iv. 13.

Ver. 5. All these Cities were fenced with high Walls, Gates and Bars, &c.] So they are described 1 Kings iv. 13.

Ver. 6. And we utterly destroyed them, &c.] For they were Amorites, and therefore under the Curse of God; being Part of the seven Nations of Canaan, devotive to Destruction: see ii. 34.

Ver. 7. But all the Cattle, and the Spoil of the Cities, we took for a Prey to ourselves.] As they had done before, when they destroyed Sibon and his People, ii. 35.

Ver. 8. And we took at that Time out of the Hand of the two Kings of the Amorites, the Land that was on this Side Jordan,] Which was given to the two Tribes of Reuben and Gad, and half the Tribe of Manasseh, ver. 12, 13. If Men were not blinded with Prejudice, they could not but see from hence, that the Word beeber, in the first Verse of this Book, is rightly translated, on this Side: for beyond Jordan (as they would have it signify) in the Land of Canaan, these two Kings had no Possessions; nor did Moses make any Conquest there.

From the River of Arnon unto Mount Hermon:] This River was the Bounds of their Country on the South: and Hermon, which was one of the Mountains of Gilead, (where it joins to Libanus) was their Bound on the North.

Ver. 9. Which Hermon the Sidonians call Sirion,] And so it is called in Psal. xxix. 6. and joined with Lebanon: for it was as much a Part of Libanus as of Gilead, these two Mountains there meeting together. Whence Jeremiab calls Gilead the Head of Lebanon, xxii. 6. because Libanus begins where Gilead ends.

And the Amorites call it Shenir.] And so it is called Ezek. xxvii. 5. and had this Name, as Bochart conjectures, from the Multitude of wild Cats which were in this Mountain: for the Arabians called that Creature Sinaur or Sinar: see Hieroicoicon, P. i. lib. iii. cap. 14.

Ver. 10. All the Cities of the Plain,] All the flat Country which the LXX thought was called Misôr; for they retain here that Hebrew Word.

And all Gilead,] i. e. All that Part of it which belonged to him; which was but half, as I observed before, ii. 36.

And all Bashan,] That Part of his Country which was properly and peculiarly called Bashan; which which being the most rich and fertile, (as the Word signifies) gave Denomination to his whole Kingdom.

Unto Salcbab and Edrei, Cities of the Kingdom of Og in Basban :] The former of these is mentioned Josh. xiii. 11. (just as it is here) as the Bounds of Basban towards Mount Hermon or Lebanon : So Cbytraus, a Town in Basban in the Mountains of Libanus near to Macbati. And Edrei was the Place where they fought with Og, and overthrew him, Numb. xxi. 33.

Ver. 11. For only Og, King of Basban, remained of the Remnant of Giants ;] Or of the Repbaim, a very ancient People in that Country, (Gen. xiv. 5.) who were either descended from the Amorites, or mingled with them : And Og was the very last of them ; so that he and his People being destroyed, none of them remained.

Bebold, his Bedstead was a Bedstead of Iron :] Which was no unusual Thing in ancient Days ; tho' far later than this. For Ibucydides saith, That when the Thebans took Platea, they made Beds of the Brass and Iron they found there ; which they dedicated to Juno. And Beds of Silver and Gold are mentioned by divers Authors, as Huetius observes in his Demonstr. Evangel. Propos. iv. cap. 14. n. 7.

Is it not in Rabbath of the Children of Ammon ?] This is thought by some to be a considerable Objection against Moses being the Author of this Book : For how should this Bedstead, say they, come to the Children of Ammon in his Days ? No doubt, they imagine, it would have remained in Basban whilst Og lived ; tho' in Length of Time it might be carried into the Country of the Ammonites : As if Og, fearing the worst, might not send his Bed, and his best Furniture, unto the Ammonites, knowing they would be safe among them, because the Israelites were forbid to make War upon them ; or Moses, having conquered the Country, and kept all the Spoil ; ver. 7. might not sell this, among other Goods, to the Children of Ammon ; who preserved it in their capital City. No body can see an Unreasonableness in either of these Suppositions of the same Huetius. Nor do I see how the Conjecture of another learned Person (Andreas Masius, upon the Twelfth of Joshua) can be confuted ; which is, That the Ammonites drove out that monstrous Sort of People, mentioned ii. 21. Og might possibly escape, (and so is said here to be left of the Remnant of Giants) who flying hither to the Amorites, was made their King, because of his goodly Presence, and great Valour. But the Ammonites kept his Bedstead, and shewed it as a Monument of that illustrious Victory, which they got over the Repbaim, or as they call'd them, the Zamzammims in that Country.

Nine Cubits was the Length thereof, and four Cubits the Breadth of it,] This is mentioned to shew, of what a vast Stature Og was : for Bedsteads being, according to the common Custom, made a third Part longer than the Persons that lie in them, he was six Cubits high, as Maimonides computes, that is, as high again as any other Man, More Nevochim, p. ii. cap. 47. Which is very sober Discourse, in Comparison with what other Jews say of him : see Schickard, in his Bechinab Happeruschim, p. 120.

After the Cubit of a Man,] According to the Cubit of ordinary Men, saith the same Maimonides, (which is a little more than half a Yard) not of Og before-mentioned. But what Need was there, say former Objectors, to mention this ; since the Israelites saw Og lie dead before them on the Ground, and needed not to be told by Moses how tall he was ? And therefore they conclude this was written by some-body else, in After-times. As if Moses did not write for the Benefit of those that come after, as well as for the present Generation. Who that they might be satisfied what a vast Man Og was ; he left it upon Record how large his Bedstead was, and where it might be seen ; whereby they may judge of his Stature. Besides, there were in the present Generation great Numbers of Children, old Men, Women, and Servants, who could not go to see Og lie at Length upon the Field : but by this Means were instructed, from what a terrible Enemy God had delivered them.

They that question the Truth of this Relation, may read, if they be able, what the Learned Huetius hath at large discoursed concerning Men of a portentous Bigness in all Countries, (in his Questiones Alnetanæ, lib. ii. cap. 12. n. 3.) of which no Man can doubt, who is not resolved to disbelieve all the World. In his Demonstratio Evangelica also he observes, That Homer makes Tityon, when he was dead, to have lain stretch'd out upon (not nine Cubits, but) nine Acres of Ground :

Which Hyperbole may excuse the Jewish Rabbins, when they say, That Og was nine Cubits long when he lay in his Cradle : see Propos. iv. cap. 8. n. 4.

Ver. 12. And this Land, which we possessed at that Time, from Aroer, which is by the River Arnon,] See ii. 36.

And half Mount Gilead, and the Cities thereof, gave I unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites,] See Numb. xxxii. 34, 35, &c. but especially Josh. xiii. 15, &c. where he distinctly relates what Portion of this Country was given to the Reubenites ; and ver. 24, 25, &c. what was given to the Gadites. And it appears that none of Gilead belonged to the Reubenites ; but the Gadites had one half of it, as the Manassites had the other.

Ver. 13. And the rest of Gilead,] Which was not given to the Gadites.

And all Basban, being the Kingdom of Og,] That is, all that was taken from Og, of which he was King.

Gave I unto the Half-tribe of Manasseh ; all the Region of Argob, with all Basban,] It is repeated again, lest any one should think, that Argob, which was a distinct Province in that Kingdom, was not given to them by this Grant : see ver. 4.

Which was called the Land of Giants,] Where the Repbaims formerly inhabited ; of whom Og was the last : see Gen. xiv. 5. compared with xv. 20. Josh. xiii. 12.

Ver. 14. Jair, the Son of Manasseh, took all the Country of Argob,] This is one Reason why he gave this Country to them : see Numb. xxxii. 41.

Unto the Coasts of Gesburi and Maacbatbi ;] We had no Mention of these Places before ; which were in the northern Part of this Country, as appears appears from Josb. xii. 4, 5. xiii. 11. But the People of these Places they could not expel, Josb. xiii. 13.

And called them after his own Name, Basban-bawoth-jair,] Numb. xxxii. 41.

Unto this Day,] From hence likewise Cavils are raised against Moses being the Author of this Book: When the most that can be concluded from hence is, that upon the revising of these Books by Ezra, he put in these few Words to certify the Reader, that still they retained this Name; as some body, no doubt, added the History of Moses's Death at the End of this Book. This the greatest Defenders of the Authority of these Books, as written by Moses himself, make no Scruple to allow; particularly Huetius, and since him Hermannus Witsius in his Miscellanea Sacra, lib. i. cap. xiv. sect. 47. But there is no Necessity to yield so much; for Moses might say this himself, tho' it was not long before he wrote this Book. For so the holy Writers do sometimes mention Places, which had their Name but newly-given them, from a particular Fact, that Posterity might know the Original of it: see Acts i. 19.

Ver. 15. And I gave Gilead] All that was not possessed by the Gadites.

Unto Machir,] To the Posterity of Machir, Numb. xxxii. 40.

Ver. 16. And unto the Reubenites, and unto the Gadites,] Here is a more exact Description of that Part of the Country, which was given to the other two Tribes.

I gave from Gilead] Half of which, as I observed, was given to the Gadites, ver. 12.

Even unto the River Arnon,] Which was the Bounds of the Country towards Moab: see ii. 36.

Half the Valley,] The same Word in the Hebrew Language, signifies both a Valley, and a Brook or River: and being translated in the foregoing Words, the River, it should be so here likewise, half the River; that is, to the Middle of the River Arnon; by which the Bounds of their Country are most exactly set. And thus not only the LXX. and the Vulgar, but Onkelos also translate it, the Middle of the Torrent; yea, we ourselves also in the Twelfth of Josb. ver. 2. where there are the same Words, which in the Hebrew run thus, Unto the River Arnon, the Midst of the River: where the City of Aroar stood, encompassed by the River, as I observed in the foregoing Chapter, ver. 36.

And the Border,] Something is understood, viz. went (as the Phrase is Josb. xv. 6, 7, &c.) or reached, or some such Word. Or the Meaning must be, the Country bordering upon that River.

Even unto the River Jabbok, which is the Border of the Children of Ammon:] This River was the other Boundary of the Country.

Ver. 17. The Plain also, and Jordan,] The flat Country toward the River Jordan: which was the western Bounds of this Country of Sidon; as the River Arnon was the southern, and the River Jabbok the northern; the Country of the Children of Ammon being on the East.

And the Coast thereof, from Cinnereth,] The Word thereof is not in the Hebrew: Therefore these Words may be better rendred the Coast from Cinnereth. Called the Sea of Cinneroth, Josb. xii. 3. xiii. 27. it lying upon a Country and a City called by that Name, Josb. xi. 2. xix. 35. Which gave the Name to this Sea, called in the New Testament, the Sea of Galilee, and the Sea of Genesareth, and at last the Sea of Tiberias; in Honour of the Emperor Tiberius: see upon Numb. xxxiv. 11.

Even unto the Sea of the Plain, even the Salt-sea,] The Dead-sea, as it is called in other Places; which, before the Burning of Sodom and Gomorrab, had been a most pleasant Plain.

Under Ashdoth-Pisgab,] The Name of a City in this Country, Josb. xiii. 20.

Eastward,] Which lay East of the Salt-sea and Jordan; which was the western Bounds, as I said, of this Country.

Ver. 18. And I commanded you at that Time, saying,] That is, he gave this Charge to the two Tribes of Reuben and Gad, and to the Half-tribe of Manasseh before-mentioned.

The LORD your GOD hath given you this Land to possess it, &c.] According to their own Desire; but on Condition they should help their Brethren to conquer the Land of Canaan: see Numb. xxxii. 20, 21, 22.

Ver. 29. But your Wives, and your little ones, and your Cattle, (for I know you have much Cattle) shall abide in your Cities which I have given you;] See Numb. xxxii. 16, 24, 26.

Ver. 20. Until the LORD have given Rest unto your Brethren, as well as unto you, &c.] Brought them to a Settlement in the Land of Canaan, and given them a peaceable Possession of it. After which, we read that Josbua dismissed these Tribes, and sent them to their Wives and Children, Josb. xxii. 4.

Ver. 21. And I commanded Josbua at that Time, saying,] About that Time; when by GOD's Order he appointed Josbua to be his Successor, and took him to be his Associate in the Government, Numb. xxvii. 18, &c.

Thine Eyes have seen all that the LORD your GOD hath done unto these two Kings: so shall the LORD do unto all the Kingdoms, whither thou passest.] This seems to be the Preface to the Charge, which by GOD's Command he gave to Josbua at that Time, Numb. xxvii. 19, 23.

Ver. 22. Ye shall not fear them; for the LORD your GOD he shall fight for you;] This is Part of the Charge itself; which he had heard him give all the People, eight and thirty Years ago, i. 21, 29, 30.

Ver. 23. And I besought the LORD at that Time, saying,] Being told by GOD at the same Time, (Numb. xxvii. 12, 13.) that he should shortly die, and only see the Land of Canaan, but not enter into it, Moses made his humble Supplication to GOD, that he would not execute the Sentence which he had denounced against him. For the Word besought signifies Supplication to one that is offended.

Ver. 24. O LORD GOD, thou hast begun to shew thy Servant thy Greatness, and thy mighty Hand:] In subduing the two Kings of the Amorites.

For what GOD is there in Heaven, or in the Earth, that can do according to thy Works, and according to thy Might?] He speaks according to the Language

Language of those Times, when Men worshipped many Gods of several Sorts: None of which, he acknowledges, were able to bring to pass such Things as the LORD had done.

Ver. 25. I pray thee let me go over, and see the good Land that is beyond Jordan,] To see is here to enjoy it, as the rest of the Israelites were to do: For GOD bad him go up into a Mountain, and behold it; but threatened, he should not enter into it. Which Threatning he might well think was reverible, as others had been against the People of Israel upon his Prayer for them, though they had more highly offended the Divine Majesty than he had done. For though he doubted at the first, especially when he saw no Water come out of the Rock at the first Stroke; yet he presently recovered himself, and smote it the second Time, believing GOD would relieve them.

That goodly Mountain,] Most think that he desired to go so far into it, as to see the Place where GOD intended to settle his Divine Presence: Which proved to be Mount Moriah. But nothing was known of this, a long Time after; unless we suppose it was revealed unto him, that where Abraham offered Isaac, there the LORD would dwell. It seems to me that he means, that goodly Country, full of noble Mountains: For thus the Word Mountain is often used, particularly Numb. xiii. 29. where the Spies say the Amorites dwell in the Mountain, i. e. in that mountainous Part of Canaan.

And Lebanon.] He desired to go through the whole Country, as far as Lebanon; which was the most Northerly Part of it, (famous for goodly Cedars) as the Mountain before spoken of, was in the South of Canaan.

Ver. 26. But the LORD was wroth with me for your Sakes,] See i. 37.

And would not hear me:] Refused to grant my Petition.

And the LORD said unto me, Let it suffice thee, speak no more unto me of this Matter.] This suggests that Moses renewed his Petition, after the first Denial; and more earnestly begged this Favour of GOD: Which he could not obtain; but was enjoined Silence. This argues great Displeasure; and is mentioned by him, as an Admonition to the Israelites, to be fearful to offend the Divine Majesty.

Ver. 27. Get thee up into the Top of Pisgab.] See what I have noted upon Numb. xxvii. 12.

And lift up thine Eyes Westward, and Northward, &c.] Take a full View of the Country in all the Quarters of it; which might be seen from the Top of this Mountain, which was called Nebo. See xxxiv. 1, 2, 3.

Ver. 28. But charge Joshua, and encourage and strengthen him, &c.] Bid him not doubt, that I will bring my People thither under his Conduct, though I deny thee Entrance into it.

Ver. 29. So we abode in the Valley over-against Beth-Peor.] It is likely that there was a Temple built to Baal-Peor, which fronted this Valley; for so Beth signifies an House or Temple of Peor. Which gave the Name to a City wherein it stood; which was Part of the Inheritance of the Reubenites, Josh. xiii. 20. In this Valley Moses was buried, xxxiv. 6. where he made this most excellent Exhortation to all the People.

CHAP. IV.

Ver. 1. NOW therefore hearken, O Israel,] Having commemorated several Benefits, which GOD had bestowed upon them since their coming out of Egypt, and the giving of the Law at Mount Sinai, with several severe Punishments, which he had inflicted on them for their Disobedience to it, Moses proceeds now to exhort them earnestly to the Observance of it.

Unto the Statutes,] These seem to be such Laws as concerned the Worship of GOD.

And unto the Judgments,] And then these were such as concerned their Dealings one with another. Which two Words comprehend all that is signified by Testimonies and Precepts also, in other Places.

Which I teach you, for to do them;] Which he was about to set before them; and press upon their Practice.

That ye may live, and go in, and possess the Land which the LORD GOD of your Fathers giveth you.] Not perish as their Forefathers had done in their Rebellion; but be happy, and enjoy what GOD had promised, and was ready now to bestow upon them.

Ver. 2. Ye shall not add unto the Word which I command you, neither shall you diminish from it;] This is thought by some to signify, that they should not make the least Alteration in the Laws he had given them, about the Rites of Divine Worship, and Abstinence from several Meats, and such-like Things; which were distinctive Marks, whereby they were separated from other Nations to be a peculiar People to him. Thus Chiskuni interprets these Words, Tbou shalt not add Fear, upon the Fear of the blessed GOD; that is, any other Worship to the Divine Worship prescribed by these Laws, nor diminish that Worship: Which Interpretation seems to be warranted, by what follows, Thy Eyes have seen what the LORD thy GOD did, because of Baal-Peor. But in the Words before-going, (which introduce these) Judgments being mentioned as well as Statutes, there must be a larger Sense of this Injunction, which relates to all the Laws of GOD: And the Meaning seems to be, Ye shall not transgress any of these Precepts, either by doing any Thing contrary to them, which was to add; or omitting any Thing which they required, which was to diminish. Thus Grotius interprets it, upon 2 Corinth. xi. 24. Addere ad legem est facere quod lex vetat, diminuerere est omittere quod lex jubet. But which Way soever we take it, nothing is more certain, than that this Prohibition preserved these Books from any Alteration, since the Time they were written: For the whole Body of the People acknowledging their Divine Authority, none of them dared to change any Thing, either by Addition or Diminution. Of which there is a wonderful Instance in the People that came out of Assyria, (in the Room of the Israelites, who were transported thither) to inhabit the Country of Samaria; who receiving this Law, their Posterity have kept it all along to this Day, as uncorrupted, as the Jews themselves have done; altho' they were their mortal Enemies, and have been exposed to all the Changes and Revolutions that can befall a Nation during the Interval of Two thousand and Four hundred Years. Thus the most Learned Dr. Alix observes, in his Reflections upon the Four last Books of Moses, p. 144. And I do not see, why the Perfection of the Scripture, without the Oral Law of the Jews, should not be thought to be established by these Words, as another learned Person (Josh. Wagenfeil) understands them in his Consul. Carminis Lipmanni, p. 585. Yet, as the forenamed Chiskuni notes, it does not seem reasonable to conclude from hence, that they were prohibited to add any Constitutions, as a Hedge and Fence to the Law; or as an Explication of it, when the Sense was doubtful. See Mr. Tborndike, in his Rights of the Church in a Christian State, p. 180, &c.

That ye may keep the Commandments of the LORD your GOD, which I command you.] This justifies the Explication I gave of the foregoing Words, as respecting all GOD's Laws; and xii. 32. makes it more plain. And indeed, GOD being their Law-giver, it was the highest Presumption to make any Alteration in any of his Laws.

Ver. 3. Your Eyes have seen what the LORD did, because of Baal-Peor,] How he cut off Twenty-four thousand by a Plague, and by the Hand of Justice, who had been guilty of Idolatry by the Enticements of the Midianitish Women, Numb. xxv. 5, 9. Which seems to be a Reason, why they should take a special Care about the Worship of GOD; that nothing were done contrary to the Laws he had ordained concerning it.

For all the Men that followed Baal-Peor, the LORD thy GOD hath destroyed them from among you.] The Judges put to Death all those that they knew to be guilty; and the Hand of GOD found out all the rest; so that there was not a Man of them left, who was not swept away by the Pestilence.

Ver. 4. But ye that did cleave unto the LORD,] Did not depart from his Worship, but bewailed the Apostasy of some of their Brethren, Numb. xxv. 6.

Are alive every one of you this Day.] A singular Providence watched over them, to preserve them in such good Health, that not one in so many Thousands was dead since that Time. Nor in the War with the Midianites, wherein they slew all the Males, did they lose so much as one Man, Numb. xxxi. 7, 49.

Ver. 5. Behold, I have taught you Statutes and Judgments,] Verse 1.

Even as the LORD my GOD commanded me,] Sincerely and uprightly, without adding any Thing of myself, or diminishing any Thing that he said.

That ye should do so in the Land whither ye go to possess it.] To be the Rule of your Life, when ye come into the Land of Canaan.

Ver. 6. Keep therefore, and do them; for this is your Wisdom and your Understanding, in the Sight of the Nations,] It is your Interest to observe them, as you will soon find by Experience; which will teach you, that it is not only the wisest Course in itself, but will get you the Reputation of being a wise People among all your Neighbours.

Which shall bear all these Statutes;] There being Mention before (ver. 1, 5.) of Judgments, as well as Statutes, and here only of the latter. Abarbinel thence infers, That even those Laws, which depended wholly upon the Will and Pleasure of GOD, and for which they could give no Reason, (for such they understood by Chukkim,) would procure them very great Honour, if they were carefully observed. For the Nations, seeing how wonderfully they prospered, would be apt to impute it to these extraordinary Prescriptions which they followed; just, saith he, as a Physician, who cures desperate Diseases, by some small trifling Remedies, (as they seem to others) is highly applauded for the Profoundness of his Knowledge and Wisdom. But Maimonides takes this Word Statutes to comprehend all the Laws of GOD; and undertakes to shew that all the Six hundred and thirteen Precepts, have a wise End in them, for the Profit and Benefit of those that observe them; either to beget some wholesome Opinion in their Mind, or to pull out some perverse one; either to institute some good Order, or to take away Iniquity, &c. See More Nevochim, P. III. cap. 31.

And say, Surely this great Nation is a wise and understanding People.] Who continued in Safety, Liberty, and Prosperity, abounding with all manner of Blessings, while they continued all to go up to worship one GOD sincerely at one Place, at certain Set-times, as if the whole Nation was but one Family. All the rest of their Laws, also were admirably fitted to unite them unto GOD, and one to another; and consequently, to make them appear a wise People in the Eyes of other Nations; whose Writers have not only highly magnified Moses, but their Lawgivers have transcribed several of his Laws into their own Constitutions. This appears by the old Attick Laws, and those of the Twelve Tables, as many Learned Men have observed; nay, the Oracle, reported by Porphyrus, in Eusebius's Præparatio Evangelica, lib. ix. cap. 10. thus extols this Nation:

Μῆνοι Χαλδαῖοι σοφίαν λάχον, ἡδ' ἀρ' Ἑβραῖοι
 Αὐτογένεθλον Ἀνακτα σεβάζοντες Θεὸν αἰνῶνς.

The Chaldæans and the Hebrews (who came from Chaldæa) are the only wise People, who worship GOD, the Eternal King, in a pure Manner. And the Oracle of Apollo Clarius, recorded by Macrobius, lib. i. Saturnal. cap. 18. is no less remarkable:

Φράζεο τῶν πάντων ὕπατον Θεὸν ἑμὸν Ἰάω.

Acknowledge Jao (so they pronounced the Name JEHOVAH) to be the highest God of all. For, though Macrobius fancied the Sun to be here called Ἰάω, (no Body can tell why;) yet Diodorus Siculus acknowledges Ἰάω to be the GOD, from whom Moses pretended to have his Laws, i. e. JEHOVAH.

Ver. 7. For what Nation is there so great, who hath GOD so nigh unto them, as the LORD our GOD is in all Things that we call upon him for?

Both

Both Onkelos, and the Paraphrase of Jonathan, and likewise the Hierusalem Targum, are very significant upon this Place: "What People is there, who have a God that approaches to them, so as the LORD our GOD doth to us? At whatſoever Hour we cry unto him; he answers us. It is the Manner of other People, to carry their Gods upon their Shoulders, to shew that they are near to them; when, alas! they are afar off, and cannot hear them: But the LORD our GOD sits on his Throne on high, and hears our Prayers, whatſoever Time we call upon him, &c." To which may be added, that they had a Symbol of GOD's Presence continually among them, in the Holy Place, where he dwelt with them; and Moses, whenſoever he pleased, consulted him in all difficult Affairs; as their High-Priest might do, with the Urim and Tbummim, in all Times to come.

Ver. 8. And what Nation is there so great, that hath Statutes and Judgments so righteous, as all this Law which I set before you this Day? The true Greatness of a Nation (it appears by this and the foregoing Verse) consists in the sincere Worship of GOD, and in the upright Administration of Justice. Both which were so provided for by the Divine Laws among the Jews; that no Nation could compare with them, or was really so great as they were: For though their Country was but small, and they were often oppressed by several cruel Enemies, who desired their Extirpation; yet they recovered themselves, and kept their Laws in their worst Condition (when commonly they best observed them): Infomuch that, as a very Learned Person of our own Church, long ago, observed, after so many Changes and Alterations as there were in their State, from better to worse, and back again; after so many Victories got by them over others, and so many Captivities of their Persons, and Desolations of their Country, as others had wrought, they continued still one and the same People, governed by the same Laws, under several great and potent Monarchies, the successive Rise and Fall of Three of which they were preserved to behold; and in their declining State, able to stand out a great while against the Fourth, the mightiest that ever was on Earth, and that when this Monarchy was in its full Strength; this is a plain Demonstration of the Truth of these Words of Moses, That no Nation was so great as they. See Dr. Jackſon's first Book upon the Creed, Chap. xxi.

Maimonides observes, That the Word Zaddikim, which we translate Righteous, signifies as much as equal and proportionate: Such, saith he, were all these Laws of GOD; in which there was no Excess, by the Prescription of long Pilgrimages, or severe Fastings; nor any Defect, which might open the Window to any Vice, or make them careless in the Practice of Virtue. More Nevochim, P. II. cap. 39.

Ver. 9. Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy Soul diligently, lest thou forget the Things which thou hast seen, &c. Their only Danger was, lest they should grow careless and unmindful of all the wonderful Things that GOD had done for them: Which he therefore exhorts them to think of frequently, and to keep in Memory, and lay to Heart; so that they might preserve the Sense of them as long as they lived, and likewise teach all Posterity to be mindful of them.

Ver. 10. Specially the Day that thou stoodst before the LORD thy GOD in Horeb, But above all, that memorable Day, when the LORD delivered his Law to them from Mount Sinai; at which the Oldest of them were present, and had seen and heard what he said, and how it was delivered.

When the LORD said unto me, Gather me the People together, Unto the Foot of Mount Sinai; where they stood at such a Distance from it as GOD prescribed, Exod. xix. 10, 11, 12, 13.

And I will make them hear my Words, Exod. xix. 9, &c. Exod. xx. 1, &c.

That they may learn to fear me, all the Days that they shall live upon the Earth, &c. For those Words which they heard were pronounced in so terrible a Manner, as to make them dread to offend his Majesty, and to instruct their Children to stand in Awe of him.

Ver. 11. And ye came near, and stood under the Mountain, Exod. xix. 17.

And the Mountain burnt with Fire Exod. xix. 16, 18.

Unto the Midst of Heaven, &c. Into the Middle of the Air, which is frequently called Heaven in Scripture; as the Fowls of Heaven are the Fowls of the Air: But whether the Fire flamed up precisely into the very Midst of the lower Region of the Air, or only a great Height, is not material; either Way the Expression is proper enough.

Ver. 12. And the LORD spake unto you out of the Midst of the Fire: Exod. xix. 20. xx. 1, 22.

Ye heard the Voice of the Words, Exod. xx. 19.

But saw no Similitude, Though sometimes the Divine Majesty seems to have appeared in a visible Shape, (Dan. vii. 9, 10.) yet when he came to give them his Law, he would not appear in the Figure of a Man, or any other Thing, that might seem to represent him to their outward Senses, or their Imagination: For it had been dangerous then to manifest himself under any Resemblance, when he forbade them to make any Resemblance of him. They would have thought, he forbade them to make any other Resemblance, but that wherein he shewed himself to them; in which they would have concluded, it was lawful to represent him.

Only ye heard a Voice. From hence some of the Jews would gather, that the People only heard the Sound of GOD's Words, when he spake the Ten Commandments; but not the Distinction of the Sound, so as to understand the Sense of what he said. Thus Maimonides, in his More Nevochim, P. II. cap. 32. Which is manifestly false, as appears from ver. 10, and 13. and Exod. xx. 22. For therefore the Day wherein he spake to them in Horeb was so remarkable, as never to be forgotten; because he made them hear his Words, so that they might learn to fear him, &c. For though he did not appear in the Likeness of any Thing to them, yet he vouchsafed to speak to them plainly in their own Language, that they might be instructed in their Duty; both which were to keep them from Idolatry. He did not let them see any Shape, that they might not make any Image of him, to worship it, or him by it, after the Manner of the Heathens; but he let them hear his Voice, that they might not go and worship any other Gods, which the Heathens pretended spake to them.

Ver. 13. And he declared unto you his Covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even Ten Commandments;] These were the principal Laws which they covenanted with him to observe, though afterwards he added others, after the Tenor of which he made a Covenant with them, Exod. xxxiv. 27.

And he wrote them upon two Tables of Stone.] Exod. xxiv. 12. xxxiv. 28.

Ver. 14. And the LORD commanded me, at that Time, to teach you Statutes and Judgments, that ye might do them in the Land whither ye go over to possess it.] This doth not signify, that they themselves did not hear the Ten Words from Mount Sinai, but were taught them by Moses (as Maimonides fancies in the forenamed Place); for it plainly relates to the rest of the Laws, which GOD immediately after gave him, (Exod. xxi. xxii. xxiii.) It being their own Desire, that GOD would speak to them no more by himself, but communicate the rest of his Will by Moses, Exod. xx. 19. And accordingly he told the People all the Words of the LORD, and all the Judgments, which he delivered to him, Exod. xxiv. 3.

All this will appear more plainly from the next Chapter of this Book, ver. 22, &c.

It is a mere Imagination of those Jews, who take the Statutes and Judgments here mentioned for their Oral Law, as Aben Ezra, R. Solomon, R. Bechai, and others do, upon this Place; who say, That when GOD gave Moses the written Law, he expounded it to him: Which Exposition he delivered to Josbua, and he to the LXX Elders, &c. so that it came down to them in a successive Tradition.

Ver. 15. Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves, (for ye saw no Manner of Similitude on the Day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb, out of the Midst of the Fire)] He gives them a special Caution about this, because the Nations of the World were so prone to make Images of their Gods; which he expressly forbids in the Second Commandment. Upon this Text the present Jews ground the Third Article of their Faith, which is, that GOD is incorporeal.

Ver. 16. Left ye corrupt yourselves,] By worshipping any Thing but GOD himself alone; unto whom they being espoused, the giving Divine Worship unto any Thing else, was such a Corruption as Adultery is in a married Woman.

And make you a graven Image, the Similitude of any Figure,] See the Second Commandment, Exod. xx. 3, 4.

The Likeness of Male or Female,] The Representation of GOD in Human Shape is first forbidden, because it was most common among the Heathens. Therefore I cannot think this relates to the Egyptian Worship, who honoured Oxen as sacred to Osiris, and Cows as sacred to Isis. Unto which Mr. Selden thinks the LXX had respect, when they translated these Words, Ὁμοιωμα ἀνθρώπου ἢ ζώου. De Diis Syris, Syntag. i. cap. 4.

Ver. 17. The Likeness of any Beast that is on the Earth, &c.] The Word Or is to be here supplied, and in all that follows, in this Manner: Or the Likeness of any Beast that is on the Earth; or the Likeness of any winged Fowl that flyeth in the Air: Where Col-tzippor Canaph, which we translate, and winged Fowl, signifies all Birds and Insects that fly in the Air: For in the Shape of such Creatures also the Heathen represented their Gods, or some of their Qualities: For not only Oxen were sacred to Apis, and Rams to Jupiter Ammon, but Hawks and Eagles, and even Beetles to other Deities.

Ver. 18. The Likeness of any Thing that creepeth on the Ground,] Nothing was more common among the Heathen, than the Worship of Serpents.

The Likeness of any Fish that is in the Waters, &c.] The famous Dagon, whom the Philistines worshipped, was a Fish with an Human Face, Hands, and Feet. Certain it is, the Syrians worshipped a Fish, as Cicero tells us, in his third Book of the Nature of the Gods, Syri Piscem venerantur: Which Mr. Selden thinks, relates to the famous Goddess Atargatis; which is a Word made out of the Hebrew, Addir-dag, i. e. magnificent, or potent Fish. See De Diis Syris, Syntag. ii. cap. 2. The Egyptians were famous in After-times for worshipping all Sorts of Animals; and if one could find they were so in the Days of Moses, it might be assigned as the most probable Reason of his cautioning the Israelites against these Things so particularly, they being lately come out of Egypt.

Ver. 19. And lest thou lift up thine Eyes unto Heaven,] From hence, I believe, that common Speech among the Arabians was derived, Take heed how thou gazest on the Splendor of the Stars: Which is in the first Century of Arabick Proverbs, set forth by Erpenius, (Prov. xxviii.) who saith he knew not what to make of it: But I take it to be a Caveat against Idolatry, to which the ancient Arabians were addicted.

And when thou seest the Sun, and the Moon, and the Stars, even all the Host of Heaven,] The most ancient Idolatry of all other, seems to have been the Worship of the Sun, and the rest of the Heavenly Bodies, which began among the Chaldeans: For there is not any God, or Goddess, among the ancient Gentiles, but hath a respect to the Sun, or the Moon, as Gilbertus Cuperus hath very plainly demonstrated, in his Harpocrates, p. 87, &c. 108, &c. And a very learned Man of our own hath lately said a great deal on the same Subject. See Appendix to the Antiquity of Palmyra, cap. iv. by Mr. A. Seller. And Maimon. More Nevoch. P. III. cap. 30.

Shouldst be driven to worship them, and serve them.] Drawn in, enticed, and deceived, (as Onkelos, and the LXX translate it) either by the Instigation of some evil Genius, or Admiration of their Splendor, or Imitation of other Nations, or a vain Opinion that some Divinity inhabits such illustrious Bodies, or out of a Sense of the Benefits Mankind receive by them: For the chief Philosophers themselves were led by their weak Reasonings into this Error, as appears even by Plato, who saith, it is most just that the Heaven should be worshipped with all the Gods and Demons, and that we should τιναρ τε ἡ εὐχὰς διατρέψας αὐτῶν, &c. as he speaks in his Epinomis. See Eusebius, in his Præpar. Evang. lib. xiii. cap. 18. where he shews how much better the Hebrews speak in this Matter; and quotes some Words of Plato, out of a Work of his not now extant, for the Explication of these Words of Moses. And to make this Idolatry seem more reasonable, some of the Philosophers asserted the Sun to be indued with Understanding; and therefore is called by Proclus, Πνεῦς φωτὸς βασιλεὺς, the intellectual Fire, to distinguish it from other Fires, which are without Understanding: And from thence, in one of the Coins of Caracalla, there is, over the Sun surrounded with Rays, the Word PROVIDENTIA. In short, the World had been so long settled in this Worship, that it was no easy Matter, when the Son of GOD came, to root it out: for the Essenes (the best Sect among the Jews) seem to have had a Tang of this Superstition, as Josephus represents them, lib. ii. de Bello Judaico, cap. 7. Some indeed excuse them, as if they only admired the Sun, as the most excellent Work of GOD, which they expressed by some kind of Adoration: but Josephus expressly tells us, That early in the Morning, they directed to him Παῖς τις εὐχάει, as if they beseeched him to rise. And this stuck still in the Minds of some who professed Christianity, particularly the Followers of Basilides, and the Manichees, who called the Sun and Moon by the Name of Gods; and, sometimes called the Sun, CHRIST, as Theodoret tells us, lib. i. cap. 26. And Epiphanius and St. Austin say the same in more Places than one. No Wonder therefore, that Julian the Apostate should say, that GOD produced, Ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ ἥλιον θεὸν μέγιστον πάντα ὁμοίον αὐτῷ, Out of himself the Sun, the greatest God, in all Things like unto himself: for which he quotes Plato, in his famous Oration in Praise of the Sun; where he saith, The same Sun hath filled the Heaven with innumerable other Gods, Page 146. Ὁλον ἑστὸς θεῶν ἐστὶν ἡ ἥλιος παλαιοί, the whole Heaven is full of Gods from the Sun.

Which the LORD thy GOD hath divided unto all Nations under the whole Heaven;] The Sense is very plain, That all Nations under Heaven have the Benefit of the Sun, Moon, and Stars, as well as the Jews; who were therefore to worship him alone, who is the LORD of them all, and hath made them to be Ministers unto us.

This King Solomon saw, and yet he could not stick to it, but fell into the vain Fancy of the Generality of the Jews, that GOD hath distributed the Nations of the World under the Government of several Stars, which Stars are under the Government of Angels; but the Jews under the Government of GOD alone, and not subject to any Planet. Which hath no Foundation at all; much less can we think that GOD appointed the Nations of the World to worship the heavenly Host, lest they should be Atheists, as Clemens Alexandrinus and Justin Martyr fancy from this Place; unless they mean, that GOD for their Sins delivered them up to this Impiety; which several great Men since have thought to be the true Meaning of these Words: for there are no such Words found in the LXX, as they alledge, ὁμοῖον δ' οὐκ ἔστιν ἵνα κλέσθῃ ὁ θεός σου.

There is one who takes the Word Cbalak, which we translate Divide, to signify the Blasphemy, and makes this the Sense, That GOD places these great Luminaries in the Heavens, to invite and allure all Nations to admire and adore him, the Creator of them. And indeed, in the Conjugation which the Hebrews call Hipbil, this Word doth signify to soften and smooth, and consequently to allure; but it never signifies so in that they call Kal.

Maimonides makes the Sense of Moses's Argument to be thus: GOD hath made the Sun and Moon to be Ministers; not to be worshipped; according to that, Gen. i. 18. Which made the Psalmist so particularly call upon all the heavenly Bodies to praise the LORD, Psal. cxlviii. More Necho. P. ii. cap. 5.

Ver. 20. But the LORD hath taken you, and brought you forth out of the Iron Furnace, &c.] This is a Phrase used also by Solomon, 1 Kings viii. 51. and by Jeremiah xi. 4. to express the most cruel Servitude; wherein GOD suffered them to be tried, as Metals are in a Furnace of Iron, red hot: for he doth not allude to their making of Bricks, (as some imagine) which were not wrought in an Iron Furnace.

To be unto him a People of Inheritance, as ye are this Day.] These were two powerful Arguments to induce them to be obedient: That they were not only delivered from the hardest Slavery; but now made GOD's peculiar People, (see Exod. xix. 5) whom he had purchased for his Inheritance, i. e. to be his People for ever.

From this Verse, Sir John Marsham gathers, that Moses had respect, in the foregoing Verses, to the Egyptian Superstition; as if he had said, Excusso servitutis iugo, etiam excutienda sunt Aegypti βαρύνματα, having shaken off the Egyptian Yoke, they were also to shake off their abominable Idols. For the invisible GOD is not to be worshipped by Images or Symbols. So that, when he forbids them, ver. 16. to make a graven Image, the Similitude of any Figure, the Likeness of Male and Female, he thinks Moses hath respect to the Boves utriusque sexus sacri, the sacred Beesves of both Kinds; the Males to Osiris, the Females to Isis. And he mentions the Likeness of any Beast that is in Earth, ver. 17. because all the Egyptians worshipped not only the Creatures before-mentioned, but Canem & Felem, a Dog and a Cat: The Thebans and Saitæ worshipped Sheep; the Mendesians a Goat; and others of them, Wolves and Lions. And he adds, The Likeness of any winged Fowl that flieth in the Air; because the Egyptians worshipped an Hawk, and the Bird called Ibis; and the Thebans an Eagle. In ver. 18. he mentions the Similitude of any Thing that creepeth upon the Ground; because about Thebes, Serpents were sacred to Jupiter: and the Likeness of any Fish that is in the Waters; because all Egypt worshipped certain Fishes, and some of them the Crocodile, and the Hippopotamus. And as for the Sun, Moon, and Stars, ver. 19. the Worship of them was common to the Egyptians with all other Nations. All this he justifies out of good Authors; and it might pass for Truth, had we any Certainty, that the Egyptians, in the Time of Moses, were as foolish as they were in the Time of Herodotus: see Seculum ix. sect. de Idololatria.

Ver. 21. Furthermore (or rather, But) the LORD was angry with me for your Sakes,] He remembers this again, (tho' he had mentioned it twice before, i. 37. iii. 26.) that they might be more deeply sensible of the Danger of offending GOD, since such a Man as he was excluded from the good Land for one single Fault. Or hereby he would magnify the Goodness of GOD to them, who, tho' great Offenders, had a Privilege granted to them, which was denied him.

And swear that I should not go over Jordan, &c.] He only told him so at the first, Numb. xx. 12. but upon Moses's importunate Intreaty, that he would revoke the Sentence, (of which we read in the foregoing Chapter of this Book) it seems he silenced him, by confirming his Threatning with an Oath.

Ver. 22. But I must die in this Land, I must not go over Jordan:] See Numb. xxvii. 12, 13, 14. His frequent Repetition of this, shews how near it went to his Heart. But ye shall go over, and possess that good Land. GOD's Promise to them, he would have them think, was as irrevocable as his Threatning against him.

Ver. 23. Take heed unto yourselves, lest ye forget the Covenant of the LORD your GOD, which he made with you, and make you a graven Image, &c.] For this was the principal Thing in the Covenant, That they should worship him alone. Which is the Reason it is so often repeated, and was, immediately after the Delivery of the Law from Mount Sinai, mentioned alone, as if it was the only Thing that he had said unto them, Exod. xx. 22, 23. Ye have not seen that I have talked with you from Heaven: Ye shall not make with me Gods of Silver; neither shall ye make unto you Gods of Gold.

Ver. 24. For the LORD thy GOD is a consuming Fire,] So he appeared upon the Mount, when he delivered his Laws from thence in flaming Fire, Exod. xxiv. 17. The learned Huetius thinks, that from these Words of Moses, the ancient Persians took up the Worship of Fire; at first, only as a Resemblance of GOD, or a Symbol of him, (as Maximus Tyrius saith, Dissert. xviii.) but afterwards, as GOD himself, Demonstr. Evangel. p. 94.

Even a jealous GOD;] Who cannot endure any Rival in your Affection: see Exod. xx. 5. These were two awakening Arguments to keep them from Idolatry; that GOD cannot endure it, and will be very terrible in his Punishment of it.

Ver. 25. When thou shalt beget Children, and Childrens Children, and shalt have remained long in the Land,] When they were very much multiplied, and had been long settled in the Possession of the Land of Canaan.

And shall corrupt yourselves,] By the Worship of other Gods.

And make a graven Image, or the Likeness of any Thing,] Which he had strictly prohibited, and solemnly cautioned them to beware of, Ver. 23.

And shalt do Evil in the Sight of the LORD thy GOD, to provoke him to Anger;] By imitating the idolatrous Customs of other Nations.

Ver. 26. I call Heaven and Earth to witness against you this Day,] A solemn kind of Attestation; that as surely as the Heaven and Earth shall endure, they should utterly perish.

That ye shall soon utterly perish from off the Land, whereunto you go, &c.] As soon as the Measure of your Iniquity is filled up, ye shall speedily be destroyed without Remedy. Which the Hebrews refer to the Captivity by Salmanezar and Nebuchadnezzar, after they had been almost Eight hundred Years in this Country; and so might be said, to have remained long in the Land.

Ver. 27. And the LORD shall scatter you among the Nations,] See Levit. xxvi. 33.

Ver. 28. And there ye shall serve Gods, the Work of Mens Hands, Wood and Stone,] The Idols of the Heathen: to the Worship of which he threatens to abandon them, as a Punishment for their Apostasy from GOD. And the Heathen sometime compelled them to worship their Gods, as we read in the Third of Daniel.

Which neither see, nor bear, nor eat, nor smell;] This is a Description of the most stupid Idolatry, to which they should be delivered, if they fell from GOD: see Numb. xxi. 29.

Ver. 29. But if from thence thou shalt seek thy LORD thy GOD,] When they were scattered among the Heathen, ver. 27.

Thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy Heart, and all thy Soul,] If they then repented sincerely, and became unfeigned Worshippers of the LORD their GOD alone, he promises them Forgiveness.

Ver. 30. When thou art in Tribulation, and all these Things are come upon thee,] In great Distress, by the Execution of the foregoing Threatnings.

Even in the latter Days,] In future Times, or in their most declining State. The Jews themselves apply to this present State, wherein they are now, and have been many Years; as appears by the ancient Nitzacon, set forth lately by Wagenfeil, p. 254. where he saith, the whole Nation must repent, before GOD send Deliverance unto them.

If thou turn to the LORD thy GOD, and shalt be obedient unto his Voice;] The great End of Punishment was to convert them, and make them more observant of GOD's Commands.

Ver. 31. For the LORD thy GOD is a merciful GOD;] See Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7. Numb. xiv. 17, 18.

He will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, &c.] He promises not to cast them off, nor destroy them utterly, (tho' they were utterly thrown out of their Land, ver. 26.) but restore them to his Favour, according to the Covenant made with their Fathers, and confirmed by an Oath, Gen. xvii. 19. xxii. 16, 17. See Levit. xxvi. 44, 45.

Ver. 32. For ask now of the Days that are past, which were before thee, since the Day that GOD created Man upon the Earth, &c.] Turn over the Annals of the whole World, from one End of it to the other, ever since it was made, and search whether thou canst find any Thing like to that which GOD hath done for you. Which R. Isaack thus glosses in his Munimen Fidei, (lately set forth by Wagenfeil, p. 103.) From the Creation of the World, till their going out of Egypt, there were passed Two thousand Four hundred and Forty-eight Years; and yet, in all that long Tract of Time, there never were seen or heard in any Part of the World such prodigious Miracles as were wrought to bring them them out of Egypt; and afterward, in leading them through the Red-sea, raining Manna on them; and the Appearance of the divine Majesty at Mount Sinai, &c.

Ver. 33. Did ever People hear the Voice of GOD speaking out of the Midst of the Fire, as thou hast beard, and live? Here was a double, or rather triple Propdigy, never heard of before, that GOD should speak to them audibly and distinctly, so long as to inform them in their Duty towards himself and one another; and this out of the Midst of devouring Flames, and without the least Hurt to any one of them, Exod. xx. 18. xxiv. 17.

Ver. 34. Or bath GOD assayed to go and take him a Nation from the Midst of another Nation,] Another Wonder, never before heard of! that GOD, by two Men alone, Moses and Aaron, should demand the Delivery of a Nation, under the Power of another Nation, far greater and stronger than themselves, and effect it also by no other Means but such as here follow:

By Temptations,] This Word may be thought to signify the grievous Trials of the Israelites, whose Miseries were increased after the first Attempt for their Deliverance; which seemed to them a strange Way of Proceeding, Exod. v. 19, 22, 23. But by Temptations, may in this Place be, in general, meant Miracles, as the Hebrews understand it, and the Chaldee Word Teneffin signifies. This and the two following Words being of the very same Import with the three Words in the New Testament, which we often meet withal, (and seem to be taken from hence) δυνάμεις, τέρατα, & σήματα, with Miracles, Wonders, and Signs, Act. ii. 22. 2 Cor. xii. 12. Hebr. ii. 4.

By Signs,] Which are mentioned Exod. iv. 9. vii. 9, 10.

And by Wonders,] This signifies all the ten Plagues of Egypt: for Pharaoh would not let the Israelites go, till GOD had multiplied his Wonders on the Land of Egypt, as we read, Exod. vii. 3. x. 1, 2. xi. 9, 10.

And by War,] This seems to relate to the Overthrow of Pharaoh in the Red-sea; where the LORD is said to fight for Israel, (Exod. xiv. 14. xv. 3.) while they, which is the greatest Wonder of all, were delivered without striking a Stroke.

And by a mighty Hand, and by a stretched-out Arm;] These are Phrases which we often meet withal, when Moses speaks of their Deliverance out of Egypt, Exod. iii. 19. vi. 6. xv. 12. and many other Places. And the Hebrews think, that his mighty Hand particularly refers to the grievous Murrain, and the Pettilence, which are called the Hand of the LORD, Exod. ix. 3, 15. And his stretched-out Arm, to have a particular Respect to the killing of the First-born; the Angel that was going to smite Jerusalem, appearing with a drawn Sword, and his Hand stretched out, 1 Chron. xxi. 16.

And by great Terrors, &c.] Wherewith the Minds of those were struck who heard of these Things, Exod. xv. 14, 15, 16. Or else he means the Frights in which the Egyptians were, while they remained three Days in the most dismal Darknes (Ex. x. 23.); for the Conclusion of this Verse signifies, that he speaks of all that the LORD their GOD did for them in Egypt before their Eyes.

Ver. 35. Unto thee it was shewed,] This was a particular Kindness to the Israelites, which GOD never before manifested to any other Nation.

That thou mightest know, that the LORD be is GOD; there is none else besides him.] That they might believe him to be the only true GOD, and worship none but him. Which two Articles, saith Maimonides, (More Nevochim, P. ii. cap. 33.) that GOD is, and that he is but One, are Fundamentals of Religion, which were known not only by Prophets, but by every-body else.

Ver. 36. Out of Heaven be made thee to bear his Voice,] See Exod. xx. 22.

That he might instruct thee:] Teach them his Will, which was chiefly declared in the Ten Commandments.

And upon Earib be shewed thee his great Fire,] He means either that they saw it as they stood upon the Earth; or, that it burnt upon the Top of the Mount in their Sight, Exod. xxiv. 17.

And thou heardest his Words out of the Midst of the Fire;] Ver. 11, 12. and Exod. xx. 18, 19.

Ver. 37. And because he loved thy Fathers, therefore he chose their Seed after them,] See Gen. xv. 5, 6, 7. And many other Places in that Book, Exod. iii. 15, 16, 17.

And brought thee out in his Sight with his mighty Power] For as he led them the Way out of Egypt in a Pillar of Cloud, and of Fire, (Exod. xiii. 21.) so when they were in Danger by Pharaoh's Pursuit of them, he came behind them, and they marched in his Sight, Exod. xiv. 19.

Out of Egypt:] This is mentioned in Scripture as the highest Benefit, never to be forgotten by them. So G. Schickard observes, (in his Mischpat Hammelech, cap. 3. Theorem 10.) That they are put in mind of this, in the Frontispiece of the Decalogue, Exod. xx. 2. in the Institution of Sacrifices, Levit. xxii. 33. in the Promise of a Blessing, xxvi. 13. and here, in the Enumeration of GOD's wonderful Works; and afterwards in the Commendation of his Love, Deut. vii. 8. in his Dehortation from Ingratitude, viii. 14. in his Institution of the Passover, xvi. 6. in the Speech which the reproving Angel made to them, Judges ii. 1. in the Hope he gave them of Victory over the Midianites, vi. 9. in his Answer to their Petition for a King, 1 Sam. x. 18. and on a great many other Occasions: for this was, Velut Fundamentum & Initium Reipublicæ, &c. as another learned German speaks, (Grotius on Dan. ix. 15.) the Foundation as we may call it, and the Beginning of their Commonwealth founded by GOD; which comprehended in it abundance of Miracles, far exceeding all the Power of Nature.

Ver. 38. To drive out Nations from before thee, greater and mightier than thou art,] So mighty, that they frightened their Fathers from attempting the Conquest of them, Numb. xiii. 28, 29, 31.

To bring thee in to give thee their Land for an Inheritance, as it is this Day.] That is, as he had given them a late Experiment, by overthrowing the two Kings of the Amorites, and giving them their Land for a Possession.

Ver. 39. Know therefore this Day, and consider it in thine Heart, that the LORD be is GOD in Heaven above, and upon the Earth beneath; there is none else.] Be sensible therefore, and settle this Belief in thy Heart, that the LORD is the sole Governor of the whole World.

Ver.

Ver. 40. Thou shalt keep therefore his Statutes, and his Commandments, which I command thee this Day,] Worship and obey him, as the only Way to make them and their Posterity live happily in the Land, which God was about to give them.

That it may go well with thee, and with thy Children after thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy Days upon the Earth, &c.] Tho' Moses spake of their long Life upon Earth, yet the better Sort of Jews did not set up their Rest here; but from this Word prolong, extended their Hope as far as the other World: for thus Maimonides saith, (in his Preface to Perek Cbelek) they were taught by Tradition, to expound these Words, That it may be well with thee in the World, which is all good; and mayest prolong thy Days in the World, which is all long, i. e. never ends.

Ver. 41. Then Moses severed three Cities] I observed in the Preface to this Book, that Moses did not deliver all that is contained in this Book, in one continued Speech; but at several Times, as appears even by the Beginning of the next Chapter, where it is said, He called all Israel, and said unto them, &c. Which supposes, that after this Preface in these four Chapters, he dismissed them to consider what he had said; and then some Time after assembled the People again, to put them in mind of the Laws, which he so earnestly pressed them to observe. But between these two Times, (after he had spoken all that is contained in these four Chapters, and before he rehearsed the Decalogue) he put in Execution the Command of God lately given, to set apart three Cities of Refuge on this Side Jordan; which he here relates, in the Order, I suppose, wherein it was done.

On this Side Jordan, toward the Sun-Rising:] On the East-side of Jordan, according to what was ordered, Numb. xxxv. 14.

Ver. 42. That the Slayer might flee thither, which should kill his Neighbour unawares, &c.] See there, ver. 11, 12, &c.

Ver. 43. Namely, Bezer in the Wilderness, in the plain Country of the Reubenites, and Ramoth in Gilead of the Gadites, and Goshen in Bashan, of the Manassites.] Thus they are set down also in the Book of Joshua, xx. 8. xxi. 27, 36, 38.

Ver. 44. And this is the Law which Moses set before the Children of Israel:] Now follows the Law, which (after the fore-mentioned Affignation of the Cities of Refuge) Moses set before all the People, and pressed them to the Observance of it.

Ver. 45. These are the Testimonies, and the Statutes, and the Judgments,] As the next Chapter contains the Law, that is, the Ten Commandments, which Moses set before them; so in several following Chapters, (after new earnest Exhortations to Obedience) he represents to them the rest of God's Will, comprehended under these three Words, Testimonies, Statutes, and Judgments: some of which belong to the divine Service, others to their Civil Government, and the rest to ceremonial Observations, for the better Security and Preservation of both the former.

Which Moses spake unto the Children of Israel, after they came forth out of Egypt;] Which he had formerly delivered to them after they were come out of the Egyptian Bondage, Exod. xxi. xxii, xxiii. and in the following Books.

Ver. 46. On this Side Jordan, &c.] In this, and the two following Verses, he again mentions the Place and the Time, when and where he set before them the Law, and the Testimonies, Statutes and Judgments, recorded in the following Part of this Book: which he repeats, that all Posterity might observe the Discourses were made a little before he died.

In the Valley over-against Beth-Peor,] iii. ult.

In the Land of Sison King of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon,] ii. 24, 31, &c.

Whom Moses and the Children of Israel smote, after they were come forth out of Egypt:] In the fortieth Year after their Departure thence; as appears from Numb. xxi. 24. xxxiii. 38.

Ver. 47. And they possessed his Land, and the Land of Og King of Bashan, &c.] See Numb. xxi. 33, &c.

Ver. 48. From Aroer, which is by the Bank of the River Arnon, even unto Mount Sion, which is Hermon,] The Mount here called Sion, is not that which was so famous in after-times, when David made it the Royal Seat; for that was on the other Side Jordan, and is written with different Letters in the Hebrew; but in all Probability, is a Contraction of Sirion; which is the Name by which the Sidonians called Hermon: for the Bounds of this Country are so described, iii. 8, 9, 12. to extend from the River Arnon, to Mount Hermon, which is called Sirion.

Ver. 49. And all the Plain on this Side Jordan Eastward, even unto the Sea of the Plain,] See iii. 17.

Under the Springs of Pisgab.] The same Place there called Ashdod Pisgab. Which is exactly described after the same Manner, by Benjamin Tudelensis, in his Itinerary, set forth by l'Empereur, p. 51. Where he saith, that Jordan is called at Tiberias the Sea of Genesareth; and coming from thence with a great Force, falls at the Foot of this Hill into the Sea of Sodom, which is called the Salt-sea.

CHAP. V.

Verse 1. AND Moses called all Israel, and said unto them,] That is, summoned all the Elders, and Heads of their Tribes, who were to communicate what he said to the rest: Thus it is commonly expounded. But that which he saith, xxix. 10, 11. seems to direct us to another Interpretation; that he himself went from Tribe to Tribe, and repeated these ten Words, (as they are called) placing himself in several Parts of their Camp, that every one might hear what he said. And this was some time after he had, in like Manner, exhorted them to Obedience in the foregoing Preface: see iv. 41.

Hear, O Israel, the Statutes and Judgments, which I speak in your Ears this Day,] Mind what I now say unto you.

That ye may learn them, and keep and do them.] That ye may not be ignorant of such important Truths, nor negligent in the Practice of them; which is the End of Knowledge.

Ver. 2. The Lord our God made a Covenant with us in Horeb,] See Exod. xxiv. 3, 4, 6, 7, 8.

Ver. 3. The LORD made not this Covenant with our Fathers,] Viz. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; with whom he covenanted to give their Posterity the Land of Canaan; but did not make to them this Discovery of his Will, which was the Matter of the Covenant at Horeb.

But with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this Day.] A great Part of those who were then at Horeb, were now alive, viz. all under twenty Years old. And if they had been all dead, Moses might have said, He made it with us; beause they were still the same People; though the particular Persons were dead, with whom the Covenant was made, not only for themselves, but for their Posterity.

Ver. 4. The LORD talked with you Face to Face in the Mount, &c.] Openly, clearly, and distinctly; or by himself, without the Mediation of Moses; but in no visible Shape; for that is expressly denied in the foregoing Chapter, iv. 12, 15.

Ver. 5. (I stood between the LORD and you at that Time, to shew you the Word of the LORD:] As a Mediator, whom GOD employed to prepare them to meet him, (Exod. xix. 10, 11, &c.) and to prescribe them the Bounds, at what Distance they should keep, (ver. 12.) and to bring them forth to meet with him, (ver. 17.) and to charge them to keep within their Bounds, (ver. 21.) And on the other Side, to represent their Desires unto GOD, after he had spoken to them, Exod. xx. 19. So that he was truly a Mediator between GOD and them; and stood also in a middle Place, at the Foot of the Mount, while they stood further off.

For ye were afraid by Reason of the Fire,] Exod. xx. 18.

And went not up into the Mount) saying,] Exod. xix. 17. xx. 21.

Ver. 6. I am the LORD thy GOD, which brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, from the House of Bondage.] This Preface to the Ten Commandments is explained, Exod. xx. 2.

Ver. 7. Thou shalt have none other Gods before me.] See Exod. xx. 3. It is wisely observed by Grotius, (lib. ii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 20. Sect. 45.) that true Religion was ever built upon these Four Principles: First, That there is a GOD, and that he is but One. Secondly, That GOD is nothing of those Things that we see with our Eyes, but something more sublime than them all. Thirdly, That he takes Care of Human Affairs, and judges them most justly. Fourthly, That he is the Maker of all Things whatsoever. Which Principles are explained in these first four Precepts of the Decalogue; the Unity of the Godhead being delivered in the first Place.

Ver. 8, 9, 10. Thou shalt not make thee any graven Image, or any Likeness of any Thing, &c.] The Second Principle, That GOD's Nature is invisible, is contained in this Second Commandment: Being the Ground of this Prohibition, to make any Image of him: Which the best of the Heathen forbad also for this very Reason, ὡς ἢ ἐφάνηται Θεῷ δύνασθαι, ἄλλας ἢ νοῦσαι, Because it is impossible to conceive GOD otherwise, but by the Mind alone, as Plutarch reports the Sense of Numa among the Romans. And we find the same as plainly said by Antisthenes among the

VOL. I.

Greeks, in Clemens Alexandrinus, ὁ θεὸς οὐκ ὁρᾶται, ἰδεῖν οὐκ ἔστιν, οὐδὲν αὐτὸν εἶδέναι δύνασθαι ἐκ τῶν αἰνῶν. He is not seen by the Eyes, nor is like to any Thing; and therefore none can learn any Thing of him by an Image. Nor could the Vulgar, I am apt to think, have been kept so long, and so generally as they were, to the Worship of them, if it had not been by bold Fictions, that some of them were διαπετι, Fain down from Heaven; and that all of them were θεῶν, καὶ θεῶν μεσσίας ἀνάπλεα, Divine Things, and full of a Divine Communication, as Jamblicus speaks. And to make them more revered, while some of them were ἑμφανῆ, conspicuous to all the People, others were kept secret in the inmost Part of their Temple, as having hidden in them a Symbolical Presence of GOD, as Proclus speaks upon Timæus. Which Ezek. Spanhemius justly thinks, was done in Imitation of what Moses saith concerning GOD's Presence upon the Mercy-seat in the Holy of Holies, Observaciones in Calimachum, p. 586, &c.

See upon these three Verses my Annotations on Exod. xx. 4, 5, 6.

Ver. 11. Thou shalt not take the Name of the LORD thy GOD in vain, &c.] This contains the Third Principle before mentioned, that GOD takes Notice of all Things, even of our Thoughts, and governs all our Affairs: For it is the Foundation of an Oath, that GOD knows our very Hearts, and is Witness to our Meaning, as well as our Words; and will, if we swear falsely, punish us for it: Which is an Acknowledgment also both of the Justice, and the Power of GOD. See upon Exod. xx. 7.

Ver. 12. Keep the Sabbath-Day, to sanctify it,] They were to keep it in Memory, that they might sanctify it, as it is Exod. xx. 8. See there. And it was sanctified, or set apart for special Ends and Purposes, that they might give to the blessed GOD the seventh Part of the Week, (as Abarbinel speaks upon these Words) and might learn the Divine Law, together with the Kabalah, or Traditional Exposition of the Words, and mark well the Niceties of it: For which he quotes a Saying out of the Gemara of the Hierusalem Talmud, Sabbaths and Feasts were not given, but to learn the Law upon them. Which is the Reason he saith of another Speech of theirs, in their Midrash, or Allegorical Exposition upon Exodus, That the Sabbath weigbeth against all the Commandments; because it was a principal Means to make them known and observed. There is not much said indeed, in express Words, concerning this End of the Rest of the Sabbath: But common Reason told the Jews, it could not be intended merely as a Day of Ease from Labour; but for the solemn Service of GOD, and Instruction in their Duty to him.

As the LORD thy GOD hath commanded thee.] At Marab, say the Jews commonly, where he gave them a Statute and an Ordinance. See Exod. xv. 25. But one of them saith better, At Marah it was designed, and at Sinai it was commanded. But they do not look back far enough for the Original of this Commandment: For there being two Things in this Day, the Rest of it, and the Religion; the Rest of it was in Remembrance of their Deliverance out of Egypt, and the Overthrow of Pharaoh in the Red Sea, which compleated their Deliverance; immediately after which they kept their first Sabbatical Rest. The Religion was in Remembrance of the Creation of the World; and so this Day had been observed from the Beginning by the Patriarchs, though we find no Mention made of their Resting: And that may possibly be the Meaning of these Words, As the LORD thy GOD hath commanded thee; that is, immediately after he had finished the Creation of the World.

Ver. 13. Six Days thou shalt labour, and do all thy Work.] See upon Exod. xx. 9.

Ver. 14. But the Seventh Day is the Sabbath of the LORD thy GOD: in it thou shalt not do any Work, &c.] The Reason why they might not do any Work on this Day, is given in Exod. xx. 11. which is wholly omitted here; because Moses had another Reason to add, for the Enforcement of this Precept: And refers them (in the foregoing Words, ver. 12. As the LORD thy GOD hath commanded thee) to what he had said in the Book of Genesis and Exodus; where he had set down the Reason which GOD himself gave with his own Mouth, for the religious Observation of this Day; because in six Days the LORD made Heaven and Earth, &c. So that this Commandment was designed to establish the Fourth Principle I mentioned, that GOD is the Maker of all Things. To preserve the Memory and Sense of which, (as the Author of the Answer, Ad Orthodoxos, observes, lxix.) this Rest was instituted, to be observed with a more than ordinary Sanctity; it being of such great Moment, that the first Sabbath-breaker was punished with Death, because the voluntary Violation of it contained in it a Denial, that the World was created by GOD.

That thy Man-Servant, and thy Maid-Servant may rest as well as thou.] Mercy towards Men, as well as Piety towards GOD, was a Reason for the Observation of the Sabbatical Rest.

Ver. 15. And remember, that thou wast a Servant in the Land of Egypt, and that the LORD thy GOD brought thee out thence, &c. therefore the LORD thy GOD commanded thee to keep the Sabbath-day.] This is a new Ground for the Observation of the Sabbath; because GOD had given them Rest from their hard Labour in Egypt. Which obliged them to keep that Seventh Day, which GOD appointed at the giving of Manna, (being the Day on which he overthrew Pharaoh in the Red Sea) as the Memory of the Creation of the World obliged them to keep one Day in Seven. So our Mr. Mede hath explained it. See my Annotations on Exod. xiv. 30. And Maimonides hath something to the same Purpose, in his More Nevochim, P. II. cap. 31. See upon Exod. xx. 11.

Ver. 16. Honour thy Father and thy Mother, as the LORD thy GOD hath commanded thee.] In the Twentieth of Exodus, ver. 12. See there. To which I shall here add, That the Laws of Solon made those Children infamous, who did not afford Sustainance to their Parents, and provide them an Habitation. And by the ancient Law of Athens, he that reproached his Parents was disinherited; if he struck them, his Hand was cut off; if he left them unburied, he lost their Estate, and was banished his Country: And another Law punished this Ingratitude with Death. See J. Meursius, in his Themis Attica, lib. I. cap. 2, 3. where he shews, That by Parents they understood not only Father and Mother, but Grandfather and Grandmother; nay, Τέτων μήτρες καὶ πατρίδες, ἐὰν ἔτι ζῶσι, i. e. Great-Grandmother, and Great-Grandfather, if they were yet alive, as Isæus tells us, Orat. VII. And the Ground of all these Laws, was a Sense they had, as Æschines tells us, That Men ought to honour their Parents, as they did the Gods; ὡς ἐξ Ἰσῶ θᾶ τιμᾶν τοὺς θεοὺς. See Sam. Petitus, in Leges Atticas, lib. III. tit. 3. Whence Hierocles calls Parents, Θεοὶ ἐπιγυεῖσι, Earthly Gods. And Philo, upon the Decalogue, Θεοὶ ἐμφανεῖς, &c. Visible Gods, who imitate him that is unbegotten, by giving Life. And accordingly, next to the Precepts concerning the Worship of GOD, Moses here places immediately the Duty owing unto Parents.

That thy Days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee, &c.] These last Words are added to what GOD spake, (Exodus xx. 12.) as an Explication of the foregoing. Whereby they are excited to Obedience, by the Promise not only of a long Life, but of an happy. I say Obedience; for that's included in Honour, as the Apostle explains it, Coloss. iii. 20. Children, obey your Parents in all Things; that is, where GOD hath not commanded the contrary, and where it is not inconsistent with the Publick Good; which is alway to be preferred, even before the Duty that is owing to Natural Parents. Infomuch, that common Reason taught the Heathen, that for the Good of the Society, the Son is to lay aside the Reverence he should pay to his Father, and the Father to pay it unto the Son, that is, when he is in Publick Office: Thus the famous Fabius Cunctator commended his Son, for making him light off from his Horse, when he met him in his Consulship, as Plutarch tells us. And see A. Gellius, Lib. XI. Noct. Attic. cap. 1. & Lib. XIII. cap. ult. & Lib. XIV. in the Beginning.

Ver. 17. Thou shalt not kill.] If a Man killed another involuntarily, he was banished by the Laws of Athens from his Country for a Year: But if he killed another ἐξ προνοίας, as Demosthenes speaks, out of Forethought, and designedly, he was put to Death: See Sam. Petitus, Lib. VII. in Leges Atticas, Tit. i. p. 508, 512. Yea, so detestable was this Sin accounted, that even, τὰ ἀνύχα, Lifeless Things, such as Wood, or Stone, or Iron, wherewith a Man was killed, Draco ordered to be thrown out of their Coasts. Ib. p. 523.

Ver. 18. Neither shalt thou commit Adultery.] This Crime was also punished with Death by the Laws of Draco. Solon indeed left it to the Liberty of the Husband, who caught another Man in Bed with his Wife, either to kill him, if he pleased, or to let him redeem his Life with a Sum of Money. But, if after this he lived with his Wife, he was infamous, as Demosthenes tells us, who saith, she might not come publicly into their Temples: If she did, any Man might treat her as he pleased, only not kill her: So that she was so odious as to be thrown, ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας τοῦ ἀνδρός, καὶ ἐξ ἑαῶν ὧν τῆς πόλεως, Both out of the House of her Husband, and out of Holy Places of the City. Nor might she go abroad abroad with any Ornaments (Mi ἐξείναι κοσμήσθαι, is the Law of Solon); if she did, any Body might take them away from her, and tear her Cloaths in Pieces, and beat her, only not maim her in any Part of her Body. See the same Petitus, Lib. VI. Tit. 4.

Ver. 19. Neither shalt thou steal.] The Laws of Draco punished all Theft with Death: Which Solon thought too severe, and therefore changed that Punishment into making Satisfaction, by restoring double; yet still making it Death, if any Man stole above such a Value, or took any Thing out of the Publick Baths, and such-like Places, tho' of never so little Value. See in the same Author, Lib. VII. Tit. 5.

Ver. 20. Neither shalt thou bear false Witness against thy Neighbour.] There was an Action, at Athens, lay both against false Witnesses, and him that produced them; who had a Fine set upon them, and were made infamous. And if they were found thrice in the same Fault, τῶν ἐδὲ καὶ αὐτῶν, καὶ τῶν ἐκ τούτων, ἀτίμους εἶναι, Both they themselves, and all their Posterity, were made infamous, as Andocides speaks. See Ib. Page 559.

Ver. 21. Neither shalt thou desire thy Neighbour's Wife, neither shalt thou covet thy Neighbour's House, &c.] It is observed by some, that an exact Order is observed in the Delivery of these Precepts: For first he places such Offences as are consummate, and then those that are but begun, and not perfected. And in the former he proceeds from those that are most heinous, unto those that are less grievous: For those Offences are the greatest which disturb the Publick Order, and consequently do Mischief unto a great many. Such are those that are committed against Governors and Rulers, who are comprehended under the Name of Parents, by whose Authority human Society is preserved. And then among those which are against particular Persons, those are the greatest which touch a Man's Life; next, those that wrong his Family, the Foundation of which is Matrimony; then those that wrong him in his Goods, either directly by Stealth, or more craftily by bearing False-Witness. Then in the last Place, those Sins are mentioned which are not consummate, being gone no farther than Desire; which in Exodus (xx. 17.) are expressed by one and the same Word, but here by two; which we translate desire and covet: Between which I know no Difference, unless they express higher and lower Degrees of the same Sin. The contrary to which, is Contentedness with our Portion, and Thankfulness to God for it; which will not let us covet any Thing belonging to another Man, with his Loss and Damage.

Ver. 22. These Words the LORD spake unto all your Assembly in the Mount; out of the Midst of the Fire, of the Cloud, and of the thick Darknes,] Exod. xix. 16. xx. 18. This confutes the foolish Fancy of the Jewish Doctors, that the People heard only the first Words of God, I am the LORD thy, &c. thou shalt have no other Gods but me, i. e. they heard him declare his Existence, and his Unity; but all the rest were reported to them by Moses. Nothing can be more contrary to what he here saith, that all these Words, (that is, the Ten Words before mentioned,) were spoken to their whole Assembly. See More Nevochim, P. II. cap. 33.

With a great Voice;] That is, so loud that it might be heard by the whole Camp.

And he added no more.] All the rest of the Commandments, which follow in Exod. xxi. xxii. and xxiii. were delivered to Moses alone, and by him to the People, according to their own Desire, Exod. xx. 19. xxi. 1. xxiv. 3.

And he wrote them in two Tables of Stone, and delivered them unto me.] That is, Ten Commandments, and no more, Exod. xxiv. 12. xxxi. 18. xxxiv. 1, 28. Left what they heard with their Ears, should quickly slide out of their Minds, he took Care to have it engraven with his own Hands in these Tables.

Ver. 23. And it came to pass, when ye heard the Voice out of the Midst of the Darknes, (for the Mountain did burn with Fire) that ye came near unto me; even all the Heads of your Tribes and your Elders.] After they had recovered out of the Fright wherein they were, at the Conclusion of these Words; when the Thunderings, Lightnings, and Noise of the Trumpet was so terrible, that they removed, and stood afar off, Exod. xx. 18.

Ver. 24. And ye said, Behold, the LORD our God hath shewed us his Glory, and his Greatness, and we have heard his Voice out of the Midst of the Fire.] Here Moses relates more largely, what he said in short, Exod. xx. 19.

We have seen this Day, that God doth talk with Man, and he liveth.] This looks like a thankful Acknowledgment of the great Goodness of God, in vouchsafing them such a Favour as never any Men had before, and which they could not expect again. And accordingly Moses makes use of it as an Argument to be very observant of God's Commands, Exod. xx. 22, 23.

Ver. 25. Now therefore why should we die? For this great Fire will consume us: If we hear the Voice of the LORD our God any more, then we shall die.] It is an ungrounded Conceit of Maimonides, (in the Place above mentioned) that when they had heard the first Words, they fell into a Swoon, and did not recover themselves till all the rest was spoken; which made them conclude, that they should really die, and never come to themselves again, (as we speak) if they should hear him speak to them any more. The plain Meaning is, that mortal Men could not endure to hear him speak in that Manner: For the Voice was so loud, and accompanied with such Flashes of Fire, and such Claps of Thunder, as made them conclude, if it had continued longer, they should have expired.

Ver. 26. For who is there of all Flesh,] i. e. Of all Men, who are weak and frail, as the Word Flesh denotes.

That hath heard the Voice of the living God, speaking out of the Midst of the Fire, (as we have) and lived?] There is no Instance of such a Thing as this; which made them afraid of hearing him speak in this Manner any more: For they did not mind God's End and Intention in this, (which Moses suggests to them in Exod. xx. 20.) but in a Confusion of Thoughts imagined, that though they had escaped once, the Flames out of which he spake, might devour them, if they came near them again.

Ver. 27. Go thou near, and hear all that the LORD our GOD will say, and speak thou unto us all that the LORD our GOD shall speak unto thee, and we will hear it, and do it.] See Exod. xx. 19. This shews their Opinion of Moses, that he could be able not only to endure That without Disorder, which made them ready to die, but go into the very Midst of the Darknefs, out of which those Flames came.

Ver. 28. And the LORD heard the Voice of your Words, when ye spake unto me, and the LORD said unto me, I have heard the Voice of the Words of this People, &c.] As Moses here reports more largely what they said to him, than he did in Exodus, so he likewise gives a larger Account what GOD bad him say to them, in Answer to their Desire.

They have well said all that they have spoken.] It very much becomes them, out of a Sense of their Meanness and Unworthiness, and of the inconceivable Majesty of GOD, to desire he would speak to them by a Mediator.

Ver. 29. O that there were such an Heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep my all Commandments always;] The Words are wonderful emphatical in the Hebrew, Who will give, that there may be such an Heart in them? Which is an Expression of the most earnest Desire; but withal signifies, that if what he had done for them, would not move them to fear and obey him, it was impossible to persuade them to it. Not but that he could miraculously work upon them, and change their Hearts, (saith Maimonides) if he pleased, as he miraculously changed the Nature of other Things; but if this were GOD's Will, to deal with them after this Fashion, there would have been no Need to send a Prophet to them, or to publish Laws full of Precepts and Promises, Rewards and Punishments; by which (saith he) GOD wrought upon their Heart, and not by his absolute Omnipotence. More Nevochim, P. III. cap. 32.

That it might be well with them, and with their Children for ever!] For GOD desired nothing more than this, which they themselves promised, (ver. 27.) which moved him to vouchsafe such a special Privilege to them, as first to speak to them himself, and, at their Desire, consent to speak to them by his Prophet.

Ver. 30. Go, say to them, Get you into your Tents again.] All this shews, that Moses was a Mediator between GOD and them, and between them and GOD.

Ver. 31. But as for thee, stand thou here by me,] He invites Moses unto the nearest Approaches unto his Majesty; and the most familiar Converse with him, Exod. xx. 21. xxiv. 2, 18. For this was the highest Degree of Prophecy, as Maimonides calls it, in his More Nevochim, P. III. cap. 51. And in his Preface to that Book, he saith, This is the greatest Degree of Illumination of a Prophet, concerning whom it is said, Stand thou here with me: And again, The Skin of his Face shone. Which, he supposes, signified, that his Mind was always full of Light; whereas other Prophets were some Time in Darknefs, and saw nothing.

And I will speak unto thee all the Commandments, and the Statutes, and the Judgments, which thou shalt teach them,] According to their own Desire, ver. 27. See vi. 1.

That they may do them in the Land which I give them to possess it.] According to their Promise in the same, ver. 27.

Ver. 32. Ye shall observe to do therefore, as the LORD your GOD hath commanded you.] Being obliged by such singular Benefits as no other Nation ever had the like, (ver. 24, 25, 26.) and having engaged themselves so solemnly to be obedient, ver. 27.

You shall not turn aside, to the Right Hand, or to the Left.] This is a Phrase often used to signify a strict Observance of GOD's Laws; neither superstitiously adding to them, nor profanely laying aside any of them, xvii. 20. xxviii. 14. Josh. i. 7.

Ver. 33. You shall walk in all the Ways which the LORD your GOD hath commanded you,] That is, observe all his Laws, and make them the Rule of their Lives.

That ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your Days, in the Land which ye shall possess.] Universal Obedience, he would have them sensible, was the only Way to make them live happy and long in that good Land which he was about to bestow upon them. This he inculcates again in the next Chapter, vi. 3. For all Mankind thought long Life a very great Blessing, as appears by Callimachus's Hymn to Diana, Ver. 132, 133. when he promises to those whom she favours,

— — — — — ἵδ' ἐπὶ σῆμα
ἔρχομαι, πλὴν εὖ τε πολυχρόνιον τι φέρωσιν.

i. e. They shall not come into their Grave, till they have reached a great old Age.

CHAP. VI.

Ver. 1. NOW these are the Commandments, the Statutes, and the Judgments,] Which GOD promised to deliver to him in the foregoing Chapter, ver. 31. and Commandments are thought commonly, to relate unto the Moral Laws; Statutes to Rites and Ceremonies, which have no natural Reason for them; and Judgments to Civil Government.

Which the LORD your GOD commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the Land whither ye go to possess it;] They are the Words of GOD himself, in the Place before named, ver. 31.

This, I suppose, was spoken by Moses to them, a little Time after he had delivered what is contained in the foregoing Chapter; being a Preface to the rest of the Laws which he received from GOD in Mount Sinai, as they desired.

Ver. 2. That thou mightst fear the LORD thy GOD, to keep all his Statutes, and his Commandments, which I command thee, &c.] The prime Intention of GOD's speaking to them by himself, and by Moses, was to implant his Fear in their Hearts, as the true Principle of Obedience: Which so certainly flows from it, if it be preserved in its Power and Force, that it frequently in Scripture signifies the whole Duty we owe to GOD. But here more particularly it seems to signify their adhering to him as the only GOD: so it is used, 1 Kings xviii. 3, 12. and in the New Testament most plainly, Act. x. 2, 35.

Ver. 3. Hear therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it,] Mark therefore so well what I say, as to do accordingly.

That it may be well with thee, &c.] As the only Way to be happy, and to grow a mighty Nation, and, in short, enjoy all that GOD had promised to their pious Ancestors.

Ver. 4. Hear, O Israel,] He repeats it again; because what he was going to say, is of the highest Importance.

The LORD our GOD is one LORD.] Being to remind them of all the Laws which GOD delivered to them by him, and to endeavour to beget an holy Fear of him, as the Principle of Obedience, he most earnestly presses upon them, before he proceeds further, the First of the Ten Commandments, which is, That there is but one GOD, who alone is to be worshipped; and that he is their GOD: whose Laws therefore could not be controuled by the Authority of any other pretended God.

Many of the ancient Fathers, particularly Theodoret and Greg. Nyssen, think there is a plain Intimation of the blessed Trinity in these Words, The LORD our GOD is one LORD: And some of the Jews themselves have thought, there was something extraordinary in it, that the Name of GOD should be thrice mentioned, as it is in this Sentence: which signifies three Modes, or Properties, they confess; which they sometimes call three Faces, or Emanations, or Sanctifications, or Numerations, tho' they will not call them three Persons; as Joseph de Voysin observes in his Book against an Anonymous Antitrinitarian, p. 58, 63, 71, 72. And the Cabalists say as much, who asserting ten Sephiroth in GOD, (which they take to be something different from the Essence of GOD, and yet not Creatures, but Emanations from it, as Manasseh Ben Israel explains their Words) they make the Three First of them to be more than the other Seven; and call them Primordial. The First of which they call the Wonderful Intelligence, and the First Intellectual Light, (as St. James calls GOD the Father of Lights) and the First Glory. The Second they call, among other Names, the Illuminating Intelligence, (just as St. John saith, the Eternal WORD enlightens every one that cometh into the World) and the Second Glory. And the Third they call the Sanctified Intelligence, (so the Word קדוש, which is in Psal. must be translated, not Sanctifying, as Rittangelius takes it) or they may mean no more than the Holy Intelligence; which is the very same with the Holy Spirit. All this we find in the Book Jetzira, which they fancy was made by Abraham: from whence we cannot but learn, that they had an obscure Notion of the Blessed Trinity; and that the Apostles used no other Language about it, than what was among the Jews. The best of which are so sensible of such Things, as I have mentioned, that they think we Christians are not Idolaters, tho' we believe Three Persons in the Godhead, (which they fancy inclines to Polytheism) because we believe the Unity of GOD; and therefore may be saved as well as they. So J. Wagenseil shews in his Annotations upon Sota, cap. vii. p. 751, &c. And Arnoldus, in his Spicilegia, after him, p. 1218.

Ver. 5. And thou shalt love the LORD thy GOD with all thine Heart, &c.] Our blessed Saviour alledging these two Verses, Mark xii. 29, 30. looks upon these Words, as a Part of the First Commandment: for, after he had said, The first of all the Commandments is, Hear, O Israel, the LORD our GOD is one LORD; and thou shalt love the LORD thy GOD with all thy Heart, and with all thy Soul, &c. he thus concludes, This is the First Commandment. For to own him to be the only GOD, the Author of our Being, and of all Things, doth necessarily include in it a Love of Him above all Things whatsoever, which requires us to love Him, who hath made them so lovely. This is another Principle or Spring of Obedience, inseparable from the Fear of GOD before-mentioned: which doth not drive us away from him, but draw us to him; being such a Reverence towards him as Children have to their kind Parents, which is ever mixed with Love to them.

With all thine Heart, and with all thy Soul, and with all thy Might:] For there being no other GOD but he alone, none else could have any Right to their Love and Service, but he only whose Nature is so excellent, that it requires the utmost we can do, to testify our Regard to him. This one of the Jewish Writers hath admirably expressed in this Manner: "Whosoever serves GOD out of Love, he gives himself to the Study of his Laws, and unto good Works, &c. which excite him to love GOD with the most flagrant Affection; not for the sake of any Thing in this World, nor for the Fear of any Evil; but he serves GOD truly, because he is the Truth, and the chiefest Good, that he may be admitted to Communion with him. And a Man ought to love him with the most vehement and intense Affection; so that he languish with Love to him, just as a Man that is in Love with one he desires to make his Wife: whereforever he is, at Home or Abroad, when he eats and drinks, when he lies down and rises up, he thinks of her. To which Solomon compares the Love of the Spouse, who saith, I am sick of Love, Cant. ii. 5. To this Purpose, Baal Chasidim, mentioned by Wagenseil, upon Sota, cap. 5. p. 611."

By the Heart may be here meant the Will, which is the Original of all that a Man doth, (as the Jews speak) whether Good or Evil; by the Soul, the Affections (to which St. Mark adds the Mind, i. e. the Understanding, or Rational Faculty); and by Might or Strength, is meant the Power of the Body for Action; which four all together make up the whole Man. And the Word ALL added to each of these, doth not exclude all other Things from any Share in our Thoughts and Affections, but only from an equal Interest in them. The Love of GOD ought to be superior, and direct all our other Motions to serve him, as Maimonides expresses it in his Preface to Pirke Avoth.

Ver. 7. And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy Children.] In the Hebrew the Words are, (as our Margin observes) shalt whet or sharpen them; them; signifying, as some think, that they should endeavour to make them pierce their Hearts. But de Dieu rather thinks it signifies, beat them into them, as Things are hammered on an Anvil with repeated Strokes. Which the famous Bocbartus doth not so well approve; who observes, that the Word Sanan, which, in Arabick, signifies in the first Place to sharpen or wet, signifies also exquisite docere, &c. to teach exquisitely; so that he who is taught, be made thereby more acute and perspicacious. Which is the Intention, he thinks, of the Hebrew Word here, lib. ii. Canaan, cap. 17. However it be expounded, it imports the Diligence they should use, (as we translate it) to infill this Principle into their Childrens Minds, That there is but one GOD; and to work in them a Fear and Love of his divine Majesty. To that which goes before (vers. 4, 5, 6.) these Words have a particular Respect: by which it appears, that Moses thought his Law was so plain, that every Father might be able to instruct his Sons in it, and every Mother her Daughters.

And shalt talk of them, when thou sittest in thine House, and when thou walkest by the Way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.] As much as to say, they should take all Occasions to inculcate this great Thing, at Home and Abroad, Night and Day; never ceasing their most earnest Endeavours, to persuade their Children, not to worship any other God; nor to fail to worship the LORD their GOD with sincere Affection.

The Jews have made, from hence, one of their affirmative Precepts, that twice a Day, at least, they should recite these Words, Hear, O Israel, &c. which is a very dilute Sense of this Precept: wherein Moses requires not merely their saying these Words, (in which there might be a great deal of Superstition) but taking all Opportunities to imprint them upon the Minds and Hearts of their Children.

Ver. 8. And thou shalt bind them for a Sign upon thine Hand, and they shall be as Frontlets between thine Eyes;] Just thus he commands them to preserve the Memory of their Deliverance out of the Land of Egypt, almost in the same Words: see Exod. xiii. 9, 16. where this is sufficiently explained. And it appears to be a proverbial Speech from Isa. xlix. 16. There are some learned Men indeed, who take these Words literally, notwithstanding St. Hierom hath delivered his Opinion to the contrary, that there is no Command for Phylacteries, which are grounded upon these Words; particularly Jos. Scaliger, in his Elench. Tribares. Nic. Serarii, cap. 7, 8. where he thinks GOD gave this Command to the Israelites, to prevent their following the Rites of other Nations, who armed themselves against Dangers with superstitious Amulets in their Foreheads; which the Egyptians, he thinks, called Totapbot. But since, neither here, nor in Exodus, there are any such Words, as thou shalt make thee Frontlets, but Moses only saith, the Things that he is speaking of shall be for Frontlets between their Eyes; I take it not to be meant literally; tho' it's likely they intended well who so understood it: for our blessed Saviour doth not seem to reprove the Jews for wearing Phylacteries; but for their Ostentation, in making them broader than ordinary.

[Ver. 9. And thou shalt write them upon the Posts of thy House, and on thy Gates.] This looks more like a literal Command, than the former; and it might have been very useful to them, when they went in and out of their House, to read these Words, Hear, O Israel, the LORD thy God is one LORD, &c. But the Jews are too scrupulous about the Words they should write, and upon what Part of the Posts and Gates they were to put them, &c. as Mr. Selden observes, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 13. n. 20. Tho', after all, it may be, this was not intended, but only that they should never let this Principle slip out of their Mind, but think of it when they went out and came in, as well as when they were in their Houses, and by the Way; when they rose up, and when they lay down. Yet it must be observed, that other Nations used to write their Laws upon their Gates, as Huetius notes in his Demonstratio Evangelica, p. 58. which, it's likely, they did in Imitation of the Jews, who, to this Day, have written in a Parchment these Words from ver. 4. to the End of this Verse, (with that other Passage, chap. xi. from ver. 13. to ver. 20.) which they roll up, and writing on it the Name of Shaddai, put it into a Piece of Cane, or other hollow Wood, and fasten it to the Doors of their Houses, and of each particular Room in them; and as often as they go in and out, they make it a Part of their Devotion to touch this Parchment, and kiss it: as Leo Modena tells us, in his History of the Jews, p. i. cap. 2.

Ver. 10. And it shall be, when the LORD thy GOD shall have brought thee into the Land, which he sware, &c.] Of this he speaks with the greatest Assurance, there being no Doubt to be made, that GOD would immediately give them Possession of the good Land promised to them. The only Danger was, lest they should be thrown out of it for their Disobedience.

Great and goodly Cities, which thou buildest not,] For they did not lay all waste, as they did Jericho, (for which there was a particular Reason) but dwelt in them, after they had destroyed the Inhabitants.

Ver. 11. And Houses full of all good Things, which thou filledst not, &c.] In this, and what follows in the rest of the Verse, he sets forth the great Bounty of GOD to them; who intended to enrich them with all Manner of good Things, without any Labour of their own to purchase them.

Ver. 12. Then beware, lest thou forget the LORD, which brought thee forth out of the Land of Egypt, &c.] In Prosperity we are too prone to forget our Benefactors.

Ver. 13. Thou shalt fear the LORD thy GOD, and serve him,] Preserve an awful Sense of him in thy Mind, and be constant in his Worship and Service; which was never more necessary, than when they enjoyed so many Blessings from him.

And shalt swear by his Name.] When there was any Need for it: as in making Covenants with their Neighbours, or in bearing their Testimony before a Judge, they were to swear only by the Name of GOD, not by any Idol, nor by the Heaven, or the Earth, or any Thing therein; for they can bear Witness to nothing: see Josh. xxiii. 7, 8. Nor was it lawful, as Maimonides observes, (in his Treatise called Shebuoth) to join any other Thing the Name of GOD. But it was all one, whether a Man swear by the proper Name of GOD, or by any of his Attributes, as by the Name of him who is Merciful, or Gracious, or Long-suffering, &c. for this is a perfect Oath: see Selden, lib. ii. De Synedr. cap. 11. n. 2. And see n. 7. concerning other Oaths.

Ver. 14. Ye shall not go after other Gods, of the Gods of the People which are round about you:] This shews that his Intention in this Chapter is, to press upon them the Observation of the First Commandment, which our Saviour justly calls the Great Commandment.

Ver 15. For the LORD thy GOD is a jealous GOD] See Exod. xx. 5. Exod. xxxiv. 14.

Among you;] In the Hebrew, in the Midst of you; to observe all you do, tho' never so secretly.

Left the Anger of the LORD thy GOD be kindled against thee, and destroy thee from off the Face of the Earth,] For this was the most provoking of all other Sins: and therefore we never read either in the Law, or in the Prophets, the Word Charon [i. e. Fury], or Aph [Anger], or Caas [Indignation], or Kinab, [Jealousy], ascribed unto GOD, but when Mention is made of Idolatry. So Maimonides observes, More Nevoch. P. I. cap. xxxvi.

Ver. 16. Ye shall not tempt the LORD your GOD, as ye tempted him in Massab.] Never distrust GOD's good Providence, nor murmur against him in any Distress: for this was the Temptation at Massab, Exod. xvii. 2, 7.

Ver. 17. You shall diligently keep the Commandments of the LORD your GOD, and his Testimonies, and his Statutes, which he hath commanded thee.] As if he had said, I cannot too oft press this upon you; nor can you use too great Care in this Matter.

Ver. 18. And thou shalt do that which is right and good in the Sight of the LORD, that it may be well with thee,] As they loved themselves, he charges them not to follow their own Desires, (which is called doing that which is good in their own Eyes) but govern themselves by his holy Will.

And that thou mayst go in and possess the good Land,] Or rather, after thou hast gone in, and possessed the good Land, which the LORD swore unto thy Fathers: for there was no Doubt of their going in; but only of their Behaviour there, after they were made so happy, ver. 10, 11, 12.

Ver. 19. To cast out all thine Enemies from before thee, as the LORD hath spoken.] He seems particularly to charge them to drive out the People of Canaan, as GOD hath commanded, Numb. xxxiii. 32. For otherwise, they would tempt them to forget this great Principle of their Religion, that the GOD of Israel was the only GOD, and entice them to serve their Idols, ver. 14.

Ver. 20. And when thy Son asketh thee in Time to come, saying, What mean the Testimonies, and the Statutes, and the Judgments, which the LORD our GOD hath commanded you?] Abarinel thinks, that their Posterity, in future Ages, might observe three sorts of Precepts in the Law, viz. Testimonies, which in Hebrew are called Eduth, which were such Constitutions as bear Witness of some great Thing GOD had done for them, and preserved the Memory thereof; such was the Passover. And then, Secondly, there were Chukkim [Statutes], which are such Precepts, the Reason of which is unknown. And, Thirdly, Mischpatim [Judgments], which are such, whose Reason is evident. Now they might desire to know the Reason why such several Laws were given; and he thinks Moses teaches them to give a distinct Answer to their Children about each of these.

Ver. 21. Then thou shalt say unto thy Son, We were Pharaoh's Bondmen in Egypt, and the LORD brought us out of Egypt with a mighty Hand;] As if he had said, tell them the Reason why he gave us the first Sort of Precepts, particularly that about the Passover, was, because we were Slaves, and GOD brought us a State of Liberty; which he would have always thankfully remember'd, by the Observation of that Feast which testified what GOD wrought for us by his Power alone. The like may be said of the other two great Festivals, which were to preserve the Memory of such like Benefits.

Ver. 22. And the LORD shewed Signs and Wonders great and sore upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his Household, &c.] Particularly slew all their First-born, and spared those of the Israelites: The Memory which he ordered to be preserved, by giving their First-born unto him, Exod. xiii.

Ver. 23. And he brought us out from thence, that he might bring us in, to give us the Land which he swore unto our Fathers.] This is the Reason, Abarinel fancies, of giving them the Judgments before-mentioned: GOD brought us out, saith he, to place us in this good Land, and settle us here under a Government of our own. Now civil Society cannot be preserved, without just Judgments; and therefore, that we might live in good Order, GOD gave us these political Laws.

Ver. 24. And the LORD commanded us to do all these Statutes, to fear the LORD our GOD,] As for the third Sort, which are Statutes, give your Children this Answer: That tho' we do not know the Reason of them, yet the Benefit of them is manifest; for they lead us to the Fear of GOD. And nothing is so much for our Good as that, both for the eternal Good of our Souls, and for the long Life of our Bodies. So he interprets the last Words of this Verse, and so doth Maimonides.

For our Good always, that he might preserve us alive, as it is at this Day.] The first Words in the Hebrew are, that it may be well with us all our Days; or more literally, For Good to us all our Days; that is, say our Rabbins, (they are the Words of Maimonides, P. iii. More Nevochim, cap. 27. where he repeats what I observed before upon iv. 40.) That it may be well with us in that World which is wholly good; and our Days may be prolonged in that World which is wholly long; or, in short, That thou mayest come into the World which is good and long, which is a perpetual Subsistence. As for the last Words, they belong, he thinks, to their corporeal Subsistence here, which endures but for a Time; and therefore he saith, As at this Day; to shew he speaks of the present World, wherein they should live happily by observing his Laws.

Ver. 25. And it shall be our Righteousness, if we observe to do all these Commandments,] Their Children might say, If there be such Benefits in observing the Statutes, which lead to the Fear of GOD, and to Happiness hereafter, what need we trouble trouble ourselves about the other two? Unto which, Abarbinel imagines, they are taught to give this Answer, It is our Righteousness, if we observe to do all these Commandments, i. e. We cannot be righteous before GOD, if we have not respect to all his Precepts, whether Testimonies, Statutes, or Judgments, which are all comprehended in this Word Mitzvoth, or Commandments. This is something nice and curious, but there is a great deal of Truth in it.

The Word Righteousness also, it must be acknowledged, often comprehends Mercy in it: and thus the LXX and the Vulgar Latin here understand it. And to take in this Sense, these Words may be thus expounded: if we observe to do all these Commandments, GOD will account us a righteous People, and be kind to us.

Before the LORD our GOD, as he hath commanded us.] Having a sincere Respect to GOD in all that we do.

CHAP. VII.

Verse 1. WHEN the LORD thy GOD shall bring thee into the Land whither thou goest to possess it,] That is, when he had put them into Possession of it.

And hath cast out many Nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.] There were ten Nations inhabited in this Country in the Days of Abraham: but three of them were either worn out since that Time, or being but a small People, were incorporated with the rest: for the Kenites and the Kenezites, (see Gen. xv. 19.) are not mentioned after that Time, and the Rephaim possessed but a little Part of Canaan, the great Body of them being in Bashan, on this Side Jordan, where Moses now was: see upon Gen. xv. 19.

Seven Nations greater and mightier than thou.] The Amorites alone seem to have been mightier than the Israelites, (for there were no less than five Kings of them, that dwelt in the Mountains, Josh. x. 5, 6. besides those in other Parts) and therefore all the seven Nations were much superior to them in Strength.

Ver. 2. And when the LORD thy GOD shall deliver them before thee, thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them.] He still pursues his Intention, to preserve in them a due Care to observe the first Commandment, of which he began to treat in the foregoing Chapter: for that is the Reason why they were to destroy these seven Nations, that they might not be in danger to be seduced by them to serve other Gods, ver. 1. But whether they were not first to offer them Terms of Peace, according to the Directions in the twentieth Chapter of this Book, is a Question which I have endeavoured to resolve in another Place, upon Exod. xxiii. 33. Certain it is, that if they refused their Offers, there was the greater Reason to be severe to them: and without offering them any Terms, GOD might in Justice order the Israelites to destroy them: for every King hath Power in his Dominions to cut off Evil-doers; and therefore much more the KING of Kings: who might order whom he pleased (as other Kings do) to be Executioners in his Vengeance upon these seven Nations, for their abominable Idolatries, beastly Lusts, and horrid Cruelties, and other such-like Sins, of which they were guilty.

This was a Thing of such Moment, that GOD ordered Moses to give them this Charge, some Time ago, Numb. xxxiii. 52. which he now renews.

Thou shalt make no Covenant with them.] To suffer them to live with them, in the same Country, Exod. xxxiv. 12.

Nor show Mercy unto them.] For that had been Cruelty to themselves, and their Posterity, to spare such incurable Idolaters. How far the Talmudists extend this, see in Dionys. Vossius, upon Maimonides's Treatise of Idolatry, p. 139. and Maimonides himself, in the following Paragraphs, 4, 5, 6.

Ver. 3. Neither shalt thou make Marriages with them: thy Daughter thou shalt not give unto his Son: nor his Daughter shalt thou take unto thy Son.] See Exod. xxxiv. 15. Some of the Jews think they might marry with them, if they became Proselytes of Justice (as they called those who received Circumcision, and undertook to observe the whole Law); and that they might think this was not lawful, yet think that they might marry with the Children of such Proselytes: see Selden, lib. v. de Jure Nat. & Gent. &c. cap. 14, 15. And the Talmudists say, This Law did not extend to Proselytes, who might marry with any of these Nations, as he shews there, cap. 18.

Ver. 4. For they will turn away thy Son from following me, that they may serve other Gods.] There was great Danger, if they loved their Wives, that they might draw them to their Idolatry; in which they were so rooted, that there was little Hope of converting them to the true Religion. Therefore this is opposed to the Love of the LORD their GOD; for the preserving of which in their Hearts, they are forbidden such Marriages, Josh. xxiii. 11, 12. And indeed it was but a Piece of natural Equity, that they should abstain from such Familiarity with those who would certainly undo them. Which made Abraham, before this Law, charge his Son Isaac, not to take a Wife from among the Canaanites; and the same Care was taken of Jacob. And when this Law of Moses was abolished, the Apostle warns Christians themselves against such unequal Matches, 2 Corinth. vi. 14. The Danger of which David had noted, Psal. cvi. 35, 36.

So will the Anger of the LORD be kindled against you, &c.] See vi. 15.

Ver. 5. But thus shall ye deal with them: or, Therefore thus shall ye deal with them.] That is, to prevent the fore-mentioned Mischief, he orders them to leave no Relick of their Idolatry remaining.

Ye shall destroy their Altars.] The very same Precept, Exod. xxxiv. 13.

And break down their Images.] The very same Words with these are in Exod. xxiii. 24. (only there it is said, quite break down) and in Exod. xxxiv. 13.

And cut down their Groves.] There is the same Mention of Asherim (which we translate Groves) in the Place last named; only another Word for cut down: see there. But Mr. Selden, both there and here, understands by Asherim, wooden Images of Artate, a great Goddess worshipped in that Country

Country: For which, among other Reasons, he gives this, that Gideon is said to have thrown down the Altar of Baal, and cut down the Grove that was by it. So we translate it, Judg. vi. 25, 28. where, in the Hebrew, the last Word is Alau, which signifies upon it, and not by it: And so the LXX, 'Επ' αὐτῷ. And therefore the Aſkerab, which is said to be upon the Altar, muſt not ſignify a Grove, but an Image; and none more likely than that of Aſarte. See De Diis Syris, Syntagm. 2. cap. 2. and 2 Kings xxiii. 6, 7.

And burn their graven Images with Fire.] As he was commanded to deſtroy their molten Images, Numb. xxxiii. 52. that no ſort of Image, nor any Monument of their Worſhip might be left in the Country, but all ſo intirely aboliſhed, that they might have no Incentive to Idolatry. This was the Work of the Supreme Governor, as Grotius prudently obſerves: For, though out of private Places it belonged to the Lord of the Place, or, if he were negligent, to the King, to remove Idols, yet none but the Supreme Power might remove them out of publick Places, or ſuch Perſons who were delegated thereby to that Office. See L. de Imper. Sum. Poteſt. circa Sacra, cap. 8. ſect. 3.

Ver. 6. For thou art a holy People unto the LORD thy GOD:] This is an Argument frequently uſed, particularly in the Book of Leviticus, why they ſhould cleave to GOD alone; becauſe he had ſeparated them to himſelf by many peculiar Laws, which no other People had but they, Levit. xi. 44, 45. xix. 2. xx. 7, 26.

The LORD thy GOD hath choſen thee to be a ſpecial People unto himſelf, above all People that are upon the Face of the Earth.] As he had diſtinguiſhed them from all other People by peculiar Laws, ſo by ſpecial Favours, and ſingular Privileges, which no other Nation whatſoever enjoyed. See Exod. xix. 5, 6. Some interpret the Words ſpecial People, to ſignify that they belonged to none but him; and he had no other People but they; whom he had eſpouſed to himſelf. From whence it is, that as the Iſraelites are called GOD's People, ſo that Country is called his Land, (Pſal. lxxxv. 1.) for there he dwelt by his ſpecial Preſence. And the King of that Country is called GOD's King, (Pſalm xviii. 50.) and he is ſaid to ſit on GOD's Throne; and to be Melech le Jehovab, King for the LORD, 2 Chron. ix. 8. and the Kingdom is called the Kingdom of the LORD, xiii. 8. and therefore with this Argument Aſa, addreſſes himſelf to GOD in the next Chapter, (xiv. 11.) for Help in Time of Diſtreſs, becauſe he was their GOD; and would not, he hoped, let their Enemies prevail againſt himſelf. And, accordingly, theſe Enemies are ſaid to be deſtroyed before the LORD, and before his Hoſt, Ver. 13. Jehoſhaphat alſo exhorts the Judges in that Book to great Caution, 2 Chron. xix. 6. becauſe they judged not for Man, but for the LORD. And the Prophet exhorts, in the following Chapter, xx. 15. not to be afraid of a mighty Hoſt which came againſt him, becauſe the Battle is not yours, but GOD's; the Cauſe in which they fought being his, more than their own.

Ver. 7. The LORD did not ſet his Love upon you, nor chooſe you,] To be his ſpecial People, as he calls them in the foregoing Verſe.

VOL. I.

Becauſe ye were more in Number than any People; for ye were the feweſt of all People:] When GOD declared his Love firſt to Abraham, and his Poſterity, he had no Child, Gen. xii. 1, 2, 3. xv. 1, 2. And when he had, his Family continued ſo ſmall, after there were twelve Heirs of the Promise, that in the Space of Two hundred Years, they were but ſeventy Perſons, Gen. xlv. 27. Nor do we read of any great Increate of them till after the Death of Joſeph, which was near Fourſcore Years more, Exod. i. 7, 8, &c. So St. Stephen obſerves, Acts vii. 17. When the Time of the Promise drew nigh, which GOD had ſworn to Abraham, the People grew and multiplied in Egypt.

Ver. 8. But becauſe the LORD loved you,] Becauſe it was his good Pleaſure to ſingle them out from all other People, to receive ſpecial Tokens of his Favour to them.

And becauſe he would keep the Oath, which he had ſworn unto your Fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty Hand, &c.] Not for any Deſert of theirs; but to make good his Promise confirmed with an Oath, did he work their wonderful Deliverance out of Egypt, Gen. xv. 13, 14. xxii. 16, &c.

Ver. 9. Know therefore that the LORD thy GOD, he is GOD,] He exhorts them therefore to preſerve this Senſe in their Mind, that their GOD is the only GOD.

The faithful GOD, which keepeth Covenant and Mercy with them that love him, and keep his Commandments,] Who will not only faithfully keep his Word, and make good his Promiſes, but do abundantly more than he hath promiſed to thoſe that cleave unto him alone, and ſerve no other GOD: For it appears by the Second Commandment, that is peculiarly meant by loving him.

To a thouſand Generations;] See Exod. xx. 6.

Ver. 10. And repayeth them that hate him,] Punish all Idolaters, who are peculiarly called Haters of GOD, as I have often obſerved. See Exod. xx. 5.

To their Face, &c.] They themſelves ſhould live to ſee and feel the Punishment of their Idolatry. So the Chaldee paraphraſes it, Bacajehon, in their Life.

He will not be ſlack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his Face.] Tho' he do not puniſh him immediately, yet he will not defer it long, but be avenged of him, before he die. Therefore, when he threatens to puniſh them to the Third and Fourth Generation, the Meaning is not, that he will only puniſh their Poſterity, but them with their Poſterity; whom they ſhall ſee deſtroyed before their Face. For the Fourth Generation (as Maimonides obſerves) is as much as the oldeſt Men commonly live to ſee.

Ver. 11. Thou ſhalt therefore keep the Commandments, and the Statutes, and the Judgments, which I command thee this Day, to do them.] All the Laws of GOD, (ſee vi. 1.) eſpecially this great Commandment, to have no other GOD but him.

Ver. 12. Wherefore it ſhall come to paſs, if ye hearken to theſe Judgments, and keep, and do them; that the LORD thy GOD, ſhall keep unto thee the Covenant, and the Mercy, which he swore unto thy Fathers.] As faithfully fulfil his Promises to them, as he did to their Fathers.

Ver. 13. And he will love thee,] Continue his Love to them.

And bless thee, and multiply thee:] This was the great Promise made to their Fathers, that he would make their Posterity as numerous as the Stars of Heaven, and the Dust of the Earth, Gen. xv. 5 xxii. 17. xxviii. 14.

He will also bless the Fruit of thy Womb,] Preserve them from miscarrying, that so they might multiply.

And the Fruit of thy Land, thy Corn, and thy Wine, and thine Oil,] By giving them Rain in due Season, &c. See Levit. xxvi. 4, 5.

The Increase of thy Kine,] The Hebrew Word Segar, which we translate Increase, the LXX, Vulgar, and Syriac, render the *Herd*s. But Onkelos and Jonathan translate it as we do, the young ones which the Mothers bring forth. See Bochart. P. I. Hieroicoon, Lib. II. cap. 30.

And the Flocks of thy Sheep, &c.] The Hebrew Word Ashtaroth, comprehends Flocks both of Sheep and of greater Cattle, as the same Bochart observes, P. I. Hieroicoon. Lib. III. cap. 43. and in his Canaan, Lib. II. cap. 2. where he observes, that the Goddess Astarte, in those Countries, was thought to preside over Flocks of Sheep, and Herds of Oxen.

Ver. 14. Thou shalt be blessed above all People:] He promises to make them as singular for his Favours, as they were in their Laws and Manner of Living.

There shall not be Male or Female barren among you, or among your Cattle.] See Exod. xxiii. 26.

Ver. 15. And the LORD will take away from thee all Sicknes,] Or remove from them the common Diseases and Infirmities of Mankind; so that they should die in a good old Age (as the Scripture speaks); which tended manifestly to their Increase and Multiplication.

And will put none of the evil Diseases of Egypt (which thou knowest) upon thee;] Neither those Blotches or Boils which GOD, by an immediate Hand, smote them withal, Exod. ix. 9, xv. 26. Nor any other which they in that Country were subject unto, peculiarly their filthy Ulcers called Egyptiaca and Syriaca, as Casaubon observes upon Perfius, Sat. v. p. 467. with which the Priests of Isis were wont to threaten and terrify poor People, if they did not worship her. In Opposition to which our very learned Dr. Spencer thinks GOD made this special Promise to his People, to preserve them from all such evil Diseases, if they kept themselves pure from that Egyptian Idolatry. Which is very ingenious, if the Worship of Isis was so ancient as the Days of Moses. See Lib. I. de Legibus Hebr. Ritual. cap. 3.

But will lay them upon all them that hate thee.] And thereby disable them to hurt his People.

Ver. 16. And thou shalt consume all the People, which the LORD thy GOD shall deliver thee;] Utterly destroy all the People of Canaan, when they had conquered them, as he commanded them before, ver. 7.

Thine Eye shall have no Pity upon them:] The Reason of this Severity was, because of their abominable Wickedness, as I there observed.

Neither shalt thou serve their Gods, for that will be a Snare unto thee.] In the Hebrew, and thou shalt not serve their Gods, &c. This Severity was used to prevent their being inticed by them to their Idolatry, if they had suffered them to live among them.

Ver. 17. If thou shalt say in thine Heart, These Nations are more than I; how can I dispossess them?] If such a Diffidence began to arise in their Hearts, as possessed their Forefathers, Numb. xiv.

Ver. 18. Thou shalt not be afraid of them, but shalt well remember what the LORD thy GOD did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt;] He requires them immediately to expel all Fear by Faith in GOD; which the Remembrance of what GOD had done for them, if seriously reflected on, might well work in them.

Ver. 19. The great Temptations which thine Eyes saw, and the Signs, and the Wonders, and the mighty Hand, &c.] Of all these he had put them in mind before, iv. 34. and now renews the Remembrance of it, that the Experience they had of GOD's Power and Goodness, might banish all Fear out of their Hearts.

Ver. 20. Moreover the LORD thy GOD will send the Hornet among them,] Raise up Enemies which they think not of, to infest them, that is, unusual Swarms of Hornets, and of an unusual Bigness, it's like, which came like an Army upon them. See Exod. xxiii. 28.

Until they that are left, and bide themselves from thee, be destroyed.] Which should pursue those that fled from the Israelites, and sting them to Death in their lurking Holes.

Ver. 21. Thou shalt not be affrighted at them;] Let all this inspire you with Courage.

For the LORD thy GOD is among you, a mighty GOD, and terrible.] The Sovereign of the World, of whose Goodness you have had such long Experience, dwells among you, and conducts and leads you, wheresoever you go: And who can stand before him? See Exod. xvii. 7.

Ver. 22. And the LORD thy GOD will put out these Nations before thee, by little and little: Thou mayst consume them at once, lest the Beasts of the Field increase upon thee.] Be not discouraged, though they be not destroyed all at once: There is great Reason against that, concerning which see Exod. xxiii. 21. where this Verse is explained.

Ver. 23. But the LORD thy GOD shall deliver them unto thee, and shall destroy them with a mighty Destruction, until they be destroyed.] In Time he will deliver them all up into thy Hand; and thou shalt so over-power them, as to leave none of them remaining.

Ver. 24. And he shall deliver their Kings into thine Hand,] As he did, we read in the Book of Joshua, xii. 7, 8, 9, &c. where Thirty-one Kings are enumerated, who were conquered by him.

And thou shalt destroy their Name from under Heaven,] There shall no Memory, of so much as the Names of such Men, be left any-where.

There shall no Man be able to stand before thee, until thou have destroyed them.] The Kings and great Men of the Country being destroyed, their Victory was easier over the rest.

Ver. 25. The graven Images of their Gods shall ye burn with Fire:] This he had required before, ver. 5. but mentions it again, to let them know, that if they did not perform their Part of the Covenant, (of which this was the chief) God would not destroy the Inhabitants of Canaan totally. As we find he did not, Judg. ii. 2, 3. and for this very Reason, as Josua had told them, xxiii. 12, 13.

Thou shalt not desire the Silver or Gold that is on them,] The Jews are too nice and curious, who expound this only of the Gold and Silver Cloaths, or the Chains, or other Jewels of Gold and Silver, wherewith their Images were adorned; because he saith, on them. There is no Reason to doubt, but he means, that they should be destroyed, if they were intirely made of massy Gold and Silver; which they were not to convert to their own Use: For thus Moses did with the Golden Calf, Exod. xxxii. 20. and Jacob, in ancient Time, buried all the strange Gods, as well as the Ear-Rings that were in their Ears, Gen. xxxv. 4. And Josiah, in future Ages, burnt every Thing that had been employed to Idolatry, even the Vessels that were made for Baal, as well as the Images, &c. and stamped them to Powder, 2 Kings xxiii. 4, 6, 14, 15.

Nor take it unto thee, lest thou be snared therein:] Be drawn into a Conceit, that there was something sacred in it, and so tempted to worship it.

For it is an Abomination to the LORD thy GOD.] Whatsoever hath been employed to such idolatrous Worship, is so detestable unto the Divine Majesty, that he will not have it converted to any ordinary and common Use, but utterly destroyed.

Ver. 26. Neither shalt thou bring an Abomination into thy House,] And therefore he requires them, not to bring any of that Silver and Gold which had belonged to those Idols (which he calls an Abomination) into their Houses, to be employed unto any private Use whatsoever: So the Jews understand these Words, having made from hence one of their affirmative Precepts: That no Man should seek the least Profit or Benefit from any Thing appertaining to an Idol.

Lest thou be a cursed Thing, like it:] Every Thing that was idolatrous, was a Cherem, devoted to Destruction, as he saith in the last Words, It is a cursed Thing, which no Man might meddle withal, xiii. 17. If he did, he became an accursed Thing, i. e. was devoted to Destruction, as the Thing itself was. This was apparent afterwards in the Example of Achan, Josb. vii. who took a Wedge of Gold, and a Babylonish Garment for his own private Use, when it had been made a Cherem by God's express Command, (Josb. vi. 17.) and therefore was stoned to Death.

But thou shalt utterly detest it, and thou shalt utterly abhor it, &c.] Not only look upon it as useless and unprofitable, but as hateful and execrable in the highest Degree; and therefore to be intirely destroyed. All this tended to their Preservation in the true Religion; which taught them to have every Thing contrary to it in the utmost Detestation: Inasmuch (as Maimonides interprets this Precept, in his More Nevochim, P. III. cap. 37.) that if any Man broke such

VOL. I.

Images, or melted them down, and then sold the Silver and Gold, he committed an Abomination; and the Price of this being mingled with his other Riches, proved the Rust of them all. This he thinks is the Meaning of bringing an Abomination into their House. Which was so far from bringing a Blessing, (as the Heathen imagined) that it brought a Curse upon all that they had.

The Jews were so sensible of all this, after they had severely smarted for their Idolatry, that they thought it unlawful to use any Vessel that had been employed in sacrificing to a false God; nay, to warm themselves with the Wood of a Grove that was cut down; or to sit under the Shadow of it, for Coolness sake, while it was standing; or so much as to use the Ashes of the Wood that were left after the Grove was burnt. See Selden, Lib. II. De Jure Nat. & Gent. juxta Discipl. Heb. cap. 7. pag. 215, 216, &c.

C H A P. VIII.

Ver. 1. ALL the Commandments, which I command thee this Day, shall ye observe to do:] He seems still to press them to have a special Care to observe the Ten Commandments, and especially the First of them, (vi. 4, 5, 6.) For it appears by the latter End of this Chapter, that he hath a Regard to that.

That ye may live,] Long and happily: For Life, every one knows, frequently signifies all the Comforts of Life, as Death signifies all Manner of Miseries.

And multiply,] Which is the Effect of a long and happy Life.

And go in, and possess the Land, &c. Or, After ye go in and possess the Land, which the LORD sware unto your Fathers.] See vi. 18.

Ver. 2. And thou shalt remember all the Way which the LORD thy GOD led thee these forty Years in the Wilderness,] Whereby they were severely punished for the Rebellion of their Forefathers against him; which should be an Admonition to them to be more dutiful. Others expound it of the Care of God over them, in providing for them, and protecting them, as well as leading them by a glorious Cloud all that Time; which doth well enough agree with what follows. See ii. 7.

To bumble thee,] Or to afflict thee with tedious Wanderings up and down, backward and forward, without any certain Dwelling-Place.

And to prove thee,] To try whether they would be better, by being kept so long out of the good Land promised unto them.

To know what was in thine Heart, whether thou wouldst keep his Commandments, or no.] God knew perfectly how they were disposed towards him; but it was fit, that they should know themselves better, and Posterity be instructed by their Behaviour.

Ver. 3. And he bumbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger,] He afflicted thee, by suffering thee to want Bread to eat, Exod. xvi. 2, 3.

And fed thee with Manna,] But it was, that he might have an Opportunity to make a bountiful Provision for such a vast Multitude of People, as were fed by him every Day from Heaven, ven, and teach them to depend on his good Providence.

Which thou knewest not, neither did thy Fathers know;] Exod. xvi. 15. He made an unusual, as well as an unexpected Provision for them.

That he might make thee know, that Man doth not live by Bread only,] That it is not only our common Food that preserves us.

But by every Word that proceedeth out of the Mouth of the LORD, doth Man live.] But by any Thing whatsoever, (for so Word often signifies) which God shall please to command to give us Nourishment. This was a wonderful Encouragement to Obedience; that God would rather work a Miracle, than suffer them to want Necessaries; and by a light aerial Sort of Bread, give them as great Strength and Vigour, as the most solid Nourishment was wont to afford them. The Remembrance of which could not but excite their Posterity to love God, and serve him, if they often and seriously reflected on it.

Ver. 4. Thy Raiment waxed not old upon thee, neither did thy Foot swell these forty Years.] These were two other wonderful Benefits, which, if well considered, could not but incline them to be obedient to him, who multiplied Miracles to nourish and strengthen their Faith and Hope in him. The Jews, to increase the Miracle, say, their Cloaths enlarged as they grew bigger, from Children to Men; and so did their Shoes also: But there was no Need of this; for the Cloaths and Shoes of those Men that died, might serve their Children when they grew up to their Stature. And it was sufficiently amazing, without such Additions, that their Cloaths should not so much as decay, nor their Feet, by so long travelling in hot and stony Places, have the least Swelling in them, or, as some translate it, grow callous. There are those that refer this last Clause not to their Feet, but to their Shoes; according to what we read, xxix. 5.

Ver. 5. Thou shalt also consider in thine Heart,] Often reflect and ponder.

That as a Man chasteneth his Son, so the LORD thy God chasteneth thee.] All the Afflictions which God had sent upon them, he would have them think, were not for their Undoing, but for their Amendment, and correcting what was amiss in them; and therefore ought to be thankfully acknowledged as well as his Benefits.

Ver. 6. Therefore thou shalt keep the Commandments of the LORD thy God, to walk in his Ways, and to fear him.] Howsoever therefore he dealt with them, it ought to have led them to Obedience. In the Repetition of this so often, Moses doth but practise his own Lesson, which he had taught them, vi. 7. That they should teach these Words diligently to their Children, &c.

Ver. 7. For the LORD thy God bringeth thee into a good Land,] Therefore there was the greater Need they should enter into it with the pious Resolution before-mentioned, To fear God, and walk in his Ways. Otherwise, they would be in great Danger to be corrupted by such Plenty and Variety of all good Things, as this Land afforded.

A Land of Brooks of Water, of Fountains, and Depths that spring out of Valleys and Hills;] The Hebrew Word Tebom, which we translate Deep, and in the plural Number Depths, signifies sometimes those great Caverns of Water that are within the Ground, which were made by the plentiful Rains, which God sent upon this Country, while they were obedient to him: Which both made it fruitful, (though now barren) and abounding also with Water for their Cattle, Psal. lxxviii. 15. Ezek. xxxi. 4. But it is here commonly interpreted Lakes, or Wells of Water.

Ver. 8. A Land of Wheat, and Barley, and Vines, and Fig-Trees, and Pomegranates;] Plentifully stored with all Things necessary for the Support and Pleasure of Life.

A Land of Oil-Olive, and Honey;] The same Word Debas, which signifies Honey, signifies also Dates. And so de Dieu thinks it most reasonable to translate it here, being joined with four other Sorts of Fruits; and so Kimchi saith, the ancient Jews expounded it in this Place; and in 2 Chron. xxxi. 5. where it is said, That Israel brought in Abundance, the First-Fruits of Corn, Wine, Oil, and Honey, or Dates, as we there translate it in the Margin.

Ver. 9. A Land wherein thou shalt eat Bread without Scarceness,] Be in no Want of any Sort of Provision, which is comprehended under the Name of Bread.

Thou shalt not lack any Thing in it;] No other Conveniences of Life.

A Land whose Stones are Iron, and out of whose Hills thou mayst dig Brass.] Where there are useful Minerals, as plentiful as Stones are in other Places. These are the rather mentioned, because there were no such Mines in Egypt, where they had long dwelt, and were stored with Plenty of other Things, Numb. xi. 5.

Ver. 10. When thou hast eaten, and art full,] After a liberal Meal.

Then thou shalt bless the LORD thy God for the good Land which he hath given thee.] Give solemn Thanks to God, not only for that present Repast, but for the plentiful Provision he had made for them of all good Things, in the Land he had bestowed on them. From this Place the Jews have made it a general Rule, or, as they call it, an affirmative Precept, That every one bless God at their Meals, that is, as I said, give him Thanks for his Benefits: For he blesses us, when he bestows good Things upon us; and we bless him, when we thankfully acknowledge his Goodness therein: Which is a natural Duty, which we owe to the Fountain and Original of all Good.

Ver. 11. Beware that thou forget not the LORD thy God, in not keeping his Commandments, his Judgments, and his Statutes, which I command thee this Day:] He would have their Thanksgiving for his Benefits leave such a Sense of God upon their Minds, as should make them careful to yield him an intire Obedience.

Ver. 12. Lest, when thou hast eaten, and art full, and hast built goodly Houses, and dwelt therein;] Feasted in stately Houses, wherein they enjoyed their Ease.

Ver. 13. And when thy Herds and thy Flocks multiply, and thy Silver and thy Gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied;] The Sense of these two Verses is, when they had great great Abundance of all good Things, within Doors, and without.

Ver. 14. Then thine Heart be lifted up,] Which is an usual Effect of great Riches; as Euripides observes in that known Saying of his, Πλούτος φιλότητος, Wealth breeds Pride, Scorn, and Contempt of others. This Moses Katzenfis thought so great a Sin, that he puts it among the negative Precepts; and pretends, he was warned in a Dream so to do, tho' Maimonides, and others, had omitted it. And when he awaked, he was confirmed in it, by reading a Place in the Gemara upon Sota, cap. 1. which saith, Wheresoever we find these Words in Scripture, Take heed lest, there is a Prohibition, as there is, ver. 11. and here, to take heed of Pride: For whosoever is proud, he shall be brought low, as the Gemara there adds; which are, in a Manner, the Words of our blessed Saviour, St. Luke xviii. 14.

And thou forget the LORD thy GOD,] This is another common Effect of large Possessions, which make the Owners of them fall into Sloth and Luxury; and such Forgetfulness of the Donor of all good Things, that they trust in uncertain Riches, (as the Apostle speaks) and not in the Living GOD, imagining now they can never want; not because GOD is so good, but because they have such Store of good Things laid up for many Years.

Which brought thee forth out of the Land of Egypt, from the House of Bondage:] No Wonder if they forgot all his former Benefits, when they were unthankful for the present.

Ver. 15. Who led thee through that great and terrible Wilderness,] See i. 19.

Wherein were fiery Serpents,] See Numb. xxi. 6.

And Scorpions,] These are commonly joined with Serpents in Scripture, even in the New Testament, Luke x. 19. xi. 12, 13. being found in the same Places, especially in this Desert of Arabia.

And Drought,] The Hebrew Word Tsimmaon signifies a dry Place, as we translate it. Psal. cvii. 33. Isa. xxxv. 7. And that best agrees with what here follows, Where there was no Water.

Who brought thee forth Water out of the Rock of Flint;] From whence one would have sooner expected Fire than Water, Numb. xx. 11.

Ver. 16. Who fed thee in the Wilderness with Manna, which thy Fathers knew not;] Ver. 3. The great Salmasius, in a Treatise on purpose about Manna, hath said a great deal to prove, that the Manna which GOD sent the Jews, did not differ in its Form or Substance from that which commonly fell in those Countries, and doth so at this Day: But herein consisted the Miracle, that he gave it them in a prescribed Measure, and so abundantly, as to suffice such a vast Number; and that every Morning, in all Seasons of the Year. This made it a divine Manna; for the common fell only in small Quantities, and not always, but at some Times in the Year.

That he might humble thee,] This Word is commonly understood of humbling by Affliction; which may seem not to belong to Manna; for that was a singular Benefit, being an excellent Nourishment, and of a delicious Taste: but they having nothing else beside this to live upon, were soon tired with it, (as we find Numb. xi. 6.) And much more did it seem an Affliction to them, to live upon one Thing alone, for forty Years together: and GOD intended by it to humble them, at the same Time that he was extraordinary kind to them.

And that he might prove thee,] Whether they would be thankful that they were not starved, and submit to his wise Providence, and obey his Laws; which they had the greater Reason to observe, because it was evident they owed their very Life and Being to him every Moment: for without new Supplies every Day from Heaven, they had been famished in that desolate Wilderness.

To do thee Good at thy latter End,] That in Conclusion his Kindness to them might be more thankfully received, and more safely enjoyed. So Maimonides expounds this Passage in his Mere Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 24. "GOD was pleased to accustom them to labour in the Wilderness, that he might increase their Happiness, when they came into the Land of Canaan. For this is certain, A Transition from Labour to Rest, is far sweeter than continual Rest. Nor could they so easily have subdued the Land, and overcome the Inhabitants of it, unless they had endured some Hardship in the Wilderness: For Rest and Idleness take away Mens Courage; but Labour and hard Fare augments it. And this is the Good, saith he, which was in the Issue to redound to them by this wise Dispensation of GOD's Providence."

Ver. 17. And thou say in thine Heart, My Power, and the Might of my Hand, hath gotten me this Wealth.] Such vain Conceits are apt to arise in Mens Minds, if they preserve not a Sense of GOD, and of all his Mercies to them.

Ver. 18. But thou shalt remember the LORD thy GOD; for it is he that giveth thee Power to get Wealth,] Continually call to mind, that they owed all they had, and the Increase of it, to his Almighty Providence; without whom they could never have gotten Possession of this Land, nor have prospered in it.

That he may establish his Covenant which he swore unto thy Fathers, &c.] He would have them sensible of their own Unworthiness also, (which would make them more grateful to him) of all the Blessings GOD had bestowed on them, and acknowledge them to his mere Goodness, and Fidelity to his Promises; for they had been a murmuring and rebellious People.

Ver. 19. And it shall be, if thou do at all forget the LORD thy GOD,] Luxury and Pride (the usual Effects of Fulness) naturally made them unthankful and unmindful of GOD, and Neglect of GOD's Service made them easily fall to Idolatry.

And walk after other Gods, and serve them; and worship them;] The two last Expressions are the Explication of the first; for then they walked after the Idols of the People, (as Onkelos paraphrases it) when they worshipped and adored them. It is evident by this, that the Drift of Moses, in all this Discourse, is (as I observed before) to press upon them the first and great Commandment.

I testify against you this Day, that ye shall surely perish.] See iv. 26.

Ver. 20. As the Nations which the LORD destroyed before your Face,] He speaks in the present present Tense, because he was about to destroy them : and when he began, he destroyed them by little and little, (vii. 22.) and there were still more to be destroyed.

So shall ye perish ; because ye would not be obedient to the Voice of the LORD your GOD.] It was but just, that they should perish as those Nations did, because they fell into their Sin.

CHAP. IX.

Verse 1. HEAR, O Israel :] He begins a new Exhortation to them, at some Distance of Time from the former ; but still aiming at the same Thing, to represent to them the Danger of Idolatry.

Thou art to pass over Jordan this Day,] That is, shortly, not long hence ; for it cannot be meant precisely : all these Things being spoken in the eleventh Month of the last Year of their Travels, and they passed not over Jordan till the first Month of the next Year. Between which and this Time Moses died, and they mourned a whole Month for him.

To go in to possess Nations] A Country inhabited by Nations ; for the People themselves they were to destroy.

Greater and mightier than thyself ;] Whom, notwithstanding GOD would deliver up into their Hands.

Cities great, and fenced up to Heaven ;] As the Spies had represented them (i. 28.) And they were indeed very strong Cities, whose Walls could not easily be scaled.

Ver. 2. A People great and tall,] Numb. xiv. 28, 32.

The Children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest,] Who seem to have been the Chief of those Nephilim or Repbaim (which we sometimes translate Giants) in those Parts, Numb. xiii. 22, 28, 33.

Of whom thou hast heard say, Who can stand before the Children of Anak ?] A common Proverb in those Days ; the Children of Anak being so famous, that the whole Nation (as Bochartus thinks) took its Name from them. For Bene-Anak, (i. e. Children of Anak) or Phene-Anak is easily changed into Phœnicia. These Anakims were vanquished by Joshua, who drove them out of the Cities where they dwelt, and made them flee to the Philistines ; where a Remnant of them seemed to have lived till the Days of David. For Goliath, and his Brethren Labmi, Sippai, and Ishbibanob, (1 Chron. xx. 4, &c.) were Anakims ; and so was that Man with six Toes on each Foot, and six Fingers on each Hand, (2 Sam. xxi. 16.) for they were all born at Gath ; which was one of the Cities to which the Anakims fled, Josh. xi. 22. Some think that from hence Kings, among the Greeks, were called Avantes, because commonly they chose those to rule over them who were Persons of a great Stature, and carried Majesty in their Faces. But it is not improbable, (as I observed before) that some of the Anakims fled into Greece, and settled there, when they were driven out of Canaan.

Ver. 3. Understand therefore this Day,] Settle this therefore in your Minds, before you go over Jordan, as undoubted Truth.

That the LORD thy GOD is he which goeth over before thee,] Over Jordan, Josh. iii. 3, 4, &c.

As a consuming Fire :] Before whom none can stand, iv. 24.

He shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy Face :] See Josh. iii. 10, 11. The Hebrews have a Conceit, that the Fire which burnt upon the Altar, appeared in the Form of a Lion ; to shew what GOD would be to their Enemies, if the Israelites obeyed him ; otherwise, what he would be to them.

So shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly as the LORD hath said unto thee.] Not the whole seven Nations intirely ; whom he said GOD would drive out by little and little, (vii. 22.) but so many, as to make a Settlement for themselves in Canaan without much Difficulty.

Ver. 4. Speak not thou in thine Heart, after that the LORD thy GOD hath cast them out, &c.] When this is done, do not so much as entertain a Thought.

For my Righteousness the LORD hath brought me in to possess this Land ;] Nothing is more dangerous than Pride and Self-conceit ; and therefore, as he taught them before, (viii. 7.) to have an humble Opinion of their own Power, so now, not to arrogate any thing to themselves, on the Account of their own Righteousness.

But for the Wickedness of these Nations the LORD doth drive them out from before thee.] Lev. xviii. 24, 25, 27, 28.

Ver. 5. Not for thy Righteousness, or for the Uprightness of thine Heart, dost thou go to possess their Land ; but for the Wickedness of these Nations, &c. and that he may perform the Word which the LORD swore unto thy Fathers, &c.] It was of great Moment, (which makes him repeat it again) that they should understand the true Causes why GOD expelled these Nations, and gave their Land to the Israelites ; which were these two : First, The abominable Wickedness of the Canaanites ; for which they deserved to be rooted out. Secondly, GOD's gracious Promises to the pious Ancestors of the Israelites, with whom he made a Covenant, and confirmed it with an Oath to plant them there, in the Room of the former Inhabitants.

Ver. 6. Understand therefore, that the LORD thy GOD giveth thee not this good Land to possess it, for thy Righteousness ;] He repeats it a third time, that, if it were possible, he might root out of the Israelites the Opinion of their own Deserts, before he rooted the Canaanites out of their Country.

For thou art a stiff-necked People :] So far from being righteous, that they were very refractory. Of which GOD often complained, Exod. xxxii. 9, xxxiii. 3, 5. and Moses acknowledges it in his Prayer to GOD for them, xxxiv. 9.

Ver. 7. Remember, and forget not, how thou provokedst the LORD thy GOD to Wrath in the Wilderness ;] In order to destroy the Opinion of their own Righteousness, it was necessary to call to Mind some of their most notorious Provocations ; which he exhorts them carefully to preserve in their Mind, as a Means to keep them humble.

From the Day that thou didst depart out of the Land of Egypt, until ye came unto this Place, ye have been rebellious against the LORD.] This appears by the many Murmurings we read of in the two first Years after they came out of Egypt; and likewise in the last; of which only we have a particular Account: but their Behaviour, all the rest of the Time they spent in the Wilderness, was no better.

Ver. 8. Also in Horeb ye provoked the LORD to Wrath.] Or rather, even in Horeb (for there is an Emphasis in this, and he speaks it with some Indignation); when they had newly received the Law, and had a visible Appearance of God in great Glory upon Mount Sinai, and had enter'd into Covenant with him, they so shamefully revolted from him, that he thought to have destroyed them, Exod. xxxii. 7, 8, &c.

Ver. 9. When I was gone up into the Mount to receive the Tables of Stone, even the Tables of the Covenant which the LORD made with you.] See Exod. xxiv. 11.

Then I abode in the Mount forty Days, and forty Nights; I neither did eat Bread, nor drink Water.] See Exod. xxiv. 18. xxxiv. 28.

Ver. 10. And the LORD delivered unto me two Tables of Stone, written with the Finger of God.] See Exod. xxxi. 18.

According to all the Words which the LORD spake with you in the Mount.] See Exod. xxxiv. 28.

Out of the Midst of the Fire, in the Day of the Assembly.] When the whole Body of the People were assembled, and heard God speak these ten Words out of the Midst of the Fire: see Deut. iv. 10, 11, 12, 13.

Ver. 11. And it came to pass at the End of forty Days and forty Nights, that the LORD gave me the two Tables of Stone, &c.] That is, having given him the two Tables, as was said before, ver. 10.

Ver. 12. And the LORD said unto me,] Immediately after he had delivered to him the Tables, Exod. xxxi. 18. xxxii. 7.

Arise, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy People, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt, have corrupted themselves, &c.] See Exod. xxxii. 7, 8.

Ver. 13. Furthermore the LORD spake unto me, saying, I have seen this People, and, behold, it is a stiff-necked People.] Who will not bend to the Yoke of my Laws, Exod. xxxii. 9.

Ver. 14. Let me alone.] Do not make any Intercession to me for them.

That I may destroy them, and blot out their Name from under Heaven; and I will make of thee a Nation greater and mightier than they.] See Exod. xxxii. 10.

Ver. 15. So I turned, and came down from the Mount.] See Exod. xxxii. 15.

And the Mount burnt with Fire.] Was all in a Flame, in token of God's high Displeasure against them; and as if he intended presently to consume them.

And the two Tables of the Covenant were in my two Hands.] Exod. xxxii. 15.

Ver. 16. And I looked, and behold ye had sinned against the LORD your GOD, and had made you a molten Calf.] About which he found them Dancing, Exod. xxxii. 19.

Ye had turned aside quickly out of the Way which the LORD had commanded you.] For a few Weeks before he had commanded them, with his own Mouth, not to make to themselves any graven

Image, &c. Exod. xx. 4. And immediately after commanded Moses to repeat this Precept particularly to them, Not to make with him Gods of Silver or Gold, ver. 22, 23.

Ver. 17. And I took the two Tables, and cast them out of my two Hands, and brake them before your Eyes.] By God's Order, no doubt, in token that they had broken his Covenant, and were unworthy to be owned by him for his People, (Exod. xxxii. 19.) or that the Covenant was made void, and God no longer engaged to them.

Ver. 18. And I fell down, &c.] To pray God for Pardon; tho' not presently: but after he had broken the Calf in Pieces, reproved Aaron, and made a Slaughter among the People, Exod. xxxii. 20, 21, &c.

As at the first.] When he first heard of their Sin, Exod. xxxii. 11, 12, 13. and the next Morning after he had broken the Calf, and done Execution upon the Offenders, ver. 30, 31, 32.

Forty Days and forty Nights; I did neither eat Bread, nor drink Water.] Exod. xxxiv. 2, 28.

Because of all your Sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the Sight of the LORD, to provoke him to Anger.] He spent this Time, very much, in earnest Supplication to God, to forgive not only this, but all other Sins, whereby they had deserved to be cast off by him. For they provoked him at Marah, Exod. xv. 23. and in the Wilderness of Sin, xvi. 2, 3. and at Massah, xvii. 2, 3, 4.

Ver. 19. For I was afraid of the Anger, and of the Displeasure, wherewith the LORD was wroth against you, to destroy you.] Which God had expressed both before he came down from the Mount, and after, Exod. xxxii. xxxiii. 3, 5. Inasmuch that the LORD removed out of the Camp; and would not, for the present, dwell among them, ver. 7.

But the LORD bearkened unto me at that Time also.] See Exod. xxxiv. 8, 9, 10. Where the LORD tells him, He expected they should be more faithful hereafter, in observing their Covenant with him, particularly this Part, of Worshipping no other God: see there, ver. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14.

Ver. 20. And the LORD was very angry with Aaron, to have destroyed him, &c.] This shews the Heinousness of this Sin, which had like to have cost Aaron his Life; tho' he merely complied with the impetuous Desire of the People, out of Fear and Want of Courage to resist them.

Ver. 21. And I took your Sin.] So Idols are termed in Isa. xxxi. 7. The Object or Occasion of Sin, as well as the Punishment of it, being called by the Name of Sin.

The Calf which ye had made; and burnt it with Fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, &c.] This he did before he went up the second Time into the Mount, Exod. xxxii. 20.

And I cast the Dust thereof into the Brook that descended out of the Mount.] From the Rock which Moses smote with his Rod, Exod. xvii. 6. which constantly supplied them with Drink; which for the present they could not have but mixed with their Sin, as we read Exod. xxxii. 20.

Ver. 22. And at Taberah.] Besides this great Sin committed at Horeb, he puts them in Mind of of several other, that they might be more humbled, and have no Opinion of their own Righteousness remaining in them: see concerning this, Numb. xi. 1, 2, 3.

And at Massa,] As the foregoing Sin was committed after the making the Golden Calf, so this was before it, Exod. xvii. 7.

And at Kibroth-bataavah ye provoked the LORD to Wrath.] This Provocation was immediately after that at Taberah, Numb. xi. 33, 34. All which three Places had their Names from the Sin of the Israelites, or from their Punishment.

Ver. 23. Likewise,] And yet this was not all.

When the LORD sent you from Kadesh-Barnea, saying, Go up, and possess the Land which I have given you;] Numb. xiii. 1, 2, 3.

Then ye rebelled against the Commandment of the LORD your GOD; and ye believed him not, nor bearkened to his Voice.] Numb. xiv. 1, 2, 3. of which Unbelief GOD there complains, ver. 11.

Ver. 24. You have been rebellious against the LORD from the Day that I knew you.] To comprise all in a few Words, you have been a disobedient People ever since I was acquainted with you. So he suspected they would prove, Exod. iv. 1. and upon the first Disappointment, found it to be true, Exod. v. 24, 25.

Ver. 25. Thus I fell down before the LORD forty Days and forty Nights, as I fell down at the first; because the LORD had said he would destroy you.] Having interposed some other Instances of their rebellious Disposition, besides their making the Golden Calf, he returns to what he had begun to say concerning his Intercession with GOD for a Pardon; which he could not obtain without long Importunity. For we cannot from these Words gather, as some of the Jews do, that Moses was three times in the Mount forty Days and forty Nights; it being plain, that he speaks here of the same Time which he mentioned ver. 18. And if we should think he intended any other, we might conclude he was four Times in the Mount so many Days and Nights, because he mentions it over again in the next Chapter, x. 10.

Because the LORD had said he would destroy you.] Exod. xxxii. 10. xxxiii. 5. This made him so earnest to obtain an Assurance from GOD, that he would continue to be as gracious to them as he had been: of which he had given him some Hope, before he went up into the Mount: see Exod. xxiii. 17. xxxiv. 9, 10.

Ver. 26. I prayed therefore unto the LORD, and said, O LORD GOD, destroy not thy People, and thine Inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy Greatness, &c.] He used the same Argument in his Petition for them, when he went into the Mount the second Time, which he had urged before he came down the first Time from it, Exod. xxxii. 12.

Ver. 27. Remember thy Servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob;] The very same he had said there, ver. 13.

Look not unto the Stubbornness of this People, nor to their Wickedness, nor to their Sin:] He prays that the gracious Promise of GOD to their pious Forefathers would move him to overlook the high Provocations of their Posterity. Which he aggravates in several Words, the more to humble them, and to magnify GOD's Mercy in granting them a Pardon. The Word Stubbornness seems to relate to their very evil Disposition of Mind; and their Wickedness to all their undutiful Murmurings; and their Sin to their Idolatry; which is often called in Scripture peculiarly by the Name of Sin: It being the highest Provocation, from whence sprang all Manner of Wickedness. Thus Jeroboam is said to have made Israel to sin, by setting up the Calves at Dan and Bethel to be worshipped.

Ver. 28. Lest the Land whence thou broughtest us out, say, Because the LORD was not able to bring them into the Land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath brought them out to slay them in the Wilderness.] The Sense of this also he had before urged, Exod. xxxii. 12.

Ver. 29. Yet they are thy People, and thine Inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty Power, &c.] They were redeemed by him out of the Land of Egypt, and after a wonderful Manner separated from all other People, to be his peculiar (Exod. xix. 4, 5, 6.). And besides, having repented of this Sin in making the Golden Calf, GOD had again owned them to be his, and promised his Presence should go with them, Exod. xxxiii. 14. Inasmuch that Moses there said, before he went into the Mount again, ver. 13, Consider that this Nation is thy People. And see ver. 15, 16.

CHAP. X.

Verse 1. A T that Time the LORD said unto me, Hew thee two Tables of Stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the Mount,] After his Anger was something appeased, he ordered Moses to come up to him where he had been before, and bring with him two Tables of Stone like those he had broke, that GOD might renew his Covenant with them. But there was this Difference, (as I observed Exod. xxxiv. 1.) that GOD himself made the former Tables; but he bad Moses make these: which signifies some Abatement of his Favour.

And make thee an Ark of Wood,] This Command was given at his first going up into the Mount, Exod. xxv. 10. and perhaps was renewed again now, upon the Occasion of making these new Tables which were to be put into it.

Ver. 2. And I will write on the Tables the Words that were in the first Tables which thou brakest,] So we read he told him, Exod. xxxiv. 1.

And thou shalt put them in the Ark.] As soon as it was made to receive them.

Ver. 3. And I made an Ark of Shittim-Wood,] This looks as if he made an Ark before he made the Tables; that when he brought them down, it might be ready to receive them. And it hath given some Ground to the Jewish Doctors, to say that there were two Arks; one made by Moses, wherein he put the Tables of Stone that were broken, and those that were renewed, until the other was made by Bezaleel: for we read expressly, that Bezaleel made the Ark, Exod. xxxvii. 1. and here it is said that Moses made it. So that they conclude there were two made; and this made by Moses they fancy was the Ark that went before them in their Marches and Battles; which the other never did by GOD's Order, but only when they entered into Canaan, (Josh. iii.) for for when of their own selves they carried it forth in the Days of Eli, GOD was angry with them, and delivered it into the Enemies Hand, 1 Sam. iv. 3, 4, 11. But Aben-Ezra, Nachmanides, and Abarinel, have confuted this by strong Reasons to the contrary, as may be seen in Buxtorf's Histor. Arcae, p. 35, 36, &c. And as to this Place, they are of Opinion, that Moses speaks of the Ark made afterwards by Bezaleel, which Moses is said to have made, because he commanded him to make it; just as Solomon is said to have built the Temple, because he caused it to be built. Or, if it be granted that Moses made an Ark before he went the second Time into the Mount, (which this Verse seems to countenance) it will not follow, that there were two Arks in Use among the Israelites; for this Ark now made was of mere Wood, not overlaid with Gold, and designed only as a Chest wherein to keep the Tables handsomely, till the Ark could be made by Bezaleel; and then the Tables were translated into that, and this Chest of Moses laid aside.

And bewed two Tables of Stone like unto the first, and went up into the Mount, &c.] See Exod. xxxiv. 4.

Ver. 4. And he wrote on the Tables, according to the first Writing, the Ten Commandments.] Exod. xxxiv. 28.

Which the LORD spake unto you in the Mount, out of the Midst of the Fire, in the Day of the Assembly:] When the whole Congregation was gathered together at the Foot of the Mount. See ix. 10.

And the LORD gave them unto me.] To carry down to the People.

Ver. 5. And I turned myself,] From the Divine Presence, where he had been supplicating for Mercy, and had received from thence the Tables of the Covenant.

And came down from the Mount,] At the End of forty Days and Nights, Exod. xxxiv. 28, 29.

And put the Tables in the Ark which I had made:] Which he commanded to be made by Bezaleel, (Exod. xxxvii. 1.) and put into the Tabernacle as soon as it was built, with these Tables in it, Exod. xl. 20, 21.

And there they be, as the LORD commanded me.] Tho' Moses mentions his making the Ark before his hewing the Tables, and going up into the Mount, (ver. 3.) yet these Words seem to determine, that he speaks of the Ark made by Bezaleel, according to his Directions. For now that they were going over Jordan, the Tables were in the Ark, which he is said here to have made. Which was certainly the Ark of the Covenant, not that Chest, which some suppose Moses to have made to keep the Tables in, till the other could be fitted for their Reception.

Ver. 6. And the Children of Israel took their Journey from Beerotb of the Children of Jaakan to Mosera:] Not immediately, but after they had passed through several other Places, and made some Stay in them: For they went from Bene-jaakan to Gudgodah, (or Hor-bagidgad) and so to Jotbath, and the rest of the Mansions mentioned Numb. xxxiii. 32, 33, &c. until they came to Mount Hor.

There Aaron died, and there he was buried:]

At Mosera, or the Top of Mount Hor; which was another Part of the same Mountain, as Horeb was of Sinai.

And Eleazar his Son ministred in the Priest's Office in his stead.] The greatest Difficulty is to give an Account how this comes in here, and what Connexion this and the following Verse have with what went before. All the Satisfaction that I can give to it, is this; That Moses having told them, that he put the Tables of the Testimony or Covenant into the Ark, as a Token GOD was reconciled to them, and that there they still were, as the LORD commanded, he puts them out of all Doubt of it, by telling them, that though Aaron (who had the special Care of the Holy Place, and all Things in it committed to him) was dead, yet Eleazar's Son was still alive, who could testify those holy Things remained, as when Moses first placed them there, he being consecrated to the Priest's Office instead of Aaron, and in this very Mount, (Numb. xx. 25, 26, &c.) which is the Occasion of mentioning this Station here, when most of the rest are omitted.

Ver. 7. From thence] Not from Mosera, but from Bene-jaakan, as appears from Numb. xxxiii. 32. where a full Account is given of their Removals, which are but just touched here.

They journeyed unto Gudgodah;] Called in the Book of Numbers by the Name of Hor-bagidgad. And none will think it strange, that there is such Variation in the proper Names of Places, and of Men, in profane Writers, as well as the Scriptures, who considers (as Conradus Pellicanus here notes) how differently the Names of Places are pronounced now, from what they were in former Ages; and how much one Nation differs from another, when they speak of them; and what Alterations are made, from the first Founders of Nations and Cities, by those that conquer them, and change all Names to their own Glory. See how Names were changed among the Israelites in no long Time, Numb. xxvi. 15, 16, 17, 23, 24, 35, 38, 39, &c.

And from Gudgodah to Jotbath,] And so to the rest of the Places, (mentioned Numb. xxxiii. 34, 35, 36.) till they came to Mount Hor.

A Land of Rivers of Waters.] A Place where there was Plenty of Water; which he mentions, I suppose, that they might reflect upon their foul Distrust of GOD's Providence a little after, when they murmured for Want of Water at Kadesh, Numb. xx. 3, 4, &c.

Ver. 8. At that Time] Not long after Moses came down from the Mount the second Time; of which he had been speaking, ver. 5.

The LORD separated the Tribe of Levi,] To his own special Service, as we read Numb. iii. Some think that GOD renewed his Choice of them to the Employment here mentioned, after Aaron's Death, when he confirmed them in their Office. But we read of no such Thing; and it cannot be inferred merely from these Words, at that Time, which may well relate to the Time mentioned ver. 5.

To bear the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD,] Here are three Parts of their Office mentioned in these and the following Words. The first of which was to carry the Ark; which peculiarly belonged to the Kohathites, (Numb. iii. 27, 31.)

when the Camp removed from one Place to another; who were good Witnesses, that the same Ark still remained at that Day, wherein Moses first placed the Tables of the Covenant; for it never stirred but by their Means.

To stand before the LORD] This is a Phrase used of Servants that wait upon their Masters, before whom they are said to stand. Thus Gehazi attended the Prophet Elisha, 2 Kings v. 25. And the Prophets themselves are thus said to stand before the LORD, 1 Kings xvii. 1. xviii. 15. Therefore it here signifies, that the Levites were separated to be GOD's Ministers, as it follows,

To minister unto him,] As Assistants to the Priests in the Tabernacle, Numb. iii. 6. and as a Guard to the Tabernacle, ver. 7, 8. Which was the second Part of their Office.

And to bless in his Name unto this Day.] This was the greatest Thing of all, and was peculiar to the Priests, who were a Part of the Tribe of Levi, but had the sole Privilege among them to bless in the Name of the LORD, as we read expressly, Numb. vi. 23, 24. If indeed it could be made out, that by blessing in the Name of LORD, is meant only to bless the Name of the LORD, that was common to all the Levites, who sang Praises, and gave Thanks continually to him in the Temple, as I suppose they did in the Tabernacle: But I find no Example of the Use of this Expression in this Sense; and therefore it must be restrained to the Priests, who were Sons of Levi, as well as the rest; and are so called when Moses mentions this Part of their Office, Deut. xxi. 5.

Ver. 9. Wherefore Levi hath no Part nor Inheritance with his Brethren:] Because GOD would have them only attend to this Service, and not look after other Affairs; particularly of guarding the Sanctuary, and keeping constant Watch there, to secure all the holy Things, especially the Ark, which they took Care none should meddle withal. And therefore the People might be sure it remained as Moses left it, when he put it into the Tabernacle with the Tables of the Covenant in it.

The LORD is his Inheritance, according as the LORD thy GOD promised him.] He took Care to provide for the Levites, without having any Land to plough or sow, &c. See Numb. xviii. 20.

Ver. 10. And I stayed in the Mount, according to the first time, forty Days and forty Nights;] This doth not signify, that after the Separation of the Levites he went up again into the Mount; but having confirmed what he said concerning his putting the Tables of Stone in the Ark, which he made after he came the second time down from the Mount, (ver. 5.) he returns to what he was speaking of in the Beginning of the Chapter, and had begun to say before, (ix. 25.) how he prayed to GOD for them, when he went to carry the Tables he had hewn, up unto GOD in the Mount, that now he might relate to them the Success of his Prayers, which follows in the next Words.

And the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also, and the LORD would not destroy thee.] As he feared he would, because he had so threatened, ix. 15.

Ver. 11. And the LORD said unto me, Arise, take thy Journey before the People, that they may go in, and possess the Land, &c.] This cannot refer to what he said unto him after the making the Golden Calf, (as I find some take it from Exod. xxxiii. 1.) for that was before he went up into the Mount again; but to what he said at the Conclusion of their Removals from Place to Place, (some of which he mentions here, ver. 6, 7.) for, then he orders them what to do when they entered into Canaan, which, he saith, I have given you to possess it, Numb. xxxii. 51, 52, 53.

Ver. 12. And now, Israel, what doth the LORD thy GOD require of thee,] Unto whom he hath given Tables, wherein he himself hath wrote his Will with his own Hand, ver. 4, 5. and hath graciously pardoned your foul Breach of his Covenant upon my Intercession, ver. 10.

But to fear the LORD thy GOD,] The Fear of GOD sometimes includes in it all Religion; but here seems to signify one of the great Principles of Obedience. See vi. 2.

To walk in all his Ways,] Unto which the Fear of GOD inclines Men, when their Hearts are possessed with it.

And to love him,] Especially if the Love of GOD be in them; which is still a stronger Principle of Obedience, vi. 1.

And to serve the LORD thy GOD with all thy Heart, and with all thy Soul,] Being constant in his Worship and Service, and worshipping him alone, vi. 13. xiii. 3. For loving him with all the Heart and Soul, seems here to have particular Respect to their having no Inclination to serve other Gods, 1 Kings viii. 23, 48. Which the Jews, after they had smarted for their Idolatry, understood to be the great Commandment. As their Father Jacob, they say, taught his Twelve Sons, when they came about him on his Death-Bed, saying to them: Ye perhaps worship the Idols which Terah the Father of Abraham worshipped; or those which Laban my Mother's Brother worshipped; or ye worship the GOD of Jacob. To whom they all made this Answer, with a perfect Fear: Hear, O Israel, our Father, THE LORD OUR GOD IS ONE LORD. Whereupon Jacob said, LET HIS GREAT NAME BE BLESSED FOR EVER. Thus the Hierusalem Targum upon vi. 4. of this Book.

Ver. 13. To keep the Commandments of the LORD, and his Statutes, which I command this Day for thy Good?] Self-Love should have inclined them to Obedience to GOD's Commands, which he gave them for their Good; though he rewarded their Obedience to them, as if he had received the Benefit thereof.

Ver. 14. Behold, the Heaven,] Where the Sun, Moon, and Stars shine.

And the Heaven of Heavens,] And all the glorious Regions beyond them.

Is the LORD's thy GOD;] Are all his Possession, as they are his Work.

The Earth also, with all that therein is.] As well as this Earth, and all the Creatures that are in it.

Ver. 15. Only the LORD had a Delight in thy Fathers to love them, and he chose their Seed after them, even you above all People, &c.] He would have them sensible, therefore, that the Possessor Possessor of Heaven and Earth, could have no Need of them, or of their Services, who were a very inconsiderable Part of his Creatures: But it was his own mere good Will and Pleasure which moved him to shew such Love to Abraham, as he had done, and to his Posterity for his Sake, above all other Nations on Earth.

Ver. 16. Circumcise therefore the Foreskin of your Heart,] Do not satisfy yourselves therefore with the bare Circumcision of your Flesh (and the Observance of such external Rites and Ceremonies); but cut off, and cast away all your naughty Affections, which make you insensible both of God's Mercies and Corrections, and disobedient to his Commands.

And be no more stiff-necked.] As he had often before complained they were; particularly Exod. xxxii. 9. and see ix. 6. of this Book. It is a Metaphor, as I observed, from Oxen, who, when they are to draw in a Yoke, and go forward, pull back their Neck and their Shoulder, to withdraw themselves from the Yoke. To both which the Scripture alludes, Nebem. ix. 29. And sometimes severally we find Mention of them, as in the Place before-named in Exodus, he speaks of their stiff Neck; and Zachar. vii. 11. he saith, They pulled away the Shoulder. St. Stephen puts both these together in his Character of the wicked Jews, that killed our blessed Saviour, Acts vii. 51. that they were stiff-necked, and uncircumcised in Heart. Therefore the contrary Disposition God promises towards the Conclusion of this Book, as the greatest Blessing he could bestow on them, xxx. 6.

Ver. 17. For the LORD your GOD is GOD of Gods, and LORD of Lords,] Superior to all other Beings, whether Kings on Earth, or Angels in Heaven.

A great GOD, a mighty, and a terrible,] Who can do what he pleases every-where; and therefore is to be greatly dreaded.

Which regardeth not Persons, nor taketh Reward.] The most righteous Judge of Men, who will not connive at your Sins, because you are circumcised, nor be bribed by any Sacrifices to overlook your Wickedness, (Exod. xxiii. 8. Lev. xix. 15. Deut. i. 17.) nor, on the contrary, reject those that uprightly obey him, though they be not Jews. So St. Peter learnt to understand these Words, Acts x. 34.

Ver. 18. He doth execute the Judgment of the Fatherless and Widow,] Takes their Part, as we speak, and defends them against those that would oppress them.

And loveth the Stranger, in giving him Food and Raiment.] Provideth for those who are driven unjustly out of their own Country, or, travelling on their honest Occasions, fall into Want; for he seems here to speak of those who were neither Profelytes of Justice, nor of the Gate, at the Jews speak, but were mere Gentiles.

Ver. 19. Love ye therefore the Stranger;] Be kind and hospitable to such distressed Persons: Which is a Virtue that flows from the Love of God, (ver. 12.) to which it is in vain to pretend, if we love not all Mankind. This Love consists in imitating God's Care of such Persons, whereof he speaks in the foregoing Verse, viz. doing them Justice equally with others, and affording them Food and Raiment.

VOL. I.

For ye were Strangers in the Land of Egypt.] This Virtue was peculiarly required of the Jews; who had been in that Condition, which he commands them to pity. See Exod. xxiii. 9. Levit. xix. 33, 34. And if they had sincerely practised this Duty towards Aliens, the Grace of God shewn to the Gentiles in our blessed Saviour would not have seemed so strange to them as it did.

Ver. 20. Thou shalt fear the LORD thy GOD him shalt thou serve,] This was explained before ver. 12.

And to him shalt thou cleave,] Serve, that is, an worship none but him.

And swear by his Name.] See vi. 13.

Ver. 21. He is thy Praise,] Whom thou oughtest therefore to praise; or rather, in whose Love and Favour thou oughtest to glory; and to think it the highest Honour to be his Servant, and to have him for thy God, as it here follows.

And he is thy GOD,] Who hath bestowed upon thee all the good Things which thou enjoyest.

That hath done for thee these great and terrible Things, which thine Eyes have seen;] In bringing them out of Egypt, destroying Pharaoh in the Red-Sea, leading them through the Wilderness, giving them the Country of Sibon and Og, &c. Whom therefore they were bound to love and serve, and to confide in his Mercy, and not in their own Power or Righteousness, viii. 17, 18 ix. 4, 5, 6.

Ver. 22. Thy Fathers went down into Egypt with threescore and ten Persons;] See Gen. xvi. 2; Exod. i. 5. Their Family, he would have them remember, was very small about two hundred Years ago.

And now the LORD thy GOD hath made thee as the Stars of Heaven for Multitude.] Vastly increased them, according to his Promise unto Abraham, Gen. xv. 5. Exod. xii. 37. Numb. xxvi. 51, 62. Which alone (as Conradus Pellicanus here notes) was sufficient to fill their Hearts with his Love, and their Mouths with his Praise.

CHAP. XI.

Ver. 1. Therefore thou shalt love the LORD thy GOD,] Who, of so small, hath made thee so great a Nation.

And keep his Charge, &c.] A Phrase used frequently concerning the Levites, Numb. iii. 7, 8, &c. But here comprehends all the Particulars following, his Statutes, and his Judgments, and Commandments, which he had charged them to observe. See vi. 1.

Ver. 2. And know you this Day:] Consider seriously what I have said to you, till you be sensible of it, viii. 5. ix. 6.

For I speak not with your Children, which have not known, and which have not seen] The Words I speak, are not in the Hebrew: And they may as well be supplied thus, For not with your Children have these Things been done, &c. Which agrees well with ver. 7.

The Chastisement of the LORD your GOD,] The Plagues he sent upon the Egyptians.

[His Greatness;] Which appeared by the many great Things he did, only upon the stretching out of Moses's Rod.

His mighty Hand, and his stretched out Arm,] These are more Words to express the same Thing.

Ver. 3. And his Miracles, and his Acts, which he did in the Midst of Egypt, &c.] Or, His miraculous Acts, &c. He uses so many Words to make them sensible, how much they were obliged to God for their Deliverance out of the Slavery of Egypt; which nothing could have effected but God's Almighty Power, declared in various Instances. This is the first Argument, wherewith he excites their Love to God, (which he pressed in the foregoing Chapter, and begins this again with it) that God had loved them so much, as to work many astonishing Miracles, rather than let them continue Slaves to Pharaoh.

Ver. 4. And what he did unto the Army of Egypt, unto their Horses, and to their Chariots;] Who pursued after the Israelites, and overtook them, Exod. xiv. 6, 7, 8. Whereby the Kindness of God appeared, after he had delivered them, in preserving them from being brought back to their Slavery.

How he made the Water of the Red Sea to overflow them, as they pursued after you;] See Exod. xiv. 23, 24, 27, 28.

And how the Lord hath destroyed them unto this Day;] Brought them so low, that they have not recovered their Strength, to attempt any Thing against you since that Time.

Ver. 5. And what he did unto you in the Wilderness, until ye came into this Place;] Provided for them, protected, and preserved them forty Years; giving them Possession also of the Country of Sibon and Og, two Kings of the Amorites. These Benefits, if they considered, which they could not but see they owed to his Love alone, were powerful Arguments to move them to love him.

Ver. 6. And what he did unto Dathan and Abiram, the Sons of Eliab, the Son of Reuben;] Numbers xvi. 1, &c. The Remembrance and Consideration of the terrible Vengeance the Lord took upon rebellious People, he uses as another Argument to make them obedient. And there was none more remarkable than this upon Dathan and Abiram. He doth not mention Korah; but they could not well forget him, when they thought of his Confederates, though he suffered another Punishment.

How the Earth opened her Mouth, and swallowed them up, and their Households, and their Tents, &c.] See Numb. xvi. 32, 33, &c.

Ver. 7. But your Eyes have seen all the great Acts of the Lord, which he did.] In Egypt, at the Red Sea, and in the Wilderness, (ver. 3, 4, 5.) Some of which all of them had seen; and there were none of them who had not seen some.

Ver. 8. Therefore shall ye keep all the Commandments, which I command you this Day;] Remembering what had befallen both their Enemies and themselves.

That ye may be strong, and go in, and possess the Land, whither you go to possess it;] In Hope that the same God would empower them to subdue the Canaanites, and give them full Possession of their Country.

Ver. 9. And that ye may prolong your Days in the Land which the Lord swore unto your Fathers to give unto them, and to their Seed.] This may relate both to the present Generation, and to their Posterity; who, after their Fathers had lived long in the Land of Canaan, should succeed them, and enjoy it in future Ages. See ver. 21.

A Land that floweth with Milk and Honey.] This is a common Description, in all Authors, of a rich and pleasant Country. Particularly in Euripides,

Ῥεῖν γάλακτι πένον, ῤεῖ δ' αἶμα, ῤεῖ δ' μέλισθ' ἄν
Νεύλαει

And the like Bochartus hath observed in Virgil, Horace, and other Writers, Hierozyic. Lib. IV. P. I. cap. 12.

Ver. 10. For the Land whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the Land of Egypt, from whence ye came out;] He uses all manner of Arguments to persuade them to Obedience; from a grateful Remembrance of God's former Mercies, (ver. 2, 3, &c.) from the terrible Punishment of the Disobedient, (ver. 6.) from the Benefits that would redound to themselves by their Obedience (ver. 9.); and now he represents to them what a noble Country he was going to bestow upon them; but of such a Condition as would keep them in a constant Dependence upon his Favour, for the Blessing of it.

Where thou sowedst thy Seed, and wateredst it with thy Foot, as a Garden of Herbs.] This doth not signify, that the Land of Egypt was not so fruitful as the Land of Canaan (for their Fertility is not to be compared); but that there they reaped the Fruits of their Labour with more Pains. Diodorus Siculus indeed, and Herodotus, say, that the Egyptians take the least Pains of all other Men about their Corn, insomuch that it may be affirmed, ἡ ἀριστοτάτη καρπὸν κομίζουσα, they bring in the Fruits of the Earth without Labour, being at no such Trouble about Ploughing as other Men are, &c. See in his Euterpe, cap. 14. Yet it must be considered, that as the Nile, which made this Fruitfulness, failed them sometimes, and did not overflow all the flat Country, so the upper Parts of Egypt had not the Benefit of it; nor all the lower neither, without great Pains, in cutting Rivers to bring the Water to them. Which Pliny calls rigua Nili; for the Word rigua properly signifies the little Rivers, and σάγους Cuts, which were made to derive Water from the Nile into Places at a Distance from it, as Salmasius observes, p. 588. in Solinum. Hesychius calls them, δοχεὶς ὕδατος, Receptacles of Water, Ditches or Dikes, which we now call Canals, as the same Author observes, p. 908. And this I find Strabo speaks so plainly in his Geography, (Lib. XVII. p. 788.) that his Words may serve as a good Commentary upon those of Moses: "Nature, saith he, doth much for Egypt by the Nile; but Industry and Art about that River doth a great deal more. For the higher it flows, the more Ground it naturally waters, and makes fruitful; ἄλλαν δὲ ἐπιπλέοντα ποταμὸν ὁ τὸν ὀπίσθιος ἐγγύθεν ὠκεῖον ἑὸν, &c. but Industry sometimes hath prevailed, when Nature hath failed: Insomuch that as great a Part of the Country hath been watered watered in the smallest Rise of Nile, as in the highest. This was by the Care and Industry of the People, who were forced also sometimes to carry Water from these Cuts, as well as from the River, in Vessels to moisten the Ground, when the Mud which the Nile left was baked into a Crust by the great Heat of the Sun. So that the Ground of Egypt might properly be said to be watered by the Fool, as we water our Gardens when there wants Rain." Concerning which Expression, see Dr. Hammond upon the Psalms, p. 7. col. 2. of the first Edition.

Ver. 11. But the Land whither ye go to possess it, is a Land of Hills and Valleys, and drinketh Water of the Rain of Heaven;] Not a low, flat Country, like that of Egypt; but full of Hills, which could not be made fruitful but by Rain from Heaven, which seldom fell in Egypt; but the Israelites might expect in due Season, if they were obedient to God; who, by this Means, after they had ploughed their Ground, and sowed their Corn, made it spring up plentifully without any further Labour or Care of theirs. Such a Country also was more pleasant and healthy, than that of Egypt, whose Ground next Nile being overflowed more or less every Year, by the Rising of Nile to the Fall of it, (which was from the Solstice to the Æquinox, or, as some say, an hundred Days. See Salmasius upon Solinus, p. 427, &c. 436, &c.) they could not walk abroad into their Fields; and many times there followed, after the Water was gone off, great Sicknesses and Diseases by the Smell of the Silt which it had left behind.

Ver. 22. A Land which the LORD thy God careth for;] Takes Care that it want not Water, by sending Showers of Rain plentifully from Heaven in their proper Season.

The Eyes of the LORD thy God.] That is, the Providence of God; whose Majesty dwelt in the Sanctuary.

Are always upon it,] To see what is wanting, and to supply it.

From the Beginning of the Year, even unto the End of the Year.] At all Seasons, to give them both the first and latter Rain, (as he speaks ver. 14.) and such Weather as might both produce and kindly ripen the Fruits of the Earth. This he mentions as an Argument to Obedience; in which if they failed, he plainly tells them, the Land should not yield her Fruit, ver. 17. For this Country was not so fertile of itself, as by the peculiar Blessing of God upon it, whilst they kept his Laws.

Ver. 13. And it shall come to pass, if you shall hearken diligently unto my Commandments, which I command you this Day,] To hearken diligently, here signifies, to consider them seriously, and lay them to Heart.

To love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your Heart, and with all your Soul;] He repeats this so often, because it is the great Commandment, (as our Saviour speaks) and because nothing is more natural, than to love our Benefactors, God especially, (our greatest Benefactor, who gave us our Being) with all our Heart, and with all our Soul: see x. 12. And being the first and great Commandment, it draws along with it Obedience to all the rest, and is, in effect, the whole Duty of Man to God. For constant Experience shews us, that whosoever gets the firm Hold of this Affection, governs a Man as he pleaseth.

Ver. 14. That I will give you the Rain of your Land] As much as is sufficient for such an hilly Country.

In his due Season;] At the proper Times, which here follow.

The first Rain,] Before the Sowing of their Seed, to prepare the Ground; and after it was sown, that it might take Root in the Earth, and spring up.

And the latter Rain,] When the Corn was grown up towards Earing-time; and after it was eared, to make the Ears full and plump. This appears from Amos iv. 7. where he speaks of with-holding the Rain from them, while there were yet three Months to the Harvest. Which is meant of this latter Rain, whereby their Corn was brought forward, when it was but in the Blade, to Earing, and so on to Harvest.

That thou mayst gather in thy Corn, and thy Wine, and thine Oil.] Till the Corn, and all the Fruits of the Earth, be brought to Maturity.

Ver. 15. And I will send Grass in thy Fields for thy Cattle,] To make them fat; or to give Plenty of Milk.

That thou mayst eat, and be full.] Eat Flesh, if they pleased, as well as the Fruits of the Earth, in great Plenty.

Ver. 16. Take heed to yourselves, that your Heart be not deceived,] By the specious Colours that other Nations put upon their Idolatry, (as the Antiquity of it, universal Consent, &c. there being no Part of the World at that Time, as Maimonides observes, where all were not accustomed to worship Images, &c.) whereby the Israelites were in danger to be seduced into an Imitation of their Neighbours.

And ye turn aside, and serve other Gods, and worship them:] By this it is evident, that Moses is still pressing them to Care in observing the First and Second Commandment.

Ver. 17. And then the LORD's Wrath be kindled against you,] For their being deceived into Idolatry by false Reasonings, which persuaded them what they did was lawful, did not excuse them before God; who expected they should have used greater Caution, and governed themselves by his plain and express Commands.

And he shut up the Heaven, that there be no Rain,] The contrary to this, is called Opening his good Treasure, Deut. xxviii. 12. signifying that they lived upon the Royal Bounty of the King of Heaven, which their Sins would hinder from flowing to them.

And that the Land yield not her Fruit, and lest ye perish quickly from off the good Land which the LORD giveth you.] To with-hold Rain from them

Ver. 27. A Blessing, if ye obey the Commandments of the LORD your GOD, which I command you this Day ;] Which he more largely explains xxviii. 2, 3, 4, &c.

Ver. 28. And a Curse, if ye will not obey the Commandments of the LORD your GOD ;] Which is also more particularly laid before them, xxviii. 15, 16, 17, &c. The whole historical Part of the Old Testament witnesses the Truth of this, that GOD blessed or cursed them, according as they observed or broke his Laws. And if the People of Israel had diligently marked, and considered, and laid to Heart, that their Happiness or Misery were always correspondent to their good and bad Behaviour towards GOD, it would have confirmed their Belief of their Law, as much as if they had seen all the Miracles done before their Forefathers, and supplied the Want or the Rarity of them in After-ages ; nay, this would have done more than all the Miracles did, which were forgotten in a short time ; whereas their own daily Experience of the happy Fruits of Obedience, and the Mischief of Disobedience, would have sealed these Truths unto their Conscience.

But turn aside out of the Way which I command you this Day, to go after other Gods, which ye have not known.] It was not every Sin that turned GOD's Favour from them ; but their Idolatry and Apostasy from him : against which he principally warns them, throughout all these Chapters, iv. 3, 4, 15, 16, 23. v. 32. vi. 4, 14. vii. 4, 5, 25. viii. 19. ix. 12. x. 20.

Ver. 29. And it shall come to pass, when the LORD thy GOD hath brought thee in unto the Land, whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt put the Blessing upon Mount Gerizim, and the Curse upon Mount Ebal.] To quicken them unto a strict Care in their Obedience, Blessings and Cursings were to be pronounced with great Solemnity at their first Entrance into the Land of Canaan ; as is more fully ordered xxvii. 11, 12, &c. And performed by Joshua, viii. 33, 34, 35. And Moses seems to injoin them the like Solemnity every seventh Year, xxxi. 10, 11, 12, 13.

Ver. 30. Are they not on the other Side Jordan,] With respect to the Place where Moses now was, the Mountains he mentions were on the other Side of Jordan, in the Land of Canaan. In which they had no sooner got Footing, but Joshua took care to execute this Command ; that their Hearts might be possessed with a Sense upon what Terms they were to enjoy it. And he describes the Places so particularly, that they might be sure to know them.

By the Way where the Sun goeth down,] On that Side which inclined to the West.

In the Land of the Canaanites,] The People particularly so called, who were one of the seven Nations ; some of which lived here in the East, and others near the Midland Sea. As I have observed upon Gen. xv. 21.

Which dwell in the Champion over-against Gilgal,] Some think these Mountains were at such a considerable Distance from Gilgal, that they cannot be said to be over-against Gilgal ; because this Phrase signifies them not to be far off one from the other. And therefore they translate these Words, looking towards Gilgal. But it is not said, That the Mountains were over-against Gilgal, but the Dwelling of the Canaanites (in whose Country these Mountains were) was over-against it.

Beside the Plains of Moreh ?] Of which Mention is made Gen. xii. 6. Where the Canaanites are also mentioned as in that Land, when Abraham came into it. Which suggests to us, that these Blessings were pronounced in that very Place where Abraham anciently dwelt, and where he worshipped GOD, who there appeared to him.

Ver. 31. For ye shall pass over Jordan, to go in to possess the Land which the LORD your GOD giveth you ; and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein.] He would have them be as careful in this Matter, as it was certain that they should shortly go over Jordan, to take Possession of the Country which GOD was about to bestow on them ; which he assures them they should get Possession of, and settle themselves therein.

Ver. 32. And ye shall observe to do all the Statutes and Judgments, which I set before you this Day.] But then do not forget what I have so often said to you ; which he thought he could not inculcate enough : see iv. 40. v. 32. vi. 1. vii. 11. viii. 1, &c.

CHAP. XII.

Verse 1. These are the Statutes and Judgments which ye shall observe to do, in the Land which the LORD GOD of thy Fathers giveth thee to possess, &c.] Now, I suppose, he begins a new Exhortation ; which he made to them at some small Distance from the former. And he enters upon it with the same Words, which he used before, (vi. 1. ix. 1.) which could not be too often repeated, considering the great Proneness of the People to neglect their Duty.

Ver. 2. Ye shall utterly destroy all the Places, wherein the Nations which ye shall possess, served their Gods] So that no Opinion should be left of their being sacred Places, by any Relick or Memorial of the old Idolatry remaining there. It was not sufficient, that the Gods which the seven Nations worshipped were abolished, but the very Places also where they were worshipped, were to be made common, and employed to other Uses.

Upon the high Mountains, and upon the Hills, and under every green Tree.] These were the Places where the ancient Heathen chose to worship their Gods, imagining their Sacrifices were more acceptable upon Mountains than in Valleys. Lucian himself gives this Reason for it, because Men were then nearer to the Gods, and so more easily obtained Audience : ἵτι τῶν εὐχολέων ἀσπίδεν ἐπαύσιον οἱ θεοί. And Tacitus saith the same in the last of his Annals. Demons also were wont to haunt Woods, and shady Places, and there appear to Men ; and were thought also to be the Presidents of Mountains, others of Woods and Forests. And accordingly the Heathen erected Altars to them in these and such-like Places ; particularly under great Oaks, which were held sacred Places, where their Gods were thought to have a peculiar Power. By this Law therefore GOD intended to root out this Superstition ; and commanded his Tabernacle to be built low and humble. And tho' afterward the Temple was set upon an Hill, there was only one, and no more : and therefore it could not be thought to be out of any Opinion, that an Hill was more sacred than another Place.

And under every green Tree.] Nothing can illustrate these Words more, than what Pliny saith, in the twelfth Book of his Natural History, concerning Trees: which thus begins, Hæc fuere Numinum Tempia, &c. "These were the Temples of the Gods; and even now the simple People, after the ancient Rites, dedicate to God such Trees as excel the rest. Nor do we more adore the Images glittering with Gold and Ivory, quam lucos, & in iis silentia ipsa, than we do the Groves, and the solemn Silence therein." And then he reckons what Trees were peculiarly sacred to Jupiter, Apollo, Minerva, &c. concluding that several of their Gods, such as the Sylvani, Fauni, and some of their Nymphs, had their Names from Woods. This was a Thing so notorious, that in their most sacred Solemnities, they were wont to present the Gods whom they worshipped with a Crown or Garland made of Boughs and Leaves of such Trees in which they were thought to delight; as to Jupiter, a Crown of Oak; to Apollo, of Laurel; to Minerva, of Olive; to Venus, of Myrtle; to Bacchus, of Ivy; to Rhea, Pan, Neptune, and Vulcan, of Pine, &c. See Ezek. Spanhemius upon Callimachus's Hymn to Diana, ver. 200.

Ver. 3. And you shall overthrow their Altars, and break their Pillars, and burn their Groves with Fire; and you shall hew down the graven Images of their Gods,] See vii. 5. and Lev. xxvi. 1. He mentions all these so particularly, because this is the very Foundation and Hinge of the Law, (as Maimonides speaks) that all Opinion of the Sanctity of such Things should be blotted out of Mens Hearts, and the Memory of them extinguished, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 29. Where he reckons abundance of Things of this kind, which were among the old Idolaters called Zabii.

And destroy the Names of them out of that Place.] From this, and such-like Places, the Jews have framed this affirmative Precept, That the Gentile Idolatry is by all Means to be destroyed. For these Nations having forfeited their Land by their abominable Wickedness, and God having bestowed it upon the Israelites, (whom he took for his peculiar People, and among whom he dwelt, and therefore calls this his Land, see vii. 6.) he, as the King of the Country, might injoin what Orders he pleased to have observed. And it was of the highest Concernment, that there should not be the least Footstep of the old Idolatry left in the Country; but that he who was the LORD of it, and the LORD of Heaven and Earth, should be alone acknowledged and worshipped. And there was a greater Reason for this, then at first Sight may be imagined: for as the Host of Heaven was worshipped, as the glorious Bodies wherein their Gods inhabited, (which was the Reason of the Best of the Heathen for this Worship) so their Demons were supposed to dwell in the Images and Pillars which for that End were erected to them; the sovereign celestial Gods being worshipped in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, wherein they were thought to dwell; and these petty Deities, the Demons, were worshipped in Images and Columns, which were made for them, and for no other Deities; as our Mr. Mede observes P. i. pag. 778.

Ver. 4. Ye shall not do so unto the LORD your God:] That is, not serve him upon the Mountains, nor in Groves, nor under green Trees. Which appears to be the Sense, both from the foregoing Words, ver. 2, 3. and from the following Opposition in the next Verse. And it is very probable that during their Continuance in the Wilderness, none sacrificed in high Places, but offered all at the Door of the Tabernacle, which was not far from them. When they came into Canaan, and were many of them at a Distance from the Tabernacle, they did sacrifice in high Places; and we do not find them reproved for it, while they worshipped the LORD alone, and had Priests who officiated there, and in other Places, according to the Precepts of the Law: but when the Temple was built, and the Ark of God's Presence no longer removed from Place to Place, the Prophets required them not to sacrifice any longer in high Places, nor any-where else, but only at the Temple. And they blamed even good Kings for not taking away the high Places, tho' no Sacrifices were offered upon them to any strange God, but to the true God alone. Which Connivance proved in Time a great Mischief; for here they first began to worship strange Gods, the Israelites being very prone to chuse Mountains, and such shady Places, (as the rest of the World did) wherein to set up their Images, 2 Kings xvii. 10, 11, Ezek. xx. 28. Hosea iv. 13.

Ver. 5. But unto the Place which the LORD your God shall choose out of all your Tribes,] Unto one certain Place which God intended to set apart; unto which all the Tribes should resort, as the only Place were they might sacrifice. By which Means the Notion of the Unity of God was preserved, and his Worship kept pure and sincere, as long as they kept to this one Place, where the Priests of God constantly attended, to see his Service rightly performed.

To put his Name there,] By the Name of God is meant God himself, (as to call upon his Name, is to call upon him) and therefore the Sense is, where he would make his Dwelling-place, by settling the Ark, and the Cloud of Glory there, which was the Token of his Presence. This Place at first seems to have been Mispeh, and afterward Shiloh. And when that was destroyed, the Ark removed to several Places, (Kirjath-jearim, Mispeh, Gilgal, Nob, Gibeon, the House of Obed-edom) till at last it settled at Jerusalem; where, when the Temple was built, God saith to Solomon, I have chosen this Place to myself, for an House of Sacrifice, 2 Chron. vii. 12. Which is the plain Sense of these Words, Choose a Place to put his Name there.

Even unto his Habitation shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come:] This explains what he means by the Place where he would put his Name, viz. the Place where his Sanctuary was settled, which was his Habitation; where he placed his Majesty, (as Onkelos paraphrases) that all might repair thither, to seek his Grace and Favour.

Ver. 6. And thither ye shall bring your Burnt-offerings, and your Sacrifices,] By Sacrifices, as distinct from Burnt-offerings, must be meant their Sin-offerings and Peace-offerings. And the latter of these were sometimes for Mercies received, and sometimes Free-will-offerings, or Vows, as we read in Lev. vii. 12, 16. Which if they had been bound, as oft as there was Occasion, to bring to one certain Place, (Jerusalem suppose) though they were at never so great Distance from it, it would have been an intolerable Expence to devout People. And therefore the Jews think, the Meaning is, that they were bound to these Sacrifices, either for Offences committed, or for Mercies received, &c. at the next Feast at the farthest; and not to defer them beyond that Time. See Dr. Lightfoot in his Temple-Service, p. 99, 100. of the first Edition.

And your Tithes,] Not those which were to be paid to the Levites, or by them to the Priests, but another Tithe, which was to be set aside, after that to the Levites was paid, and employed as is directed xiv. 22, 23, &c. See here below ver. 17.

And Heave-offerings of your Hand,] The First-Fruits, as the LXX. and Vulgar Latin rightly translate it, viz. of Corn, and Wine, and Oil, and other Fruits of the Earth. Which are called the Heave-offerings of their Hand, because they brought them in their own Hand; and having heaved them up to the LORD, they gave them to the Priests. See Numb. xviii. 11, 12. and Deut. xviii. 4. xxvi. 4, 10.

And your Vows, and your Free-will-offerings,] Which were comprehended before under the Name of Sacrifices, but here more particularly expressed to signify, That though they might choose whether they would offer them or no, or whether they would vow them, yet they could not choose the Place where they should be offered, (if they vowed, or were disposed to it) but must be determined by this Law.

And the Firstlings of your Herds, and of your Flocks.] This shews, that the Heave-offerings of their Hand comprehend only the First-fruits of the Earth; besides which, these Firstlings also belonged to the Priests, Numb. xviii. 15, 16, 17.

Ver. 7. And there ye shall eat] Their Part of the Things before-mentioned; the People being wont, in ancient Time, before the Law of Moses, to feast upon Part of the Sacrifices of Peace-Offerings; as appears from Exod. xviii. 12. xxxiv. 13, 14.

Before the LORD your GOD,] Not in the Tabernacle, or Temple, where only the Priests might eat the most holy Things, which were peculiarly theirs, (Numb. xviii. 10.) but in some Place very near to the Sanctuary: It being the Custom of other People (and perhaps before the Time of Moses) to feast with their Gods in their very Temples, or near their Altars, according to that of the Apostle, 1 Corin. viii. 10. Therefore GOD entertained his People also at his own House, commanding them here, and in other Places, to eat their Sacrifices before him at his Sanctuary, and no-where else, that is, in some Place adjacent to the Sanctuary. Whereby they declared, that they had Communion with him, and not with Idols, by partaking with him at his Table, that is, his Altar: For there could be no Need of their eating there, but only to signify this, and to secure them in his Religion by feasting in his Presence, and thereby owning themselves to belong to him. This is repeated very often in this Book, ver. 18. of this Chapter, xiv. 23, 26. xv. 20. xvi. 5. but especially xxvii. 6, 7. where they are required, before the Temple was built, to eat their Sacrifices near the Altar which was erected after they came over Jordan. This being a Profession of the true Religion, to eat at GOD's Altar, as to eat of Things sacrificed to Idols was to profess the heathenish Religion. So all have understood it, as Elmenhorstius hath shewn from a great Heap of Authors, in his Annot. ad Minutium Felicem, Fol. 69.

And ye shall rejoice in all that you put your Hand unto, ye and your Households, wherein the LORD thy GOD hath blessed thee.] This signifies either that they should rejoice at these Feasts in the Goodness of GOD, who had blessed the Labour of their Hands, (of which the Tithe they brought thither was a Fruit) or that doing thus, GOD would bless all their future Labours, and make them and their Families prosper, and take Comfort in all their Enjoyments.

Ver. 8. Ye shall not do after all the Things that we do here this Day;] This doth not signify, as if there was no Civil Government, or that the Courts of Justice did not sit and execute Judgment between Man and Man; but relates to the Place of offering Sacrifice, (as Mr. Selden observes, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 15. n. 4.) which, in their wandering Condition, they did not so strictly observe, as GOD expected, when they came to be settled. Our learned Dr. Spencer thinks it relates also to other old Customs, which were rather childish than profane; and therefore tolerated by GOD for the present. To which he thinks those Words of St. Paul have respect, Acts xiii. 18. Many Things also perhaps they omitted, which they could not; or did not observe in the Wilderness; as their New Moons, and other solemn Days; with several Rites of Purification and Cleansing prescribed by the Law of Moses.

Every Man whatsoever is right in his own Eyes:] This doth not import, that there was no good Order kept among them, or that they were left at Liberty to sacrifice where they pleased; but that, in such an uncertain State, when they were removing from Place to Place, many took the Liberty in such Matters to do as they thought good.

Ver. 9. For ye are not yet come to the Rest,] This explains what goes before, and gives the Reason why GOD connived at some Irregularities, because they were not fixed to a Place, but uncertain when they should have a Sign to pack up their Goods, and be gone to another Station.

And to the Inheritance, which the LORD your GOD giveth you.] Where they were to abide, as long as they observed GOD's Commands.

Ver. 10. But when ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the Land which the LORD your GOD giveth you to inherit;] When their Condition was altered for the better, GOD expected that they should be so too.

And when he giveth you Rest from all your Enemies round about, so that ye dwell in Safety:] This intimates, that the Fear they were in, while they wandered in the Wilderness, of the Incursions of their Enemies, might make them sometimes offer Sacrifice where they ought not, and commit other Disorders.

Ver. 11. Then there shall be a Place which the LORD thy GOD shall chuse, to cause his Name to dwell there;] GOD was not pleased (as Maimonides observes) to declare any-where in the Law, where this Place should be: but, tho' he often determines them to one Place, (ver. 26. xiv. 23. xvi. 6.) yet he leaves the Place undetermined. Which he imagines might be for these three Reasons: First, Lest the Gentiles should get Possession of it, and make War upon that Account; thinking that this Place was the End of the Law (as he speaks). And, Secondly, Lest they, in whose Hands it was, should do all they could to destroy it. And, Thirdly, (which is the truest Reason) Lest every Tribe should desire to have it in their Lot, and Strife should arise among them about it. More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 45.

Thither shall ye bring all that I command you; your Burnt-offerings, and your Sacrifices, &c.] All that he mentioned before, ver. 6. This may seem an heavy Imposition, that they might not offer them in any Place, and at any Time: but Maimonides makes this wise Reflection upon it; "That GOD intended to teach them, not to have so high an Opinion of Sacrifices, as of Prayers and Deprecations, and such-like Parts of divine Worship, (viz. acknowledging his Goodness, praising him, and giving him Thanks) which are the Things GOD mainly intends, and may be offered every-where. "Whereas Sacrifices are not of that Account with him; which made him limit them to one Place, where he should appoint them to be offered; and not suffer any but one certain Family to discharge this Office. These, and such-like Things were to diminish the Value of Sacrifices: for which Reason the Prophets often reprehend Men for their too great Diligence and Zeal in bringing Sacrifices, of which GOD had no Need, and did not principally intend, as the Worship he delighted in: for which he cites 1 Sam. xv. 22. Isa. i. 11. Jerem. vii. 22. Sacrifices being appointed, and one Place for them, not for any Good in themselves, but only that all Idolatry might be abolished, and the Belief of the Unity of GOD preserved." More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 32.

All your choice Vows, &c.] In the Hebrew the Words are, as our Margin notes, the Choice of your Vows. So their Peace-offerings, which were Vows, were called; because they were to be select out of those Creatures which were perfect, and without the least Defect: Whereas those Creatures which had something superfluous, or lacking in any Part, might be accepted for a Free-will-offering, which a Man was not bound to make, but brought it merely out of Good-will. So we read expressly in Levit. xxii. 23.

Ver. 12. And ye shall rejoice before the LORD your GOD, ye and your Sons, and your Daughters, and your Men-servants, and your Maid-servants,] The whole Family was to feast with GOD, and one with another; whereby brotherly Love and Friendship was increased and strengthened, by their meeting and eating together at one Place. And nothing is more joyful, than to see Brethren dwell together in Unity: see ver. 7.

And the Levite that is within your Gates; forasmuch as he hath no Part nor Inheritance with you.] See x. 9. This whole Tribe (as Maimonides well notes) being devoted to the divine Service, and the Study of the Law, neither minded Ploughing nor Sowing, but were wholly consecrated unto GOD. And therefore we find them very commonly reckoned among the Strangers, the Fatherless, and the Widows; because they had no certain Possessions; which made it the more reasonable they should constantly be entertained at these Feasts, which were kept at GOD's House, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 31.

Ver. 13. Take heed to thyself, that thou offer not thy Burnt-offerings] Under Burnt-offerings are comprehended all the other Offerings before mentioned; for these were the chief, and the most usual; and if they might not be offered but at a certain Place, much less might any other, as every Body might understand, without repeating them all again.

In every Place that thou seest:] To be beautiful, lovely, and inviting, by its Situation, and shady Trees, and Fountains, &c. such as are mentioned ver. 2. Which the Gentiles chose, perhaps, wherein to sacrifice, because they were more delightful or solemn than other. Whence Ezekiel, vi. 3. mentions Rivers and Valleys, (together with Mountains) where there were fine Pastures, and Springs of Waters; which were so pleasant and refreshing in those Countries, that they fancied the Gods delighted in them. So St. Hierom notes upon Jerem. vii. that this Gentile Error, omnes provincias occupavit, &c. spread itself in all Parts of the World, That they should offer their Sacrifices at the Heads of Fountains, and delightful Groves.

Ver. 14. But in the Place which the LORD shall choose in one of thy Tribes, there thou shalt offer thy Burnt-offerings,] This he had said before, ver. 5, 6, 11. but repeats it again, because of the great Importance of it, to prevent all strange Worship. Elijah indeed offered upon Mount Carmel, after the Temple was built, but it was by a prophetic Inspiration; and if any one at that Time had asked him, if they might take that Liberty, he would have answered, By no Means; but he that offers out of Jerusalem shall be cut off (Levit. xvii. 4.). As for what I do now, it is an extraordinary Case; to convince the lying Prophets of Baal, &c. Thus Maimonides in Zeder Zeraim.

And there thou shalt do all that I command thee.] Bring their Tithes and First-fruits before mentioned, ver. 6. and eat and rejoice before the LORD, ver. 7.

Ver. 15. Notwithstanding, thou mayst kill and eat Flesh] For common Food.

In all thy Gates,] In any City, Town, or House. While they were in the Wilderness, indeed, they might not kill their Beasts, but only at the Door of the Tabernacle; and consequently they eat nothing but Peace-offerings, which had been first presented unto GOD, and Part of them burnt at his Altar, Levit. xvii. 3, 4, &c. But when they went into Canaan, they were freely indulged to kill their Beasts in any Place, without bringing any Part of them to the Altar.

Whatsoever thy Soul lusteth after,] Of all sorts of Creatures, not prohibited in the Eleventh of Leviticus.

According to the Blessing of the LORD thy GOD, which he hath given thee,] Suitable to every Man's Estate and Condition.

The Unclean and the Clean may eat thereof;] They who were under any legal Uncleanneſs might not eat of the Sacrifices; but of common Food, at their ordinary Tables, they might, as well as others.

As of the Roe-buck, and as of the Hart.] He instances in these, because there was great Plenty of them in that Country, as Ælian observes in the End of his fifth Book; where he saith they were en paysois ôpres, in the highest Mountains of Amanus, Libanus, and Carmel. These Creatures might not be sacrificed to GOD: But they might eat of others which were used in Sacrifice, (Sheep, Goats, Oxen) as freely as of these which were not.

Ver. 16. Only ye shall not eat the Blood;] But of the Blood of those Creatures they might no more eat, than of those that were sacrificed at the Altar. But as there it was to be sprinkled upon the Altar, and then poured out at the Foot of it, so here it was to be poured on the Earth.

Ye shall pour it upon the Earth as Water.] So that it might sink into the Ground and disappear, as Water doth when it is poured on the Earth. Which is so strictly enjoined, though it was not the Blood of an Oblation, to prevent those Superstitions which were exercised by the old Idolaters about the Blood of their Sacrifices, in which they thought their Demons delighted, and by eating of which they hoped to have Communion with them, as Maimonides observes, in his More Nevochim, P. III. cap. 46.

Ver. 17. Thou mayst not eat within thy Gates] In their own private Habitations.

The Tithe of thy Corn, or of thy Wine, or of thy Oil,] This cannot be meant of the Tithe paid to the Levites, which the People might not eat anywhere, being appropriated to the Levites alone: He speaking therefore of a Tithe which the People might eat, though not at Home, yet in the Place where the Sanctuary was, it must be meant of that which the Hebrews call the second Tithe, which was set out after that to the Levites was paid. Concerning which he speaks, xiv. 22, 23, &c.

Or the Firstlings of thy Herds, or of thy Flock,] These were intirely the Priests Portion by an express Law, Numbers xviii. 15, 17, 18. and therefore could not lawfully be eaten by the People, either at Home, or at the Sanctuary. Which makes it necessary to understand this of some other Firstlings; and it is not improbable, that it is meant of the Females which open the Womb: For the Males only were the LORD's, (as appears from Exodus xiii. and other Places) who gave them to his Priests; but he would have the first-born Females also to be in some sort sacred, by requiring them to be eaten at his Sanctuary, where his Priests had their Share of them. For I see no Ground to think, that as there was a secondary Tithe, so there was a secondary Firstling set apart by every Man to this Use.

Nor any of thy Vows which thou vowest, &c.] All such Things were also wholly the LORD's, Levit. xxvii. 28. and given by him to his Priests, Numb. xviii. 14. But that is only to be understood of what was vowed to GOD absolutely, without mentioning any particular Use to which it was designed. Besides which, they might vow what they pleased to be spent in solemn Feasts with the Levites, the Widows, the Fatherless, and other poor People; and of such Moses here speaks.

Or Heave-offering of thine Hand:] These were First-fruits of Corn, Wine, and Oil, as I said upon ver. 6. which were also the Priests Portion, Numbers xviii. 12. Therefore this can be meant of no other First-fruits, but such as Men freely offered, without any Obligation to it, to be spent in this Fashion; for he was speaking before of such kind of Things; unless we will understand this of the First-fruits of young Trees, which might not be eaten in three Years after they were planted, but in the fourth Year were to be holy, to praise the LORD withal, Levit. xix. 24. which, as Josephus saith, were spent in these sacred Feasts. See there.

Ver. 18. But thou must eat them before the LORD thy GOD, in the Place which the LORD thy GOD shall choose, thou, and thy Son, and thy Daughter, &c.] See before, ver. 11, 12.

Ver. 19. Take heed to thyself, that thou forsake not the Levite as long as thou livest upon thy Earth.] He gives this Caution, lest Coverousness should make them defraud the Levites of their Tithes, and not let them have convenient Habitations, or Profaneness make them not invite them to the sacred Feasts before spoken of. This is repeated xiv. 27. And in this the Jews were so careful, that when there was such Increase of the Levites, that their Cities could not contain them, they assigned them more than were given them at first: For Josua gave them only Forty-eight; but before the Captivity of Babylon they had twenty more added to them, as appears from 1 Chron. vi. 65, 66, &c. where, after the Mention of the old Number, there is an Account given of twenty more added to them out of several Tribes: For, though they could not enlarge the Bounds prescribed to their Cities, yet as the Number of Levites increased, they might give them new Cities. And so they did, that they might not be streightened in their Dwellings among them.

Ver. 20. When the LORD thy GOD shall enlarge thy Border,] That is, when he had brought them out of this Wilderness, where they were encamped round about the Tabernacle, into a spacious Country, where they might live far distant from it.

As he hath promised thee;] Which he promised to enlarge even as far as Euphrates, if they were obedient to him, Gen. xv. 18.

And thou shalt say, I will eat Flesh;] Have a Desire to eat it.

(Because thy Soul longeth to eat Flesh)] There were several Sorts of Flesh that were lawful to be eaten, which they could not have in the Wilderness, and therefore might be supposed to desire them very much, when they came into Canaan, which abounded with them. And besides, they would have more Plenty of such Cattle as they now had, which might incline them to keep greater Tables.

Thou mayst eat Flesh whatsoever thy Soul lusteth after.] This was said before, ver. 15. and now repeated with all the rest that belongs to this Matter, to let them see GOD did not intend to abridge them too much of their Liberty: For though they might not eat the Tithe of their Corn, Wine, and Oil, (and the rest mentioned ver. 17.) at their own Home, because they were holy Things, and therefore to be eaten in one certain Place where GOD's Sanctuary was; yet all Sorts of Flesh, used at their private Tables, he now gives them Leave to kill any-where, without bringing it to the Tabernacle, and offering the Blood at the Altar, as they were tied to do while they were in the Wilderness, Lev. xvii. 3, 4, &c. For then the Tabernacle was very near to every one of them; but when their Border was enlarged, it must needs be at so great a Distance from some of them, that it would have been too heavy a Burden to oblige them to kill every Thing they ate at the Tabernacle, and therefore he dispenses with it.

Ver. 21. If the Place, &c.] The Particle Chi may better be translated here because; which makes these Words a Reason of the Allowance given in the foregoing Verse, Because the Place which the LORD thy GOD hath chosen to put his Name there, is too far from thee, thou mayst kill, &c.

Of thy Herd, and of thy Flock,] Such Creatures as are now allowed for Sacrifice, Oxen, Sheep, Lambs, and Goats.

Which the LORD hath given thee,] For Food as well as other Uses.

As I have commanded thee.] Given thee Leave to eat at Home, without carrying them to the Tabernacle: So it follows, And thou shalt eat in thy Gates whatsoever thy Soul lusteth after, i. e. all manner of Things, of which there was great Variety, not prohibited by this Law.

Ver. 22. Even as the Roe-buck and the Hart is eaten, so thou shalt eat them;] Which were Creatures not allowed to be offered to GOD in Sacrifice, (see ver. 15.) and therefore they might less doubt to eat of them, than of such as were peculiarly appointed for that Use. From which they might possibly have thought, that out of Reverence to GOD they should abstain; but are here satisfied they might as freely eat of them, as of the other.

The Unclean and the Clean shall eat of them alike.] Whereas, while they were in the Wilderness, only such as were clean might eat Flesh, because it was sanctified by being killed at the Altar; now all are indulged the same Liberty, whether they were removed from holy Things, (as the Hierusalem Targum expresses it) or were pure to use them, both might eat Flesh alike.

Ver. 23. Only be sure that thou eat not the Blood;] Take great Care, as the Word signifies in the Hebrew, (which is, be strong) use thy utmost Diligence to prevent this.

For the Blood is the Life, and thou mayst not eat the Life with the Flesh.] See what I have noted upon Gen. ix. 4. Lev. xvii. 11, 14.

Ver. 24. Thou shalt not eat it, thou shalt pour it upon the Earth, as Water.] Since they could not pour it out at the Altar, where no body could meddle with it, they were to pour it out on the Earth, that it might sink into it: Or, as the Law required in Leviticus, (xvii. 13.) cover it with Dust, that the Cattle might not lick it up: Or, the Meaning may be, Pour it as a common Thing (which Water is) without any religious Rite used about it.

Ver. 25. Thou shalt not eat it,] This is repeated here so often, as it is also in Levit. xvii. to shew the Weightiness of this Command.

That it may go well with thee, and with thy Children after thee, when thou shalt do that which is right in the Sight of the LORD.] When they neither followed the idolatrous Customs which the Gentiles used about the Blood, nor profanely meddled with that which was peculiar to GOD, when it was offered at the Altar: Which was the great Reason, why they were prohibited to eat Blood.

Ver. 26. Only thy holy Things which thou hast, and thy Vows, thou shalt take, and go unto the Place which the LORD shall choose.] Only he would have them not to forget, that the Things mentioned ver. 17. they were not to eat at Home, but at the House of GOD, though it was never so far distant from them.

Ver. 27. And thou shalt offer thy Burnt-offerings, the Flesh, and the Blood, upon the Altar of the LORD thy GOD.] No Sacrifices were to be offered any-where but at the Sanctuary, as he had said before, ver. 6. and now reminds them of it, that they might observe it, and do accordingly.

And the Blood of thy Sacrifices shall be poured out upon the Altar of the LORD thy GOD,] All their Peace-offerings, as well as others, were to be there offered, and their Blood poured on the Altar as a holy Thing; whereas the Blood of those Creatures they killed at Home, was poured out, as a common Thing, like Water.

And thou shalt eat the Flesh.] After GOD and his Priests had their Parts.

Ver. 28. Observe and hear all these Words, which I command thee, that it may go well with thee, and with thy Children after thee for ever.] This was the great Commandment, To serve GOD alone: And the Observance of it was the great Condition upon which all their Happiness depended; which makes him again press their Care in this Matter.

When thou doest that which is good and right in the Sight of the LORD thy GOD.] Please GOD by a strict Obedience to this Precept.

Ver. 29. When the LORD thy GOD shall cut off the Nations from before thee, whither thou goest to possess them, &c.] See ix. 1.

Ver. 30. Take heed to thyself, that thou be not snared by following them, after that they be destroyed from before thee;] It is plain from hence, that in this Chapter, as well as in the foregoing; he is still endeavouring to secure them from the idolatrous Customs of the Country which they went to possess; which is the Ground of the following Prohibition, about which he could not say too much, they being so prone to Idolatry, and the Danger they incurred thereby so exceeding great. There are some of the Jews who think, that by following them is meant following their Fashions in their Cloaths, and in their Ornaments, (as it is explained in the Book Siphri) which might entice them to imitate their Religious ous Rites, which, it appears by the next Words, are principally intended.

After that they be destroyed from before thee;] It was the most unaccountable Folly to worship the Gods of those Nations, whom they saw expelled their Country for their Idolatries.

And that thou inquire not after their Gods,] They were not so much as to ask what Gods they worshipped.

Saying, How did these Nations serve their Gods?] Nor endeavour to know the Manner of their Worship. Which was very different, as Maimonides observes, according as their Gods differed one from another; for that sort of Worship which was acceptable to one God, might not be given to another. As they uncovered themselves (if we may believe him) before Baal-Peor, and threw a Stone to Mercury. See his Tract concerning the Worship of the Planets, cap. 3. sect. 2, &c. and Dionys. Vossius's Annotations there; where he resolves, that if they uncovered themselves to Mercury, or threw a Stone to Baal-Peor, it was not Idolatry, because not their proper Worship: which is a foolish Opinion; for they were not to use any of their religious Rites, no more than to offer Sacrifice, burn Incense, or bow down to any of their Idols, which he acknowledges was Idolatry. In short, if they gave the Idol the Worship proper to him, or that Worship which was proper to the true God, he acknowledges they were guilty.

Even so will I do likewise.] Tho' Men only resolve to do it, yet they were guilty of committing this Sin. The Jews indeed make no great Account of Sins committed in the Heart, yet in this Case they are very strict, having framed this Maxim, as R. Levi Barcelonita observes, Præcept. 226. which their Rabbins industriously inculcate into their Scholars, That the blessed God imputes no Thought of any Transgression to an Israelite, as if it were the Fact itself, except only the Thought of Idolatry, which is imputed to a Man, as if he had committed Idolatry. Now it was a reasonable Presumption, that he who inquired how the People of Canaan worshipped their Gods, intended at least to worship the God of Israel, as they did those Idols: and this gave too much Cause to suspect, that he had an Inclination to worship their Idols instead of God: for otherwise he would have rested content with that Way of worshipping God, which the Law had prescribed. Whereupon the Jews have determined, (as our Mr. Thorndike hath observed) that there are four Ceremonies, which, whosoever performs to any Thing but to God alone, must be understood to worship it for God; which are Sacrificing, burning Incense, pouring out Drink-offerings, and Adoration. But others there are, by doing which, Men cannot be concluded to worship any Thing but God, till they do it in that Way and Fashion as is done by those who profess to worship it for God: see his Principles of Christian Truth, chap. 26.

Ver. 31. Thou shalt not do so unto the Lord thy God;] See ver. 4. Of which the Reason is here given.

For every Abomination to the Lord, which he hateth, have they done unto their Gods;] For Instance; "The Zabii, saith Maimonides, I find "in their Books, offered to their great God the "Sun, seven Bats, and seven Mice, and seven "other creeping Things: which alone may "suffice to demonstrate how vile and abominable their Worship was, and what Reason there "was so severely to prohibit their Idolatry; and "every Thing pertaining to it." More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 29.

For even their Sons and their Daughters they have burnt in the Fire to their Gods.] This is the great Instance of their abominable Wickedness. Of which see Levit. xviii. 21. xx. 2. This was notoriously practised by the Carthaginians, who; it is certain, derived it from the Phœnicians, the ancient Inhabitants of this Country. Plato mentions it in Protagora, where he saith, The Athenian Laws did not permit them to sacrifice Men; but among the Carthaginians it was an holy Rite; so that some of them permitted their Sons to be offered to Saturn; which wicked Custom at last overspread all Nations, even the Greeks themselves, as Job. Genſus hath demonstrated, lib. de Victimis Humanis, P. i. cap. 11. and P. ii. cap. 6.

Ver. 32. Whatsoever Thing I command you, observe to do it;] Keep close to the Precepts I have given you about my Worship, ver. 28. and see iv. 2.

Thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it.] They were not to add any other Rites of Worship of their own devising, or from the idolatrous Customs of those Countries, nor omit any of those which God had commanded them to use: for if they had used any of the Gentile Ceremonies, whereby they honoured their Gods, it would easily have introduced the Worship of the Gods themselves, and, if they had omitted any of the Rites which God had ordained, some other would have easily stepped into their Room which were used by Idolaters.

Maimonides, from these Words, labours to prove the Eternity of the Law of Moses. But it is very strange, that so great a Man should be so blind as not to see what some of his Brethren could discern, that God did not bind up himself neither to change nor alter these Laws, tho' he did not permit the Israelites to do it. So the Author of Sepher Ikkarim wisely gloses upon these Words, lib. iii. cap. 14. "The Scripture "prohibits us to add unto, or detract from these "Precepts, according to our Will and Pleasure; "but what hinders the blessed God, either to "add or detract, when his blessed Wisdom shall "think fit?" Which he illustrates in the foregoing Chapter, by this Example among others; "A Physician prescribes a Diet to his Patient, "for such a Time as he judges convenient, which "he doth not declare to the sick Man. Now "when the Time comes that the Physician hath "obtained his End, he changes the Diet, and "permits his Patient what he formerly forbade, "and prohibits that which he formerly permitted." Which exactly agrees to what our blessed Saviour had done.

C H A P. XIII.

Verse 1. [If there arise among you] In future Times.

A Prophet,] One that pretends to have a Message from God delivered to him in a Vision, or or by the Word of the LORD: for there was a constant Succession of Prophets (to whom GOD revealed his Mind several Ways) among the Jews, to preserve them in the true Worship of GOD, and instruct them in their Law, and admonish them on some Occasions of Things to come; which was the more necessary, because there were such kind of Persons among the Gentiles.

Or a Dreamer of Dreams,] Who pretended GOD had appeared to him in a Dream, (as he did unto Jacob, Gen. xxviii. 11.) and revealed his Mind to him. Such there were in Jeremiah's Time, Jerem. xxix. 8.

And giveth thee a Sign,] Foretel something.

Or a Wonder,] By what follows one would think this belongs to the foregoing Words, which are to be understood as if he had said, If he foretel some wonderful Thing, which shall shortly come to pass. Or it may be interpreted, Shall work a Miracle; unto which the Heathen did not so much pretend, as they did to Predictions, which were common among them.

Ver. 2. And the Sign, or the Wonder, come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee,] The Event confirms the Prediction; so that he seem a true Prophet.

Saying, Let us go after other Gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them:] And consequently he persuade you to worship other Gods, which he pretends is demonstrated to be lawful, by the Fulfilling of his Sign and Wonder.

Ver. 3. Thou shalt not hearken unto the Words of that Prophet, or that Dreamer of Dreams,] Notwithstanding look upon him as a Lyar, and not as a true Prophet: for GOD cannot contradict himself, nor do any Thing to persuade Men to forsake him, and give his Worship to another. This shews that he still pursues his Intention, (in this Chapter, as well as all the foregoing) to establish them in the Belief and Worship of one GOD, according to the first Commandment, from which nothing was more likely to seduce them, than false Prophets, who were the great Instruments of establishing the foulest Idolatry in Israel, as appears from 1 Kings xviii. 19. where we read of no less than Four hundred Prophets of Baal, and Four hundred and fifty Prophets of the Groves, that is, of other false Gods, particularly Astarte, as Mr. Selden conjectures in his Syntagma 2. de Diis Syris, cap. 2. And there could not be a greater Demonstration that a Man was a false Prophet, than if he endeavoured to draw them to the Worship of other Gods, or if he pretended to speak in the Name of any other GOD, (Deut. xviii. 20.) or if he commanded them to offer such Sacrifices as GOD abhorred. Thus Aristander (as David Chytraeus notes) discovered himself to be a false Prophet, tho' he foretold the Destruction of Babylon; for he required human Sacrifices to be offered: as Tiresias also predicted Victory to the Thebans, provided Creon's Daughter was offered up in Sacrifice; and Chalcas at the Time of the Siege of Troy, but together therewith commanded the Sacrifice of Iphigenia. These, and such-like Things, plainly discovered they were not inspired by GOD, who is the Lover of Mankind, and cannot delight in their Blood.

For the LORD your GOD proveth you, to know whether you love the LORD your GOD with all your Heart, and with all your Soul,] That there might be an open and publick Discovery made, whether they sincerely loved GOD or no, or were stedfast in their Religion. So Maimonides in his More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 24. GOD would make known to the Nations of the World the Measure of your Faith, in the Truth of his Law, and of the Approbation wherewith you apprehend it, &c. For it had been a great Weakness to suffer even a Miracle to shake their Faith, after it had been confirmed by so many Miracles.

Ver. 4. Ye shall walk after the LORD your GOD,] Follow the Will of GOD, (as Maimonides interprets it) declared by himself, More Nevochim, P. i. cap. 38. Which is a plainer and more genuine Interpretation, than that of the Gemara of Sota, cap. 1. sect. 52. where R. Chama expounds it of imitating GOD, in cloathing the Naked, visiting the Sick, burying the Dead, &c. For Beneficence is the Beginning and the End of the divine Law. Which is a pious Sense, but not here intended.

And fear him,] Worship him alone, vi. 2.

And keep his Commandments,] The greatest of which is this, xi. 15.

And obey his Voice,] Which you heard from Mount Sinai, saying, Thou shalt have no other Gods but me.

And you shall serve him, and cleave unto him.] Stedfastly adhere unto his Service, and not be drawn from it by any Persuasion.

Ver. 5. And that Prophet, or that Dreamer of Dreams,] These two signify Persons who pretended to different sorts of Revelations by Visions or by Dreams.

Shall be put to Death,] This the Jews interpret to signify Strangulation, unto which, upon good Proof the Fact, he was to be sentenced by the great Sanhedrim: for that was a received Maxim among them, That a lying Prophet was to be judged no-where but by the Council of LXX. See Selden, lib. iii. de Synedrims, cap. 6. n. 1.

Because he hath spoken, to turn you away from the LORD your GOD, which brought you out of the Land of Egypt, and redeemed you out of the House of Bondage,] Persuaded you to forsake your GOD and his Service, to whom you owe your Liberty, and all your Possessions in the Land of Canaan.

To thrust thee out of the Way which the LORD thy GOD commanded thee to walk in:] These Words express how zealous such Impostors were in their Importunities, and how restless in their Endeavours to draw Men to Idolatry, pressing them so earnestly, as if they would force them to it.

So shalt thou put the Evil away from the Midst of thee,] i. e. The Danger of Idolatry; by taking away the Life of him that would have seduced others unto it.

Ver. 6. If thy Brother, the Son of thy Mother,] Who lay in the same Womb with him.

Or thy Son, or thy Daughter,] Who were dearer than a Brother.

Or the Wife of thy Bosom,] Who was still dearer, sleeping in the same Bed with him, as the Hierusalem Targum expounds it.

Or thy Friend, which is as thine own Soul,] Whom thou lovest as thou dost thy Life. He puts a Friend in the chief Place, (as the Son of Sirach also doth, Ecclesi. xxxiii. 19.) which their Wives, by the ill Choice they made of them, had not always in their Affection.

Here is no Mention of Father or Mother, because a Child, as the Hebrews fancy, was to have more Reverence for them, than to accuse them of any Crime whatsoever: As if a greater Regard was to be had to them, than to God himself. The true Reason is, because there was no Need to name them; for if their Piety to God was to overcome their Love to all those Relations before-mentioned, it could not be supposed, that Respect to Parents was to come into Competition with it.

Entice thee secretly,] In the foregoing Verses he speaks of an open Seducer, and here of a secret one; there of one that came with Authority, and here of one of the ordinary People.

Saying, Let us go and serve other Gods] The Jews think this is meant of one who invited others to Idolatry, but did not press them with Reasons, as in the former Case. Which is not likely; for all Men pretend some Reason or other for such a great Alteration as that to a new Religion.

(Which thou hast not known, thou nor thy Fathers;] This aggravates the Crime; to entice them to forsake God, who was known to have done such Wonders for their Fathers, and was so good to them, and go to serve Gods with whom they had no Acquaintance.

Ver. 7. Namely, of the Gods of the People which are round about you, nigh unto thee, or far off from thee,] Wheresoever they were, (for several Nations had several Gods) whether in the neighbouring Countries, or in remote Parts; it made no Difference at all, if they were strange Gods.

From the one End of the Earth, even unto the other End of the Earth;] The Enticer might possibly suggest the Universality of the Worship to which he invited him, as an Argument to embrace it.

Ver. 8. Thou shalt not consent unto him,] As many Words as there are in this Verse, the Jews think there are so many Precepts. The first of which is this, not to be led by Affection and Kindness to yield unto his Motion. So they interpret these Words, Thou shalt not love him.

Nor hearken unto him;] I do not see how this differs from the former; but they interpret it, That they ought to bate him, as well as his Motion. So Maimonides, in his Book of the Worship of the Planets, cap. 5. sect. 6, 7.

Neither shall thine Eye pity him;] This they fancy signifies, that if he were in Danger of Death, they should not help him, but let him perish.

Neither shalt thou spare,] When he was brought before the Judge, they were not to intercede for him, nor say any Thing in his Favour, nor assist him to defend himself.

Neither shalt thou conceal him:] Dissemble any Thing that might make against him. And no doubt, God intended by all these Words to signify, that he ought to be looked upon as his greatest Enemy; upon whom therefore they were to have no Mercy, but to prosecute him unto Death, as guilty of the highest Treason against the Divine Majesty.

Ver. 9. But thou shalt surely kill him:] Not privately, as he enticed others, but by a legal Process against him in a Court of Judgment. And that not the highest, but in the Court of XXIII, who might proceed against him, as Mr. Selden observes, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 6. The only Difficulty was, how to prove him Guilty, who enticed another secretly, (as the Text saith) and not before Witnesses. To which the Jews answer, That he who was enticed was to dispose some Persons, as secretly, near to the Place of their next Meeting, who might hear all he said, and testify it in Court.

Thine Hand shall be first upon him to put him to Death,] He was to be stoned to Death, and the Accuser was to throw the first Stone at him, together with the Witnesses, xvii. 7. For it would have weakened the Credit of his Accusation, if he had not been the foremost in the Execution: see xvii. 7.

And afterwards the Hand of all the People.] Who were to assist in the Execution of this Sentence.

The first Words of this Verse, which we translate Thou shalt surely kill him, the Vulgar Latin translates Thou shalt forthwith kill him. And so the Jews understand the Hebrew Phrase, Killing thou shalt kill him; i. e. immediately have him before the Court of Judgment. As the LXX understood it, ἀσφαλῶς ἀσφαλῶς ἀσφαλῶς αὐτῷ, informing thou shalt inform against him, that is, without Delay. And accordingly the Jews add, That after he was condemned, he was immediately also put to Death. Whereas in other Crimes the Execution was respited, after the Sentence was pronounced, for a Day and a Night, that the Man might have Time to clear his Innocence, if he were able, by any new Proofs. Such Severity was but needful among a People prone to Idolatry, and encompassed on all Sides with idolatrous Nations.

Ver. 10. And thou shalt stone him with Stones, that he die:] But if upon Admonition he desisted from his Inticement, and repented of what he had said to his Neighbour, and resolved himself not to worship other Gods, he was not bound to inform against him.

Because he hath sought to thrust thee away from the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, &c.] See ver. 5. The very Attempt of this was criminal, tho' he did not prevail in his Seducement.

Ver. 11. And all Israel shall bear, and fear, and shall do no more any such Wickedness as this is, among you.] The End of this Severity was to preserve the Body of the People from the Contagion of Idolatry; nothing being more apt to deter Men from Crimes, than such exemplary Punishments of them. So Callimachus, in his Hymn to Ceres, ver. 23. makes this the Design of the Punishment she inflicted on Erysichthon,

That others might shun the like Transgression.

Ver. 12. If thou shalt hear say in one of thy Cities; which the Lord thy God hath given thee thee to dwell there, saying,] If the Infection was spread into a City, or a considerable Part of it, there was still more Danger, and greater Severity was to be used, to prevent the whole Country about it from being drawn away from their Allegiance to the Divine Majesty. And therefore, upon such an Information, as follows in the next Verse, (which is here meant by thou shalt bear say) given to the great Sanhedrim, they were to do as is directed ver. 14.

Ver. 13. Certain Men, the Children of Belial,] So the most profligate Wretches are called in Scripture, (Judges xix. 22. 1 Sam. i. 16. x. 27. xxv. 17, 25.) signifying lawless Persons, who had no Regard either to God or Men.

Are gone out from among you,] Left the Worship of God at the Tabernacle: for it doth not signify their forsaking the City, (in which they continued to seduce Men from their Religion) but forsaking their Communion in divine Service. By which many have well observed that Place in St. John may be interpreted, 1 John ii. 15.

And have withdrawn the Inhabitants of their City,] The Hebrew Word, which here we translate withdraw, is twice before (ver. 5, 10.) translated thrust away; signifying only earnest Endeavours to seduce Men from their Religion. But here it seems to signify also the Effect of those Endeavours, whereby they had prevailed with Men to forsake the God of Israel, or to worship other Gods with him.

Saying, Let us go and serve other Gods, which ye have not known;] Strange Gods, as they are often called in Scripture, which the Nations round about them worshipped, (ver. 7.) but were always abhorred by true Israelites.

Ver. 14. Then shalt thou inquire, and make Search, and ask diligently:] The great Sanhedrim, who only could take Cognizance of this Crime, were, upon this Information, to send some, on whose Fidelity they could rely, to examine the Truth of the Report which was spread abroad, concerning the Defection of a City to the Worship of other Gods; who were to use their utmost Care and Diligence in this Inquisition, and by all proper Means endeavour to find, whether or no the Information was true: For it was a Matter of great Concernment, that neither the Innocent should suffer, nor Apostates go unpunished. But the Punishment being so dreadful, there was the greater Exactness used to be certain of the Crime; and there were likewise a great many Temperaments (as Mr. Selden calls them) found by the Jewish Lawyers, (partly from the nicest Interpretation of every Syllable in these two Verses, and partly from the pretended Tradition of their Elders) whereby they mitigated the Sharpness of this Law. For they would not proceed upon it to destroy a City, tho' they found them Idolaters, unless the Seducers were two, or more; and those also Men, not Women; because the Law here speaks in the plural Number, of certain Men, Children of Belial: As if their forsaking God was not a Crime, whether they were persuaded to it, or no, by others. They say also, it was not to be a mere Town, or Village, but a City; because the Words here are, In one of thy Cities, in which there were more than an hundred Houses: if there were fewer, it was no City in their Account, and so escaped. They who seduced a City, also were to be of the same City; because it is said here, These Men of Belial are gone out from among you. All which are mere Quirks, which have no solid Reason in them. They are all mentioned together in the Title Sanhedrim, set forth by J. Coch. cap. 11. sect. 4. and by Maimonides more largely in his Avoda zara, and our Selden, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 5. n. 2.

But there are other Temperaments of this Law, which have better Foundation in Reason. As, First, That a City was not to be destroyed, unless the major Part of the Inhabitants were fallen off to serve other Gods. And, Secondly, That the Law speaks only of the lesser Cities, not of those which were so large that the greatest Part of a Tribe lived in it; for God would not have a whole Tribe cut off by the Senate. Thirdly, They might not destroy any of the six Cities of Refuge, because they were none of theirs, but God's: and the Words of the Law are, in one of thy Cities, which the Lord hath given thee to dwell in; whereas these were given for a further Purpose. And, fourthly, some add, Not a Frontier Town; because it is said, In the Midst of thee, (so the Words are in the Hebrew, which we translate among you) to which they subjoin a better Reason, because the whole Country might have been exposed to be over-run with the Gentiles. And, lastly, They except Jerusalem from this Law, because it was God's Seat; and (as Maimonides will have it) it was not distributed to any particular Tribe. Which, how it is to be understood, see Selden in the Place above-named, sect. 3, 4. where he touches upon all these. But if Jerusalem was to be excepted from the Judgment of Men, God took Care to have this Sentence executed upon it by his own Judgment; for he sent Nebuchadnezzar against it, whose Soldiers burnt with Fire, both the House of the Lord, and the House of the King, and all the Houses of Jerusalem, Jerem. lii. 13.

And behold, if it be Truth, and the Thing certain, that such Abomination is wrought among you;] If the Inquisitors found, upon due Examinations, that there was a plain and evident Proof of their Guilt, they were to make their Report to the great Sanhedrim; who being satisfied, that either the whole City, or the greater Part of them were fallen to Idolatry, sent to them two Men of extraordinary Wisdom, (who were Candidates for the senatorial Dignity) to admonish them, and by Arguments and Persuasions, to endeavour to reduce them to the Worship of the Lord God of Israel. And if they prevailed, they were pardoned, and no further Proceedings against them: but if they continued obstinate, then the Sanhedrim commanded the People of Israel to raise an Army, and besiege the Place, and enter it by Force, if they could not other ways. And when the City was taken, several Courts were appointed to try and condemn all that were guilty. Thus Maimonides, in the fore-named Treatise, reports the Method of Proceeding out of their ancient Authors: see Selden, sect. 6.

Ver. 15. Thou shalt surely smite the Inhabitants of that City with the Edge of the Sword;] The same Author there saith, that in the Hearing of their Cause, every one who was found guilty of Idolatry, after Admonition, by two Witnesses, was set aside: And if they proved to be the lesser Part of the City, they were stoned, (according to the Law of single Apostates) the rest being freed from Punishment: But if they were the greater Part of it, they were sent to the great Sanhedrim, who adjudged them to be cut off by the Sword, together with their Wives and Children. And thus the whole City was to be punished, if there was an universal Defection.

Destroying it utterly, and all that is therein, and the Cattle thereof with the Edge of the Sword.] In the Hebrew, the Word is, Thou shalt make it a Cherem, or an accursed Thing. And so the LXX, Ἀναθεμαὶς ἀναθεμαῖστέ αὐτὴν, where the Vulgar translate it as we do, Thou shalt utterly destroy it; which is consonant to the Notion of the Hebrew Word. See Selden, Lib. I. de Synedr. cap. 7. p. 131. So that if any righteous Man had any Thing therein at that Time, it was to be destroyed, as the very Words are in the Title Sanhedrim, cap. 11. sect. 5. But it is to be supposed, that all who feared God would remove their Effects, together with themselves, from so wicked a Place, before Sentence was pronounced against them. On the contrary, they say, the Goods of the Idolaters, wheresoever they were found, whether within the City, or without, were to be burnt.

Ver. 16. And thou shalt gather all the Spoil of it into the Midst of the Street thereof;] Into the Marketplace, as the Jews interpret it. Or if it had none, they were to make a spacious Place, into which all the Spoil and the Household-stuff was to be brought, and Fire set to it, to consume it, as an Anathema, or cursed Thing. What Temperaments, as they called them, there were to mitigate the Severity of this Sentence, see Mr. Selden, in the Place fore-named, Seet. 7.

And shalt burn with Fire the City, and all the Spoil thereof, every whit, for the LORD thy GOD;] For the Vindication of God's Honour, and preserving Men in their Allegiance to him. R. Simon, in the Title Sanhedrim, interprets it in this Manner, Seet. 6. Thus saith the LORD, If you do Justice upon a City full of Idolatry, I will account it, as if you had offered an whole Burnt-offering unto me.

And it shall be an Heap for ever; it shall not be built again.] The Hebrew Doctors do not intirely agree in the Interpretation of these Words. For some of them say, (in that Place of the Sanhedrim now named) that they were not so much as to make a Garden or Orchard in that Place. Others of them say, though it might not be restored into the Form of a City, yet they might employ the Ground in Plantations of Trees. But there are those who interpret the Words so rigidly, that they think it was not lawful to erect any Building there, not so much as a Dove-house, but it was to lie waste. See Selden, Seet. 8. If any Man did attempt to build such a City, he was to be beaten, as the same great Man observes, Lib. I. de Synedr. cap. 13. p. 558.

Ver. 17. And there shall cleave nought of the cursed Thing to thine Hand;] They were not to take the smallest Part of the Spoil to their own Use. For as long as the Wicked are in the Word, (say the Jews in the forenamed Title Sanhedrim) the fierce Anger of God will remain in the World; but when they are removed, the Wrath of God also will cease. Now the Wickedness of purloining any Thing that was a Cherem, as the Hebrews call it, or an accursed Thing, appears in the Story of Achan, who brought all Israel into Danger by it, as we read in the Seventh of Joshua. And Saul is an eminent Example of it also; for he lost his Kingdom for this Sin, 1 Sam. xv. 3; 9, 19, 26, &c.

VOL. I.

That the LORD may turn from the Fierceness of his Anger,] This explains, in Part, what he means in the former Verse, when he bids them burn the City, and the Spoil, for the LORD their GOD, i. e. to pacify the Divine Majesty, who was highly incensed by such a Wickedness. The Punishment of which was, indeed, very terrible, but very necessary; because the Crime was of so high a Nature, that it struck at the very Foundation of their Religion and Government.

And shew thee Mercy, and have Compassion upon thee,] GOD promises to deal the better with them, for executing this Judgment upon such dangerous Offenders.

And multiply thee, as he hath sworn unto thy Fathers.] They were not to fear any Want of People, by cutting off such a Multitude; for GOD promises to increase them by this Loss.

Ver. 18. When thou shalt hearken to the Voice of the LORD thy GOD, to keep all his Commandments which I command thee this Day, &c.] It was not sufficient that they kept themselves from Idolatry, unless they also executed his Vengeance upon Idolaters: For the inflicting the Punishment before-named, was as right in his Eyes, as the Observance of any other of his Precepts.

CHAP. XIV.

Ver. 1. YE are the Children of the LORD your GOD:] So the LORD had owned them to be, when he sent Moses unto Pharaoh, to command him to dismiss Israel; telling him he was his Son, even his First-born, Exod. iv. 22, 23. This was a good Reason therefore why they should own no other GOD but him; and consequently follow none of the Customs of idolatrous People, but be wholly governed by his Laws.

Ye shall not cut yourselves,] This might seem to forbid the making any Incisions in their Body, as the Heathen did, (at least in future Times) who marked themselves thereby to belong to such and such Gods, (for the Israelites had received the Mark of GOD in their Flesh, by Circumcision, which obliged them to receive no other) if the following Words did not plainly determine this to their Cutting themselves for the Dead; which hath been sufficiently explained in Levit. xix. 28. Yet it is fit to note, that the Hierusalem Targum expounds this of Incisions here and there for Idolatry. And it may be further observed, that the Heathen were wont to cut themselves in Pangs of Devotion, (as appears by the Priests of Baal, 1 Kings xviii. 28.) as well as when they were full of Sorrow and Grief for the Dead, Jerem. xvi. 6. and in all Publick Calamities, Jerem. xli. 5. xlvii. 5. All which arose from an Opinion they had, that the more they afflicted themselves, the less they should be afflicted by God.

Nor make any Baldness between your Eyes for the Dead.] Some of the Heathen, saith Theodoret, (Quæst. 13. upon this Book) cut off all their Hair, and offered it to the Dead; others shaved their Beards; and others their Eye-brows and Eye-lids, or (which some think is the Meaning of between their Eyes) the Hair in the Forepart of their Head, or near their Temples, as R. Solomon interprets it. Which seems to be the Meaning of the Hierusalem Targum, which translates it, Ye shall not make any Baldness in the House of your Countenance. And whether it were done with a Razor, or they used any Art, by Plaisters or Ointments, to make the Hair fall off, it was the same Crime, as Maimonides saith, that is, a Piece of Idolatry. For this was practised, not merely to make themselves look ruefully, but there was some Respect to their Gods in it; which is the Reason it is here prohibited. Certain it is, that in After-times the Gentiles pulled off their Hair, or cut it off, and laid it upon the Face or the Breast of the Dead, or in their Sepulchres, to pacify the infernal Gods. We find Instances of it in Homer. And likewise they made Incisions in their Flesh, and spilt their Blood at Funerals, with the same Intention to appease the Gods below, and make them kind to the Dead. See our Learned Dr. Spencer, Lib. II. cap. 12. sect. 2, 3.

All which shews that Moses still pursues the Argument, which he begins at the sixth Chapter, and hath continued ever since, to press upon them the strict Observance of the first Commandment. Inasmuch that he would not have them use any of the Rites, which were used at their Funerals, by those that worshipped other Gods.

Ver. 2. For thou art an holy People unto the LORD thy GOD, and the LORD hath chosen thee to be a peculiar People unto himself, above all the Nations that are upon the Earth.] The very same Words, in a Manner, we had before, vii. 6. as a Reason why they should destroy the Images of the Heathen, &c. Which shews he is still speaking of the Idolatrous Customs which they should eschew, because they were separated to God as a peculiar People by Laws different from all other Nations. The Author of Sepher Cosri speaks not amiss, That the People of Israel were called God's Segullab, because they were elected by him to enjoy special Privileges above other People; and brought by him for that End out of the Land of Egypt in a wonderful Manner, and then had his Glory dwelling among them. From whence it is, that he doth not say in the Preface to the Ten Commandments, I am the LORD of Heaven and Earth, or, thy Creator, and therefore thou shalt have no other Gods but me; but, I am the LORD thy GOD, that brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, &c. to shew that this Law was given peculiarly to them; and that they were tied to it, by virtue of their Deliverance out of Egypt, and God's placing his Glory among them. Whereas, if they had been bound to it by virtue of their Creation, it would have belonged to other Nations as well as to them, Pars i. sect. 27.

Ver. 3. Thou shalt not eat any abominable Thing.] All the Meats forbidden by God to be eaten are called Abominable, not merely because his Prohibition made them so, but because the Gentile Superstition had consecrated most of them to their Gods. See upon Levit. xi. 2. However, after this Law was given, the Jews were to look upon them as abominable; by which Means they were kept from having such free Conversation, as otherwise they would have had, with their idolatrous Neighbours. So that this Law also was intended to preserve them in the true Religion.

Ver. 4. These are the Beasts which ye shall eat;] The Original of the Difference of Meats, see in the Learned J. Wagenfeil, in his Tela Ignea, p. 553, &c. where he shews it was not to continue for ever. And it is a rational Account of this, which I just now gave, that hereby they were preserved from common Conversation with other Nations, and consequently from their Idolatries. But it is a mere Fancy, and indeed a proud Imagination, which some of the Jews have, (particularly the Author of Schebet Judah) that as Men are more excellent than Beasts, because they have better Food, so Jews are more excellent than all other Men, because they do not feed upon all sorts of Animals, but only of some certain Kinds; and that after much Preparation, by rejecting the Blood and the Fat, &c. whereby they fancy the Flesh is so much alter'd, that it is not so much Flesh, as some other Food.

The Ox, the Sheep, and the Goat.] These were the only Beasts that were offered in Sacrifice to God; and therefore are the first that are mentioned as clean for their Use.

Ver. 5. The Hart, and the Roe-buck,] These, and the rest that follow in this Verse, tho' they might not be offered in Sacrifice, were allowed to be eaten; and seem to be mentioned as the principal Food in the Land of Canaan, xii. 15, 22.

And the Fallow Deer,] It is not very material what the Word Jachmur signifies, because we are not now concerned in this Law about Difference of Meats; therefore we may follow our Translation, as well as any other: and the famous Bochartus hath made it probable, that it signifies either a Kind of Deer, or of Goat, P. i. Hierozioc. lib. iii. cap. 22.

And the wild Goat,] So the Hebrew Word Akko signifies, (which is no-where else to be found) the same Author proves in the same Book, cap. 19.

And the Pygarg,] This is also a kind of Doe or Goat, (as he shews cap. 22.) which the Hebrews call Difon. We find Mention of Pygargus in Juvenal's eleventh Satyr; where the old Scholiast gives this Account of it, That it is a kind of Deer, quæ retriores partes albas habet, whose hinder Parts are white. From whence it had its Name among the Greeks, who call the Buttocks Πύργος.

And the wild Ox,] So we translate the Hebrew Word Theo, or Tho. But herein Bochartus dissents; diffents; because there were no such Creatures in Judea, (as he observes there, cap. xxvi.) which are bred in colder Countries. And therefore he reckons this also among his Deer, or Goats, cap. xxviii.

And the Chamois,] The Hebrew Word Zemer, he also thinks, signifies, as the former, a kind of Goat or Hart; of which there were great Variety in those Countries. And this he thinks of all other was maximè ἀλίκιον, remarkable for jumping; which is the Signification of the Word Zemara in the Arabick Language. See cap. xxi.

Ver. 6. And every Beast that parteth the Hoof, and cleaveth the Cleft into two Claws, and cheweth the Cud among the Beasts, that ye shall eat.] He forbears to reckon up any more Particulars, and only sets down the general Marks whereby they might be known; which he had delivered in Levit. xi. 3. See there.

Ver. 7. Nevertheless, these ye shall not eat; of them that chew the Cud, or of them that divide the cloven Hoof, &c.] These Exceptions from the general Rule have been explained, Levit. xi. 4, 5, 6.

Ver. 8. And the Swine, because it divideth the Hoof, yet cheweth not the Cud, it is unclean unto you:] See upon Levit. xi. 7.

Ye shall not eat of their Flesh, nor touch their dead Carcasse.] See Levit. xi. 8.

Ver. 9. These ye shall eat, of all that are in the Waters; all that have Fins and Scales, shall ye eat.] See Levit. xi. 9.

Ver. 10. And whatsoever hath not Fins and Scales, &c.] See Levit. xi. 10, 11, 12.

Ver. 11. Of all clean Birds ye shall eat:] He doth not name any, (as he did of Beasts) but by enumerating those of which they might not eat, all the rest were left free to be used for Food.

Ver. 12. But these are they of which ye shall not eat, the Eagle, and the Ossifrage, and the Ospray,] All these are mentioned just as they are here, in Levit. xi. 13.

Ver. 13. And the Glede, and the Kite, and the Vultur after his Kind,] There are only two of these mentioned in Levit. xi. 14. the last of them, Hadajab, being there omitted; for it is so near to Haajab, which goes before, that the Transcriber (as Bochart imagines) might there leave it out. But rather, Moses now adds this sort of Bird, which was not so like in Nature as in Name; otherwise he would not have distinctly forbidden it.

Ver. 14. And every Raven after his Kind,] The same Words with those Levit. xi. 15.

Ver. 15. And the Owl, and the Night-Hawk, and the Cuckow, &c.] All the Birds mentioned in this and the three next Verses, 16, 17, 18, are the very same which are forbidden in Levit. xi. 16, 17, 18, 19. And therefore I refer the Reader to what I have noted there; only adding, that from hence it appears how false their Opinion is, who think the Hebrew Word Tzippor is a general Name only for small Birds (such as Sparrows); for it is evident from this Place, that it is a Name for all Birds whatsoever, even the greatest, such as are here mentioned.

Ver. 19. And every creeping Thing that flieth, is unclean unto you, they shall not be eaten.] See Levit. xi. 20.

Ver. 20. But of all clean Fowls ye may eat.] This is not the same Precept with that ver. 11. for there he speaks of Birds, but here of other winged Creatures, which are not Birds, but Insects, as we call them. And in Levit. xi. he describes the flying creeping Things which they might eat; and particularly mentions several sorts of them, ver. 22.

Ver. 21. Ye shall not eat of any Thing that dieth of itself:] Unto this Discourse about Food, it was very proper to add a Caution, (which he had given before, Levit. xi. 39, 40.) that tho' they might kill and eat any clean Creature, yet if it died of itself, it was unlawful to eat it, because the Blood was in it.

Some Verses ascribed to Phocylides contain this Sense so fully, that one would think he had read Moses: see Jos. Scaliger in Eusebium, p. 88.

Thou shalt give it unto the Stranger that is in thy Gates, &c.] The Proselytes of the Gates, (as they called them) who had not embraced their Religion, but were not Idolaters, and therefore suffered to dwell among them, might eat such Meat, having no Obligation upon them to observe these Laws: for they were not circumcised.

Or thou mayst sell it unto an Alien:] To a mere Gentile, who might happen then to be in their Country. For there were three Sorts of People called by the Name of Strangers, being not of the Jewish Nation. First, Such as had received Circumcision, and consequently embraced the Jewish Religion, who were called Gere-tzedek, Strangers, or Proselytes of Justice. Others were not circumcised, but yet worshipped the God of Israel, who were called Strangers of the Gate, or Gere-tosha, Strangers dwelling among them; because they were to abide in their Country constantly. But there were a third sort, called Nocherim, which we here translate Aliens, who were mere Gentiles, and not suffered to have an Habitation among them; but only to come and go in their Traffick with them.

For thou art an holy People unto the Lord thy God.] This Reason was given in the Beginning of this Discourse, ver. 2. and so it is in Leviticus, in the Conclusion of it: see xi. 44, 45.

Thou shalt not seeth a Kid in his Mother's Milk.] Now he plainly returns to caution them against idolatrous Customs. For this was practised among the Heathens in the End of Harvest, when they sprinkled their Fields and their Gardens with this Broth, to make them fruitful. It is mentioned twice before: see Exod. xxiii. 19. and xxxiv. 26.

Ver. 22. Thou shalt truly tithe all the Increase of thy Seed, that the Field bringeth forth Year by Year.] This doth not seem to reach unto Herbs, as the Pharisees interpreted it; of which see Grotius on Matth. xxiii. 4. But tho' Casaubon and Drusius, and other great Men are of this Opinion, yet the contrary is maintained by Persons of no small Note; because our Saviour, when he determines this Case, saith, These Things ye ought to have done; and not left the other undone.

As for the Tithe here mentioned, I have shewn elsewhere, that it was the Manner of the Eastern Princes to receive the Tenth of the Fruits of their Country, for the Maintenance of their Ministers and Officers; as we read 1 Sam. viii. 15. In like Manner GOD, the great King of all the Earth, and the peculiar Sovereign of this Country, required a Tenth of all their Increase for the Maintenance of his Priests and Levite in his Service. After which he ordered also a further Tithe to be taken out of the Nine Parts remaining, (which was called the Second Tithe) to be spent in Feasts at his Tabernacle. And this is, with great Reason, thought to be particularly enjoined in these Words; for of such Tithes he speaks in the next Verse. It might seem indeed a little hard, to give another Tenth Part, after they had paid one already, which they might be tempted not to perform exactly; and therefore he saith, Thou shalt truly, that is, faithfully, without any Deceit or Fraud, Tithe all the Increase of thy Seed. And when this was done, he required also, once in three Years, a third Tithe, for the Use of the Poor, (see ver. 28.) that they might also be entertained at his Cost, tho' not at that Time at his House. For it was suitable to his Royal Greatness, that all his Subjects should be feasted by his Order at his Palace; and that the poorest of them should not be neglected, but some Time or other partake of his Bounty; as they did at those Feasts I mentioned, where their Men-servants and Maid-servants, were to be entertained as well as the Levites, xii. 12, 18.

Ver. 23. And thou shalt eat before the LORD thy GOD, in the Place which he shall choose to place his Name there,] See xii. 5, 6.

The Tithe of thy Corn, and of thy Wine, and of thine Oil,] This cannot be meant of the Tithe paid to the Levites; of which the People were not to partake; but only the Priests, to whom the Levites were to give a Tithe. Therefore it must be understood of the second Tithe, separated (after the other was paid) for this holy Use. The Design of which was, that they might be secured in his Religion, by eating and drinking in his Presence; and thereby professing that they belong'd to him, and were his thankful Servants.

The Observation of R. Bechai upon these Words (thy Corn, thy Wine, and thine Oil) is something curious, but it hath a great deal of Truth in it. If thou pay the Tithe, saith he, then it is thy Corn; if thou do not, it is my Corn, and not thine (in like Manner, if they paid the Tithe of Wine and Oil); for it is said, in Hosea ii. 9. Therefore I will return, and take away my Corn, in the Time thereof, and my Wine in the Season thereof. For they forfeited the Whole, who did not pay the Tenth, which was the Rent GOD reserved to himself. And the same R. Bechai represents this as a very merciful Law: for it is the Fashion of the World, saith he, if a Man have Ground of his own, to let it out to Tenants at what Rate he pleases, for an Half or Third-part, to be paid to him: but it is not so with the Almighty, whose the Earth is, and who raises Clouds, and waters it with Rain, and sends down Drops of Dew, and makes fat the Fruits of the Earth; and yet requires but one Part of Ten, for his own Uses. This made it highly reasonable, that Moses should admonish the Israelites so often diligently to pay their Tithe.

And the Firstlings of thy Herds, and of thy Flocks,] See concerning these, xii. 6.

That thou mayst learn to fear the LORD thy GOD always,] This justifies what I said, that the Design of this was to preserve them steadfast in their Religion, by having Communion with him, in so solemn a Manner, every Year: for that is meant by fearing the LORD always; continuing in the Worship and Service of him alone: see vi. 1.

Ver. 24. And if the Way be too long for thee, so that thou art not able to carry it; or if the Place be too far off from thee, which the LORD thy GOD shall choose, &c.] If they lived at so great a Distance from the Sanctuary, or the Way was so bad, that it would be very troublesome and chargeable to carry those Tithes in Kind, here they have a Liberty granted them to make Money of them, and with that to buy Provision for the Feast at the Sanctuary, when they came thither; as it follows in the next Verse. All Things, likewise, which would not keep so long as till they could go to the House of GOD, they were to turn into Money; but Things that were not perishable, they were to carry in Kind, if they did not dwell too far off from it.

Ver. 25. Then shalt thou turn it into Money,] Adding a Fifth-part to it, as the Law is, Levit. xxvii. 31.

And bind up the Money in thine Hand, and shalt go unto the Place which the LORD thy GOD shall choose:] Put it into a Bag by itself, and not mix it with other Money, but keep it bound up till the next Feast; and then carry it in their Hand, to the Place where GOD's House was settled.

GOD would not have them excused from going to that Place with these Things in Kind upon every slight Reason; and therefore made it something chargeable to exchange them into Money, by requiring a Fifth-part to be added. And besides, the Elders made a Constitution, That this Liberty should be allowed to none, but those who lived above a Day's Journey from Jerusalem, which at last was the fixed Place of GOD's Worship. And that it might be known certainly what was a Day's Journey, the Places at that Distance were fixed from every Quarter, viz. Lydda on the West, the River Jordan on the East, Acrabatta on the North, and Elatb on the South, as J. Wagenfeil hath observed in his Confutation of that blasphemous Book, called Toldos Jeshu, p. 22.

Ver. 26. And thou shalt bestow that Money for whatsoever thy Soul lusteth after, for Oxen, or for Sheep, &c.] Purchase such Provision as they most delighted in, of all Meats that GOD's Law allowed.

And thou shalt eat there before the LORD thy GOD,] Make an holy Entertainment at the House of GOD.

And thou shalt rejoice, thou and thine Household,] Man-servants and Maid-servants, as well as Sons and Daughters, (xii. 18.) together with the Levites, Widows, Orphans, and Strangers.

Ver. 27. And the Levite that is within thy Gates, thou shalt not forsake him ;] They were always to be invited to these Feasts : see xii. 19.

For he hath no Part nor Inheritance with thee.] They being wholly devoted to the Worship of GOD, and the Study of the Law, as Maimonides observes, in his More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. xxxix. See xii. 19.

Ver. 28. At the End of three Years thou shalt bring forth all the Tithe of thine Increase,] The Opinion of the Hebrew Doctors is, That this was not a distinct Tithe from that which they call the second Tithe, paid every Year, but the very same, which every third Year was not to be carried to the Sanctuary, but to be employed to the Comfort of the Poor, in their own Cities and Houses. For thus they explain it, That in the third Year after the Year of Release, and in the sixth Year, the Tithe that was wont to be carried to the Place where the Sanctuary was, and there spent in Feasts before GOD, was to be spent upon the Poor in every Town where they that paid the Tithe lived ; but every first, second, fourth, and fifth Year, from the Year of Release, it was spent in holy Entertainments at the House of GOD. In the Year of Release itself, (which was every seventh Year) no Tithes at all were paid of any Kind, because all lay common. So that every Year the Owner of the Ground set out a second Tithe ; but he was not bound to carry it every Year to Jerusalem ; for in the Compass of seven Years, four of those Years only were appointed for their Journey thither, and two they staid at Home : see Selden of Tithes, and lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. p. 693. But this is contradicted by other great Men, particularly by Bishop Montagu, who asserts these to be two distinct Tithes : see p. 332, &c. especially p. 346, and those that follow. And Josephus seems plainly to be of his Mind, p. 349. Old Tobit calls it τρίτην δεκάτην, the third Tithe, i. 8.

The Tithe of thine Increase the same Year,] i. e. Of the third Year.

And shalt lay it up within thy Gates.] It was not to be carried to the Place where GOD's House was, but to be spent at Home.

Ver. 29. And the Levite, because he hath no Part nor Inheritance with thee,] See ver. 37.

And the Stranger, and the Fatherless, and the Widow, which are within thy Gates, shall come, and shall eat, and be satisfied ;] This Tithe was not spent in Joy and Gladness, as the second Tithe was, ver. 26. when they went to GOD's Dwelling-place, but merely in the Relief and Comfort of the poorer sort of People, who otherwise might have been forced to beg, or to serve Strangers, and thereby be in Danger of being perverted from their Religion.

That the LORD thy GOD may bless thee, in all the Work of thine Hand which thou dost.] This Tithe, the Jews say, was called the Consummation of Tithes ; because herein the Love of their Neighbour was most eminently apparent : For it is likely, they themselves had no Share in this, as they had at the Feasts upon the second Tithe, but is wholly spent upon the Persons here named ; whose Hearts could not but be moved to pray to GOD for his Blessing upon them in all their Labours, which he here promises to bestow.

CHAP. XV.

Verse 1. At the End of every seven Years] It appears, from ver. 9. that this Phrase signifies as much as every seventh Year.

Thou shalt make a Release.] Perfectly free their Brethren from all their Debts which they owed to their Creditors. This Year was famous not only for this, but for letting Servants go free, (as some think) Exod. xxi. 2. and for letting their Ground rest, Levit. xxv. 34. and for reading this Law publicly to all the People, Deut. xxxi. 10.

Ver. 2. And this is the Manner of the Release :] It is thus to be understood.

Every Creditor that lendeth ought unto his Neighbour, shall release it ;] It was an intire Acquittance, not of Debts contracted by Sale of Lands or Goods, to those who were able to pay, but of Money lent to a Neighbour or Friend, merely to relieve his Poverty, not to carry on Trade, or to make a Purchase. For nothing could have been more absurd, than to have extinguished such Debts, whereby the Borrower was enriched.

He shall not exact it of his Neighbour, or of his Brother ;] Here the Word Brother is added, to explain what is meant by a Neighbour, viz. an Israelite, or a Profelyte intirely of their Religion, who had all the Privileges of an Israelite. Some think that by not exacting Money lent to such a Man, is meant no more but only forbearing to demand it in this Year, because there was no sowing or reaping in it ; or if he did, that he should not have Power to recover it by Law this Year, tho' afterward he might. But the plain Meaning seems to be, that he should be perfectly free from his Debt, as a Servant, after six Years, was from his Service : tho', if afterward he grew rich, in good Conscience, he was bound to pay it.

Because it is called the LORD's Release.] In the Hebrew the Words Schemitta laibova signify, that this Year was a Release to the LORD, or for the LORD ; in Honour, that is, of him, who made this a Year of great Charity : in Obedience to whom they were bound to be very kind to their poor Brethren. But the Jews fancy they were not bound to be so kind as to make this Release, till the very last Day of the Year. So that if a Man had borrowed Money in the Beginning of it, he was not acquitted till the Year expired.

Ver. 3. Of a Foreigner thou mayst exact it again ;] Of an Alien, as we translate the Word Noeri, in the foregoing Chapter, ver. 21. that is, of one who was neither an Israelite, nor profelyted to their Religion, but a mere Gentile. The only Question is, whether they were not to remit the Debts of a Profelyte of the Gate, who, I think, is no-where called their Brother in the Law ; and therefore they were not obliged to discharge them from what they owed.

But that which is thine with thy Brother, thine Hand shall release.] This seems to restrain it wholly to those who were Jews, or had all the Privileges of Jews.

Ver. 4.

Ver. 4. Save when there shall be no Poor among you:] Whether we follow this Translation, or that in the Margin of our Bibles, it appears that they were obliged to acquit only their poor Brethren; of whom they were not to exact their Debts, lest they should be tempted to flee to the Gentiles, and forsake their Religion: so this was a Provision still against Idolatry. Or, if we understand it as it is in the Margin, to the End that there be no Poor among you, the Sense is the same; that they were by this Charity to keep Men from extreme Necessity, which might force them to go a begging, or to seek for Relief in strange Countries.

For the LORD shall greatly bless thee in the Land which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee for an Inheritance to possess it:] He would not have them think, that they might become poor themselves by this Means; for he assures them GOD would prevent that, by sending his extraordinary Blessing upon them. Cardinal Cajetan, and some others, understand this Verse as if it were all of it a Promise, and contained no Precept in it, viz. That GOD would take Care they should not be burden'd by this Law, for he would so bless them, that they should have no Poor among them; and then they were not obliged to acquit those of their Debts, who were able to pay them.

Ver. 5. Only if thou carefully hearken unto the Voice of the LORD thy GOD, to observe to do all these Commandments which I command thee this Day.] Particularly this, of releasing their poor Neighbours from their Debts; which would intitle them to the Blessing he promises again in the next Verse.

Ver. 6. For the LORD thy GOD blesseth thee, as he promised thee:] GOD had many Ways blessed them already, and he promised to reward their Obedience with greater Blessings.

And thou shalt lend unto many Nations, but thou shalt not borrow:] Grow so very rich, that other Nations should come to borrow of them; but they be beholden to none.

And thou shalt reign over many Nations, &c.] I suppose he means no more than Solomon doth, when he saith, The Borrower is Servant to the Lender, Prov. xxii. 7. But it may extend to their Dominion over many Nations, whom they conquered, till they enlarged their Bounds as far as Euphrates.

Ver. 7. If there be among you a poor Man of one of thy Brethren, within any of thy Gates, in thy Land which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thy Heart, nor shut thine Hand from thy poor Brother:] As they might be inclined to do, after the passing of this Law; thinking with themselves, that what they lent to such a Man, they should never have again, but must lose it, if he were not able to repay it before the Year of Release. This seems to be the Meaning of this Verse, which the Jews interpret not of Lending, but of giving Alms. It is not much material which Way we take it: for he that lent to a poor Man, was willing to give what he lent, if he could not pay him before the Year of Release, after which he could not demand it.

Thou shalt not harden thy Heart, nor shut thine Hand from thy poor Brother:] Cove-tness proceeds from want of Pity, Tenderness, and Compassion towards others in their Miseries; unto which Nature itself inclines us, especially towards Members of the same Society. And the Jews had several particular Obligations to be tender-hearted, as they were all Children of GOD after a peculiar Manner, who had been wonderful kind and merciful to them, xiv. 2.

Ver. 8. But thou shalt open thine Hand wide unto him,] Bountifully supply him with what he wants.

And shalt surely lend him sufficient for his Need, in that which he wanteth.] The Jews understood this not merely of affording him Food sufficient to satisfy his Hunger, and Cloaths to cover his Nakedness, and keep him warm; but furnishing him with Household-Goods, (if he had been forced to sell all he had) that he might live comfortably. Yea, they proceed so far, as to determine, that the Neighbourhood should join together, and make a Purse for him, to put him in as good a Condition as he was before he fell into this Want. They determine also the Quantity that every Man should give; a very liberal Person, the Fifth-part of what he had, if Need required; a Man of moderate Bounty, a Tenth-part. If any Man gave less, when the Case required more, he was accounted a Niggard, or, as they phrase it, a Man of an evil Eye. But notwithstanding all these Precepts, and their Interpretations, the Jews so little minded their Poor, that their Governors were at last forced (as we now, alas! do) to lay a Rate upon the Rich for the Maintenance of the Poor, which they enabled their Officers to exact. See Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 6. and Majmonides de Donis Pauperum, set forth by a very learned Friend of mine, Dr. Prideaux, cap. 7. who argues from this Place, that if a poor Man wanted a Wife, they were bound to provide him one, &c.

Ver. 9. Beware that there be not a Thought in thy wicked Heart, saying, The seventh Year, the Year of Release, is at Hand:] If such a Thought came into their Mind, that they should lose what they lent, because the seventh Year approached, they were bound to stifle it immediately, and not suffer it to lodge there.

And thine Eye be Evil against thy poor Brother,] This move thee to be unkind and unmerciful to him. So a Man of an Evil Eye signifies, in Prov. xxiii. 6. one that grudges what another eats at his Table.

And thou givest him nought,] Lending was in this Case giving; when a Man was very poor, and the Year of Release so near, that he could have no Prospect of his being able to repay him.

And be cry unto the LORD against thee,] Make his doleful Complaint unto GOD, finding no Relief from Men.

And it be Sin unto thee,] GOD charge it upon thee as an Offence against his Majesty, yea, a great Offence. For so the Word Sin sometimes signifies, Jobn xv. 24. James iv. 17.

Ver. 10. Thou shalt surely give him,] Not fail to relieve his Wants.

And thine Heart shall not be grieved, when thou givest unto him,] They were not only to relieve him, but to do it cheerfully.

Because

Because that for this Thing the LORD thy GOD shall bless thee in all thy Works, and in all that thou puttest thine Hand unto.] There is no Difference between all their Works, and all that they put their Hand unto, (for all Works are performed by the Hand) unless one refer to what they did within Doors, and the other to their Labours in the Field.

Ver. 11. For the Poor shall never cease out of the Land:] There would always be some or other among them, who stood in Need of the fore-named charitable Relief, by which they might be preserved from extreme Poverty; which GOD intended to prevent, as is plain from ver. 4. See Grotius upon St. Matth. xxvi. 11. The Hierusalem Targum understand this, as if there should have been no Poor amongst them, if they had been obedient to GOD's Precepts.

Therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine Hand wide] If any one refused to give, or gave less than became him, Maimonides saith, in the fore-named Place, the Sanhedrim compelled him to it, and whipt him with the Stripes of Rebellion or Contumacy, (i. e. very sorely) till he gave as much as they judged he ought to do.

Unto thy Brother, to thy Poor, and to thy Needy in thy Land.] Here are evidently three different sorts of Persons mentioned as Objects of their Charity, which may be look'd upon as directing the excellent Order of it. For, First, They were to relieve those that were nearest to them in Blood, called here their Brethren. Then, Secondly, Such as were in great Misery. And, Thirdly, Such as were low in the World, and required some Help, but not so much as the former sort. Some indeed will, not admit such a Difference between the Words Poor and Needy, but think the last signifies such whose Condition was calamitous; about which I think it is not worth while to dispute. I shall rather observe, that GOD took exceeding great Care, that none should come to very great Want, by the large Provision he made for the poorer sort of People; who had the Benefit of the third Tithe, mentioned in the foregoing Chapter, which was wholly given to them every third Year; and of the sabbatical Year, when all that grew of itself was common to every body; and of the Release of Debts in the same Year; and of the large Quantity of Corn, which they were bound to leave every Year, in the Corners of their Fields, with the Ears that fell, and the Sheaf that was left, &c.

Ver. 12. If thy Brother, an Hebrew Man or an Hebrew Woman, be sold unto thee,] Whether sold by themselves, or by the Court of Judgment for Theft. But there was some Difference between a Man and a Woman: see Exod. xxi. 2, 3, &c. And the same Law, they say, was to be observed about those who were sold by their Father, or were born of Hebrew Slaves.

And serve thee six Years, then in the seventh Year thou shalt let him go free from thee.] He doth not speak of the Year of Release, as if he were then to be set free, tho' he had served but one Year, or perhaps no more than half a Year before that came, but of the seventh Year, from the Time of his Sale: for he was to serve six complete Years, unless the Jubilee happened to intervene, when every one was set free, tho' he had not served so long; but such Servants as were taken in the Wars, or were sold by Canaanites, or born of them, might be kept perpetual Slaves, unless they were maimed by their Masters, with the Loss of some Member of their Body.

Ver. 13. And when thou sendest him out free from thee, thou shalt not let him go away empty:] But bestow something upon him, for his more comfortable Subsistence, when he was a Freeman. And this comprehends Women as well as Men, as appears by the foregoing Verse: but then it is to be understood of such as went out free by Virtue of this Law, after they had served six Years, not of such as were redeemed by their Friends, or redeemed themselves with their own Money (Levit. xxv. 18): For such might be supposed not to need their Masters Kindness, as they did who had nothing to help them out of their Slavery.

Ver. 14. Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy Flock, and out of thy Floor, and out of thy Wine-press:] That they might put themselves in a Way of living well in the World; which they were not able to do without this Assistance, because what they got in their six Years Service was wholly for their Master, and not for themselves. He doth not prescribe a certain Measure to their Bounty, but leaves every Man to express his Affection freely towards GOD, and towards his Neighbour. But the Hebrews say, they were bound to give them at least thirty Shekels of Silver.

Of that wherewith the LORD thy GOD hath blessed thee, thou shalt give unto him.] Considering how GOD hath enriched thee, even by his Service.

Ver. 15. And thou shalt remember, that thou wast a Bondman in the Land of Egypt, and the LORD thy GOD redeemed thee:] And did not bring them empty out of their Slavery, but loaded with Silver, and Gold, and Raiment, Exod. xii. 35. By which Bounty of GOD to themselves, they might take the best Measure of their Duty to their poor Brethren, when they were dismissed from Servitude.

Therefore I command thee this Thing To-day.] In Remembrance of that great Benefit, he enjoined this Benevolence to poor Slaves.

Ver. 16. And it shall be, if he say unto thee, I will not go away from thee,] Refused to enjoy his Liberty, when his six Years Service was expired.

Because he loveth thee, and thine House,] The Phrase in Exodus xxi. 5. being, Saying shall say, I love my Master, &c. Abarbinel from thence gathers, that it was necessary he should often profess how loth he was to leave his Master and his Family, and make repeated Declarations of his Affection to them.

Because he is well with thee:] Lives happily. Out of these Words Maimonides infers, that there was to be reciprocal Love between the Servant and his Master; for if the Servant loved his Master, yet if his Master did not love him, his Ear was not bored; for he could not take Content in his staying with him. But these Words suppose his Master's Kindness to him by his good Usage of him.

Ver. 17. Then thou shalt take an Awl, and thrust it through his Ear unto the Door, &c.] But first he was to bring him before the Judges, that he might there in open Court, profess the same same that he had done to his Master ; and thereby make it appear there was no Fraud or Deceit in the Business ; and that his Master did not keep him against his Will, contrary to this Law : see Exod. xxi. 6. where all this is explained.

And also unto thy Maid-servant thou shalt do like-wife.] This relates only to the not sending Maid-servants away empty ; not to the boring their Ears, if they had no Mind to be freed ; for that was not used, if we may believe the Hebrew Doctors, to Maid-servants. It was sufficient, if they had a Mind to stay with their Masters, that they addicted themselves, in solemn Words, to their Service for ever. But there were many Differences between a Man-servant and a Maid-servant, at least in some Cases, (see upon Exod. xxi. 7.) which are explained with great Nicety by the Hebrew Doctors ; with which I need not trouble the Reader, because there is no such Slavery among us in these Days.

Ver. 18. It shall not seem hard unto thee, when thou sendest him away free from thee ;] It is plain by this, that he returns to what he was speaking of ver. 12, 13, &c. concerning their not letting their Servants go away empty, when they had their Freedom : for this was the chief Thing that could seem hard to them.

For he hath been worth a double-bired Servant to thee] Who served, at most, only for three Years, and had Wages paid him all the Time, Isa. xvi. 14.

In serving thee six Years :] Twice as long as an hired Servant, and for nothing. So that considering what Wages he gave the other, and how small a Price perhaps they paid for him, they would find themselves Gainers by such Slaves, and therefore should not think much to give them a Gratuity, when they send them away.

And the LORD thy GOD shall bless thee in all that thou dost.] He encourages them to hope they should be greater Gainers otherways by this Charity, which would procure GOD's Blessing upon their future Labours. This Argument he had pressed twice or thrice before in this Chapter, ver. 4, 6, 10.

Ver. 19. All the Firstling Males that come of thy Herd, and of thy Flock, thou shalt sanctify unto the LORD thy GOD.] All the first-born Males were the LORD's, by a Law made at their coming out of Egypt ; and he gave them to his Priests for their Portion, Exod. xiii. 2, 15. Numb. xviii. 15.

Thou shalt do no Work with the Firstling of thy Bullock, nor shear the Firstling of thy Sheep.] Besides the Firstling Males, which alone were separated to the LORD, there were also Firstling Females ; which, tho' they were not sanctified to him as the Males were, yet were not to be employed by the Owners, as the rest of their Cattle, but offered as Peace-offerings to GOD. Of which they themselves had a good Share, tho' some Part of them was given to the Priests.

Ver. 20. Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy GOD,] It is evident from hence, that he speaks of such Female Firstlings as I mentioned in the foregoing Verse ; for of the Males they might not eat, but they belonged intirely to the Priests.

Year by Year,] At their solemn Festivals ; when they were first to offer them unto GOD ; and then the Feasts upon these Peace-offerings followed.

In the Place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy Household.] With the Levites and Strangers, &c. whom they were to invite to these sacred Entertainments : for this is but a Repetition of the Law twice or thrice mentioned before, xii. 6, 7, &c. 17, 18, 26. xiv. 23. and upon this Occasion here again inculcated, because it was of exceeding great Moment, to preserve them in the Worship and Service of GOD alone.

Ver. 21. And if there be any Blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill Blemish,] This is another Reason why he mentions these Feasts again, that he might admonish them what to do with their Firstlings, if there were any Blemish in them, which made them unfit for Sacrifice. These Blemishes he had spoke of in Levit. xxii. 21, 22, 24. But here adds the Lame to those there named. Which the Prophet Malachi also mentions (and so do the Heathens) as unacceptable unto GOD, Mal. i. 8.

Thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the LORD thy GOD :] No, not to make such a charitable Feast at the Sanctuary.

Ver. 22. Thou shalt eat it within thy Gates ;] It was free for them to eat it at Home : Tho' it is very probable GOD expected they should invite the Levites, and the Strangers, the Fatherless and the Widows, to partake of it, (as they did of the third Tiche, xiv. 29.) because, if it had been without Blemish, it must have been so employed at the Sanctuary.

The unclean and the clean Person shall eat it alike,] Whereas if it had been sacrificed at their Feasts, only the Clean could have eaten of it.

As the Roe-buck, and as the Hart.] See xii. 15, 22.

Ver. 23. Only thou shalt not eat the Blood thereof ; thou shalt pour it upon the Ground as Water.] He takes all Occasions to mention this, because it was designed to preserve them free from Idolatry : see xii. 16, 23, 24.

CHAP. XVI.

Verse 1. Observe the Month of Abib,] Which GOD, by a special Order, made the Beginning of their Year : see Exod. xii. 2. xiii. 4. xxxiv. 18.

And keep the Passover unto the LORD thy GOD :] He now begins in this Chapter, to admonish them about their great Feasts, which they were to keep ; whereby the whole Nation was preserved in the Worship of one only GOD, which Moses still pursues to press upon them.

For in the Month of Abib the LORD thy GOD brought thee forth out of Egypt] In Memory of which the Feast of the Passover was ordained.

By Night.] For then Pharaoh pressed them to be gone, when he saw his First-born slain in the Night, Exod. xii. 29, 30, 31. and then they immediately prepared themselves for their Journey, and borrowed of the Egyptians Jewels of Gold and Silver, ver. 25. Inasmuch that Moses calls this a Night much to be observed unto the LORD, and that Night of the LORD to be observed by all the Children of Israel in their Generations, (Exod. xii. 42.) tho' it was Day-light before they began their March, as we read there, there, ver. 22. So that Moses had them remember the Day when they came out of Egypt, Exod. xiii. 3. which comprehends both that which is properly called Day and Night.

Ver. 2. Thou shalt therefore sacrifice the Passover unto the LORD thy GOD,] The Word Passover signifies here not only the Lamb (which was properly called Pesach, or Passover) which was offered the fourteenth Day at Even, but all the Paschal Sacrifices which followed after, as appears by the next Words [of the Flock, and the Herd.] Which Sacrifices were appointed for all the seven Days of unleavened Bread, Numb. xviii. 17, 18, 19, &c. See Bochartus in his Hierozycon, Par. I. Lib. II. cap. 50. where he shews at large, that the Word Passover is here a general Word, comprehending the Particulars after-mentioned, (p. 565, 566.) And thus translates these Words, (which he justifies by many like Instances) Thou shalt therefore sacrifice the Passover unto the LORD thy GOD, viz. of the Flock and of the Herd. Which last Words are added exegetically, to explain what that Passover was which they were to offer unto the LORD. Such Sacrifices as were offered in the solemn Passover of Ezekiah, 2 Chron. xxx. 22. and of Josiah, 2 Chron. xxxv. 7, 8, 9. where it is apparent, that the King and the Princes gave to the People, and to the Priests, Oxen as well as Sheep, lepesachim, for the Passover-offerings. And thus it is used in the New Testament, John xviii. 28. where it is said the Jews would not go into the Judgment-hall, lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat the Passover, i. e. these Passover-offerings, which were holy Things, of which none might eat in their Defilement.

In the Place which the LORD shall chuse to place his Name there.] At the Sanctuary, as hath been often said, xii. 5, 11, &c. where all Sacrifices were to be offered.

Ver. 3. Thou shalt eat no leavened Bread with it:] That is, with the Passover before-mentioned. Which is a Demonstration that all the Sacrifices of the Flock, and of the Herds, spoken of in the foregoing Verse, are comprehended under the Name of Passover. For with the Lamb they could not eat unleavened Bread seven Days, it being to be eaten presently in the Evening when it was offered; after which followed the seven Days of unleavened Bread, which could not be eaten so long with the Passover, unless Passover signifies all the seven Sacrifices.

Seven Days shalt thou eat unleavened Bread therewith,] See Exod. xii. 15. xiii. 6, 7.

Even the Bread of Affliction;] So called, because it was insipid, and also heavy upon the Stomach, and not easily digested. Whence it had the Name of Matzah, because it was lumpish, and could not rise as leavened Bread doth.

For thou comest forth out of the Land of Egypt in haste;] Wanting Time to put any Leaven to their Dough, Exod. xii. 34, 39.

That thou mayst remember the Day when thou comest forth out of the Land of Egypt, all the Days of thy Life.] That their Affliction there, and their speedy Deliverance from thence, might never be forgotten. For their eating this Bread seven Days together every Year, one would think, could not but make great Impressions on their Mind; and the more to imprint the Sense of GOD'S Mercy there, the Master of every Family, when he brake this Bread at the Paschal Feast, and gave every one a Piece of it, said, This is the Bread of Affliction, which your Fathers did eat in the Land of Egypt. So Maimonides and others tells us. See Exod. xii. 17.

Ver. 4. And there shall be no leavened Bread seen with thee in all thy Coasts seven Days.] See Exod. xii. 18, 19, 20. xiii. 3, 7.

Neither shall there any Thing of the Flesh, which thou sacrificest the first Day at Even, remain all Night until the Morning.] This is a plain Description of the Paschal Lamb, which was to be eaten in the Even wherein it was sacrificed, (Exod. xii. 10.) which he forbears here to call the Passover, (though that Name properly belong to it) because he had called other Sacrifices by that Name, (ver. 2.) and would not have them confounded.

Ver. 5. Thou mayst not sacrifice the Passover within any of thy Gates, which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee:] Not at home, as they did when they first came out of Egypt, and that because it was a Sacrifice; which was now required to be offered at the Sanctuary, as was said before, xii. 5, 11.

Ver. 6. But at the Place which the LORD thy GOD shall chuse to place his Name in, there thou shalt sacrifice the Passover,] From whence Maimonides infers, that even whilst High-places were allowed, the Passover could not be killed anywhere but at the Sanctuary: If any Man did offer it in a private High-place, he was beaten, as he saith in his Treatise concerning the Passover, cap. 1. sect. 3.

At Even, at the going down of the Sun,] Between the two Evenings, concerning which see Exod. xii. 6. After the Offering of the Evening Sacrifice, they began to kill the Passover, and continued this Sacrifice till Sun-set.

At the Season that thou comest forth out of Egypt.] Then they were preparing themselves for their Journey, and had Warning to be ready, and eat the Lamb with their Staves in their Hands, as Men going forth to travel, (Exod. xii. 11.) tho' they did not actually go forth till the next Morning.

Ver. 7. And thou shalt rost and eat it in the Place which the LORD thy GOD shall chuse:] See Exod. xii. 8, 9.

And thou shalt turn in the Morning, and go unto thy Tents.] Unto their own Habitations, which are called Tents, because they had no other Dwellings when these Words were spoken. The only Doubt is, whether he permits them to go home the next Morning after the Even before mentioned, or the Morning after the whole Feast of unleavened Bread was over. It seems most reasonable to expound it of the former, that if Mens Occasions called them home, they were not bound to stay any longer at the Place where the Sanctuary was, but till they had eaten the Paschal Lamb; after which they might return home, if they pleased. So Bochartus, who from hence proves, that the most solemn Days of the Feast of unleavened Bread were not observed like a Sabbath, because Men might travel home upon the first Day of unleavened Bread, as the whole Nation travelled out of Egypt on this Day, from Rameses to Succoth:
5 H Yet

Yet pious People, who were able to bear so great a Charge, were wont, no doubt, to stay the whole seven Days before they returned home; because the first and last Days of the Feast were great Solemnities. So they did in the Passover of Hezekiah and Josiah, 2 Chron. xxx. 21, xxxv. 17. And there being special Sacrifices to be offered every Day during this Festival, (as was before said) Solomon ben Virgæ observes, that all the Country thereabouts brought their Oxen and their Sheep to be sold at this Time to those who came from far; so that the Mountains round about Jerusalem were covered with them, and not a whit of Grass to be seen. He adds also, That whosoever did not come up to this Feast, all his Goods were forfeited and converted to sacred Uses, Skebet Jebuda, p. 378.

Ver. 8. Six Days thou shalt eat unleavened Bread, and on the seventh Day shall be a solemn Assembly to the LORD thy God:] This is to be understood as if he had said, that after they had eaten unleavened Bread six Days, they should conclude the Solemnity upon the seventh Day with a Solemn Assembly; or, as it is in the Hebrew, with a Restraining; but still continue also on this Day to eat unleavened Bread. For this Feast was to last seven Days, and in all the foregoing Books they are expressly required to eat unleavened Bread seven Days, Exod. xii. 15. Levit. xxiii. 6. Numb. xxviii. 17.

A solemn Assembly:] Which the Hebrews call Atzereth; of the Meaning of which see Levit. xxiii. 36.

Thou shalt do no Work therein.] That is, no servile Work, as it is explained, Numb. xxviii. 25. but they might dress their Meat, which the LXX seem to mean in those Words, which they add, πλὴν ὅσα ποιῶσινται ἑαυτοῖς, save only such Things as shall be done to preserve Life.

Ver. 9. Seven Weeks shalt thou number unto thee:] From the Morrow after the Sabbath, when they brought the Sheaf of the Wave-offering, as it is explained in Levit. xxiii. 15. See there.

Begin to number the seven Weeks from such Time as thou beginnest to put the Sickle to the Corn.] For they began to cut Barley at the Passover, as is manifest from hence; that Josua passed over Jordan to enter into Canaan, in the Time of Harvest, Josb. iii. 15. and this was in the Month of Nisan, when they kept the Passover, as appears from Josb. v. 10. Which Month could not be called Abib, or the Month of New Fruits, if some Corn was not then ripe, viz. Barley. This Josephus confirms, Lib. III. Antiq. cap. x. which must be understood, as Hermannus Conringius observes (in his Treatise de Initio Anni Sabbatici, &c.) of that Sort of Barley which was sown in Autumn, (as it is this Day in Frisia) which required a stronger Soil than that sown in the Spring, and produced a much richer Crop. See Mr. Mede's Works, p. 355. who observes how very different their Climate was from ours.

Ver. 10. And thou shalt keep the Feast of Weeks unto the LORD thy God,] The Reason of this Name is given in the foregoing Verse. And see Exod. xxxiv. 22. It was called also the Feast of Harvest. See Exod. xxiii. 16.

With a Tribute of a Free-will-offering of thine Hand, which thou shalt give unto the LORD thy God,] Besides those Offerings which are prescribed, Levit. xxiii. 17, 18. Numb. xxviii. 27, &c. The Quantity is not directed, but left to every Man's Piety. And whatsoever it was he brought, it was wholly given to God, and he that brought it had no Share in it; but God gave it to his Priests.

According as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee.] Though no Quantity was prescribed, yet God expected every Man should offer proportionably to his Estate; and they who had a religious Sense of God's Goodness in blessing their Labours, no doubt, acknowledged it by a liberal Tribute.

Ver. 11. And thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God, thou and thy Son, and thy Daughter, and thy Man-servant, and thy Maid-servant, and the Levite that is within thy Gates, &c.] This Feast was made of such Offerings as are mentioned, xii. 7, 17, 18, 19.

Ver. 12. And thou shalt remember, that thou wast a Bondman in Egypt:] They are often put in Mind of this, as an Argument to Charity, particularly towards their Servants. See xv. 15.

And thou shalt observe and do these Statutes.] There was a particular Reason for keeping this Feast, because it was in Remembrance of God's giving them his Law from Mount Sinai; where he speaks with them himself.

Ver. 13. Thou shalt observe the Feast of Tabernacles seven Days, after that thou hast gathered in thy Corn and thy Wine.] This is the third great Feast, at which all their Males were bound to appear every Year, as we read Exod. xxiii. 16, 17. xxxiv. 22, 23. Of which he puts them in Mind again, Levit. xxiii. 34, 35, 36. and here ver. 16.

Ver. 14. And thou shalt rejoice in thy Feast, thou, and thy Son, and thy Daughter, and thy Man-servant, and thy Maid-servant, &c.] There was the like Law at Athens, where King Cecrops ordained, (as Macrobius tells us, Lib. I. Saturnal. cap. 10.) the Master of every Family should, after Harvest, make a Feast for his Servants, and eat together with them, who had taken Pains with him in tilling his Ground; Delectari enim Deum bonore servorum, contemplatu laboris; for God delighted in the Honour done to Servants, in Consideration of their Labour. This, it's likely, he learnt from Moses; for he reigned at Athens much about the same Time that Israel came out of Egypt; and was the first, as Eusebius saith, who taught the Greeks to call God by the Name of Zeûs, (Lib. X. Præpar. Evangel.) which we may interpret the Living God. Though therein he seems to be a little mistaken. For Pausanias saith more than once, (both in his Arcadica and his Attica) That Δία ὀνόμασεν ὕπατον πρῶτος, He was the first that called Jupiter by the Name of the Most High, or Supreme. And the same we read in St. Cyril against Julian, Lib. I. See Job. Meursius de Regibus Atheniensium, Lib. I. cap. 9.

Ver. 15. Seven Days shalt thou keep a solemn Feast unto the LORD thy God, in the Place which the LORD thy God shall choose:] In order to which, that it might be kept the more solemnly, it is once more enjoined; and all the Sacrisices that were to be offered in each of the seven Days appointed in Numb. xxix. from ver. 12. to ver. 35. where he orders also the eighth Day to be solemnly observed for a special Reason. See there.

Because the LORD thy GOD shall bless thee in all thy Increase, and in all the Works of thine Hands;] Thankfulness to GOD for Blessings bestowed, was the Way to procure more.

Therefore thou shalt surely rejoice.] In GOD the Giver of all good Things; whom the whole Nation, by the Institution of this Feast, were incited to bless and praise for the Fruits of his Bounty to them. And Peace-offerings were sacrificed on Purpose for this End, xxvii. 7. From the Repetition of this Command, Thou shalt rejoice, the Jews infer, that though all Festivals were Times of Joy, yet the Feast of Tabernacles was to be celebrated with greater Joy than all the rest. And accordingly Maimonides tells us the whole Festival was spent in Musick, and Dancing, and Singing, Night and Day.

Ver. 16. Three Times in a Year shall all thy Males appear before the LORD thy GOD in the Place, &c.] This is so frequently enjoined, (see ver. 13.) because it was of the greatest Consequence, that they should meet as often as they could conveniently, at one and the same Place, to worship the Divine Majesty; whereby the Notion of the Unity of GOD was preserved among them.

And they shall not appear before the LORD empty.] This is also frequently repeated, where the Feasts themselves are enjoined, Exod. xviii. 15. xxxiv. 20. And from these and the following Words, That every Man should give as he was able, &c. came the pious Custom in the Beginning of our Religion, that the People, when they came to the LORD's Table, offer'd Bread, and Wine, and Corn, and Oil, and such like Things, for the Support of GOD's Ministers, and the Relief of the Poor, every one according to their Ability. Which was done in Acknowledgment of GOD, as the Author of Life, and of all good Things; for which they, in this Manner, shewed their Gratitude to him. And the Priests, in the Presence of all the People, lifted them up, and gave GOD Thanks, and beseeched him to accept them: And out of these, in many Places, they made their Agape, or Feasts of Charity, for the Poor. Mention is made of these Oblations in the Canons ascribed to the Apostles, cap. 3, 4. which, though not made by them, yet contain a great many Apostolical Customs.

Ver. 17. Every Man shall give as he is able, according to the Blessing of the LORD thy GOD, which he hath given thee.] It was but reasonable, that the more bountiful GOD had been to them, the more liberally they should offer a grateful Acknowledgment to him. For all the forenamed three Feasts had relation to the Fruits of the Earth, which GOD had blessed them withal, as well as commemorated former great Benefits bestowed on their Forefathers; the Passover being at the Beginning of Barley-Harvest, Pentecost at the Beginning of Wheat-Harvest, and the Feasts of Tabernacles, when they had gathered in all the Fruits of the Earth. At which Seasons all Mankind were ever wont to be full of Joy, and to offer Sacrifices. So Aristotle tells us, Lib. VIII. ad Nicomachum, cap. 2. Ἀνὰ ἀρχαίαν ἑσπέρην τὴν ἐν τῇ πόλει, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, &c. The ancient Sacrifices and Conventions seem to have been after the gathering in of the Fruits of the Earth, as the First-fruits, at which Time chiefly they rested from their Labours. And so Strabo likewise, Lib. X. Geograph. p. 467. It is common, both to Greeks and Barbarians, to offer their Sacrifices with a Festive Intermision of their Labours; &c. ἐν τῇ πόλει καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, &c. and so Nature taught them to do, that is, to thank GOD, with Rejoicing, and Cessation from Labour. For which he gives this surprising Reason, ὅτι ὁ θεὸς τὴν ἀρχὴν ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς ἀπαυλῶν, καὶ ὁ θεὸς τὴν ἀρχὴν ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς ἀπαυλῶν, &c. For Remission of Labour abstracts the Mind from human Affairs, and turns it towards GOD. This certainly was the ancient Intention of all such Festival Times, as the Heathen themselves could discern.

Ver. 18. Judges and Officers shalt thou make thee.] To see that these, and all other Laws were duly observed. Moses de Cotzi, upon these Words, makes this Difference between Sebetim and Seboterim, that the former [viz. Judges] were the Senators in the several Courts, who decided Causes; and the other [Officers] were no more than Ministers attending the Court, to keep the People in Order, with a Staff and a Whip, and to execute the Decrees and Orders of the Judges; whom they appointed not only in the Court, but in the Streets, looking after Weights and Measures in the Market, and correcting Offenders. Maimonides also makes them the same with our Apparitors; or those who, in the Roman Law, are called Officiales, as Constantine L' Empereur observes, p. 362. upon Cornelius Bertram, (who mistook them for a sort of Judges) and in the Digests Executores: and in the New Testament magistratus, Exactors, Luke xii. 58. Josephus makes them to have been Public Criers; and so we find them employed xx. 8. Joshua i. 11. But then some of them, at least, seem to have been an honourable Sort, like our Heralds, Joshua xiii. 2. and all of them were Men of Authority, though but young Men, (as Maimonides describes them) who had not attained the Years and Knowledge of the Doctors of the Law, and therefore unfit to be Judges. But the Jews place them next under their wise Men, or Doctors, and above their Scribes and Clerks, as Mr. Thorndike observes in his Review of the Rights of the Church, p. 94. But that they were certainly only Under-Officers, and not Judges, there is another Argument; which is, That Solomon upon this Account commends the Ants, that they carefully do their Business, though they have no Seboter set over them, (Prov. vi. 7.) on ἐκδοτικῶν, or ἐκδοτικῶν, to force or affright them into it.

In all thy Gates,] That is, in every City, as Mr. Selden observes out of the Jewish Writers Lib. VII. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 5. sect. 1. where he shews they interpret it, in all the Cities of Israel, both within the Land and without, where Israel had any Jurisdiction. Which is so true, that they had Consistories wheresoever they were dispersed, for the determining all Differences arising out of the Law, though not as to the Power of Life and Death, which was seldom granted them by their Sovereigns. Thus we learn from Philo, that there was such a Consistory at Alexandria; and the little Chronicle, called Seder Olam Zuta, tells us of the like in Babylonia. And after the Destruction of the Temple, it is manifest, not only by the Jewish Writings, but by Epiphanius and others, that there continued a Consistory at Tiberias for many Ages, &c. See Mr. Thorndike's Rights of the Church, p. 56, 57. and his Review of it, p. 56.

But though this be granted, yet these Words [in all thy Gates] may suggest also the Part of the City where they kept their Court, which was in the Gate: For there, as I observed, (Gen. xxxiv. 24.) all publick Business was transacted in the Time of Abraham and Jacob, and continued so afterward. Inasmuch that the highest Court in Moses's Time met at the Door of the Tabernacle, Numbers xi. 24. the Gate among the Hebrews being the same with the Forum, as I observed, among the Romans. As we see by 1 Kings vii. 1. where Elisba foretels at what low Rates Provision should be sold on the Morrow in the Gate of Samaria. Where it is evident there was a Place so spacious, that Abab assembled Four hundred Prophets there before him and King Jehoshaphat, who had, no doubt, both of them numerous Attendants, 2 Kings xxii. 10. And before this Time, David, it is said, upon the News of Abjalom's Death, went up to the Chamber over the Gate, and wept; which we may well think was the Council-Chamber, 2 Sam. xviii. 33. And when Joab advised him to come down, and shew himself publicly, it is said, he rose and sat in the Gate, and all the People came before him, xix. 6. And therefore in these Cities, which were so large, there was some Place, I make no Question, where there were Benches for the Judges.

Which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee throughout thy Tribes:] In the Cities of every Tribe, there was to be such a Court erected, that People might have Justice easily and speedily done them. And the Talmudists unanimously agree, that the Number of Judges was proportionable to the Greatness of the City wherein they were placed, and of the Causes which they judged. Where there were less than an hundred and twenty Families in any Town or City, there was seated the lowest Court of all, consisting of three Judges, which tried only Actions of Debt, or Damages done by Man or Beast, or Defamation, &c. But in Cities where there were above an hundred and twenty Families, there was placed an higher Court, consisting of three and twenty Judges, who tried Capital Causes: Josephus indeed differs from the Talmudists about the Number; for he saith they were but seven. Both of them, it is likely, may say true, with respect to different Times and Places; for it cannot but be presumed, that both he and they understood the State of their Country in such publick Matters. But at the Place where GOD chose to settle his Sanctuary, unto which all the Country resorted at certain Times, there was the Supreme Court of all, consisting, as the Talmudists say, of seventy Persons, besides their President; who judged all Manner of Causes; and none but they could judge a false Prophet, or a City fallen to Idolatry. All Appeals were made to them; but from them there was none, their Sentence being final. See Selden, Lib. II. de Synedr. cap. iv.

Such a Court, it is certain, there was in future Ages, whose Number was according to that of the seventy Elders chosen by GOD himself to assist Moses in the Government, and indued with the Spirit of Judgment to qualify them for that Office, Numbers xi. 25. In Moses's Time they sat at the Door of the Tabernacle, as I observed before; and afterward at Shiloh, or wheresoever the Sanctuary was: Though it may be doubted, whether after Moses's Death, and the Death of the Elders, there was a Court consisting of so many Judges. Nay, it is highly probable, that this Consistory itself was not constantly settled there, according to Law, till the Time of Jehoshaphat, at least not the inferior Consistories before-mentioned, which were to be settled in every City. For if there were, what Reason can be given, why the Judges (Judg. vi. 10. x. 4. xii. 14.) and Samuel should ride Circuit up and down the Country to minister Justice according to the Law, when the People might have had it every Day in their several Cities? And for this Reason, it is likely, Jehoshaphat himself, desiring to put this Law in Force, first sent some great Men, who went about through all the Cities of Judab, 2 Chron. xvii. 8, 9. and then settled Judges according to this Law throughout all the fenced Cities of Judab, City by City, as well as in Jerusalem, 2 Chron. xix. 5, 8. See Mr. Thorndike, in his Rights of the Church in a Christian State, Chap. iv. p. 226. where he observes, that Josephus, in express Terms, rendering a Reason of the great Leudness, upon which the War against Benjamin followed, attributes it to this, that these Courts of Judgment were not established according to this Law, Lib. V. Antiq. Cap. 2. But though this, I think, be very evident, yet it is scarce credible that David, after he was set upon the Throne of GOD in Peace, did not take Care to settle these Courts, as he did to regulate a great many other Things. And indeed we find a plain Intimation of it in 1 Chron. xxvi. 29. but succeeding Kings, it is probable, were negligent in keeping up this Constitution, till the Time of Jehoshaphat, who exercised his Authority to enforce the exact Practice of this Law.

And they shall judge the People with just Judgment.] According to the Rules of this Law. The Judges, saith R. Solomon, were to judge the People; and the Officers, to contrain them to do as the Judges commanded.

Ver. 19. Thou shalt not wrest Judgment,] See Exod. xxiii. 6.

Thou shalt not respect Persons,] See Levit. xix. 15. and Deut. i. 17.

Neither take a Gift; for a Gift doth blind the Eyes of the Wise, and pervert the Words of the Righteous.] The very same is said, Exod. xxiii. 8.

Ver. 20. That which is altogether just, shalt thou follow;] The Words in the Hebrew are far more emphatical, (as they are in the Margin) Justice, Justice shalt thou follow. Mind nothing but the Justice of the Cause, and do it to all Persons equally.

That

That thou mayst live, and inherit the Land, which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee.] Be happy, and continue long in the Land of Canaan: for nothing contributes more to the Establishment of a Government, than the exact and impartial Administration of Justice.

Ver. 21. Thou shalt not plant thee a Grove of any Trees near unto the Altar of the LORD thy GOD, which thou shalt make thee.] It is evident from this, that his great Aim is to keep them from Idolatry; which he still pursues, as he hath done from the Beginning of his Exhortation in this Book. And their History teaches us, that it was very needful to inculcate this so often; for notwithstanding all that Moses could say, they fell immediately after Joshua's Death into the idolatrous Customs of Canaan, and could never be wholly purged from their Idolatry till the Captivity of Babylon. And these Words may be translated, Thou shalt not plant thee a Grove, nor make any Wood, (i. e. a wooden Image) near to the Altar of the LORD thy GOD: so the LXX. For the very Word we translate Grove, sometimes imports the Idol of the Grove, as well as the Grove itself: see 2 Kings xxiii. 6. and Selden de Diis Syris, Syntagma ii. cap. 2. Certain it is, that nothing was more ancient in the East, than Altars with Groves of Trees about them; which made the Place very shady and delightful in those hot Countries. They are so often joined in Scripture, that it would be tedious to number all the Places, Exod. xxxi. 13. Deut. xii. 3. Judges vi. 25, &c. Cadmus is thought by some to have brought this Custom into Greece out of the East. And they planted the Trees so thick, and they were so large and shady, as to make the Place very dark and solemn; whereby a kind of Horror was struck into those who went into them. And they became hereby the fitter for the Devil to play his Pranks there; and for the Practice of those obscene and uncouth Rites, whereby he was worshipped: For the Gentile Custom had made these Places proper to the infernal Gods, and anciently consecrated them as Sepulchres or Temples for their Heroes. That the Israelites therefore might be preserved from sacrificing to the Dead, and from filthy Lufts, (by both which they afterwards polluted themselves) they are forbidden to place a Grove near to GOD's Altar, nay, so much as any Tree, (as the Words may be translated); for the Heathen thought there was a Sacredness in Trees themselves, which they dedicated to their Gods, and honoured several Ways: see xii. 2, 3. And therefore the Jews say they might not plant Trees in the Court of the Temple, or in the Mountain of the House, (as they call it) for the Ornament or Beauty of GOD's House. And they gave this Reason for it, because it was an idolatrous Rite to plant Trees near their Altars, that the People might there meet together. See Selden lib. ii. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. vi. p. 186. and Dr. Spencer, lib. ii. cap. 16. sect. 1, 2. And more lately Ezekiel Spanhemius (in his most learned Observations upon Callimachus) hath shewn, that they planted odoriferous Trees in some Groves, to make them more inviting. Whence the Grove dedicated to Pallas is called by that Poet τειθυμῶντος ἄλσος, though that may signify only a Grove consecrated by many Sacrifices. And the vulgar Groves were planted with Pines, Fir-Trees, Cypress, Laurel, Olives, Vines, and other lovely Trees, especially Oaks, which grew to a great Height, in which both Altars and Temples were erected: see in Hymn. in Dianam, ver. 38. p. 156. and in Palladem, ver. 61. p. 595. and in Cererem, ver. 38, 39. p. 689. where he mentions the Black Poplar, as a Tree of which her Grove consisted, under the Shade of which the Nymphs delighted to dance at Noon. And thence these shady Places, consecrated to their Gods, were called φυτνῖνες, because of their refreshing Coolness, as he observes out of Athenæus ad ver. 47. p. 695. And indeed nothing is plainer in the holy Scripture, than that these Groves related to Idolatry; for all pious Princes took them away, and bad ones planted them: see 1 Kings xviii. 4. 2 Kings xxiii. 14. 2 Chron. xiv. 3. xv. 16. And they are frequently joined with Statues and Images, both here, and vii. 5. xii. 3. 1 Kings xiv. 23, &c.

Ver. 22. Neither shalt thou set thee up any Image,] The Hebrew Word Matzebah is commonly translated by the LXX, στάλη, a Pillar; and so we translate it in the Margin: For, as it was unlawful to set up the Statue of a Man, or any other Creature, so it was as contrary to Religion to set up a Pillar, or an Altar, or any such-like Structure, for Publick Assemblies to be held about them, tho' they worshipped there the true GOD. So Maimonides reports the Sense of their Doctors; A Statue or Pillar signifies any Work raised up, that religious Assemblies may be made there, tho' they be for the Worship of the divine Majesty; for this is a Practice among Idolaters: And so Pausanius confesses, (in Achaicis) that in the most ancient Times, among all the Grecians, τῶνδε θεῶν διτὶ ἀγαλμάτων ἔχον ἀργοὶ λίθοι, rude Stones had divine Honours given them, instead of Statues or Images: see Selden, lib. ii. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 6. in the Beginning. And Maimonides, of the Worship of the Planets, cap. 6. sect. 8, 9, 10. and Dionys. Vossius's Annotations there.

Which the LORD thy GOD hateth.] Hence it sufficiently appears, that this was an idolatrous Practice; which is more odious to GOD than any Thing else. And thus the Israelites, we see, understood it, being ready to take Arms against their Brethren on the other Side Jordan, when they heard they had erected an Altar there (taking it to be such a Structure as is here forbidden); but, were appeased, when they understood, that it was not intended for Worship, Josb. xxii. 18.

CHAP. XVII.

Verse 1. Thou shalt not sacrifice unto the LORD thy GOD any Bullock, or Sheep, wherein is Blemish,] Having warned them, as he had done often, against idolatrous Practices, he here interposes a Caution against Profaneness in the Worship of the true GOD: for it was a great Disrespect to him, to offer him any Thing that was not perfect, the Heathens being ashamed of such Sacrifices.

Wherein

Wherein is Blemish,] Of this see Levit. xxii. 20, &c.

Or any Evil-favouredness;] In the Hebrew, any evil Thing, or Matter; that is, if it had any Disease, or was sick.

For that is an Abomination unto the LORD thy GOD.] This is more than is said in Leviticus, where the Words are, for it shall not be acceptable for you. For here he expresses the greatest Disdain and Abhorrence of such Sacrifices.

Ver. 2. If there be found among you, within any of thy Gates, which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee.] In any Cities or Towns within their Country.

Man or Woman, that hath wrought Wickedness in the Sight of the LORD thy GOD,] Now he returns to the Business of Idolatry; which is the Wickedness here said to be wrought, as appears by the next Words.

In transgressing his Covenant;] For this was the principal Part of the Covenant, that they should have no other Gods but him, Exod. xx. 22, 23. Upon this all depended; so that the whole Covenant was void, if they served other Gods. Which was so foul a Sin, that he would have none spared, who were guilty of it. Which is the Reason, as Maimonides thinks, (More Nivochim, P. iii. cap. xxxvii.) why he here saith, Man or Woman, because Men are naturally more tender towards the Female Sex, and inclinable to be favourable to them; against which he warns them in Case of Idolatry, and of profaning the Sabbath; in which two Cases only he uses these Words.

He had shewn in the thirteenth Chapter, what they should do with him that seduced others to Idolatry, whether he were a pretended Prophet, or a private Man, ver. 1, 9, 10. And then what should be done with a whole City that was seduced, ver. 12, 13, &c. And now he shews how they should proceed against any particular Person who apostatized from GOD.

Ver. 3. And hath gone and served other Gods, and worshipped them, either the Sun, or Moon, or any of the Host of Heaven,] The most antient Idolatry (of which Abarbinel makes Account there were ten sorts) was the Worship of the heavenly Bodies, as I have observed before, iv. 19. and see Job xxxi. 26. The fore-named Doctor indeed places first the Worship of Angels; about which I will not dispute, but only observe, that by condemning those who worshipped the Host of Heaven, tho' very glorious Creatures, Moses suggests plainly enough how vile they were who worshipped Images of Wood and Stone.

Which I have not commanded;] This is a Way of speaking in this Language, importing the quite contrary, which God hath forbidden, and that most strictly: see Prov. xvii. 21. xxiv. 23. and many other Places.

Ver. 4. And it be told thee,] Thou hast had Information of such Wickedness.

And thou hast heard it, and inquired diligently,] Upon Information they were to make diligent Search, whether the Report were true, or no.

And behold it be true, and the Thing certain,] They were not to proceed upon Rumours, nor yet to flight them; but endeavour to be satisffied, whether or no there was Ground for them; and if upon Examination they found there was no Doubt of the Truth of the Thing, to do as is here directed.

That such Abomination is wrought in Israel;] So Idolatry is frequently called: see xiii. 14.

Ver. 5. Then shalt thou bring forth that Man or that Woman, which have committed that wicked Thing, unto thy Gates,] Set them before the Court of Judgment in the City to which they belonged, (see xvi. 18.) For particular Persons were tried and sentenced in the lower Courts; but a Tribe or a City, accused of Idolatry, only by the highest Court of all; as Maimonides and the rest of the Jewish Doctors inform us: see Selden, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 4. n. 3. and cap. 5. n. 1.

And shalt stone them with Stones, till they die.] This was the Punishment of a particular Person, as a City fallen to Idolatry was to be killed with the Sword; and a false Prophet, who seduced others to Idolatry, to be strangled: see xiii. 5.

Ver. 6. At the Mouth of two Witnesses, or three Witnesses, shall be that is worthy of Death be put to Death;] No Man could be convicted but by two Witnesses at least, and those of a competent Age, of good Fame, and not convicted themselves of having borne false Witness, &c. Many other Qualifications of lesser Moment, the Jews required in a Witness; which Mr. Selden reports, and the Reason of them, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 13. n. 11.

But at the Mouth of one Witness he shall not be put to Death.] Because, tho' the Witness was never so credible, it was possible he might be mistaken. But it was not likely, that two or three honest Men, agreeing in the same Testimony, should all be deceived. Yet in pecuniary Matters, the Hebrew Doctors say, the Testimony of one credible Witness was sufficient to put a Man to his Oath for his Purgation. And they set a Mark of Infamy upon him, who, in such Matters as are here spoken of, had such a single Witness against him: see Maccoth, cap. 1. sect. 8. and J. Coch. his Annotations there.

Ver. 7. The Hands of the Witnesses shall be first upon him, to put him to Death,] This was great Reason, that they might thereby still confirm the Truth and Certainty of their Testimony, by being the first Executioners of the Sentence; which no Men would easily venture to be, who were not sure they had testified the Truth.

And afterward the Hands of all the People.] From hence some infer, that he was to be put to Death at a publick Feast.

So shalt thou put the Evil away from among you.] See xiii. 5.

Ver. 8. If there arise a Matter too hard for thee in Judgment,] Now he returns to speak of the Courts of Judgment, which he had ordered to be erected in all their Cities, when they came into the Land of Canaan (xvi. 18.) who might find some Causes to be so difficult, that they could not determine them.

Between Blood and Blood,] The Jews, I think, interpret this absurdly concerning menstruous Women, and the Tokens of Virginity, (See (See Mr. Selden, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 2.) when there is a plain and obvious Meaning of these Words, That there might be a Doubt whether a Man had committed wilful Murder, or only casual; and consequently, whether he should have the Benefit of the City of Refuge, or be taken from it.

[Between Plea and Plea,] As the former Words belong to criminal Causes, so these to civil; such as Suits about Debts, or Purchases of Lands or Houses, &c.

[And between Stroke and Stroke.] It doth not seem reasonable to me, that this should be interpreted of the Leprosy, (which is often called a Plague, or Stroke) tho' the Jews so understand it; for that was to be judged solely by the Priests, whereas he speaks also of other Judges: therefore the Meaning is, concerning any Wound or Hurt that was done to a Man in his Body. About which if the Judges could not agree, but were divided in their Opinions, either about the Fact itself, or about the Punishment to be inflicted, an Appeal was to be made to an higher Court.

[Being Matters of Controversy] Or Contention and Strife, that is, Disputes arising about them, which could not be determined by the Judges in those Courts below.

[Within thy Gates,] Where GOD commanded Judges and Officers to be settled, xvi. 18. And therefore here he speaks of the inferior Courts of Judgment, that were in the lesser Cities of their several Tribes.

[Then shalt thou arise, and get thee up into the Place which the LORD thy GOD shall choose.] Where the supreme Court was settled in the chief City of the Kingdom. While they continued in the Wilderness, the Captains of Thousands, and Hundreds, and Fifties, and Tens, (whom Moses constituted by the Advice of Jethro) judged the Causes of the People under Moses himself, to whom GOD joined seventy Persons for his Assistance; all hard Causes being brought before him. But this Authority of the Captains lasted no longer than during their Pilgrimage in the Wilderness; for when they came to Canaan, the Law, as I now observed, required Judges and Officers to be ordained in every City; who, if there fell any Difference about the Law, are here ordered to repair to the Place where the Sanctuary was, for there the highest Court sat, as the Successors of Moses, and his Consistory of seventy Elders, (mentioned Numb. xi. 16, 24, &c.) who judged all difficult Causes while he lived.

Ver. 9. And thou shalt come unto the Priests, the Levites, and unto the Judge] Who must be supposed to be resident in this Place, where the Sanctuary was. And these Words, the Priests, the Levites, the Jews understand as if he had said, the Priests of the Tribe of Levi, or the Sons of Levi; for so he speaks in xxi. 5. And Mr. Selden produces a great many other Instances of the like Phrase; (lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 8. n. 2, 3.) and shews they are so described (as the Jews think) to exclude all others that had been Priests, before GOD took the Sons of Aaron peculiarly to serve him in this Office. But the Levites, as well as Priests, they unanimously agree, were capable to be Members of this great Sanhedrim; which, they all likewise say, did not consist only of Priests and Levites, but of any other Persons of other Tribes, who were fit to be promoted to this Dignity. Nay, they say, if there was not one Priest or Levite in the Court, it was a lawful Judicature; for the High-priest himself, no more than any Man else, had a Place here, merely for his Birth, unless his Learning in the Law was answerable: so Maimonides and others. And those other Members, who were not Priests nor Levites, they think are comprehended under the Word Judges, which, tho' it be in the singular Number, may be thought to signify more than one, as appears from xix. 17. where it is said expressly, they shall bring the Controversy there mentioned, before the Priests and the Judges. And farther, that Judge, after the Manner of this Language, may signify Judges, Constantine L'Empereur gathers from ver. 12. where Priest in the singular Number is used for those who are here called Priests in the plural, Annot. in Corn. Bertram. p. 389.

But howsoever this be, it seems to me, that tho' the Priests and Levites were not the only Persons of whom this high Court consisted, (the Members of which might be chosen out of any Tribe, where they could find Men qualified) yet they are here first mentioned, because they were likely to be the most capable Persons to exercise this Authority, especially in the first Constitution of this Commonwealth, when they were newly entred into Canaan. For all other Persons were then busily employed in looking after the Inheritance that was fallen to them, and settling the Affairs of their several Families, whereby they were rendered less able to attend unto this weighty Office. But the Tribe of Levi having no Inheritance among them, (as is often repeated in these Books) and no Care about Husbandry, and such-like Affairs, had a full Leisure both to study the Laws of GOD, and to judge according to them; especially being appointed by GOD to teach Jacob his Judgments, and Israel his Law, xxxiii. 10. Besides, this Court being settled at the Place of GOD's Worship, where a great many Priests and Levites always necessarily attended, they were most ready, without any Inconvenience to themselves, to execute this Office of Judges, having their Maintenance from the Publick, which no other Persons had. But otherwise, as I said, they had no more Right than other Men, to be Members of this Court, which we cannot certainly say consisted of seventy Judges, together with their Nasi, i. e. their Prince, or President; nor that they always sat at the Place here appointed; for there were sometimes great Troubles in the Land, and they were under the Power of their Enemies, which extremely disturbed their Government, and made it necessary for GOD to raise them up extraordinary Judges, because the Power of this Court was broken in Pieces. So Mr. Selden himself acknowledges, that there were great Intermissions of their sitting in the Times of Antiochus Epiphanes, and of Herod the Great, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 14. n. 3. And therefore why not in the Times when they were oppressed by the Moabites, Ammonites, Philistines, lines, and other cruel Neighbours in the Days of the Judges? And thus Grotius, Hermannus Conringius, (to name no more) here understand the Word Judge, who is join'd with the Priest and Levites.

And unto the Judge] The forenamed Authors thus translate this Verse, Thou shalt come unto the Priests, the Levites, or unto the Judge that shall be in those Days. Where by Judge they understand such as Othniel, Ebud, Gideon, Jephtah, Samson, Samuel, and others, whom GOD raised up, when they were oppressed by their Enemies, and in great Confusion, to govern his People; which they did with the highest Authority, being equal to Kings, save only that they kept not Royal State or Equipage, but are plainly called by that Name, Jud. xvii. 6. xix. 1. xxi. 25. Now, tho' the Priests and Levites (i. e. that Court, of which they made a considerable Part) were the ordinary supreme Judges of Controversies, yet the JUDGE, when GOD raised one up, was endued with an extraordinary Power above theirs; to whom the People therefore resorted for his Decision. For just as all ordinary Magistrates among the Romans gave Place to a Dictator, when they had one, so all the Hebrew Magistrates did to such a JUDGE, when GOD appointed him, who determined all manner of Controversies, as at other Times, the other Judges, whether Priests or others, were wont to do: see Herman. Conringius de Repub. Ebraeorum, sect. 39.

I know but one Objection against this, which is, that those extraordinary Judges were not fixed, as far as we can find, in the Place where the Sanctuary was; unless we may judge of all the rest by Eli and Samuel, who seem to have been settled there. But we must consider, that they were not confined by their Commission, which was not grounded on this Law, to any one certain Place, but left at Liberty to live where they thought most convenient, for the Discharge of their Trust, in the Reformation of the People. And the Truth of what I said concerning their supreme Power, plainly appears in Samuel, who went up and down the Country executing Judgment, when Shilo was destroyed, and had no Court, like that which the Jews speak of, to assist him. But when he needed Assistance, he appointed his Sons to be Judges, 1 Sam. viii. 1. of whom when the Elders complained, ver. 4. because they did not discharge their Duty well, it was to himself, and not to any other Persons; and they desire not a Sanhedrim, but a King to judge them, ver. 5. Which Petition we do not find that he communicated to the Sanhedrim, but only unto GOD; nor is any Mention made of them in the Choice of a King, or after he was chosen, in the History of their Kings, till Jehoshaphat's Time, no more than there is in the Book of Joshua and Judges; where we read, that when there was no King (that is, Judge) in Israel, every Man did what was Right in his own Eyes; which is a Sign that there wanted such a Court to keep them in Order. After the Time of Jehoshaphat, who settled Judges in every City, (as I observed xvi. 18.) they continued, it is plain, till the Captivity; but what Number there was of them, we do not know.

After the Captivity, Ezra and Nehemiah seem to have done all themselves, (see Neb. ix. and x.) Which makes it very probable, that tho' there were Judges appointed according to the Direction of this Law, yet the Exercise of their Power was often interrupted by the great Changes which were in that Nation; and that there was no such Sanhedrim as the Talmudists describe, till the Time of the Maccabees. For the very Name of Sanhedrim plainly shews its Original to have been, when the Greek Tongue was common among the Jews; and that was, when the Kings of Syria and Egypt (who were of the Macedonian Race) had the chief Power in Palestine; see Conringius, in the forenamed Book, sect. 37.

And inquire;] They were to lay the Cause before this high Court, and desire their Opinion in it.

And they shall shew thee the Sentence of Judgment.] They were bound to determine the Controversy; and whatsoever Sentence they gave, it was to stand good, till it was reversed by other Judges of the same Authority: for the Jews (who understand all this of the great Sanhedrim, and scan every Syllable with great Nicety) will have the Words just before (that shall be in those Days) to signify, that every Sentence must hold in the Time when it is given: so that if this Court determined a Matter, which in After-times, by other Judges of the same Court, should be judged otherways, that second Sentence was to stand, being the Opinion of those Days. For this Sentence was, in their Judgment, the Meaning of the Law, by which they were all to be governed; and, if there was no Tradition in the Case, they judged themselves as well as they could.

Ver. 10. And thou shalt do according to the Sentence which they of that Place,] That is, the high Court which sits there, or the Judge who is in those Days.

Which the LORD shall choose,] The Jews, who understand this only of the Sanhedrim, say it was not lawful for them to judge Causes, at least, not those which were capital, in any other Place: see Selden, lib. ii. de Synedrui, cap. 15. n. 6, 7, 10.

Shall shew thee;] Shall pronounce.

And they shall observe to do according to all that they inform thee:] Some fancy that he speaks to the inferior Judges, who brought the Cause thither to have the Opinion of this highest Court, who were then to pronounce Sentence according to it; but whoever brought the Controversy before this Court, (when the inferior could not determine it) they gave the Sentence, in which he requires the contending Parties to acquiesce, and to do according to their Determination; which did not concern Questions of Faith, as if Men were to believe whatsoever they should teach them, but such Controversies are mentioned ver. 8. about civil or criminal Matters, which they were finally to determine; so that Men should not farther controvert the Matter, but rest in their Decisions. For in all Governments there must be an End of Suits, somewhere or other; and GOD required all his People to submit to the Sentence of this Court: for so the Words run in the Hebrew,

Hebrew, And thou shalt do according to the Sentence which they shall shew thee, from the Place which the LORD thy GOD shall choose; that is, from the supreme Court of Judicature, which resided where GOD himself did. For if Men had been permitted to disagree to their Sentence, the very End and Use of this Court had been taken away; as Maimonides speaks, in his More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 41.

Ver. 11. According to the Sentence of the Law which they shall teach thee,] In the Hebrew, according to the Mouth, or the Word of the Law, which they shall teach there; that is, according to the Interpretation which they gave of the Law.

And according to the Judgment which they shall tell thee,] That is, according to the Order or Decree which they made thereupon.

Thou shalt do:] Pay, suppose, the Money, which they judged to be due to another Man: for he doth not speak of their doing whatsoever they bad them, (as if they could controul the Commands of GOD) but of obeying the Sentence of this Court, about those Matters which were in question between one Man and another, ver. 8. who were not to be Judges in their own Case, but rest in the Judgment of those whom GOD had made the supreme Interpreters of his Law.

Thou shalt not decline from the Sentence which they shall shew thee, &c.] They were not to make the least Alteration in their Sentence: for tho' they might think it was wrong, and the Senate perhaps did really err, and be better informed afterwards, (which the Law supposes, and in that Case orders an expiatory Sacrifice, Levit. iv. 13.) yet it was not lawful for any Man to act contrary to their present Decree, nor to teach the contrary, whatsoever his private Opinion might be.

Ver. 12. And the Man that will do presumptuously, and will not hearken] This they understand not barely of a private Man, that would not stand to their Sentence, but of an Elder, or inferior Judge, who presumed to contradict it; as Mr. Selden shews, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 3.

Unto the Priest, &c.] It is commonly thought, as I observed, ver. 8. that the singular Number is here put for the plural; and that the Meaning is, if any Man would not hearken to the highest Court of Judgment, which consisted commonly of a great many Priests, he should die for his Contempt: but they have a great deal of Reason on their Side, who insist upon the Letter of this Word Priest, and of that which follows, or the Judge, (understanding both of single Persons) and take the High-priest only to be here meant; who seems to be described in the next Words, that standeth to minister there before the LORD thy GOD. For when GOD did not raise up a Judge to govern his People, the High-priest was the supreme Governor under GOD until the Days of David; and so they were after the Captivity. Hence it is, as Grotius observes, (Lib. de Imperio Summarum Potestatum circa Sacra, cap. 9. sect. 4.) that COHEN is a Name common to Priests and Princes: for among a great many Nations anciently, he shews, the Priests had the highest Power; particularly among the Cappadocians; (Strabo, who was of that Country, saith) "The sacerdotal Dignity was next to the regal;" but howsoever this Word be interpreted, the Crime here mentioned was Contumacy, in not submitting to the Sentence of the highest Authority, whether it were vested in one Person, or more; whereby the Government was in Danger to be broken; and therefore GOD orders such a Person to be put to Death.

Or unto the Judge,] See before, ver. 9.

Even that Man shall die,] The Jews who interpret this, as I said, of a Judge in inferior Courts, who presumed to contradict the Judgment of the supreme Court, have tempered the Severity of this Law, by several Explications and Exceptions; which have regard either to the Manner of passing this Decree by the highest Court, which an inferior disobeyed; and that was when a Cause came before them upon an Appeal, (for it was not so criminal to disobey every Sentence of the supreme Court, but only such as these) or to the Place where it was made, which was to be no-where else, but at GOD's Dwelling-place, or to the Things about which the Decree was made; which some will have to be only weighty Matters: and the Act of Contumacy also was consider'd; for he was not put to Death, they say, unless in open Court he declared a contrary Sentence. The Death he suffered was strangling, and he could suffer in no other Place, but where this high Court sat: see Selden of all these, in the Place before-mentioned, n. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. And it may be farther observed, that the Prophets themselves were subject to the Power and Jurisdiction of this high Court, by whom they might be sentenced to capital Punishment, if they taught contrary to the Law of GOD. But our Mr. Thorndike makes a Doubt, whether the Constitution which the Jewish Writers mention about a rebellious Elder, (as they call him who taught any Thing contrary to the Determination of this supreme Court) was ever in Force, or no? For it was made because of the Differences between the Schools of Hillel and Sammai, who lived not long before our Saviour's Time; when, it appears by the Gospel, that Nation had lost the Power of Life and Death: see Rights of the Church, cap. 5. p. 256.

And thou shalt put away the Evil from Israel,] This may refer either to the evil Person, or to the great Scandal and dangerous Example he gave, by resisting the highest Authority, and thereby breaking the Bond of Unity and Peace.

Ver. 13. And all the People shall bear and fear, and do no more presumptuously,] This Punishment was intended to strike a Terror into all the People, that they should not adventure to oppose the supreme Authority. And for this End, the Offender was to be kept in Custody, as R. Aquiba understood this, till the next great Feast, (either of the Passover, or Pentecost, or Tabernacles) and then executed, when the whole Nation, i. e. all the Males were present. This Mr. Selden observes (in the fore-named Place, n. 7.) is the most received Opinion; tho' R. Jebuda saith, they did not make the Sentence sharper by a long Delay, but executed it presently: and for the farther Publication of it, they sent Letters to all the Tribes and Cities of Israel, to give Notice that such a Man was executed at such a Time for this Crime; see Selden there, n. 8.

Ver. 14. When thou art come into the Land which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein,] When they had conquered the Land of Canaan, and were settled in it.

And shalt say, I will set a King over me,] The Jews commonly, from this and the next Verse, fancy that GOD commanded them to make a King when they came to the Land of Canaan, and had a quiet Possession of it, following herein the Gemara of the Sanhedrim, cap. 2. inasmuch that they have presumed to make this an affirmative Precept, a King of the People should be chosen; and quote this Place for it. To which some learned Men among Christians have seemed to incline; particularly Petrus Cunæus, lib. ii. de Republ. Hebr. cap. 14. and Guil. Schickardus, in his Jus Regium, cap. 1. Theor. 1. But Abarbinel himself contradicts this; and so doth Josephus, who observes that GOD intended they should keep their present Government; but if they would have a King, he should be one of their Brethren. For thus he interprets this Place, lib. i. Antiq. cap. 8. that they should not affect any other Government, but love the present, having the Laws for their Master, and living according to them; ἀρκούν δὲ οὐ θεὸς ἡγεμὸν ἔχει, for it is sufficient that GOD is your Ruler. And then he adds, But if you desire to have a King, ἐὰν μὲν ἴτεσθε βασιλεύουσιν, let him be one of your own Nation, as it here follows in the next Verse.

Like as all the Nations that are about me,] Such as the Edomites, who had been governed by Kings before the Days of Moses: see Gen. xxxvi. 31.

Ver. 15. Thou shalt in any wise set him King over thee,] Install, and receive him into the Throne.

Whom the LORD thy GOD shall choose:] They could not elect whom they pleased, but the first King, at least, was to be appointed by GOD himself, who was their supreme Governor. So the People understood it, when they desired Samuel, who was their chief Ruler under GOD, to make them a King, (1 Sam. viii. 5.) but durst not to presume to set one up of themselves. And to confirm them in this Opinion, Samuel saith to Saul, 1 Sam. x. 1. The LORD hath anointed thee to be Captain over his Inheritance; and saith to all the People, ver. 24. See ye him whom the LORD hath chosen. And accordingly when the Lot was to be cast, to shew who was to be their King, Samuel bids all the Tribes present themselves before the LORD, ver. 19. And when it fell upon Saul, and they could not find him, they inquired of the LORD, and the LORD answered where he was, ver. 22. In like Manner, when Saul was rejected, the LORD himself appointed David to be anointed their King; and settled that Authority in his Family. And to determine which of his Sons should have it, GOD himself appointed his immediate Successor, viz. Solomon: for so David declares to all the Princes, and the great Men, whom he assembled before his Death;

Of all my Sons, the LORD hath chosen Solomon to sit upon the Throne of the Kingdom of the LORD GOD of Israel, 1 Chron. xxviii. 5. And again, xxix. 1. David said unto all the Congregation, Solomon my Son, whom alone GOD hath chosen, is yet young, &c. But tho' it was thus in the Beginning of this Kingdom, yet GOD intended at length to make it hereditary, as appears from ver. 20. of this Chapter.

One from among thy Brethren shalt thou set King over thee:] i. e. saith the Tradition, mentioned by the Jews out of Tosiphta, the most select and choice Person that could be found, not one of mean Extraction or Employment. This they fancy is meant by, from among thy Brethren.

Thou mayst not set a Stranger over thee, which is not thy Brother.] This the Jews extend to all Offices whatsoever, as Maimonides reports their Sense: see Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 20. p. 647. And by thy Brother some of them understand one that was an Israelite, both by Father and Mother; tho' others think it sufficient, if a King was an Israelite by the Mother's Side: see there, cap. 22. which in his Book de Succession. ad Pontificat. lib. ii. he shews was sufficient for any Dignity among the Israelites, but only the Priesthood. See also lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 9. n. 6. where he observes the Talmudists say, the great Sanhedrim was to see that no King but one thus qualified was set over the People; which, when their was such a Court, may be allowed to be true; tho' all the Power which they ascribe to their Sanhedrim over their Kings, is by no Means to be admitted; but is an apparent Figment: for it is manifest out of the Bible, that their Kings had that very Power which they ascribe to the Sanhedrim; particularly, it is notorious that Solomon, by his own Power, put Abiathar out of the Office of High-priest, 1 Kings ii. 6, 26. which Judgment the Talmudists say belonged only to the great Sanhedrim. In like Manner other Kings judged Prophets; which they appropriate to the same Court.

Ver. 16. But he shall not multiply Horses to himself,] There is no certain Number determined; but the Jews well resolve, that he was not to keep them for mere Pomp and State, but only so many as were for Use and Service; to draw his Chariot, for instance, and for the Guard of his Person; but he was to take Care that he did not burden his People by too many, under this, or any other Pretence: and therefore not to keep up a Body of Horse for War. For among the Jews their Armies consisted altogether of Foot-men; there being no Breed of Horses in that Country; and their People, who were all Husbandmen and Shepherds, being accustomed to Labour, and to run as swiftly as a Horse, 2 Sam. ii. 18. xviii. 19, 22, &c. Certain it is, that in the Days of David they had no Horsemen in their Army; for when Abisalom lost the Battle and fled, it was upon a Mule that he endeavoured to make his Escape. And tho' Solomon was so prodigiously rich, that he was able to maintain Forty thousand Stalls of Horses for his Chariots, and twelve thousand Horse-men, (1 Kings iv. 26.) yet succeeding Kings could not keep up such an Expence; but, when they had Occasion, sent for Succours from Egypt, which which commonly consisted of Horfe-men. Now one of the Reasons the Jews give, why their King was not to multiply Horses, is, lest he should be puffed up with Pride; for an Horfe being a stately Creature, his Rider is often swoln with an high Conceit of himself, as more than one of the Heathen have observed: see Bochart, in his Hieroicoicon, lib. ii. cap. 9. Nachmanides gives another good Reason, Lest he should confide and trust in the Power of his Horfe-men, more than in GOD: see Schickard, in his Mischpat Hammelech, cap. 3. Theorem 10. But the chief Reason is given by Moses himself in the next Words, Lest they should be tempted to go to Egypt, with which Country it was dangerous to have Familiarity.

Nor cause the People to return to Egypt, to the end that he should multiply Horses:] Send his People thither to buy Horses for him, it being a Country that abounded with them, as Judea did with Asses. For when Shefbak, King of Egypt, (whom the Greek Writers call Sesotris) came against Jerusalem, there were Threescore thousand Horfe-men in his Army, 2 Chron. xii. 3. Which shews how they abounded with Horses in that Country in those Days, tho' in After-times they did not care to breed them. They might indeed have Horses out of other Countries as well as Egypt, but not so easily, nor so good: which made Solomon send thither, and Pharaoh set a great Price upon them; because he knew their Value, and that they could not furnish themselves so easily with them elsewhere, 1 Kings x. 28, 29.

Forasmuch as the LORD hath said unto you, Ye shall henceforth return no more that Way:] Or the first Words may be render'd, Forasmuch as the LORD saith unto you, &c. as he did now by him, that they should not maintain Traffick with the Egyptians, at least while they continued Idolaters. We read, indeed, that many Jews went thither, and Urijah the Prophet fled thither, Jerem. xxvi. 21. of which the Jews give this Account: First, Some say this was but a temporary Constitution, which was not to last always. Secondly, They distinguish about the Way of returning thither; conceiving that they might not go thither out of the Land of Israel, but they might out of another Country whither they were driven. Maimonides thinks they might go thither as Merchants, but not fix their Dwelling there. But the true Meaning is, that they might not voluntarily go thither upon any Account, at least while they remained, as I said, so corrupted in their Religion and Manners, as they were at this present: for there is an expresse Law, Levit. xviii. 3. According to the Works of the Egyptians ye shall not do. See Schickardus, in the fore-named Place, p. 78. Whence those Words of the Prophet Isaiab, where, when he saith the Land of Israel was full of Horses, he adds, their Land also is full of Idols, Isaiab ii. 7, 8. For by multiplying the one, they multiplied the other. And therefore, tho' David did reserve some Chariots and Horfe-men, which he took in his Conquests, for his own Use, yet no great Number, 2 Sam. viii. 4. But still great Men rode upon Mules (2 Sam. xviii. 9. 1 Kings i. 33, 38, 41.) as they had done in the Days of the Judges, v. 10. x. 4. xii. 14.

Ver. 17. Neither shall he multiply Wives to himself,] This is not a Prohibition to take more Wives than one, but not to have an excessive Number, after the Manner of the Eastern Kings, whom Solomon seems to have imitated: I see no Ground for what the Jews say, that he might have Eighteen: see Schickard, in the Book above-named, cap. 3. Theor. 9. Selden's Uxor. Hebr. lib. i. cap. 8. Buxtorf. de Sponsal. Pars i. sect. 40. For the Proof which R. Solomon and Bechin give of it, is very weak; which is, That David having already six Wives, (2 Sam. v. 13.) the Prophet tells him, if he had not offended GOD, he would moreover have given him such and such Things, i. e. say they, twice as many Wives, 2 Sam. xii. 8. Much less is there any Ground for what they say, That if he took more than his Number, he was to be scourged by the Authority of the Sanhedrim, as he was, they pretend, for the Breach of any of these Precepts here mentioned: see Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 9. n. 5. Which Grotius indeed endeavours to soften, by affirming, that these Lashes were no Disgrace to him, because he received them voluntarily, in Token of his Repentance; and therefore was not scourged by the common Executioner, but by such a Person as he himself chose to give this Correction; and he received also such a Number of Stripes as he himself pleased, and no more, lib. i. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 3. sect. 20. But this is directly against Maimonides, who saith, in downright Words, that the Sanhedrim appointed this Chastisement; as Selden observes in another Place, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 9. n. 5. And there is no Example in the whole Book of GOD of any such Jurisdiction which the Sanhedrim had over their Kings; but all this may well be look'd upon as a mere Invention of the Jewish Doctors, to magnify the Power of their great Council.

That his Heart turn not away,] From all serious Business and Employment, whilst he was carefing and studying to please a Multitude of Women: some understand it, lest they turned their Heart away from GOD, and the Duties of Piety, of which there was great Danger, if he married Worshipers of strange Gods, as Solomon did. Otherwise, I should think it might be interpreted, of turning his Thoughts from minding his People, and their Good and Welfare; which must needs suffer much, when they were burdened with a great Company of Wives, who were to be richly maintained and provided for.

Neither shall he greatly multiply to himself Silver and Gold.] No more, saith the Sanhedrim (cap. 2.) than would pay Stipends to his Servants, &c. Others of them scan the Words more nicely, and observe, That, first, he is forbidden to multiply Gold and Silver greatly, that is, to content himself with moderate Riches, and not set himself to heap up Treasure, which could not be done commonly without great Oppression of his Subjects. And, secondly, he is forbidden to multiply them to himself: but for the publick Benefit he might lay up Money in the Treasury at the Temple, tho' in his own Coffers, for his private Interest, he might not: see Schickard in his Mischpat Hammelech, cap. 3. Theorem 11. where he produces their Answer to this Question, How should the King be able to manage a War, or do any other great Thing, if he did not furnish himself with good Store of Gold and Silver? He might, say they, fill the publick Exchequer, tho' not his own private Bags: And that for two Reasons; First, Lest he should wax proud and haughty, when his Purse swelled: And Secondly, Lest he should be tempted to squeeze his Subjects, and exact more from them than they were able to bear; as Rehoboam seems to have done, whose Treasurer the People stoned, 1 Kings xii. 18.

Ver. 18. And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the Throne of his Kingdom, that he shall write him a Copy of this Law in a Book.] Not only of this Book of Deuteronomy, but of the whole Law, and that with his own Hand, as a Means to fix it more in his Mind: insomuch that, tho' a Copy was left him by his Father, he was notwithstanding to transcribe one himself, as the Jews say; in the Gemara Sanhedrim, cap. 2. sect. 13. All this is very agreeable to these Words; but whether he was bound, if he had not written a Copy before he was King, (as every private Israelite, they say, was bound to do) to write two when he sat on the Throne, may be doubted; for it cannot, without Violence, be drawn from these Words; and their Authority is not sufficient to warrant it: they give, indeed, a plausible Reason for it, that the one he was to carry about with him whithersoever he went, and to read in the other at home: but why one Copy might not serve for both these Purposes, I do not see.

Out of that which is before the Priests the Levites.] He was not to write one Word of it out of his Memory merely, or any private Man's Copy, but out of the Book which was in the Sanctuary, where the Original and uncorrupted Copy was in the Custody of God's Ministers. There are a great many Rules the Jews give, about the right Writing of this Copy, which may be seen in Gril. Schickard's Mischpat Hammelech, cap. 2. Theorem 5.

Ver. 19. And it shall be with him,] Wheresoever he was, either in the Camp, or at Home, or in any other Place, provided it was pure, and free from Filth, as the Jews limit it: see there, Theor. 6.

And he shall read therein all the Days of his Life.] Diligently study it, not spending his Time, as Maimonides glosses, in drinking and making merry, but in learning the Law of God. See there, p. 53. From the Neglect of this Precept, their Kings became so ignorant of the Laws of God, and of their Obligation to observe them, that in the Days of the good King Josiah, he was strangely started at what he heard read out of this Book of the Law, when it was found in the Temple, where it had long lain without any Knowledge of it.

That he may learn to fear the Lord his God;] Be preserved in the true Religion.

To keep all the Words of this Law, and these Statutes, to do them;] Be acquainted with his whole Duty, and perform it constantly: see Jos. i. 8.

Ver. 20. That his Heart be not lifted up above his Brethren,] Not imagining himself to be above all Laws, nor slighting his Subjects, as unworthy of his Notice, but taking a due Care to promote their Happiness: "For as the Scripture, saith Maimonides, provided the King should have great Honour done him, obliging all to reverence him; so it commands him to be lowly in Heart, and not to carry himself insolently: Let him be gracious, and full of Clemency to Little and Great; so shall he go out, and come in, with the Love and good Wishes of them all." Unto which Nachmanides adds this pious Reflection, If the Scripture deters Kings from Pride and Haughtiness of Heart; how unbecoming is it in other Men, who are far inferior to them? &c.

And that he turn not aside from the Commandment to the Right-hand, or to the Left;] Neither by changing the Laws, on Pretence of making better; nor by abrogating them, on Pretence of their Inconveniency: but where the Divine Law was not clear, or where nothing was there defined, he might by his Authority make new Constitutions, as David and Solomon did, as well in sacred, as in civil Matters.

To the end that he may prolong his Days in his Kingdom; he, and his Children, in the midst of Israel.] This shews that God intended to establish a successive Right in that Family to which he chose to give the Kingdom, if they continued in a constant Observation of his Laws. And, indeed, there is no Way to establish and perpetuate a Family in the Throne, like the due Observation of Law, tho' they be but human, not divine Laws: for, as Aristotle truly said, He that commands the Law shall govern all, (i. e. all Things be ordered according to Law) ὁ νόμος κρατεῖν πάντων ὁ θεὸς ὁ τῶν νόμων, seems to command that God should rule, and the Laws: but he that bids a Man to rule without Laws, (according to his own Will) ἀνεσθῆναι νόμον, sets up a Beast to govern. And above all Things, he ought to endeavour to win the Love of his Subjects, by Humility and Clemency; as the same Aristotle taught Alexander, if we may believe R. Jedaiah, in his Book called Mibchar Happeninim, where he reports a Letter of his to that great Prince, advising him to gain the Affection of his People by a gentle Government, which is far better than to rule tyrannically by Force and Violence: For to what Purpose is it to have Possession of their Bodies, when the true Possession is to be Master of their Hearts? Get Possession of their Hearts by Clemency, and that will draw their Bodies along with them.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verse 1. THE Priests the Levites, and all the Tribe of Levi.] Or, even the whole Tribe of Levi: see xvii. 9.

Shall have no Part nor Inheritance with Israel;] As had been said Numb. xviii. 20. and here in this Book, x. 7. Which made it the more necessary, Moses should remind the People of that Maintenance God had appointed for them; which which unless it was duly given them, Religion could not be supported; and consequently the Government (of which he had been speaking) would be quite confounded.

They shall eat the Offerings of the LORD, made by Fire,] Not the Burnt-offerings, which were wholly God's; but all other Offerings, of which a Share was appointed for the Priests the Sons of Aaron, Numb. xviii. 9, 10, 11, 18, 19.

And his Inheritance.] That is, the Inheritance of the LORD, of whom he spoke before, who had reserved certain Oblations to himself, and bestowed them upon the Priests: they are mentioned Numb. xviii. 8, 9. and ver. 12, 13, 14, 15. where he first speaks of the First-fruits, and the First-born, which were all brought unto the LORD, and by him given to them. In like Manner, all the Tithes of the Land are said to be an Heave-offering unto the LORD, ver. 24. where he saith, [I have given them to the Levites to inherit.] So these two, The Offerings of the LORD made by Fire, and his Inheritance, comprehend all that belonged to his Ministers, whether Priests or Levites.

Ver. 2. Therefore shall they have no Inheritance among their Brethren; the LORD is their Inheritance, as he hath said unto them.] The LORD had given them that Part and Portion of the Offerings, which were peculiarly his own; and therefore is said to be their Inheritance, because they enjoyed his Inheritance, as these holy Things are called in the foregoing Words: see Numb. xviii. 20, 24. and Josh. xiii. 14, 33.

Ver. 3. And this shall be the Priests Due from the People,] Besides those Things that God gave them, which peculiarly belonged to him.

From them that offer a Sacrifice,] Of Peace-offerings, which are sometimes called simply a Sacrifice, (Levit. xvii. 5, 8. Numb. xv. 3.) in which the People had a considerable Interest.

Whether it be Ox, or Sheep:] Under Sheep are comprehended Goats also, as I have observed. See Levit. iii.

And they shall give unto the Priest the Shoulder,] Together with the Breast; as we read Levit. vii. 32, 33, 34.

And the two Cheeks, and the Maw.] These were not given to the Priests before, but were now added to their Portion, being accounted the best Part of the Beasts; for as the Cheeks were the best Part of the Head, and the Shoulder and Breast the best of the other Members of the Body, so the Maw was the principal Part of the Entrails, as Maimonides observes, P. iii. More Nevochim, cap. 39.

By the Maw is meant the Stomach; and in Beasts that chew the Cud, who have four Stomachs; that which is called by the Greeks μύσεν, viz. the lowest of them, which had this Name, because the Digestion which is begun in the other, is here perfected and completed: and it appears that this Part of the Entrails was accounted by the Antients a great Dainty, as Bochartus proves out of Aristophanes, in his Hierozoicon, P. i. lib. ii. cap. 45. p. 505.

Ver. 4. The First-fruit also of thy Corn, of thy Wine, and of thy Oil,] See Numb. xviii. 12. To which it may be useful to add this out of Maimonides, (who hath distinctly represented the Order wherein all Oblations were made) That after the Fruit of the Earth were gathered, every Man was bound to bring a fiftieth Part of them, as a First-fruit to the Priests, which was called Trumah gedolah, the great Oblation, of which Moses speaks in this Place: and next of all, he separated a tenth Part of the Whole from the rest, which was Maaßer Rishon, the first Tithe, and given to the Levites, Numb. xviii. 24. Then out of what remained, another tenth Part was taken, called Maaßer Sheni, the second Tithe, which was every third Year given to the Poor, and in the two intermediate Years, spent in Feasting at the House of God, Deut. xiv. 28. So that, for Instance, if a Man had pressed out an hundred and two Logs of Oil, he sent two of them as First-fruits to the Priest, and then ten more, as Tithe to the Levites, and deducted nine Parts: more out of the Residue for the Poor; by which it appears, that One and twenty Parts of an Hundred and two, that is, a fifth Part of the Whole, was separated for pious and charitable Uses: see Schickard, in his Jus Regium, cap. 4. Theorem 15.

And the First of the Fleece of thy Sheep shalt thou give him:] This is comprehended under First-fruits, but never particularly mentioned before now: And tho' the Quantity is not mentioned, yet the Jews have adventured to determine, that less than one Fleece in sixty was not accepted. For so they say of all other First-fruits, that a sixtieth Part of the Whole was the least that any Man gave; and he was accounted a covetous Man, if he gave no more; they that were indifferently good, giving a fiftieth Part, and liberal Persons the fortieth. By this Means the Priests were provided with Cloaths, as by other Offerings with Food. And the Wool also, as they call it, of Goats (which were shorn in these Countries) is comprehended under the Fleece of Sheep.

Ver. 5. For the LORD thy God hath chosen him out of all thy Tribes, to stand to minister in the Name of the LORD,] This was the Office of a Priest, to offer Sacrifices unto God, and to bless the People in his Name.

Him and his Sons for ever.] The Family of Aaron, of which he is principally speaking; who, when they were few in Number, all minister'd unto God; but afterward they took their Courses of Attendance; And, as the Jews say, there were eight Courses before Moses died; four of the Family of Eleazar, and as many of Ithamar's, which in David's Time were enlarged into four and twenty Courses; see Selden, lib. i. de Successione in Pontificat. cap. 1.

Ver. 6. And if a Levite] By a Levite he seems here to mean a Priest: see ver. 1. for they only could minister unto God; and the Levites ministered unto them.

Come from any of thy Gates out of all Israel,] From any City; in any Tribe of Israel.

Where he sojourned,] i. e. Leave the Country where he hath been wont to live.

And come with all the Desire of his Mind, unto the Place which the LORD shall choose;] With a sincere Affection to devote himself to the perpetual Service of God at the Sanctuary; so that, instead of coming in his Course, he would always always wait there, and never stir from that Place.

Ver. 7. Then he shall minister in the Name of the LORD his God,] Attend continually at the Altar, to do all the Service of the Sanctuary. The LXX translate it, He shall minister to the Name of the LORD, i. e. to the divine Majesty, who dwells there.

As all his Brethren the Levites do,] As all those do who live at that Place.

Which stand there before the LORD] To minister unto him : this was the Case of Samuel.

Ver. 8. They shall have like Portions to eat,] This shews that he is speaking of the Priests ; for the Levites did not eat of the holy Things offered at the Altar : and the Meaning is, That the rest of the Priests who waited there, should allow him the same Portion which they themselves had in the Sacrifices.

Beside that which cometh of the Sale of his Patrimony.] Which was to remain proper to himself, and not be divided with other Priests at Jerusalem, (suppose) where he minister'd. The Hebrew Words are something obscure, being beside his Sales by, or unto the Fathers, that is, such Possessions as their Fathers purchased, and left to them : for tho' the Priests had no Share in the Land of Canaan given them at the Division of it, yet they might purchase Houses, and Goods, and Cattle ; and sometimes they purchased Fields, as we read Abiathar had Fields of his own at Anathoth, 1 Kings ii. 26. and the Prophet Jeremiah, who was a Priest also, purchased a Field of his Uncle's Son in his own Town, Jer. xxxii. 7, 8, &c.

But the Jews make a quite different Construction of these three Verses, which they understand in this Manner, That if any Levite (i. e. Priest, for they only ministered before GOD) came up out of the City where he commonly resided, out of pure Devotion to attend at the three solemn Feasts, which were held at the Place where the Sanctuary was, (where they were bound to wait, only when their Course came, but at these Feasts might all come and minister in the Sanctuary) his Brethren, whose Week it was then to attend, should both admit him to minister before GOD with them, and also give him an equal Portion with themselves in the extraordinary Sacrifices which were then offered at those Festivals, except only those which were peculiarly assigned to them whose Week of waiting at the Altar it then was ; who, by the Ordinance of GOD, delivered to Moses and Aaron, (who, they suppose, are here called the Fathers) were to have the Right-shoulder of the Peace-offerings : see Levit. vii. 33. where it is said, He among the Sons of Aaron that offereth the Peace-offerings, and the Fat, shall have the Right-shoulder for his Part ; in which none other was to participate. But why this should be called the Sales, I do not understand, unless we interpret it, as Fosterus doth, Venditiones, i. e. res venditas à patribus, things sold by the Fathers, that is, appropriated by them, (to the particular Priest that offered the Sacrifice) as Things sold are to those that buy them.

Ver. 9. When thou art come into the Land which the LORD thy God giveth thee,] The Land of Canaan, which the LORD was about to bestow upon them, according to his Promise.

Thou shalt not learn to do after the Abominations of those Nations.] Now he returns to warn them again not to fall into the Idolatry and the Superstitions of the Country, whither they were going : see Levit. xviii. 3.

Ver. 10. There shall not be found among you] So as to be tolerated.

Any one that maketh his Son or his Daughter to pass through the Fire,] This was the most abominable Idolatry practised in that Country whither they were going, who consecrated their Children in this Manner to Moloch, or the Sun, of which I have said sufficient, Levit. xviii. 21. Therefore I shall only add here, that this wicked Custom seems to have flowed from this Country of the Phœnicians and Tyrians unto the Carthaginians ; who were guilty of the Impiety of sacrificing their Children, as they did also here unto Moloch, Levit. xx. 2, 3. which spread itself, in a Manner, over all the World, as many have shewn ; particularly Job. Geusius, in his Treatise de Victimis Humanis, Pars i. cap. 11. and it was found among the Americans, when that New World was discovered : see also P. ii. cap. 5.

Or that useth Divination,] Of which there were many sorts ; and one was, by raking into the Bowels of their Sacrifices, particularly of human Sacrifices ; by the Observation of which they pretended to foretel Things, as many Authors testify. Yea, they offered little Children, on purpose that thereby they might make their Auguries, as the same Geusius hath observed in that Book, cap. 21. Unto which, perhaps, there is a peculiar Respect in this Place ; for I find most of the Things, here mentioned, joined in other Places with making their Children pass through the Fire, particularly 2 Kings xxi. 6. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 6. And the Prophet Ezekiel seems to intimate, that hereby they divined, when he charges the Israelites with this Crime, xx. 26, 31. For he adds, Shall I be inquired of by you, O House of Israel, who have inquired, that is, by making your Children pass through the Fire ?

But it must be confessed, that the Hebrew Words Kosem kosemim (which we translate useth Divination) are by many thought to have a peculiar Respect unto such as used to divine by casting or drawing of Lots. And the Word, as our learned Dr. Castell observes, is so used in the Arabian Language for Distribution of Lots. Which sort of Divination was much in Use among the Greeks and Romans ; and had been so, it is very likely, in more ancient Times among the Eastern Nations : for nothing is more known than the Sortes Prænestinæ, and Patavinæ among the Romans ; and the Dodonææ, and Dindymenæ, and many others, among the Greeks, particularly that at Bura in Achaia, where there was a Cave in which was the Image of Hercules ; before which, they who resorted thither to inquire Directions in any Case, or the Success of any Affair, used to fall down, and say their Prayers, and after that to throw four Dice upon the Table, and by the Letters or Marks upon which they fell, the Divination was made ; as Pausanias describes it in his Achaica.

Acbaica. In other Places they used them in a different Manner, and the antient Arabians divined by Arrows, as our famous Dr. Pocock hath shewn in his Notes upon Gregor. Abulfarajus his Book, concerning the Original and Manners of the Arabians, p. 327, 328, &c. Where he describes the Manner of it, and shews that it was performed before some Idol, and therefore was strictly forbidden by Mahomet in his Alcoran, as a diabolical Invention. In which he seems to have imitated Moses, who may be thought here to forbid such kind of Divination; which was in Use among the Eastern People in the Days of the Prophet Ezekiel, xxi. 21. where we find the same Word Kosem, which that Learned Author thinks is illustrated by that Arabian Custom.

It is to be noted also, that they used to divine by a dead Man's Skull, as our Dr. Windet hath observed out of the Sanhedrim, cap. 7. and Maimonides. Which Custom the Greeks likewise followed; for Palladius relates how Macarius inquired μερὲς ἢ ἐνεστὶ νεκρῶν, at a dry Skull, &c. See Windet, in his Book de Vita sanctorum statu, sect. 1.

Several sorts of such kind of Persons there were among the Edomites, Moabites, and other Nations near Judea, who in the Days of Jeremiah deceived the People with their Divinations, Prophecies, Dreams, Incantments, and Sorceries, as we learn from Jerem. xxvii. 3, 9.

Or an Observer of Times, or an Enchanter,] Of these I have said enough upon Levit. xx. 26.

Or a Witch,] This Word signifies worse than any of the former, viz. one that doth Mischief unto Men or Beasts by evil Arts: concerning which see upon Exod. xxii. 18. Unto which I shall here add, That the Jewish Nation have been extremely addicted to Witchcraft, and some of their famous Rabbins have been suspected of it: see J. Wagenfeil upon Sota, p. 529.

Ver. 11. Or a Charmer,] There are various Conjectures about the Meaning of the Hebrew Words Chober chaber; which importing something of Society, or Conjunction, some translate Fortune-teller, who by the Conjunction of the Planets pretends to predict future Things; others, one that hath Society with Evil Spirits, which is mentioned afterwards in another Word. Job Ludolphus seems to me to have given the plainest Account of the Words, which he translates congregans congregationem, gathering together a Company. For it was an antient Way of Incantment, to bring various Kinds of Beasts into one Place, which the Rabbins distinguish into the Great Congregation, and the Little Congregation: the Great was, when they assembled together a great Company of the larger sort of Beasts; and the Less, when they gathered together as great a Company of the smaller, such as Serpents, Scorpions, and the like: but we cannot be certain of this; tho' Telexius tell us, it is in Use at this Day in the Eastern Countries. For so he describes the Election of the King of Gingir, that he stood compassed about with Lions, Tygers, Leopards, and Dragons, which by Magical Arts were gathered together as his Guard and Courtiers: see Ludolphi Comment. in Histor. Æthiop. cap. 16. Numb. 116.

But the common Interpretation which the Jews give of Chober chaber, is, that he is one who uses strange Words, which have no Signification; but he pretends are powerful to charm a Serpent, (for instance) that it shall not sting, or to preserve from any other Harm. So Maimonides, in Avoda Zara, cap. 11. And to this sort of Superstition the World was so addicted, that this Precept of Moses could not bring the Jews quite off from it; but when they threw away other Charms, they used the Words of Scripture instead of them; pretending, for instance, to cure Wounds by reading that Verse in the Law, Exod. xv. 26. I will put none of these Diseases upon thee, &c. So we find they themselves acknowledge in Sanhedrim, cap. 2. sect. 1. And Maimonides faith, in the forenamed Treatise, this is forbidden by Moses in this Place, as much as any other kind of Charm; for the Words of the Law are turned hereby to another Use than God intended in them; which was not for Healing the Body, but for Curing the Soul. And I see no Reason why it should not be thought as great a Crime to use the Schem Hamphorasch (as they call the Name Jebovab) to such Purposes; and yet the Jews are so stupid as to imagine Moses wrought all his Miracles by the Virtue of it. Maimonides, indeed, was so sober as to reject this common Conceit, condemning those who think there was a Power in the very Letters and Pronunciation of the Word, lib. i. More Nevochim, cap. 62.

Or a Consuler with Familiar Spirits, or a Wizard,] Of these two see what I have noted Levit. xix. 31. and Levit. xx. 6.

Or a Necromancer:] In the Hebrew, one that seeks to, or inquires of the Dead. It is not easy to tell wherein this differs from one that had a Familiar Spirit, as we translate it. For the Woman whom Saul consulted, who had a Spirit, called Oboth, inquired also after this Manner; their Spirit, it seems, teaching such Persons to call for the Dead to appear to them: but some, perhaps, had not such a Spirit, who notwithstanding consulted the Dead, by going to their Graves in the Night, and there lying down, and muttering certain Words with a low Voice, that they might have Communion with them by Dreams, or by their Appearing to them: unto which the Prophet Isaiah is thought to allude, viii. 19. xxix. 4. Maimonides, in Avoda Zara, cap. 11. sect. 15. thus describes a Necromancer: He is one, who having afflicted himself with Fasting, goes to the burying Place, and there lies down, and falls asleep; and then the Dead appear to him, and tell him what he desires. Such are they also, who put on a certain kind of Garment, speak some uncouth Words, and make a Fume, and then lie down alone, that the Dead, whom they desire, may come to them, and discourse with them in their Sleep. To the same Purpose Aben Ezra. To this the Gentiles were very prone; and it was thought so high an Attainment to come to this Knowledge, that Julian the Apostate, who was ambitious to be acquainted with all the Heathen Mysteries, secretly practised this νεκρομαντεία, in the most retired Part of his Palace, cutting up the Bodies of Virgins and Boys, to bring up the Dead to him; which was far more impious than than what the Talmudists say, (in the Title Be-racoth) that such kind of People were wont to burn the Secundine of a Black Cat, when she had her first Kittens, and beating it very small, put some of the Powder upon their Eye, where-upon Demons appeared to them: see Greg. Nazianz. in his Invectives against Julian, p. 91. and St. Chrysostom in his Oration upon St. Babylonas. I shall only add, that this was not only privately practised among the Gentiles, but there were also publick Places to which Men resorted to consult the Dead, particularly at Thesprotis, near to the River Acheron, where Herodotus, lib. v. mentions a Νεκρομανθίων; and Plutarch (to name no more) mentions another at Heraclea, which Pausanias, in his Distress, went to consult; as he relates in the Life of Cimon.

Ver. 12. For all that do these Things are an Abomination unto the LORD; Because they were invented by idolatrous People, if not by the Suggestions of evil Spirits.

And because of these Abominations the LORD thy GOD doth drive them out from before thee. Expelled the Amorites, and other wicked Inhabitants of the Country, where they practised these Abominations; which, no doubt, had some relation to Idolatry, and therefore were forbidden to the Israelites.

Ver. 13. Thou shalt be perfect with the LORD thy GOD. This shews there was something of idolatrous Worship in all the forenamed Practices; which if they followed, it was, in some Degree, to forsake the LORD, on whom they were wholly to depend, and seek to him alone in the Ways which he had prescribed in his Laws. For this was to be perfect with the LORD, to have nothing to do with any other God, nor with the Rites and Ceremonies that were used in their Worship: and therefore the LXX translate this Word sometimes by ἀπλῶς, (Job xxii. 3.) as well as by τελειῶς for then they were perfect with GOD, when they kept his Worship simple and pure, without the Mixture of any foreign Religion: which the whole Context shews to be the Sense, both in the Words foregoing and following.

Ver. 14. For these Nations which thou shalt possess, bearkned unto Observers of Times, and unto Diviners; The antient Heathen, as Strabo tells us lib. 6. had these Diviners in such Esteem, ὥς τε βασιλεὺς ἀξιοῦν, that they thought them worthy of the highest Authority. But GOD would not have his People so much as to consult such Persons: for it appears by these Words, that not only they who were Diviners, (for instance) but they who bearkened to them, were odious to GOD. For that even the Art of Divination depended upon some idolatrous Opinions and Practices, appears evidently, even from the most refined Account we have of it in antient Authors: For instance, Ammianus Marcellinus, who, to acquit his Master Julian from the Suspicion of Sorcery, which some said he used, to get the Foreknowledge of Things future, makes it a principal Point of Wisdom, not unworthy such a Prince, who was a professed Lover of all Sciences, to offer placatory Sacrifices to draw in the Spirit of all the Elements, to endue him with a Spirit of Divination: for so his Words are in the Beginning of his One and twentieth Book: The Spirit of all the Elements, being all way and every way invigorated with the fore-perceiving Motion of the everlasting (i. e. the heavenly) Bodies, make us Partakers of the Gifts of Divining: and the substantial Powers, ritu diverso placatæ, being rendered favourable by respective Rites, (i. e. such as were proper and suitable to each of them) convey Predictions to Mortality, as from so many perpetual Springs or Fountains, over which (substantial Powers) the Goddess Themis is said to preside, &c. Which shews that Julian, who called Jupiter the most high God, the King of all, yet courted other inferior Powers, by such Rites as he imagined would win their Favour: which was rank Idolatry.

But as for thee, the LORD thy GOD hath not suffered thee so to do. But absolutely forbade it, Levit. xix. 31. xx. 6. where he warns them to have nothing to do with some of the Persons here mentioned; and not only instructed them in the Way to live happily, but established an Oracle among them to be consulted on all weighty Occasions, and governed them by Men, whom he had endued with his Spirit, Numb. xi. 16, 17, 25. Therefore, if any Israelite practised any of the Things here forbidden, tho' he did not worship any Idol, he was scourged by the Sentence of the Court of Judgment: see Selden, lib. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 7.

Ver. 15. The LORD thy GOD will raise up unto thee a Prophet Since the Jews, as all other Nations, were extremely desirous to know Things to come, Moses reveals unto them from GOD, a Thing future, of the highest Importance, viz. the Coming of CHRIST, and the Greatness of his Authority; and in After-times GOD revealed to them, by Degrees, the Time of his Birth, his Death, Resurrection, &c. The Jews indeed commonly take these Words to be a Promise of a constant Succession of Prophets, that should be among them, to preserve them from going to such Diviners as were famous among their Heathen Neighbours; and thus many Christian Interpreters make out the Connection of these Words with the foregoing. But tho' this may be allowed to be intimated, and this Promise be acknowledged to be partly verified in those Prophets which GOD raised up from Age to Age after Moses, for further Knowledge of his Will, (as the Promise of a Saviour was in Part verified in those Judges and Kings by whom GOD delivered his People from their Enemies) yet it is very evident, that he speaks of a single Prophet more eminent than all the rest; and that these Words, in their most literal Sense, cannot belong to any other Person, but the MESSIAH. So that, albeit the Continuance of Prophets among this People, was a Means to prevent all Occasions of consulting Sorcerers, or Witches; yet the chief Ground upon which Moses dissuades them from such Practices, according to the literal Connection of these Words with the foregoing, [the LORD thy GOD hath not suffered thee to do so] i. e. to hearken unto Observers of Times and Diviners, was the Consideration of their late mighty Deliverance by Moses; the Excellency of their present Law, which GOD had given them for their Direction; and their Expectation of a greater Law-giver in future future Times, when the first Covenant should wax old, and Prophecy itself for a long Time fail, as it did before the Coming of this great Prophet, the LORD CHRIST. To this Purpose Dr. Jackson, in his Third Book upon the Creed, cap. 21. Paragr. 19.

From the midst of thee, of thy Brethren,] It was a great Honour to them to have such a Prophet, as is here spoken of, arise out of their Nation: but as he was after a peculiar sort raised up by JEHOVAH, not merely by the external Assurances or Impulsion of his Spirit, (to use the Words of the same excellent Person, Paragr. 9.) but by intrinsic Assumption into the Unity of his Person; so likewise he was raised up in a strict and proper Sense from the midst of them, being, as it were, extracted out of a pure Virgin, as the first Woman was out of the Man, by the Almighty's own immediate Hand.

Like unto me;] This shews he speaks of a single Prophet, and not of a constant Succession of Prophets, there being none of them like to Moses, whom God himself distinguished from them all, Numb. xii. 6, 7, 8. And accordingly that divine Writer, who added those Verses which are at the End of this Book, (concerning the Death of Moses) testifies that there never rose in Israel a Prophet like to Moses: see Deut. xxxiv. 10. It is commonly thought to be done by Ezra, who hath effectually confuted all the Conceits of R. Bechai, Aven-Ezra, Abarbinel, and other Jewish Doctors, who take either Joshua or Jeremiab to have been this Prophet. If Joshua, as some fanfy, added these Words, then he excluded himself from being the Person; nor did Joshua act as a Prophet, but as a Judge or Governor: and Jeremiab is acknowledged by Abarbinel himself to be inferior to Isaiab: for tho' in his Preface to his Commentary upon Jeremiab, he mentions fourteen Things wherein he was like unto Moses, and saith he prophesied just forty Years, as Moses did; yet, in his Commentary upon the lesser Prophets, he prefers Isaiab before them all, and censures the Rudeness of Jeremiab's Language, in many Things preferring Ezekiel to him. So little do these Doctors agree in their Interpretation of this Prophecy, which can belong to none of their Prophets which succeeded Moses, (who were all much inferior to him) until He came, who perfectly resembled him, but was much superior to him: see ver. 18. And thus the antient Jews understood this Prophecy; for tho' Maimonides only saith, the MESSIAH should be indued with Wisdom greater than Solomon's, and should equal their Master Moses, yet those before him proceeded a great deal further; this being a common Saying among them, which Abarbinel himself remembers, in his Commentary upon the small Prophets, He shall be exalted above Abraham, lifted up above Moses, and higher than the Angels of the Ministry. Nor is the Cabbalistical Observation, mentioned in Baal-Hatturim, to be quite neglected; which is, that this Verse begins and ends with the Letter Nun, which is the numeral Letter for Fifty, importing that to the Prophet here promised should be opened the fifty Gates of Knowledge, forty-nine of which only were opened to Moses; and that this Verse also consists of ten Words, to signify, that they were to obey the Prophet no less than the ten Commandments: Which Observation, it must be confessed, is weakly grounded, but contains a most illustrious Truth, and shews that they believed Moses here speaks of the Messiah.

Unto him ye shall hearken:] As they had engaged themselves to do: it will appear from the following Words.

Ver. 16. According to all that thou desiredst of the LORD thy GOD in Horeb, in the Day of the Assembly, saying, Let me not bear again the Voice of the LORD, &c.] So we read, Exod. xx. 19. where they made this Request unto Moses, saying, Speak thou with us, and we will hear; but let not GOD speak with us, lest we die. In which Words the whole Multitude bound themselves solemnly, to hear the Words of the LORD, being delivered not immediately from his own Mouth, but by Moses, as is more fully expressed in this Book, Deut. v. 27, 28, 29. Where GOD highly commends this good Resolution in them, as Moses here observes again in the next Verse.

Ver. 17. And the LORD said unto me, They have well spoken that which they have spoken:] He approved their Desire, and resolved not to speak to them any more, as he did from Mount Sinai, with a Voice out of the Fire and Cloud; but by Moses himself, while he lived, and afterward by one like to Moses, as it here follows.

Ver. 18. I will raise them up a Prophet from among their Brethren,] These Words seem to have been spoken to Moses by GOD, when they desired GOD would not speak to them any more immediately by himself, but by a Mediator. Then GOD was pleased to promise them a great deal more than they desired, which was to raise up another Prophet like to Moses, who should acquaint them more fully with his Mind and Will, in as familiar a Manner as Moses did, without striking any such Terror into them, as they were in at the giving of the Law, tho' the Words of this Prophet came from the Mouth of GOD himself: in which two Things the Israelites excelled all other Nations (i. e. in that they had such an excellent Law delivered by Moses, which was to be bettered by an everlasting Covenant made by this Prince of the Prophets). In respect of both, (as the same Dr. Jackson expresses it) the Name of Soothsayer, or Sorterer, was not to be named in Israel, as they were in the Nations that knew not GOD, much less expected such a Mediator; in whom the Spirit of Life should dwell as plentifully, as Splendor doth in the Body of the Sun; from whose Fullness, ere he visibly appeared in the World, all other Prophets were illuminated: so that Moses himself, and all the Prophets that followed him, were but as Messengers sent from GOD, to solicit his People to preserve their Allegiance free from all Commerce or Compact with familiar Spirits, until the Prince of Glory came in Person to visit them, and dwell among them.

Like unto thee,] This is well explained by Eusebius, ὁμοῦς κατὰ Μωσῆα νομοδότης, a second Lawgiver, as Moses was: for in saying not, simply, he would raise them up a Prophet, but, like unto thee, it must signify, saith he, that this Prophet should be a Lawgiver as well as Moses, which none of the Prophets were, till our Saviour came. Neither Isaiah nor Jeremiah were the Makers of Laws, but only called upon them to observe the Law of Moses; whereas, when the LORD JESUS came, he gave Laws to all the World, and those far superior to the Laws of Moses, who only said, Thou shalt not commit Adultery; but our LORD saith, I say unto you, Ye shall not lust; and instead of, Thou shalt not kill, he saith, Be not angry with thy Brother, &c. Whence it was that they who heard him were astonished at his Doctrine, and said, that he spake not as the Scribes, who were Expounders of the Law, but as one that had Authority, that is, Power to ordain and enact Laws, and not only to explain those that were already written, Lib. i. Demonstr. Evang. cap. 7. & lib. iii. cap. 2. lib. ix. p. 443, &c. See also what Job. Wagenfeil hath said upon these Words, in his Annot. in Lipman. Carm. Memoriale, p. 548.

And will put my Words in his Mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.] Reveal the whole Mind and Will of GOD, John xii. 49, 50. For he was herein like to Moses, (tho' far superior to him) that he was intimately acquainted with GOD's Counsels, being in the Bosom of the Father, John i. 18. And confirmed all that he said to be from GOD by Miracles, and Wonders, and Signs, far more mighty than those of Moses, and more in Number than had been wrought by all the Prophets, from the Beginning of the World. Particularly, he fed Multitudes with a little Food, (which made the People cry out, This is of a Truth that Prophet which should come into the World, John vi. 14.) but above all this, gave them that Bread from Heaven, of which the Manna which Moses gave them was but a Shadow, as he took Occasion to shew the People, upon their Admiration of that miraculous Feast he had made for them, with five Barley Loaves, and two small Fishes: for he himself was that Bread of Life, who nourished Mens Souls with the Word of eternal Life, which he had in himself, as he shew'd by his Resurrection from the Dead, which he himself predicted, and thereby proved himself the greatest of all the Prophets: for tho' Moses foretold his own Death, yet neither he, nor any other Prophet whatsoever but our Saviour, spake of his being raised up again. In which he may be thought to be like to Moses, who was raised up by GOD to be a Saviour of his People out of that Ark, which without the special Providence of GOD had been his Tomb: And unto this Resurrection of CHRIST doth the Propriety of this Phrase, from the midst of thee, agree: for this was done, as Dr. Jackson also well observes, in the midst of Jerusalem, the Metropolis of Judea, not without express Notice given of it to the Rulers of the People; and such a Confirmation it was, that he was the Prophet they should all bear, that there could not be a greater; as all Strangers, both to their Religion and ours, must agree, and they themselves cannot deny: for Nachmanides (relating, in a Letter of his to the Rabbins at Marseilles, how there was a Man in those Days, in the Southern Countries, who pretended to be the Forerunner of the MESSIAH, unto whom great Numbers both of Jews and Arabs resorted) tells us, that he being apprehended by the King of the Country, and asked what Miracle he shew'd to confirm his Commission, he answered boldly, Cut off my Head, and I will come to Life again. To which the King of the Arabs replied, There is no Sign greater than this; which if it come to pass, both I and the whole World will believe thee. Whereupon his Head was cut off, and there was an End of all his Pretences; tho' some of the Jews were so mad, as Maimonides there saith, that they still expected his Return to Life. Thus R. Gedaliah reports in his Schalschelet Hakkalab.

Ver. 19. And it shall come to pass, that whatsoever will not hearken unto my Words, which he shall speak in my Name.] This is the proper Character of a Prophet, to deliver in the Name of GOD, what he received from GOD. This did Moses: but CHRIST most eminently, as I before observed from John xii. 49, 50. where he saith, I have not spoken of myself, but the Father which sent me; he gave me a Commandment what I should say, and what I should speak, &c. whatsoever therefore I speak, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak. Which is a perfect Commentary upon these Words of Moses, who here calls Christ a Prophet, not a Priest, or a King, (tho' he was to be both) because he would not have the Jews mistake, and expect to find in his Person the worldly Grandeur of a mighty Prince, or the high Honour and Splendor of Aaron; but have the greatest Regard to the heavenly Doctrine which he taught them, as he himself (he told them) was taught by the Father: For I proceeded forth, saith he, and came from GOD; neither came I of myself, but he sent me; and I do nothing of myself, but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these Things, John viii. 28, 42. This was the highest Honour of all, to speak GOD's Words, (ver. 47.) in the Name of GOD, ver. 42.

I conclude this with the remarkable Words of the Midrasch upon Ecclesiastes, who thus expresses the Sense of this Prophecy, As was the first Redeemer, such shall be the last Redeemer. Which plainly determine the Prophet here spoken of to be one single Person; and he no other but the LORD CHRIST: see Huetius, in his Demonstr. Evang. Propos. 7. n. 9.

I will require it of him.] Severely punish him, so as to destroy him from among his People, as St. Peter interprets it, Acts iii. 23. And so this Phrase is used, Gen. ix. 5. xlii. 22. And there was great Reason for such Severity, seeing they had so solemnly bound themselves to hearken to this Prophet, when they desired GOD not to speak any more to them by himself, but by a Mediator, which GOD then promised, as I observed ver. 18. A Mediator of a better Covenant, who should secure them from such dreadful Flames, as they then saw, if they would hearken to him, as they promised to do; otherwise, what could they expect, but a certain fearful Looking for Judgment, and fiery Indignation, to devour the Adversaries? For since he that despised Moses's Law, died without Mercy, under two or three Witnesses, of how much sorer Punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under Foot the Son of God?

God, in the open Face of all the World, Heb. x. 27, 28, 29. which is a full Explication of these Words, Whoever will not hearken unto my Words, which he shall speak in my Name, I will require it of him: Or, as Onkelos translates it, My Word shall require it of him: where Memra, Word, can signify nothing but a divine Person, distinct from him who speaks these Words, even that very Person to whom the Apostle applies them.

Ver. 20. But the Prophet which shall presume to speak a Word in my Name, &c.] These Words plainly suggest to us, that Moses intended, in the foregoing Discourse, to admonish the Israelites to hearken diligently to all such Prophets as GOD should at any Time raise up to them; tho' it be most evident, if we examine the Propriety of every Word or Clause in the whole Context, they cannot be exactly fitted unto any Prophet but CHRIST; unto whom the whole Discourse is as fully accommodated, as a well-made Garment to the Body that wears it. They are the Words of the same excellent Person so often mentioned, Dr. Jackson, lib. iii. on the Creed, cap. 21. Parag. 1, 2.

Speak a Word in my Name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or that shall speak in the Name of other Gods,] It was a manifest Sign a Man was a false Prophet, if he spake in the Name of Baal, or any other God but the GOD of Israel: or if he said, such a Star, by its spiritual Influence coming upon me, said, Worship me after this Manner, or thus call upon me, as Maimonides (who gives an Account of the several sorts of false Prophets) speaks, in his Preface to Sedar Zeraim. But how should they know a Man to be a false Prophet, when he spake to them in the Name of the LORD? For Men might pretend, as some did, that GOD had sent them, and given them a Command, when he had not. To which he answers in the next Verses.

Even that Prophet shall die.] He was to be strangled, say the Jews, by the Sentence of the great Sanhedrim: for it is a Tradition of their Rabbins, saith the Gemara Babylonica upon that Title, that in the Business of Prophecy there are three sorts of Persons, who are to be punished by the Judgment of Men, and three by the Sentence of Heaven. He that prophesied what he did not hear from GOD, (an Example of which we have in Zedekiah, 1 Kings xxii. 11.) or spake what was not said to him, but to another, (an Example of which they make Hananiah, Jerem. xxviii. 11.) or prophecies in the Name of an Idol, (suppose Baal) all these were to be put to Death by the Sentence of the Court of Judgment; but he that suppressed his Prophecy, (like Jonah) or despised the Words of a Prophet, or did not observe his own Words, were to be punished by the Hand of Heaven: see Selden, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 6. n. 1.

Ver. 21. And if thou say in thine Heart, How shall we know the Word which the LORD hath not spoken?] Which was but a reasonable Question, there being as great Care necessary, not to hearken to Falseness, as to be attentive unto Truth. And this relates unto such Prophets as came to them in the Name of the LORD: for if a Man came in the Name of any other God, there needed no other Mark to discover him to be an Impostor.

Ver. 22. When a Prophet speaketh in the Name of the LORD;] Predicting some wonderful Thing to come to pass, as a Token he is sent of GOD to deliver what he speaks to the People.

If the Thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the Thing which the LORD hath not spoken;] For if the LORD had sent him, he would have accomplished what he gave as a Sign of his Mission; which not coming to pass, he was proved to be a false Prophet, who spake out of his own Heart, and not the Word of the LORD: but here the Jews distinguished between a Prophet who predicts evil Things, as Famine, or Pestilence, &c. and one that predicts good Things, as Rain, (when there is great Need of it) and fruitful Years, &c. Tho' the Predictions of the former sort did not come to pass, he was not to be reputed presently a false Prophet, because GOD is very merciful, and often repented him of the Evil, as he did in the Case of Nineveh: but in the latter Case, if any one of the good Things he foretold did not come to pass, he was to be taken for a Deceiver; which they understand also of the very Time and Place, when and where he said the Things he predicted would be fulfilled: and here they bring in the Example of Hananiah, the Son of Azur, mentioned before, Jer. xxviii. 11. and see ver. 8, 9. of that Chapter. But this doth not give us the true Difference: for both GOD's Promises and Threatnings many Times depend upon a Condition, as appears from that famous Place in the Prophet, Jer. xviii. 7, 8, 9. So that the good Things a Prophet foretold might not come to pass, and yet he might be a true Prophet; because the People proved unworthy of them, and GOD did not absolutely intend them. Therefore the true Meaning seems to be, That if a Prophet foretold such a Thing as the Power of Nature cannot produce, and gave it as a Sign GOD sent him, who would justify his Mission by doing that Wonder, and the Thing did not come to pass, he was to be looked upon as not a Man of GOD: for Example; when Moses threw his Rod on the Ground, and said it should become a Serpent; if it had not been turned into a Serpent, he had been convicted of Falsity: or a Prophet said Fire should come down from Heaven, and consume the Sacrifice which lay before him, which was the Case of Elijah; if it had not come down, he would have been no more owned for a true Prophet, than the Prophets of Baal. And, as Maimonides well observes, if a Prophet's Words were fulfilled in one or more Things, he was not to be judged a true Prophet, unless every Thing he spake in the Name of GOD came to pass: which he proves from those Words concerning Samuel, 1 Sam. iii. 19, 20. The LORD let none of his Words fall to the Ground: and all Israel knew that Samuel was established to be a Prophet of the LORD.

The Jews also made this Addition to the Rule fore-mentioned of trying Prophets, as Mr. Selden observes lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 5. n. 3. That whatsoever Prophet had the Testimony of another undoubted Prophet, was to be taken for a true Prophet. By which Rule they might have known the great Prophet whom God promised to them in the foregoing Verses: for John the Baptist, whom the whole Nation took for a Prophet, testified to them that JESUS was the CHRIST. And besides all other undoubted Marks of his being sent from God, his rising from the Dead, which he himself foretold, was enough to satisfy all Men of the Truth of what he said: for tho' every Prediction of what afterwards comes to pass, will not necessarily prove a Man to be a true Prophet; yet the fulfilling of a great Number of Things, (not one of which fails, as was said before of Samuel) especially of such a Thing as this, which was impossible to be brought to pass but by an Almighty Power, is an uncontrollable Evidence of a divine Mission.

R. Solomon, upon this Verse, hath a Note which is worth our Observation, tho' it be not to the Purpose of Moses's Words: A Prophet, saith he, that bids thee not observe some of the Precepts, is not to be heard, unless he be known to be a Man of eminent Virtue, and upright Life, as Elijah was, who bid them build an Altar on Mount Carmel, even when the Sacrifices upon High-places were forbidden. But there was a Necessity for it, that he might restore the true Worship of God in Israel. Which should have made them hearken to our blessed Saviour better than they did, he being so perfectly holy and pure, that he challenged any of them to charge him with Sin; especially when he only laid aside some of their vain Traditions, but conformed to all the Rites of Moses: so that if in Conclusion we should grant that Moses (in the fourteenth and sixteenth Verses, &c.) speaks of all the Prophets that should succeed him, (which it is certain he doth not principally intend) the Jews were impious in rejecting our Saviour, who came as a Prophet to them, and had all the Marks that a Prophet could have of his being sent from God.

But the Prophet hath spoken it presumptuously:] For it was an Act of high Presumption, and arrogant Pride, for any Man to pretend a Commission from God, when he had not sent him. Which was done two Ways, as the Jews interpret this, either when a Man spake in the Name of God that which was false, or when he pretended that to have been spoken to him, which was revealed by God to another, (see Jer. xxii. 30.) Both these were impudent Impostors, and accordingly to be treated.

Thou shalt not be afraid of him.] Have no Reverence or Regard to him; tho' he be never so confident: nor be afraid to lay hold of him, and endeavour to bring him to the Sanhedrim, to have their Sentence pass upon him, (as the Jews understand it) tho' he have never so powerful an Interest to support him, and preserve him from Punishment. Thus Maimonides, in the fore-named Preface to Sedar Zeraim, Thou shalt not be terrified, or averted from endeavouring to have him put to Death, by his Religion, Goodness, or Knowledge, since in his proud Brags he hath spoken false Things of God. For to be afraid of such a Person, and of his Partakers, was to distrust God, who is the Defender of those that defend the Cause of Religion.

C H A P. XIX.

HAVING sufficiently pressed upon the People the great Commandment, of loving God with all the Heart, and Soul, and Strength, and him alone, Moses now proceeds to remember them of other Precepts belonging to the second Table, (as we now speak) but not in an exact Method, nor without interspersing some ceremonial Matters: and he begins with what concerns that Commandment, Thou shalt not kill.

Verse 1. WHEN the LORD thy God hath cut off the Nations, whose Land the LORD thy God giveth thee, &c.] The very same Words we had before upon another Occasion, xii. 29. which are now used to signify, that they were not bound to what follows, till God had subdued the Land of Canaan for them, and they were settled in it; as the last Words of the Verse import, dwellst in their Cities, and in their Houses. Accordingly, after the Division of the Land, God puts Joshua in Mind of this Business, Josh. xx. 1, 2, &c.

Ver. 2. Thou shalt separate three Cities for thee] According to an Order God had given to Moses, Numb. xxxv. 14, 15. to set aside six Cities in all, for the Use here mentioned; three on this Side Jordan, where they now were, and three on the other Side in the Land of Canaan. The former Part of which Command Moses himself had executed, Deut. iv. 42, &c. and now gives them a Charge to perform the other.

In the midst of thy Land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.] In the midst of their Land, signifies no more, but within their Land; for if they had been all three in the very Heart of the Country, it would have crossed the End and Intention of them, which was, that they should be placed so conveniently in several Parts of the Country, that Men might easily and speedily flee to them. And therefore the midst of the Land may be opposed to the Skirts of the Country, where they would have been too far distant from some Parts of it; or may denote, that they should be set in an eminent Place, upon the Top of Mountains, where they might be seen afar off. And so they all three were, it is apparent from Josh. xx. 7. where they are said to be in Mount Naphtali, Mount Ephraim, and the Mountain of Judab.

Ver. 3. Thou shalt prepare thee a Way,] Make a plain Road to them, and keep it in good Repair, that both in Winter and Summer, the Manslayer might without Difficulty flee thither. And for his more safe Passage, the Hebrews say, where there were any Turnings, or two Ways parted, they were bound to set up a Post; or Stone, whereon was engraven, in great Letters, the Word MIKLAT, i. e. Refuge, that he might not mistake his Way to the Place.

And divide the Coasts of thy Land (which the LORD thy God giveth thee to inherit) into three Parts;] The Jews understand it, that they were to be placed at an equal Distance, in three several Parts of the Country, that all might have have the same Benefit by them ; and no-body have a longer Journey to go than his Neighbour for his Safety.

That every Slayer may flee thither.] Have the Convenience of preserving himself in one or other of them. It is observable, that there were as many of their Cities in the two Tribes and a Half, as there were in all the other nine Tribes and a Half ; in which there seems to be a great Inequality. I have given some Account of it from Numb. xxxv. 14. And the Hebrews fancy there was another Reason for it, because of the frequent Murders which were likely to be committed by the fierce Nature of the Gileadites : see the Book of Judges, chap. x. and xi. and Hosea vi. 8.

Ver. 4. And this is the Case of the Slayer which shall flee thither, that he may live : Be preserved from the Avenger of Blood, who otherwise might kill him.

Who so killeth his Neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not in Time past ;] These Cities were not to be a Protection to a wilful Murderer, but to an innocent Person, who, against his Intention, was so unhappy as to kill a Man, belidaath, (as the Words are in the Hebrew) without his Knowledge, being free, that is, from any Design to do him the least Harm. But as for such as, out of Hatred and Malice in their Hearts, killed another, they were so far from finding Safety in these Cities, that they were to be pulled from the Altar, if they fled thither for Sanctuary, as we now speak, Exod. xxi. 12, 14. Or if they would not stir from thence, they might be killed there, as appears by the Case of Joab, 1 Kings ii. 28, 30, 31.

Ver. 5. As when a Man goeth into the Wood with his Neighbour to hew Wood, and his Hand fetcheth a Stroke with the Ax to cut down the Tree, and the Head slippeth from the Helve, and lighteth upon his Neighbour, that he die ;] By this all other like Cases were to be judged. That is, when a Man was about a lawful Business, if any Thing happened which he intended not, he was not accountable for it : see Selden, lib. iv. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 2.

He shall flee into one of those Cities, and live ;] He might get to which of them he could most conveniently, and there be preserved. The Jews, from this Word live, conclude, without any other Ground for it, that a Master was bound to go along with his Scholar, who fled hither ; because, without the Doctrine of the Law, Men did not live, but were dead.

Ver. 6. Left the Avenger of Blood pursue the Slayer, while his Heart is hot, &c.] With Anger, which might boil up to such a Degree, as to move him to kill the Slayer, before he had examined whether there was a just Cause.

It is evident that this Verse is to be connected with Verse the Third, (the two next Verses 4, 5. coming in as a Parenthesis, to shew who should be preserved in these Cities, and who not) being a Reason why the Cities of Refuge should be placed at an equal Distance in the several Parts of the Country, that the Journey might not be too long to any of them, but a Man might soon flee thither, before the Avenger of Blood could lay hold of him.

Because the Way is long, and slay him ;] If he could not have gotten thither in a short Time, he might have been in danger to lose his Life, tho' not worthy of Death. For as the Law did not punish him that killed a Manslayer, when he found him out of the Bounds of the City of Refuge, (Numb. xxxv. 27.) so it seems to have indemnified him, if he killed him before he got thither.

Whereas he was not worthy of Death, inasmuch as he hated him not in Time past.] Which, in his Rage, the Avenger of Blood did not consider ; and therefore was guilty before God of shedding innocent Blood, tho' the Law did not punish him for it.

Ver. 7. Wherefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt separate three Cities for thee.] To prevent which Mischiefe, God commanded, not merely one, but three Cities, and those in several Places of the Country ; where Men might find Safety, if they made haste to flee to them.

Ver. 8. And if the Lord thy God enlarge the Coast, (as he hath sworn unto thy Fathers) and give thee all the Land which he promised to give unto thy Fathers ;] As far as the River Euphrates, Gen. xv. 18. Exod. xxiii. 31. Deut. i. 7.

Ver. 9. If thou shalt keep all these Commandments to do them, which I command thee this Day, to love the Lord thy God, and to walk ever in his Ways ;] This seems to have been the Condition, upon the Performance of which depended the Enlargement of their Border. Which is more fully expressed, xi. 22, 23, 24. And so the Covenant made with Abraham (in Gen. xv. 18.) is to be understood, as including in it this Condition.

Then shalt thou add three Cities more for thee beside these three ;] We do not read of any more added to these, tho' their Border was enlarged in David's and Solomon's Time ; and that as far as Euphrates. But those Nations which they subdued, were only made Tributaries to the Kings of Israel, who did not people and possess those Countries ; and consequently there was no Occasion for such Cities there ; unless the Israelites had been the Inhabitants of those Countries, as they were of the Land of Canaan, ver. 1.

Ver. 10. That innocent Blood be not shed in thy Land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee, &c.] As there would, if, upon Supposition of such an Enlargement of their Borders, there had been no Cities nearer to flee unto than these six ; which were sufficient only for the Land of Canaan, and the Land they possessed on this Side Jordan, where they now were.

And so Blood be upon thee.] The Guilt and Punishment of Blood, in not taking Care of the Safety of innocent Persons.

Ver. 11. But if any Man hate his Neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these Cities ;] When there was a manifest Design of killing another, and known Hatred, he that committed the Murder, was to receive no Benefit by his fleeing to a City of Refuge. And then a Man was judged to hate his Brother, when for three Days together he had never spoken to him, tho' they had kept one another Company ; as I observed before out of

of Mr. Selden, lib. iv. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 2. p. 473.

Ver. 12. Then the Elders of his City shall send and fetch him thence,] Demand him of the Elders of the City to which he fled; that he might be sent to them, and tried by them, whether he was guilty of wilful Murder, or ought to have the Benefit of their Protection, being innocent of that Crime, Numb. xxxv. 12, 24. It is likely there were probable Reasons given, why he was suspected to be guilty of Murder; and therefore they desired the Matter might be examined; otherwise, if the Case was known to be like that in ver. 5. they did not make this Demand.

And deliver him into the Hand of the Avenger of Blood, that he may die.] That is, if they found him guilty of wilful Murder; otherwise, they were to deliver him out of the Hand of the Avenger of Blood, and restore him to the City of Refuge, that he might not die, Numb. xxxv. 25.

Ver. 13. Thine Eye shall not pity him;] Nor take any Satisfaction for the Life of a Murderer, as the Law is, Numb. xxxv. 31.

But thou shalt put away the Guilt of innocent Blood from Israel,] By putting him to Death.

That it may go well with thee.] By having no Guilt upon them; as they had, when they let this Crime go unpunished.

Ver. 14. Thou shalt not remove thy Neighbour's Land-mark, which they of old Time have set in thine Inheritance, &c.] The Jewish Doctors think that this hath respect to the Holy Land, (as they call it) and to the Terms or Bounds which were set by Joshua in the Division of the Country, which no Man might take away; for that made him both guilty of Theft, and also of the Breach of this Precept; and consequently he incurred a double Punishment, and was whipt twice as much as another Offender: see Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 3. in the latter End. This was a Law among the Greeks, as appears by Plato, lib. viii. de Legibus, Μη κινῶτω γῆς θεία μνηστῆς, &c. νομίστας τὰ ἀκίνητα κινῶν ἀλλοδαῖς τὸτο εἶναι, &c. Let no Man presume to remove the Bounds of Land; looking upon this, as being truly to remove Things immoveable, i. e. to unsettle and overturn all Things: Numa Pompilius therefore made this Crime capital. Which makes Josephus's Explication of these Words seem more reasonable than that of the Talmudists, who extend this Precept to the Grounds of all their neighbour Nations, who were at Peace with them: ὡς πολέμων ἐξέσθ' ἐν εἰρήνῃ γενομένων, as being the Occasion of Wars and Insurrections, which arise from the Covetousness of Men, who would thus enlarge their Territories, lib. iv. Archeol. cap. 8. Which may be thought a Reason why Moses joins this to the foregoing Precept, about punishing Murder; and made this one of the Curses they were bound to pronounce, and consent to it, at their Entrance into the Land of Canaan, Deut. xxvii. 17.

Which they of old Time have set in thine Inheritance which thou shalt inherit, in the Land that the LORD thy GOD giveth thee to possess it.] This may seem to determine this Precept peculiarly to the preserving the Bounds in the Land of Canaan; and by those of old Time, they understand Joshua and the Elders, who divided the Land, and fixed every one's Lot. But it was as necessary to be observed in all other Countries, as that which was their proper Inheritance. For, as Josephus truly observes, They that remove the Bounds of Lands, are not very far from subverting all Laws.

Ver. 15. One Witness shall not rise up] They that gave their Testimony in any Cause, always stood up.

Against a Man for any Iniquity, or for any Sin, &c.] A single Witness was not to be admitted, as sufficient to convict a Man of any Offence whatsoever, whether in Civil, or in Criminal Matters. For an Inquisition into the Fact, one was enough; but not for the Condemnation of him that was accused. Yet in Pecuniary Matters, one Witness was sufficient to bring a Man to purge himself by an Oath, xvii. 6.

At the Mouth of two Witnesses, or at the Mouth of three Witnesses, shall the Matter be established.] The Accusation shall stand, or fall to the Ground.

Ver. 16. If a false Witness rise up against any Man, to testify against him that which is wrong,] In any Matter, whether against GOD, or against Man. For tho' one Witness could not condemn another; yet if it were proved he was a false Witness, it was sufficient to condemn himself.

Ver. 17. Then both the Men between whom the Controversy is,] That is, the Accuser and the Person accused.

Shall stand before the LORD,] They were to come, in Cases obscure, to the Supreme Court, where the Sanctuary was settled; who sat, it is likely, at the Door of the Tabernacle in Moses's Times, (see xvii. 8. 22.) and so might properly be said to try them before the LORD.

Before the Priests, and the Judges, which shall be in those Days;] This they all understand of the highest Court, which consisted partly of Priests, and partly of other great Persons, whom he calls Judges; under which Name the whole Court is comprehended in the next Verse: see xvii. 8. and Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 8. n. 2, 3.

Ver. 18. And the Judges] The Court before-named; who are all (whether Priests or others) comprehended under the Name of Judges.

Shall make diligent Inquisition:] For it was not easy to prove a Man to be a false Witness; and therefore the Matter was brought before this Supreme Court.

And behold, if the Witness be a false Witness, and hath testified falsely against his Brother;] If, upon strict Examination, he was found to have given a false Evidence against his Brother, in a Matter which touched his Estate, or his Body, or his Life.

Ver. 19. Then shall ye do unto him, as he had thought to have done unto his Brother:] That is, saith Maimonides, if he designed to have taken away his Brother's Life, he was to lose his own; if to have him scourged, he was to be lashed himself; if to lose a Sum of Money, he was to be fined the very same Sum. More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 41. But tho' in most Cases a false Witness was to suffer the very same kind of Punishment, which he intended to have brought upon upon another, if his Testimony had not been disproved; yet in some it was not exactly observed. As if one falsely accused a Priest's Daughter of playing the Whore, he was not to be burnt, as she should have been, but to be strangled as an Adulterer. So J. Cocb. observes upon the Title Maccob. ad cap. i. where the whole Business of false Testimonies is handled. But some foolish Decisions were made by the Rabbins in Opposition to the Sadducees, as he observes in his Annot. 20. in sect. 6.

Among the Athenians there was an Action lay, not only against a false Witness, but against the Person who produced him; upon whom they set a Fine, and they were made infamous. And if they were found thrice guilty of this Crime, not only they, but their Posterity, were made infamous throughout all Generations; as Sam. Pettus observes out of Andocides, and others, lib. iv. in Leges Atticas, Tit. vii. p. 359. It is something strange they were not more severe against such Offenders, many of their Laws being plainly borrowed from Moses. And among the antient Romans, by the Law of the Twelve Tables, false Witnesses were thrown down from the Tarpeian Rock, as A. Gellius tells us, lib. xx. cap. i. which was altered indeed in latter Times for such Punishments as the Judges thought they merited: but he there tells Phavorinus, "That if the old Punishment had continued to their Days, they should not have had so many false Testimonies given, as they then saw."

So shalt thou put the Evil away from among you.] This may be understood either of the false Witness, or of his Crime: the Guilt of which was taken away by the just Punishment of it.

Ver. 20. And those which remain] The Remainder of Israel, who see him suffer in this kind.

Shall bear, and fear,] The End of Punishment is to deter others from such Wickedness: see xiii. 11. xvii. 13.

And shall henceforth commit no more any such Evil among you.] Learn to beware by other Mens Sufferings.

Ver. 21. And thine Eye shall not pity;] He speaks to the Judges, who were not, out of Compassion, to moderate the Punishment, but make it equal to the Damage he intended to another. Examples he gives of this in the Words following.

Life shall go for Life, Eye for Eye, Tooth for Tooth, Hand for Hand, Foot for Foot.] Concerning this Lex talionis, see Exod. xxi. 23, 24, 25. Levit. xxiv. 19, 20. And see Grotius on Matt. v. 38, 40. where he well observes, that the Party injured might forbear to require this Punishment; but the Judge, if it were required, could not deny to inflict it.

C H A P. XX.

Verse 1. WHEN thou goest out to Battle against thine Enemies,] Who either invaded them, (as in Judges xi.) or with whom they had a just Quarrel, because of Injuries done them without Satisfaction: such as that mentioned 2 Sam. x. 4, &c.

And select Horses,] Which the Israelites wanted, (as I observed upon xvii. 16.) their Armies consisting of Footmen; who were taken from the Plough, or from the Sheepfolds.

And Chariots, &c.] Which carried a certain Number of Men in them; and when they were falcati, (as they called them) were very formidable. For they made terrible Slaughters among the Enemy, cutting down Men, as we do Grass with a Sithe or Sickle. The Canaanites had great Numbers of them, Josh. xi. 4. and Judges iv. 3.

Be not afraid of them;] The Israelites were trained up to confide in God, and not in Horses, (which their Country, as I said, did not afford, and consequently they had no Chariots) nor in Multitude of Soldiers. And we find remarkable Instances of this, particularly in Jeboaphat (2 Chron. xx. 6, &c. 17.) who followed the Example of David, whose Words are most memorable, Psal. xx. 7. Some trust in Chariots, and some in Horses; but we will remember the Name of the LORD our GOD. See also Prov. xxi. 21.

For the LORD thy GOD is with thee, which brought thee up out of the Land of Egypt.] That was such an Instance of his Power, as made it unreasonable to doubt of good Success, when he was present with them; as he always was, while they continued faithful Worshipers of him.

The Translation of Onkelos is here very remarkable; which is, the LORD thy GOD, his Word is thy Help: which plainly denotes another divine Person, the same with JEHOVAH.

Ver. 2. And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the Battle,] Are about to give or receive the Assault.

That the Priest shall approach, and speak unto the People;] The Jews say there was a Priest appointed for this very Purpose, whom they call MASCHUACH MILCHAMA, Anointed of War, he being set apart, as they say, to this Office by an Unction, and that with the same Oil which the King was anointed withal. His Office was to blow with the Trumpet, to make the following Speech unto the Army, when they were preparing to join Battle; and when they first went out, to exhort all new Builders, Planters, and married Men to return back; and when they were drawn up in Battalia, to exhort all that were faint-hearted to leave the Army, and go Home: see Numb. xxxi. 6. A great many of the Jewish Doctors thus explain this, particularly Maimonides, who may serve instead of all: see Schickard, Jus Regium, cap. 5. Theor. 18. and Hottinger in his Histor. Eccles. Seculum xvi. Pars ii. p. 689, 690, &c. Where he produces an excellent Discourse out of R. Levi Barzelonita's Catechism, to shew the Office of this αρχιερεως, Anointed for the War; and the Reason why he was appointed to it: for Soldiers, saith he, in the Time of War, have great Need to be heartened and confirmed in their Resolution. And because the more honourable any one is, the more willingly Men hearken to him; therefore the Law required, that he, who was to encourage others, should be a select Person himself, and a Priest; to whom they would be apt to pay a great Reverence.

Ver. 3. And shall say unto them, &c.] Going from one Battalion (as we now speak) unto another; other; or else, ordering the Officers (mentioned Verse 5.) to go about, and speak every-where, what he did at the Head of the Army. And he was to speak in the Hebrew Language, and no other, as the Jews say, in Mischna Sota, cap. 8. sect. 1. And they have a Conceit, that the Romans learn'd both the Form of Encamping out of Moses's Law, and also to make Orations to their Soldiers, before they went to fight, as J. Wagenfeil observes out of Shilte Hagibborim: tho' it is more reasonable to think, that common Sense taught those that were Leaders of others, to encourage them to follow them.

You approach this Day unto Battle against your Enemies:] Who often appeared very formidable, by the vast Number of their Horses and Chariots; which the Israelites wanted.

Let not your Hearts faint,] So we well translate the Hebrew Word, be soft, or tender. Which, tho' it be a Quality highly commendable with respect to GOD, (2 Kings xxii. 19.) yet the contrary became them towards their and his Enemies.

Fear not, and do not tremble,] Trembling, or, as the Hebrew Word is, making haste, i. e. turning away, is the Effect of Fear.

Neither be ye terrified because of them:] Sometimes a great Dread of Danger made Men run away, and sometimes so dismayed them, that they could not stir, much less strike a Stroke.

Some of the Jewish Doctors fancy, that the four several Words here used, are opposed to so many Actions of their Enemies, whereby they hoped to strike a Terror into them. Let not your Hearts faint, when your Enemies brandish their Swords, and clash them one against another: Fear not, when you hear the Prancing of their Horses, and the terrible Rattling of their Chariots: And do not tremble, when they shout, as if they were sure of Victory: Neither be ye terrified, when you hear the Trumpet sound an Alarm to the Battle. So Moses Kotzensis. See Schickard, cap. 5. Theor. 16. p. 115. And such a Passage Wagenfeil observes out of Philostatus, lib. ii. cap. 5. upon the Gemara of Sota, cap. 8. sect. ii. p. 876.

Ver. 4. For the LORD your GOD is he that goeth with you, to fight for you against your Enemies,] Sometimes the Ark of GOD's Presence went before them, when they entered into Canaan, Josh. iii. 3, 10, 11, &c. and in the midst of them, when they compassed Jericho, Josh. vi. 9. So that GOD was properly then said to go with them, or in the midst of them, as the Vulgar Latin here translates it. And at all other Times he was present, by his Power, to aid them, especially against the People of Canaan, with whom their Battles were said to be the Wars of the LORD.

To save you.] To preserve them by the Defeat and Overthrow of their Enemies.

Ver. 5. And the Officers shall speak unto the People, saying,] This the Jews, particularly Abarbinel, think was spoken by the Priest before-mentioned, and then proclaimed by the Officers, called Schoterim, of whom I have observed enough before, xvi. 18. and other Places. They that would see more, may consult J. Wagenfeil, upon that Title, in the Mischna called Sota, cap. 8. p. 854. But by whomsoever this was spoken, it seems most likely to have been delivered before they drew nigh to the Battle, (see ver. 2.) at the first Mustering of the Army.

What Man is there that hath built a new House, and hath not dedicated it?] i. e. Hath not yet dwelt in it. For at their first Entrance to dwell in an House, they made a Feast, which being the first Meal they made there, was called Cbanach, or Dedication; as the same Wagenfeil observes out of Michlol Jopbi: see in cap. 8. Sota, sect. 2. Annot. 3. And because a Year is allowed to a Man to enjoy his Wife, before he be obliged to go to the Wars, (xxiv. 5.) they allow the same Time in these other Cases, for the Enjoyment of a new House, or of a Vineyard; as many have observed, particularly Selden, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 13. n. 1. and Schickard, in his Jus Regium, cap. 5. Theor. 16, 17. And they understand this, not only of a new built House, but of a House newly come into a Man's Possession, either by Succession, Purchase, or Gift; yet not of such Houses as were not fit for Habitation, as Mr. Selden reports their Opinion, lib. iii. de Uxor. Hebr. cap. iii. In which he seems to have forgot himself; for the Mischna in Sota, cap. 8. sect. ii. saith expressly, this is to be understood of him that built a House, wherein to lay Straw, to make a Stable, a Barn, or a Granary; because, as Wagenfeil there notes, such Places might, in Case of Necessity, be turned into a Dwelling-house.

Let him go and return to his House, lest he die in the Battle, and another Man dedicate it.] This was allowed in those Wars only which they made voluntarily, but not of those which were ex precepto, by the divine Commandment, against the seven Nations of Canaan and Amalek, in which every Man was bound to engage. And so are the other Cases, which here follow, to be understood, as all the Jewish Writers agree.

Another Man dedicate it.] First enjoy it; for this Word here does not denote any Consecration, (as in other Places) but beginning to use a Thing; which in our English Language (as Mr. Selden observes in the Place fore-named) we call taking Handseil of it; and so the Spanish Jews express it in their Translation.

Ver. 6. And what Man is he that hath planted a Vineyard, and hath not yet eaten of it?] Which he could not lawfully do for the three first Years after it was planted: see Levit. xix. 29, &c. And in the fourth Year, the Fruit of it was to be carried to Jerusalem, and eaten there; after which, the Fruit of the fifth Year was wholly his own, when it was no longer sacred, (as the Hebrew Word Chillel signifies) but common for every Body's Use. Aben-Ezra takes the Word in the Sense of Rejoicing; as if he had said, Who hath planted a Vineyard, and hath not danced in it? for this was the Custom, he saith, when they first enjoyed the Fruits of their Vineyards. And to this the LXX seem to have had Respect, when they translate it, ἐν εὐφροσύνῃ καὶ αὐτῷ, he hath not been made merry by it. But the other Notion is more proper; and the Jews understand it, not only of Vineyards, but of all other Plantations wherein there were Fruit-trees fit for Food, if there were five of them planted together gether in good Order, such as R. Solomon and Wagenfeil have described: and see Selden. Uxor. Hebr. lib. iii. cap. 3. p. 334.

Let him also go, and return unto his House, lest he die in Battle, and another Man eat of it.] The Ground both of this, and the foregoing Proclamation, (and of the next also) seems to have been, That the Minds of such Men were commonly very much disturbed, to think of leaving what they had taken a great deal of Pains about, and enjoy nothing of it; which would naturally make them fight with less Courage. So R. Solomon. And Josephus much to the same Purpose, μη παρρησιάζωντες φεύγειν το ζῆλον, &c. lest, out of a longing Desire after these Things, they should be sparing of hazarding their Lives; and reserving themselves for their Enjoyment, not fight manfully. But many think this was a bare Concession to such Persons; who, if they could overcome their Affection to all Things, but the Safety of their Country, might remain in the Camp, and go to Battle. Yet Abarbinel disputes strongly against this, and will have all these to be Precepts, injoining such Persons, as are here mentioned, not to stay in the Army, but to return Home.

Ver. 7. And what Man is there that hath betrothed a Wife, and hath not taken her, &c.] The Jews interpret this Law, either of one who had espoused a Wife, and not yet brought her Home; or of one that had but newly completed his Marriage. And whether he had married a Widow or a Virgin, an old Woman or a young, it was the same Thing. Yea, they extend it to him who had married his Brother's Wife; but not to him who had married a Person prohibited to him by the Law, or him that took his own Wife again, whom he had formerly put away, because she was not a new Wife, as the Phrase is, Deut. xxiv. 5. where the Time being limited, how long such a Man should be free from the War, viz. for one Year, they extend it, as I said, to the other two Cases; that so long Men might enjoy a new House, or a Vineyard after the first Use of them, as the Law allowed them to enjoy a Wife, before they went to War: see Selden, lib. iii. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 3. and Schickard, in his Jus Regium, cap. v. Theor. 17. And it must be confessed, that this is a Law of great Equity, founded in Nature, that conjugal Love should not be disturbed; but have some Time to knit into a strong and stable Affection, by an uninterrupted Conversation together in its Beginning. The Jews were so favourable in this Matter, that they say, if five Brethren were in the War together, and one of them was slain, leaving a Widow without Issue, all the remaining four returned Home; because every one of them, in their Order, in Case those before him refused, was to raise up Seed to his dead Brother.

Ver. 8. And the Officers shall speak further unto the People, and they shall say,] Make this new Proclamation throughout the Camp.

What Man is there that is fearful and faint-hearted? This some of the Jews understand of a natural Timoroufness, which makes Men quake at every Danger; and others refer it to those that were old, in whom that Heat and Vigour which makes Men valiant, was quite abated. Upon which Account they would not admit one who had no Children to go to War; (if we may believe Maimonides) because he was not thought masculine enough; or rather, because they would not cut off all Hope of his having Posterity. But there are those who understand this of the Terrors of an evil Conscience. (See Sota, cap. viii. sect. 5.) For they did not do as we are wont in these Days (who send the wickedest Villains into the Wars); but if they knew any Man to be guilty of a great Crime, thrust him out of the Army, lest they should all fare the worse for having him among them: see Schickard, in his Jus Regium, cap. v. Theorem 17. p. 124.

Let him go and return unto his House, lest his Brethrens Heart faint as well as his Heart.] For the Cowardice of some might enfeeble the rest. Yet all these who were thus dismissed, were bound (if required) to furnish the Army with Victuals and Water, to clear the Ways, and to take up their Quarters; as it is in the foregoing Place in Sota, cap. viii. where Jo. Wagenfeil observes, that they who restrain these Offices only to the Fearful, are mistaken.

Ver. 9. And it shall be, when the Officers have made an End of speaking unto the People, that they shall make Captains of the Armies to lead the People.] This shews that what I noted ver. 5. is true; that the foregoing Proclamation was made before they marched forth to the War: for how should they march till there were Captains chosen, to lead the several Armies, (as those Companies, into which they were divided, are called) which was not done till he had spoken all the forenamed Things? And if we translate the Words as they may be out of the Hebrew, [they shall place, or set Captains of the Hosts in the Head, or the Front, of the People] still it must be supposed, that this was done before they stirred a Foot; for no Order could be observed without Leaders.

Ver. 10. When thou comest nigh unto a City, to fight against it, then proclaim Peace unto it.] I have often noted, that there were two sorts of War which the Jews undertook: one by the divine Commandment against the seven Nations of Canaan; another voluntary, when they themselves found just Cause to make War upon any other neighbouring Nation. Now this Precept many of the Jews will needs understand only concerning the latter sort of War; for the Canaanites were to be utterly destroyed without Mercy. But Maimonides and Moses Kotzensis take it to belong to both sorts of War. So the former of them in exprefs Words, It was not lawful to make War upon any one whatsoever, before they offered them Terms of Peace, &c. Only they think the Ammonites and Moabites were to be excepted by that Law, xxiii. 6. yet they temper it thus, That if those Nations desired Peace of themselves, it was to be granted to them, tho' not offered. And the most antient Writers of the Jews say, that Joshua sent three Messages to the seven Nations of Canaan before he invaded them, tho' he undertook the War with a Command from God to destroy them, viz. if they did not submit to the Summons which was sent them, either to flee, or to make Peace; which was the Subject of the two first Messages. The next was a Denunciation of War against them, as they say in the Jerusalem Talmud; quoted by Mr. Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 13. And see the learned J. Wagenfil, in Annot. upon Sota, p. 845. Maimonides was of Opinion, that the Gibeonites had not heard of these Proclamations, which made them use Craft to procure Mercy from the Israelites. But P. Cuneus thinks it more probable, that they had refused at first to submit to Joshua's Summons; but seeing him victorious, they betook themselves to that Artifice, mentioned in the Book of Joshua, when they could not hope for Peace by any other Means, lib. ii. de Republ. Hebr. cap. 20.

Ver. 11. And it shall be, if it make thee Answer of Peace, and open unto thee,] Accept of the Conditions offered to them, which were three. First, That they should take upon them the Observation of the several Precepts of the Sons of Noah, and consequently renounce Idolatry: Secondly, Pay them a yearly Tribute: and, Thirdly, Become their Subjects: see Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 4. and Schickard, in his Jus Regium, cap. 5. Theor. 16.

Then it shall be, that all the People that is found therein, shall be Tributaries unto thee, and they shall serve thee.] Here are two of the Conditions before-mentioned; and the first was necessarily supposed, because the Israelites were not to suffer any of their Gods to remain among them: for tho' by serving the Israelites is not meant being made their Slaves, yet it imports that they were to live in due Subjection to them as their Governors, who might employ them in their Publick Works, as repairing the King's Palace, the Walls of Cities, &c.

Ver. 12. And if it will make no Peace with thee, but will make War against thee; then thou shalt besiege it.] Without any further Summons to yield upon Conditions of Peace.

Ver. 13. And when the LORD thy GOD hath delivered it into thine Hands,] Of which they were not to doubt, ver. 4.

Thou shalt smite every Male thereof with the Edge of the Sword;] Which was a just Punishment for their Obstinacy; of which the Men, who were here condemned to Destruction, were the Authors, and suffered the more justly, because they were told, no doubt, before-hand, that if they did not yield when Conditions were offered to them, they must expect this Execution.

Ver. 14. But the Women and the little ones,] Who had not offended, by rejecting Conditions of Peace, nor could do any Harm. And by little ones are to be understood Male Children, as well as Female.

And the Cattle, and all that is in the City, even all the Spoil thereof,] Money, Household-stuff, and all manner of Goods.

Shalt thou take unto thyself, &c.] This was granted to them as a Reward of their Service in the War.

Ver. 15. Thus shalt thou do unto all the Cities, which are very far off from thee, which are not of the Cities of these Nations.] This Clemency to the Women and little ones, is limited to those that were not Inhabitants of the Land of Canaan; who, in the following Verses, are ordered to be otherwise treated. For by the Laws of War among all Nations, the Conqueror might use those whom he subdued as he pleased: see Grotius, lib. iii.

de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 4. sect. 5. where, among other Things, he quotes that Saying of Marcellus in Livy, Quicquid in hostibus feci, jus belli defendit. Whatsoever I have done with Enemies, the Right of War defends it.

Ver. 16. But of the Cities of these People, which the LORD thy GOD doth give thee for an Inheritance,] The Cities of the Land of Canaan.

Thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth:] i. e. neither Man, Woman, nor Child, as we speak. But their Cattel, (except in few Cases, when they were appointed to be a CHEREM, i. e. accursed) were not to be killed, as appears from Josh. xi. 14. And this Slaughter of all the People is to be understood only in Case they did not surrender when they were summoned, but rejected the Conditions of Peace that were offered to them. After this, no Mercy was to be had upon them: see Exod. xxiii. 32. In which their Condition was worse than any other People's, whose Men were only to be slain, ver. 14. but not Women and Children. For which Difference there was a great Reason, as I shall shew presently; but if we could see none, we ought to consider, that it was done by GOD's Command; who, as he is most just and merciful, so hath a greater Right over Men, than we have over Beasts, as Grotius well observes; who alledges many Examples of the like Practice in the Heathen World, both among Greeks and Romans: see lib. iii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 4. sect. 9.

Ver. 17. But thou shalt utterly destroy them,] After they had slighted all Offers of Peace. Some of the Jews indeed have been so merciful as to think this is not a Command, but a Permission; which warranted them to kill all, without any Distinction of Sex or Age; yet did not so injoin it, but that they might, after they had taken a City, spare such as repented, and offered to become Profelytes of the Gate. This was the Opinion, one would think, which antiently prevailed; as Selden observes, (lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 16.) because we find the Relicks of these People often mentioned in the Bible. And this is agreeable also to the Law of Nations, that such as beg Mercy should be spared; which flowed from the antient Right which such Persons were thought to have to it, (as David Chytraeus observes out of Thucydides, lib. iii.) and the known Verse of the Oracle, Μηδ' ἱκέτας ἀδικῶν ἱκέτας ἱερὸν τε καὶ ἀγνόν.

Not to hurt Supplicants, who are sacred, and acquitted of their Offences. He doth not mention the Place where this Oracle was uttered; but Ezekiel Spanbemiſius hath lately observed out of Pausanias, that it was at Dodone: see Observationes in Callimachi Hymnum in Dianam, ver. 123. where he notes, that from hence Jupiter was called ἱκέτις, because he was accounted a severe and implacable Avenger of all Violence done to Supplicants. And they are Supplicants, (says the same Chytraeus) who confess their Sin, and acknowledging they deserve Punishment, give themselves up to the Pleasure of the Conqueror; but beg the Punishment may be mitigated by Mercy and Clemency.

Namely,

Nam in the Hittites, and the Amorites, the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee.] He distinctly mentions the Nations which were to be utterly destroyed, that this Severity might be extended no further. And so he had done before, vii. 1. where he mentions seven Nations, tho' here are only six, the Gergazites being omitted. The Reason of which Almonides in Hilulim Meluchim thinks to be, that they upon the first Summons of Joshua fled the Country into Assyria; and therefore are not named in Josh. ix. 1. 2. among those that gathered themselves together against Israel. But I take the true Reason of this to be, that the Gergazites were a People mixed among the rest; and did not live in a separate Part of the Country by themselves: but that they opposed Joshua, as well as others, and were delivered into his Hand, appears from Josh. xxiv. 11. Now this looks like a great Cruelty, to kill so many Nations; till we consider who the People were, that God commanded to be utterly extirpated, viz. most abominable Idolaters, who offered their Children to Moloch, as a Piece of pious Worship, Magicians, Witches, Necromancers; and guilty of all those filthy Lusts mentioned in Lev. xviii. For which Crimes God thought them not fit to live any longer upon the Face of the Earth; and therefore commanded them to be utterly destroy'd in this War, which was undertaken by his Order, and called therefore the War of the Lord. And so was that against Amor and Or, who were likewise Amorites, and upon that Score rooted out by God's Order, Numb. xxi. ult. Deut. ii. 34. For it was Mercy to others, not to suffer such a wicked Generation to live.

Ver. 18. That they teach you not to do after all their Abominations, which they have done unto their Gods.] Here is the great Reason given of the fore-named severe Execution, that if they had been spared, they would have infected the Israelites with their filthy Idolatry. Which some make an Argument, why Peace was not to be proclaimed to these Nations, Josh. 10. because they were so wicked, that on no Terms it was fit to suffer them to live. But they that object this against what was before said, forget, or do not consider, that the great Condition of Peace with them, was, that they should renounce their Idolatry; and then there was no such Danger in sparing them. And this was so settled in the Opinion of the ancient Jews, that after they had taken a City, they thought, upon these Terms, there was Room for Mercy. So the Book Sigori, upon these very Words, and they teach you not to do after all their Abominations. From whence it is to be observed, that that Author if they repented, the Israelites might let them live. And so R. Solomon himself, it is to be understood that if they repented, and became Proselytes, it was lawful to receive them.

So should ye sin against the Lord your God.] Both by suffering them to live, and imitating them in their Wickedness.

Ver. 19. When thou shalt besiege a City a long Time, in making War against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the Trees thereof, by felling an Ash against them; for thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down.] It is very plain that he speaks of Fruit-Trees, such as bear Apples, Olives, Dates, &c. which were to be preserved both in War and in Peace; except in a few Cases. In War, if the Enemy made Advantage of them, for their Archers to lurk and shelter themselves behind them, by which the Israelites were much annoy'd, then they think they might be cut down, to shorten the Siege. And in Peace, if they did not bring forth Fruit, or if the Fruit would not be so profitable as the Wood would be for building, and other Uses; or if they hindered the Growth of better Trees: in all these Cases they might be cut down, as the Jewish Doctors resolve. Who, when they please, mind the Reason of a Law, and not the bare Words; inasmuch that they extend this Law to a great many other Things, which they say might not be destroyed, if they were useful and profitable. No Houses for Instance, nor Garments, nor Household-stuff; nor were they to stop up Fountains, &c. See Solomon, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 15. and Gual. Sabaudus in Jus Regium, cap. 5. Theorem 18.

For the Tree of the Field is Man's Life, &c.] The Word Life is not in the Hebrew Text; but we add it to make out the Sense. In which we follow many good Authors among the Jews, particularly Josephus, who observes many such elliptical, i. e. concise Forms of Speech in Scripture. As in 1 Sam. xvi. 20, where an Ash of Bread, is an Ash should with Bread. So here the Tree is a Man, i. e. the Life or Support of Man. Just as, xxiv. 6. it is said, a Man should not take the Upper or Nether Millstone to pledge, et nequeat ea, because it is his Life, i. e. that whereby he gets his Livelihood. But there are a great many who translate the Words by way of Interrogation, (and the Hebrew will bear it) and joining them with those that follow, make this the Sense, Is the Tree of the Field a Man, that it should come against thee in the Siege? So the Vulgar, the Greek, and the Arabic Translation, in the Chaldee Paraphrase, and Targum, as Mr. Sehns observes, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 12. As much as to say, they need not fear any Danger from the Trees, as if they were Soldiers that could fight against them. And if this Sense do not seem dilute, (as some have censured it) there is no need of rendering the Words by way of Interrogation, but only of repeating the Word not out of the foregoing Words, in this Manner, Thou shalt not cut them down, for the Tree of the Field is not a Man, &c. Of this there are many Examples, as Glossius and our Translator have shewn. And thus R. Solomon among the Jews expounds these Words; and the famous Shurim, who thus glosses upon them, It is not decent to make War against Trees, who have no Hands to fight with thee; but against Men only. And this Sense Grotius follows, lib. iii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 12. sect. 2. where he produces Poils for this Opinion, and Josephus, who says, If Trees could speak, they would cry out, that it was unjust, that they who were no Cause of the War, should suffer the Mischiefs of it. And thus Onkelos translates these Words, and those that follow, For the Tree of the Field is not as a Man, that it should come against thee in the Siege; that is, they had no Cause to fear Trees, and therefore should not hurt them.

them. But this is a Reason against cutting down any Trees whatsoever; whereas Moses speaks only of Fruit-trees. From whence Grotius thinks that Saying of the Pythagoreans took its Original, ἡμερον οὗτον ἢ ἑγκαρπον, &c. Trees that do not grow wild, and bear Fruit, ought not to be hurt, much less cut down. And yet it seems to be more agreeable to the Hebrew Words, than our marginal Translation, which makes this Sense, That there are Trees of the Field sufficient to employ in the Siege; so that they need not cut down Fruit-Trees, to carry it on.

Ver. 20. Only the Trees which thou knowest, that they be not Trees for Meat, thou shalt destroy and cut them down;] If it were necessary for the raising Bulwarks, (as it here follows) or otherways to distress the Enemy, they had Liberty to cut down Trees that did not bear Fruit; but not merely to make Waste and Desolation.

And thou shalt build Bulwarks against the City that maketh War with thee,] From whence they battered the City, and threw great Stones into it; as well as begirt them round, that no Provisions might be brought in to them. Thus we find they did in After-times, 2 Chron. xxvi. 15. 2 Sam. xx. 15. And they must have some such Inventions in Moses his Days; or else how could they take Cities fortified with such high Walls as are mentioned Deut. i. 28? Or to what Purpose should they build Bulwarks, and cast up Banks, but from thence to batter the City with some Engine or other?

Until it be subdued.] From these Words the Jewish Doctors conclude, That it was lawful to make War even upon the Sabbath; because having set down before a City, they were to proceed till it was subdued; which these Words suppose might not be in a short Time. Only they say, that the Siege was to be begun at least three Days before the Sabbath. Thus these superstitious People, not thinking common Reason sufficient to justify them in so plain a Case, make the Scripture speak what it intended not, for their Warrant: see Schickard in his Jus Regium, cap. v. Theorem xviii. where he alledges Maimonides in his Hilkoth Melachim to this Purpose. And Job. Benedictus Carpozovius produces a plainer out of Hilkoth Schabbath, where he delivers their Sense in these Words, A Siege is to be begun three Days before the Sabbath; and then it may be continued every Day, even upon the Sabbath, until the City be taken: and this may be done in a War that is voluntarily undertaken. For thus our wise Men understand these Words by antient Tradition, until it be subdued.

CHAP. XXI.

Verse 1. IF one be found slain in the Land which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee to possess it,] This follows very properly after the Law he had delivered, about making War; because then the Bodies of dead Men were most frequently found. About which the wisest Lawgivers took the greatest Care that Inquisition should be made, how and by whom they were slain. This appears by Plato, who in his Ninth Book de Legibus, hath a Law something like to this, tho' far short of the Solemnity that is here required to be used; as I shall observe in the Conclusion of this Statute.

Lying in the Field, and it be not known who hath slain him,] The Hebrew Doctors here stick too much to the Letter of these Words; for they will not have them reach to a dead Body hanging in the Air upon a Tree, or hid in the Sand or Duft, or floating upon the Water, which is extreme absurd.

Ver. 2. Then thy Elders and thy Judges shall come forth,] The great Sanhedrim were to send forth some of their Members (so the Jews interpret it) to do what here follows. And indeed it may be thought that none but they could take Care of this Matter, the Doubt being to which of the neighbouring Cities (where the other Judges lived) it belonged. Therefore the Paraphrase ascribed to Uzielides saith, Two of the wise Men or Elders, and three of the Judges, were sent by the great Sanhedrim about this Business: see Selden, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. vii. n. 2.

Yet he observes in another Part of that most learned Work, lib. ii. cap. 7. n. 3. that there were a sort of Elders, who were not ordained by laying on of Hands, but only were venerable Persons for their Age and Prudence, who, some think, might serve for this Employment. And they called such Elders, Zickne Hasbuck, Elders of the Street, or Vulgar Elders. But none, I think, hath discoursed more critically upon these Words, thy Elders, and thy Judges, than our Mr. Thorn-dike; who observes, that there had been Judges constituted to determine Causes by Jethro's Advice, (Exod. xviii.) the greater Causes being reserved for Moses alone. For whose Assistance GOD afterward appointed Seventy Elders, (Numb. xi.) who made up the great Court of Judgment in that Nation. Now they of this great Consistory are called the Elders of Israel; but they of other Consistories, or inferior Courts, are called barely Elders, or Elders of such a City; see Review of the Rights of the Church, p. 70. where he alledges this very Place for it; and by thy Elders understands the Elders of Israel; the lower Elders being mentioned in the next Verse. And so those of the great Consistory are commonly called in the Gospel: and in like Manner, the Scribes of the People, and thy Scribes, signify there those of this High Court. Whereas the bare Name of Scribes is extended further, to the inferior Doctors of the Law. As also the Name of Rulers, and that of Rulers of the People, are to be understood with the like Difference.

And they shall measure unto the Cities, which are round about him that is slain.] That is, if it were dubious what City lay nearest to the dead Body, as it sometimes happened. But commonly, it is probable, at the first View they easily discerned this, and so did not trouble themselves to measure. It is a frivolous Dispute in the Mishnah, from whence they were to measure; whether from the Navel, or the Nose, or the Forehead: which last seems more rational to Maimonides, who calls it the Centre of the Body. But they did not, (if we believe the Jewish Doctors) in their measuring, take Notice of any City, wherein there was not a Court of twenty-three Elders; and Jerusalem was always excepted: See Selden, in the Place fore-named, n. iii. and L'Empereur upon Bava Kama, p. 173. and Wagenseil Wagenfeil upon Sota, p. 899. If the dead Body lay nearest to the Country of the Gentiles, then they did not measure at all; but it was presumed the Man was killed by them.

Ver. 3. And it shall be, that the City which is next unto the slain Man,] From whence it might be presumed the Murderer came, or was fled thither, as Abarbinel discourses.

Even the Elders of that City,] Who were different from the Elders before-mention'd (see the foregoing Verse); for they returned to Jerusalem, when they had seen the Body buried, if there was no Discovery of the Murderer: and then the Senators of the City next to the dead Body, who were twenty-three, performed what is here ordered.

Shall take an Heifer,] That was not above two Years old; for if it were a Day more, they might not use it for this Purpose, as Maimonides and others affirm. Yet the Scripture, in other Cases, mentions one of three Years old, Gen. xv. 9. Isa. xv. 5. Jer. xlviii. 34. as Wagenfeil observes upon the Mischna of Sota, cap. ix. sect. iii. Annot. 2. If two Cities happened to be equidistant from the dead Body, then they joined together to provide this Heifer.

Which hath not been wrought with,] Never used in ploughing the Ground.

And which hath not drawn in the Yoke,] This may seem to be included in the foregoing Expression, as Maimonides observes; but it is added, he thinks, to signify, that if it had been employed in any other Labour, it became improper for this Use. Such Heifers were accounted by the Heathen to be most acceptable to their Gods, as appears by Homer; in whom Diomedes and Nestor promise such an Offering to Pallas: see Bochart, lib. ii. Hieroz. cap. 33. p. 1. out of Iliad κ. and Odyss. 1.

But there was a particular Reason for such an one in this Case, (wherein the Heifer was not to be offered) that it might the better represent, as many think, the Person that had committed this Murder, who was a Son of Belial, subject to no Law, and deserved to be beheaded as this Heifer was. It is not required that it should be without Blemish, as those Heifers were to be, that were offered at the Tabernacle: but it sufficed, if it had never been accustomed to the Yoke. Yet this is not to be taken without all Limitation; for if it wanted any Member, or were diseased, it might not be employed in this Service; as Wagenfeil observes out of Maimonides, in the Place fore-named, p. 907.

Ver. 4. And the Elders of that City shall bring down the Heifer] Their Cities, it seems, were commonly seated on Hills, or high Ground.

Unto a rough Valley,] The Hebrew Word Nachal signifies both a Valley and a Torrent. The LXX, Josephus, and the Vulgar, understand it as we do; and the following Words favour this Interpretation. But the Talmudists and the Rabbins, who generally follow them, take it to signify a Torrent, which is the Sense of Maimonides himself; and the next Word Etban (which we translate rough) they interpret a rapid Torrent. Chaskuni thinks there is some Reason for this, in the sixth Verse, where they are required to wash their Hands over the Heifer in the Water that is of the Brook. I see nothing to hinder the putting both Senses together; Torrents being wont to run down violently from the Mountains, through the Valleys which lie beneath them; which is the Cause that the same Word signifies both.

Which is neither eared] Or rather, ploughed.

Nor sown;] Being a stony, craggy Ground, representing the Horridness of the Murder, and the Cruelty and Hardness of the Man's Heart who committed it. They that follow the other Interpretation of Nachal, understood the foregoing Words, [Ascher lo jeabeth bo] which we translate neither eared, as if they signified the Torrent did not serve to water the neighbouring Ground: and these Words to be meant of the Soil which lay next to the Torrent, in which nothing was sown. And besides this Variety, there are those who take Etban not to signify either that which is hard or rapid, but the most fertile Ground: so R. Berbai, and lately R. Abendana, in his marginal Notes upon Micthal Jophi, where he gives this Reason for it; That the Inhabitants of each City might be the more careful to prevent such Murders, being in Danger otherwise to lose the best Ground belonging to their Inheritance. For the Land where the Body was found, (if we may believe the Mischna) was never to be sown any more. See Sota, cap. ix. sect. 5.

And shall strike off the Heifer's Neck there, in the Valley.] Coming behind the Heifer, (saith the Mischna) as the Murderer was supposed to have treacherously surprized the slain Man; and should have been thus used, if he could have been found.

Ver. 5. And the Priests the Sons of Levi] See xvii. 9, 18. xviii. 1.

Shall come near;] To see all performed according to the Law, and to pray to God for the Country, in the Words prescribed ver. 8.

For them the LORD thy God hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the Name of the LORD.] See Exod. xxviii. 1, &c. Numb. vi. 23, &c.

And by their Word shall every Controversy, and every Stroke be tried.] They did not determine all Matters whatsoever, but all of this Nature; in which the Law appointed them to take care Things were done according to it. As in the killing the red Heifer; the Examination of the Woman suspected of Adultery, by the Water of Jealousy; the Leprosy, whether in Men, or Houses, or Garments. Thus the Hebrews explain these Words: see Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. viii. And so Bonfrenius here acknowledges, that they did not come hither as Judges, but as Directors; and that they might purge themselves, together with the Elders, from all Guilt of this Crime.

Ver. 6. And all the Elders of that City that are next to the slain Man,] If there were never so many Elders in the City, they were all to clear themselves by doing what follows.

Shall wash their Hands over the Heifer, &c.] In the Water of the Brook, which flowed through the Valley; protesting their Innocence, in the Words prescribed in the next Verse. So Chaskuni glosses, As our Hands are clean, so are we from the Guilt of this Blood: see Wagenfeil upon Sota, p. 910, who thinks Pilate had Respect to this Rite, when he condemned our Saviour, (Matth. xxvii. 24.) notwithstanding all that learned Men have said to the contrary.

Ver.

Ver. 7. And they shall answer and say,] Being asked, perhaps, whether they knew any Thing of this Murder.

Our Hands have not shed this Blood, neither have our Eyes seen it.] That is, they professed solemnly they knew not who shed it, nor how the Man came to be slain. And the Mischna before mentioned adds, that they said, (for how can any one think that Elders would be Murderers?) This Man did not come into our City that we know of, and dismissed without necessary Provisions; nor was seen by us, and permitted to go away without Company. Which Maimonides expresses more largely in his More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 40. where he represents the Wisdom of this Law, in these Words: “The Elders called GOD to Witness, that they had not neglected to secure the Ways, nor to set Watches, to examine diligently those that travelled, saying, as our Rabbins express it, This Man was not killed through any Negligence or Forgetfulness, which we were guilty of, in not observing our publick Constitutions; nor do we know who killed him. Now by this Inquisition into the Fact, by this going forth of the Elders, and the striking off the Heifer’s Head, &c. a great deal of Discourse necessarily arose about this Business, which made the Thing publick, and was a probable Means of discovering the Murderer, by some or other who were there, or should hear of all this.” And if any one came, and said he knew the Author, then they forbore to behead the Heifer: but the Man being apprehended, if the House of Judgment did not put him to Death, the King had Power to do it: if he neglected it, the Avenger of Blood might kill him wheresoever he met him. By which it appears, that this solemn Process here mentioned, tended very much to detect the Murderer. Unto which this also contributed, that the Place where the Heifer’s Head was struck off, might never be ploughed or sowed hereafter, (as I noted before) which made the Owners of that Ground employ their utmost Diligence to find out the Murderer, that their Land might not lie waste for ever; for they might not so much as plant a Tree upon it.

Ver. 8. Be merciful, O LORD, unto thy People Israel, whom thou hast redeemed; and lay not innocent Blood unto thy People of Israel’s Charge.] The Priests alone pronounced these Words, as the Mischna there saith; tho’ Josephus (who often differs from the Talmudists) saith, Both Priests and Elders prayed GOD to be propitious unto them, and to prevent the like Evil from falling out again in their Region: see Selden, lib. iii. de Synedr. cap. 7. n. 5, 6.

And the Blood shall be forgiven them.] These are not the Words of the Priests, saith the same Mischna; but the HOLY GHOST pronounces, That when they observed these Rites, the Guilt should be removed from them; which, in some sort, would have lain upon them, if they had taken no Notice of a Murder committed so near to their City, nor made Inquisition after it, and expressed their Abhorrence of it.

Ver. 9. So shalt thou put away the Guilt of innocent Blood from among you, when thou shalt do that which is right in the Sight of the LORD.] Sincerely protesting their Innocence and Detestation of this Fact: which was to be done in the Day-time, and not in the Night; and the Body of the Heifer was to be buried, but none of it eaten, or any Part employed to other Use. If the Murderer was found before its Head was struck off, it was to be let go into the Pasture among other Beasts; if after, he was to suffer capital Punishment, that is, to be cut off by the Sword, as the Mischna before-mentioned explains it, cap. 9. sect. 7.

By all this it appears, that no antient Law made such Provision for the Discovery and Expiation of secret Murders, as this of Moses. For the very best of them, which is that of Plato, enacts no more than this, That if a Man was found dead, and he that killed him, after a diligent Search, could not be heard of, publick Proclamation should be made, that he who was guilty of the Fact should not come into any holy Place, nor any Part of the whole Country; for if he were discovered and apprehended, he should be put to Death, καὶ ἐξω τῆς τῆς πόλεως ἐν ἁγίοις χώροις ἀπαγορεύεται, and be thrown out of the Bounds of the Country, and have no Burial, lib. ix. de Legibus, p. 874.

Ver. 10. When thou goest forth to War against thine Enemies,] To a voluntary War against any of their neighbouring Nations, not against the People of Canaan, none of which were to be spared, if they stood out and fought, but destroyed by the divine Precept, which required this War.

And the LORD thy GOD hath delivered them into thine Hands, and thou hast taken them captive,] As the Manner was, to make them Slaves to their Conquerors.

Ver. 11. And seest among the Captives a beautiful Woman,] It was indifferent whether she was a Virgin, or a Widow, or a Wife, according to the Jewish Doctors.

*And hast a Desire unto her, that thou wouldst have her to thy Wife,] The plain Meaning is, fell so passionately in Love with her, as to desire to marry her, tho’ a Stranger, of another Nation and Religion. It is a common Opinion indeed among the Jewish Doctors, that a baser sort of Passion is here indulged; for it was lawful, they imagine, for a Soldier to lie with such a Captive once to satisfy his Lust, (which some make to be the Meaning of this Expression, Hast a Desire to her, or as it is in the Hebrew, Hast cleaved to her) but not repeat it, unless he would take her for his Wife: which they think was allowed to military Men, when they were absent from their Wives, to prevent greater Outrages which were wont to be committed by the Heathen. But the best Nations severely prohibited all such Abuses, as Grotius observes, lib. iii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 4. sect. xix. 1. And tho’ Schickard, in his Mischpat Hammelech endeavours to make out the Wisdom of this Law, in permitting a Hebrew Soldier to enjoy a Captive once, (see p. 130, 131. and Mr. Selden, lib. v. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 13.) yet he cannot but acknowledge that some of the Jews do not allow of this Interpretation, but are of Opinion, that he might not touch a Captive till she became a Proselyte, and he took her for his Wife. Thus R. Bechai, as Grotius observes in the Place forenamed, sect. xix. 2. GOD would have the Camp of Israel holy, and not defiled with Fornication, and other Abominations, as the Camps of the Gentiles. Unto whom Alexander himself gave a better Example; who being extremely taken with the Beauty of Roxana, did not abuse her as a Captive, but vouchsafed to marry her, and make her his Wife; for which he is justly commended, both by Arrianus and by Plutarch; and therefore I think it is most reasonable to expound this Law, only of taking such a Captive in Marriage; which Abarbinel also shews is the most antient Interpretation of it, and hath the best Authority on its Side among the Jews. For tho' he acknowledges it is the common Opinion of their wife Men, that a Soldier might lie with a fair Captive once, whilst she was a mere Gentile; yet herein they followed the Doctors in the Babylonian Talmud, which is not of so great Antiquity as the Hierusalem Talmud, where R. Johannes (in Massechet Sanhedrim) delivers the quite contrary Doctrine; That it was not lawful for any Israelite to lie with such a Woman at all, till the Conditions, mentioned in the following Words of this Law, were fulfilled, when he was to make her his Wife. And according to the Judgment of this R. Johannes, Abarbinel explains this Law, in a large Commentary on this Place.

Ver. 12. Then thou shalt bring her Home to thine House.] The fore-named Doctors, who are so indulgent to the Soldiers Lust, will have this to signify, that they were to observe the Rules of Modesty in the Camp, and not openly lie with her like Beasts, but privately in their Tents. Thus Maimonides himself, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 41. But it is evident Moses doth not speak of any Thing done in the Camp, but of what was to be done when he returned to his House; where he was to dispose her in the Manner following, to be his Wife.

And she shall shave her Head.] These and the following Words are variously interpreted, some taking these Things to be done to her, with a Design to abate his Affection to her, that he might not marry her at all; and others, to prepare her, and make her fit for his Bed: for shaving her Head (which everyone knows was used in Mourning) deprived her of one of her greatest Ornaments, and made her less amiable, and consequently might extinguish his Affection, which was kindled by her Beauty. So Clemens Alexandrinus understands it: see lib. ii. Strom. p. 398, 399. and lib. iii. p. 456. And many of the Hebrews are of the same Mind, that these Things were ordered to lessen his Affection to her, by making her appear less lovely in his Eyes: see Schickard's Mischpat Hammelech, cap. 5. Theorem 17. p. 134, 135. But there are others who take this to have been a kind of Purification, and cleansing her from her Gentilism; and a Token of her becoming a new Woman, that she might be meet to be made his Wife.

And pare her Nails.] This likewise was a Piece of Cleanliness and Neatness. But they who are of the other Opinion translate the Words, Let her Nails grow, as our marginal Translation hath it; and the Arabick and Chaldee, and the Hebrew Doctors commonly understand it; which was intended to make her look ugly, and to slack his Love to her. At least, it was suitable to the Condition of a Mourner, as she plainly was, it appears by the next Verse. The Hebrew Words, indeed, (which are, make her Nails) are dubious; from whence arose that Dispute we find in the Talmud between R. Eliezer, who expounds it, Pare her Nails, to make them look handsome; and R. Akiba, who expounds it, Let them grow. The former reasons thus; the Hair and the Nails are to be used alike. Now her Hair is plainly ordered to be cut; and therefore so were her Nails to be. But the other Doctor turns it quite contrary; what was ordered about her Hair, was to make her abominable; therefore this also was intended to make her appear ill-favoured. And indeed the Hebrew Word being indifferent to either Sense, we must judge of the Meaning by the Circumstances of the Place: and here they seem to lead us to R. Akiba's Interpretation; which Onkelos, a most judicious Paraphrast, follows; and many learned Men in later Times, particularly Schickard in the Book before-mentioned, p. 134: and Martinus Gierus de Lusu Hebræorum, cap. 14. sect. 5.

Ver. 13. And she shall put the Raiment of her Captivity from off her.] Her fine Cloaths, wherein they suppose her to have been taken Captive; instead of which she was to put on sordid Apparel, which was the Habit of Mourners. This still tended to cool his Love; the Drift of these Things being (as the Jews commonly think) to take away from her all that was inviting and tempting; that so such Marriage might not be common among them.

And shall remain in thine House.] Not stir out of Doors, but be retired; as Persons in a mournful Condition are wont to be.

And bewail her Father and her Mother.] Who perhaps were killed in the War; or rather, whom she was likely to see no more. And this also the Jews suppose might help to abate his Affection to her; Sorrow and Grief very much spoiling one's Beauty.

A full Month.] So long the Jews were allowed to bewail their dead Relations, or at least those who were eminent, as they did Aaron and Moses. And here I cannot but observe, how Philo magnifies this Constitution, and plainly shews he was of the Opinion of R. Johannes before-mentioned, that this Captive might not be touched till all these Things were performed. Πάνυ καλῶς ἐκασα διαδιδάσκοντες, (saith he, in his Book, Περὶ φιλανθρωπίας, p. 545, &c.) “Moses ordered every Thing “ most excellently in this Law: First, In not let- “ ting the Reins loose to Mens Desires, but re- “ straining them for thirty Days. In which Time, “ Secondly, a Trial was made of his Love; whe- “ ther it was a furious ungovernable Passion, or “ had something of Reason in it, which advises “ us to do nothing suddenly, but after serious “ and long Deliberation. And, Thirdly, Ἐλεῖν “ ἡ διχιδάλειον. This was a merciful Law to the “ Captive, that if she were a Virgin, she might “ bewail her Unhappiness, in not being disposed “ of in Marriage by her Parents: if a Widow, “ that she had lost her first Love, and was now to “ be married to one, who would be her Lord, as “ well as her Husband.”

And after that.] Upon these Words R. Johannes grounded his Opinion, That till a full Month was spent in the fore-mentioned Ceremonies, he might not lie with her.

Thou shalt go in unto her, and be her Husband, and she shall be thy Wife.] If he continued, that is, to love her at the End of the Month, and the

she was willing to embrace the Jewish Religion, in which, while she remained retired in his House, she was instructed. For the Jewish Doctors agree, she was to be baptized, and not merely made a Profelyte of the Gate, (i. e. renounce Idolatry) otherwise he might not marry her. And if she refused to embrace their Religion intirely, Maimonides saith, they gave her a Year's Time to consider of it; at the End of which, if she remained still obstinate, they required her at least to observe the seven Precepts of the Sons of Noah, and so to become a Profelyte of the Gate; otherwise she was to be slain. But tho' she was so converted, no Jew might take her to Wife; for such a Marriage, Maimonides saith, was counted impious.

Those Hebrew Doctors who think a Soldier might enjoy her once, at the first taking her captive, have added another Conceit to this, viz. That there was not only this Month's Time allowed her to bewail her Parents, but that he was to stay two Months more, before he might go in to her, and be her Husband, that he might see whether she were with Child, or no, by his first Enjoyment of her. For if she were, a great Difference was to be made between that Child, and those she might have by him after Marriage. Concerning which, see Selden, lib. v. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 13. where he observes, they make Tamar, the Daughter of David, an Instance of this; whose Mother being a Captive, they suppose he lay with her as soon as she was taken, and had this Issue by her; but afterward, she becoming a Profelyte, he made her his Wife, and she bare him Absalom. Whereby it came to pass, that there was not such a Relation between her and the other Sons of David by other Women, but that it had been lawful for Amnon to have married her.

But all this is judged by the famous Abarbinel (upon 2 Sam. xiii.) to be very absurd; and he neither believes that David would have committed such a Fact, as to lie with a Woman in her Gentilism; nor, if he had, that this Child would have been looked upon as a Gentile, since he afterward married her Mother. And therefore he takes those Words of Tamar, ver. 13. Speak to the King, and be will not withhold me from thee, to be a mere Put-off, as we speak, to get rid of his Company; which Amnon understood very well, who knowing he could not have her to Wife, proceeded to force her.

Ver. 14. And it shall be, if thou have no Delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will, &c.] If at the Month's End, or before, his Mind was changed, and he did not like to take her for his Wife, then he might neither meddle with her any more, (as the Hebrew Doctors understand it) nor keep her any longer as a Slave, nor sell her, or make Merchandize of her, (as the Text here expressly orders) but give her Liberty to go whither she herself thought good. This he lost, say the Jews, by his short Pleasure he took at first. For other Captives, whom a Man had made himself Master of by the Law of War, he might employ in his Work as Slaves, or make Money of them; but one whom he had lain with, he was either to marry, or set her at Liberty. This they ground upon the last Words of this Verse, which I shall shew may have another Interpretation. And therefore I shall not insist upon their Sense, (which depends upon the same Words) who think Moses speaks of his not liking her after she was become his Wife, her Humour, Manners, and Conversation being disagreeable to him; in which Case he was to give her a Bill of Divorce, as he might do another Wife, but not keep her as a Slave.

Because thou hast bumbled her.] It must be acknowledged that this is an usual Phrase, for having had carnal Knowledge of a Woman, as the Scripture modestly elsewhere speaks, in the like Case. It signifies so in the very next Chapter of this Book, Deut. xxii. 29. Judg. xix. 24. xx. 2. and many other Places, where it is used for Violence offered to a Woman, which was the greatest Affliction to her, as the Hebrew Word properly signifies. From which I see no Reason why we should depart in this Place; for it was sufficient Affliction and Humiliation to a Captive Woman, (as Carpsovius observes, in his Annotations upon Schickard's Book, which I have so often named) that after she had been brought into a Soldier's House, and kept there a Month, having her Head shaved, Garments changed, &c. in Hope of Marriage, she was rejected at last, when it should have been consummated. And that Abarbinel here understands the Word bumbled, not of his lying with her; but of all the fore-mentioned Conditions which were imposed upon her, as a Preparation for his Bed, and of her Disappointment after she had submitted to be baptized. And indeed the Hebrew Word denotes any sort of Affliction: see Exod. i. 11. Psal. lxxxviii. 8. lxxxix. 23. xc. 15. xciv. 5, &c.

Ver. 15. If a Man have two Wives, one beloved, and another hated;] That is, less loved; as the Word hated sometimes signifies, Gen. xxix. 31. Matth. vi. 24. R. Solomon thinks, that this Case follows the other, because it might so happen, that if a Man suffered himself to be carried with too violent a Passion towards such a Woman, as is before-mentioned, it might turn into Hatred, when he found her not to be agreeable to him.

And they have borne him Children, both the Beloved and the Hated;] Towards which it was likely he would be affected very differently, as he was to his Wives.

And if the first-born Son be hers that was Hated;] As it fell out in the Case of Leab and Rachel.

Ver. 16. Then it shall be, when he maketh his Sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the Son of the Beloved first-born, &c.] He speaks of Sons; for Daughters were not to have a double Portion. And he speaks of Sons (as the Jews will have it) born before the Death of their Father; to whom he divided his Inheritance. For a posthumous Son had not a double Portion, as the Gematbra upon Bathra saith: see Selden de Successionibus, cap. 7. p. 29.

Ver. 17. But he shall acknowledge the Son of the Hated for the First-born,] Which had his first Love, and was to enjoy the Effects of it.

By giving him a double Portion of all that he hath;] Of all that he was in Possession of when he died; but not of that which was his in Reversion after his Death; as Mr. Selden shews the Opinion of the Jewish Lawyers is, lib. de Success. cap. 6. p. 24.

For he is the Beginning of his Strength.] See Gen. xlix. 1.

The Right of the First-born is his :] By a very antient Custom, antecedent to the Law, which made the First-born the Head of the Family, and gave him as much more as any of his Brethren of the Estate belonging to it, that he might be able to maintain and support the Dignity of it, Gen. xxv. 31. But if there was no Son, and the Inheritance was to be divided among Daughters, the eldest Daughter had not a double Share of the Estate; as Mr. Selden shews in the same Book, cap. 8.

Ver. 18. If a Man have a stubborn and rebellious Son,] By a stubborn Son, the Jews understand one that will not do as he is bidden; and by a rebellious, one that doth what he is forbidden. And they imagine this Law is annex'd to the foregoing, about the Marriage of a Soldier to a captive Woman, because the Issue of such Marriages commonly proved refractory, or at least gave their Parents great Trouble. So Schickard observes out of Tanchuma. And they confirm it by an Example out of Scripture, viz. the two Children of David, Abalom and Tamar, who were both born of a captive Woman, made a Profelyte: the former of which conspired the Death of his Father; and the other being ravished by Amnon, was the Occasion of the Death of some of her Brethren. Mischpat Hammelech, cap. v. Theorem 17.

Which will not obey the Voice of his Father, or the Voice of his Mother,] Behaved himself not only undutifully, but crossly to them; and with such Contempt of their Authority, as argued he had not only lost all filial Affection and Reverence to them, but would, if he could, undo them.

And that when they have chastened him, will not hearken unto them;] Is never the better for Admonitions, Reprehensions, and Corrections, which they were bound to give him.

Ver. 19. Then shall his Father and his Mother lay hold on him,] It is absurd to say, as the Hebrew Doctors do, (in their Qualifications of this Law) that his Parents were with their own Hands to apprehend him, and bring him before the Court; tho' it seems reasonable enough, that both Father and Mother should agree in the Complaint against him, and desire Officers might be sent to lay hold of him. In which one cannot well suppose that they would consent to have such a Punishment as follows inflicted upon him, unless he were intolerable.

And bring him out unto the Elders of his City,] Who were to examine the Proofs, and accordingly to pass Sentence upon him. Concerning these Elders, see ver. 3, 4.

And unto the Gate of his Place :] Where the Court of Judgment was wont to sit. See xvi. 18. The paternal Power among the antient Romans was so great, that they might put their Children to Death, as they did their Slaves, without any Process before a Magistrate. And this some have taken to be a natural Right; and imagined God would not have commanded Abraham to kill his Son, but that it was a Part of his inherent Power. However this be, they were not thought fit to be long intrusted with it; for God here orders, by Moses, that it should be committed to the publick Judges, as the most disinterested Persons.

Ver. 20. And they shall say unto the Elders of his City,] This seems to intimate the Authority of Parents was still so preserved, that their Testimony alone was sufficient to convict a rebellious Son, without any further Proof. The Hebrew Doctors indeed are of another Mind, as I shall shew in the Explication of what follows.

This our Son is stubborn and rebellious; he will not obey our Voice ;] This is to be understood, say they, of a Son that was no less than thirteen Years old and a Day; and so might be presumed to know his Duty, and to be capable of being governed by Counsel and good Advice; and this is reasonable enough. But what they say concerning the Time when he became his own Man; is monstrously absurd: see Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 13. p. 559, 560. What they say of a Daughter not to be comprehended under this Law, may be admitted; because she was not capable to do so much Mischief in a Family, as a rebellious Son.

He is a Glutton, and a Drunkard.] These Sins are no-where made capital by the Law of Moses, but when they were accompanied with rebellious Disobedience to Parents, who were to bring Witnesses, as the Hebrew Doctors say, that this Son had stolen some of their Goods, and sold them, that he might spend the Money in these Vices; under which, others are comprehended, which usually attend them; and that he had done this, after he had been admonished and chastised: so that he was not to be punished as this Law at last prescribes, till he was grown incorrigible. For, they say, the Court was first to order him to be whipt, and not to proceed further, till, upon a new Complaint, it was proved that he had run into the same riotous Courses since that Punishment. Then, upon this second Testimony, (as they call it) the Court gave Sentence against him, that he should be stoned to Death, unless the Parents, before the Sentence was pronounced, said they gave him their Pardon. There are a great many little Niceties about the Quantity of Meat and Wine that he ate and drank, and other Matters; with which I do not think fit to trouble the Reader.

Ver. 21. And all the Men of his City shall stone him with Stones, that he die :] This is such a severe Sentence, that it inclines me to think, the Parents look'd upon such a Son as so debauch'd, that he would not only spend all their Estate, if he had it, but was inclined to kill them, that he might get it into his own Hands. For the Sentence of Death is denounced elsewhere, against one that struck his Father or Mother, Exod. xxi. 15. or that cursed them, ver. 17. It is not said, indeed, that he should be stoned, but put to Death; which they interpret of strangling; this Punishment of stoning being appointed for Idolaters and Blasphemers of God; next to whom Parents are to be revered, being in God's Place, with respect to their Children: see upon the fifth Commandment. And therefore other Nations were very severe in their Punishment of such Children as are here described; and particularly the Romans, after the Power was taken from Parents to sell them, or put them to Death, and the Censure of them committed to the Magistrates: see Hen. Steven. in his Fontes & Rivi Juris Civilis, p. 18. And among the Athenians, Lyfias saith, (in his Oration against Agoratus) he that beats his Parents, or did not maintain them, and provide an Habitation for them, when they were in Want, ἐσι βανδύειν ἐπιτιμῆσαι, deserved to be put to Death.

The Law indeed did not inflict that Punishment, but only said, ἀτιμὸς ἔστω, let him be infamous; that is, as they expound it, he might not come into the publick Assemblies, nor enter into their Temples, nor wear a Crown in their publick Festivals; and if any such Persons presumed so to do, they were brought before the Magistrates, who set a Fine upon their Heads, and committed them to Prison till they paid it: see Sam. Petitus, in his Commentary upon the Attick Laws, lib. ii. Tit. 4. p. 163. No Wonder therefore Moses ordained this Punishment, when a Son was come to such a Degree of profligate Wickedness, that he endeavour'd to undo his Parents. Which some States have thought fit to follow, in these latter Ages: for David Chytraeus saith, he himself saw an Example of this Severity at Zurich, in the Year One thousand five hundred and fifty; where a disobedient Son was beheaded, who had cursed his Mother, and beaten her.

So shalt thou put Evil away from among you, and all Israel shall bear, and fear.] See concerning this before upon xix. 20.

Ver. 22. And if a Man have committed a Sin worthy of Death, and he be to be put to Death,] There were several sorts of capital Punishments, viz. Strangling; Burning; Cutting off by the Sword; and Stoning. Now the Hebrew Doctors limit this unto such Offenders as were stoned; of which Punishment he speaks in the foregoing Verse. But there being eighteen sorts of Offenders, who were to be sentenced to this Death, they put a further Limitation upon these Words; their Tradition being, as they tell us, the Sin worthy of Death (or Stoning) is only Idolatry, or Blasphemy. So we read in the Sanhedrim, cap. 6. sect. 4. All that were stoned, were also hanged, according to the Opinion of R. Eliezer: but the wise Men say none were hanged but the Idolater and Blasphemer. And they add there, that only Men, not Women, were thus used; for which I can see no Reason, but the sticking to the mere Letter of these Words; as if the Word Man did not comprehend both Sexes.

But if we examine the Scripture, we shall find this not to be true (that no Men were hanged, but they that were stoned); for the King of Asi was hanged, Josb. viii. 29. and five Kings more, x. 26. and they were not hanged, because they were Blasphemers or Idolaters, (for then all the rest of the Canaanites should have been so treated) but because they were such Enemies of GOD, as had rebelliously withstood the gracious Summons of Surrender. And there are other Examples also, which confute this; as the two Traitors that murdered Isabotheth, 2 Sam. iv. 12. and the five Sons of Saul, 2 Sam. xxi. 9. It is more probable, therefore, that all those whom the Judges thought to be such great Offenders, that it was fit to make them very publick Examples, were hanged up after they had suffered the Punishment of Death, to which they were sentenced. This seems to be denoted in the Word Chatta, which signifies sometimes a very great Crime, as appears from Hosea xii. 8. where he speaks of Iniquity, which is Sin: not as if all Iniquity were not Sin; but some Acts of Iniquity were not so heinous, as to be called by that Name.

And thou hang him] After he had been put to Death, as appears by the foregoing Words, which speak of his being put to Death before this Suspension: Which shews that the Punishment was not the same with the Roman Crucifixion; (as Baronius, Sigonius, Lipsius, and others, have mistaken) for they hanged Men alive upon the Gibbet; whereby they expired before they were taken down: but this was only hanging up their Bodies after they were dead, and exposing them to open Shame for a Time.

On a Tree:] On a Piece of Timber (saith the Sanhedrim) struck into the Ground; out of which came a Beam, whereunto his Hands were tied; as they tell us in the Place before-mentioned. And so Schickard, in his Mischpat Hammelech, cap. iv. Theor. xiv. So that his Body hung in such a Posture as crucified Men did.

Ver. 23. His Body shall not remain all Night upon the Tree, but thou shalt, in any wise, bury him that Day;] This is excellently interpreted by Josephus, lib. iv. Archæol. cap. 8. Μέγας δὲ ὧς τῆς ἡμέρας τῆς δευτέρας ὡς ἔδωκεν, ἐκταφίσαντο αὐτόν.

Having remained the whole Day a Spectacle unto all, he was to be buried at Night: for as soon as the Sun went down, the Body also was taken down. Examples of which we have in the Book of Joshua, viii. 29. x. 26, 27. In which he is far more sincere than their Rabbins, who say the Law was satisfied if they hanged up the Body just before the Setting of the Sun, and presently after took it down again: which Exposition seems to have been contrived in favour of their Countrymen; for only Israelites, they confess, were to be thus exposed, not Proselytes of the Gate, as Mr. Selden observes, lib. ii. de Jure Nat. & Gent. &c. cap. 12.

For he that is hanged, is accursed of GOD;] The Jews interpret this Clause, as if the Meaning were, he was hanged because he blasphemed GOD. So Onkelos himself, and the Samaritan Versions, with those of the Spanish and Mauritanian Jews, as Selden observes lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 13. n. 4. and Hottinger, in his Smegma Orientale, p. 96, 97. But tho' this be a common Opinion among the Hebrew Doctors, yet the LXX have taken the Sense right, Ὅτι καταρτησόμενος ὅτι πᾶς κρεμνόμενος ἐπὶ ξύλῳ. Cursed of GOD is every one that is hanged on a Tree. And so St. Paul, Galat. iii. with very little Difference. For they observed what those Doctors did not, that Moses doth not here give a Reason why the Man was hanged up, but why he was to be taken down from the Gallows. Now what Consequence is there in this, Let him be taken down and buried, because he cursed GOD? Every one sees that (tho' the Word cursed should be taken in an active Sense) this is not a right Interpretation of these Words: for tho' it had been good Sense to have said, Let him be hanged because he cursed GOD; yet not let him be taken down for that Reason. Now such Persons are here said to be accursed of GOD, not because they were hanged up, but because of their Sin, which deserved they should be thus exposed. So St. Hierom upon Galatians iii. Non ideo maledictus quia pendet, sed ideo pendet quia maledictus: He was not accursed because he was hanged, but he was therefore hanged, because he was accursed; hanging up being a Token that the Man had committed a horrid Crime, whereby he had incurred the high Displeasure of Almighty GOD. So that every one who saw him hang on that Fashion, were to think with themselves, This Man was under the Curse of GOD, because of his Sin; and unless he had undergone this Curse, he could not have been buried, and put into the Condition of other Men. But when he had undergone it for his Sin, then it had been a Sin in the People not to have taken him down, or prolonged his Suspension longer than GOD imposed this Curse upon him. And the Land had been defiled, if after this Suffering which GOD had appointed, they had not buried him. To this Purpose Abarbinel, who refutes several other Accounts of this Matter, particularly that of Sol. Jarchi, who thinks he was not to hang longer than till the Evening, because it would have been a Dishonour to the Sovereign of the World, after whose Image Man was made. This is followed by many, and even by Grotius himself, who gives no other Reason of it, in his Book de Jure Belli & Pacis, lib. ii. cap. 19. sect. 4. But this is a Reason, as Abarbinel notes, why he should not have been hanged up at all. It may be also usefully noted further, that they say in the Tract called Sanbedrim, that not only the Malefactor, but all the Instruments of Punishment, were to be buried at the going down of the Sun. Even the Tree itself, upon which he was hanged, was to be buried, That no Memory of so foul a Thing might be left in the World; nor any might say, Behold this was the Tree upon which such a one was hanged.

That thy Land be not defiled, which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee, &c.] By the Stench of the Body, after it putrified, as the same Abarbinel expounds it, who observes, that the dead Body of no Creature corrupts and stinks sooner than that of a Man, which is exceeding offensive to the Living. For which Cause, saith he, the Book Siphre determines not only that all Malefactors should be buried as soon as the Law here orders, (that they might not imitate the Manners of the Egyptians and Philistines, such like People, who let Bodies rot in the Air after they were hanged up) but that every Man should bury his Dead the same Day they died, or be deemed to have transgressed a negative Precept; which may pass for a very good natural Reason of it: but there is something more in it, respecting a legal Pollution, under which their whole Country lay, as long as an accursed Thing hung openly among them; just as all that enter'd into the Tent where a dead Body lay, and all that was in it, were made unclean by it, Numb. xix. 14, 15. Upon which Score St. Paul might well apply this Passage to Christ crucified for us; not only because he bare our Sins, and was put to Death, and exposed to such Shame as these Sinners were, who were accursed of GOD; but was also taken down in the Evening, in Token now the Guilt was removed; as the Curse upon the Man that was hanged ended at the going down of the Sun; and as the Land of Israel was pure and clean, after the dead Body was taken down and buried, with the Tree upon which it was hanged. Joh. Coch. hath well explained this in his Notes upon the Sanbedrim, cap. 6. sect. 5. whose Sense in short is this: As our blessed Saviour, while he hung upon the Cross, was made a Curse, and an Execration; so when, according to the Law, he was taken down and buried, both he ceased to be a Curse, and all they that are his.

Verse 1. THOU shalt not see thy Brother's Ox, or his Sheep go astray, and hide thyself from them:] They were not to turn away their Face, as if they did not see them, and so neglect them. And by Brother is to be understood, not only an Israelite, but any Man that lived among them; this being a Matter of common Right, and extended to their Enemies, as well as their Friends, Exod. xxiii. 4.

Thou shalt in any Case bring them again unto thy Brother.] Not merely give Notice to the Owner, where he saw them, but take care himself to bring them back, that they might not go further astray, and perhaps be quite lost, before the Owner could have Notice of them. This, and many that follow, are Precepts of Humanity, and Care of each other's Welfare; without which, Society could not be preserved.

Ver. 2. And if thy Brother be not nigh unto thee, or if thou know him not, then thou shalt bring it unto thine own House;] And preserve it there, till he could send to him, or find who the Owner was.

And it shall be with thee, until thy Brother seek after it;] He was to give Notice, by the publick Crier, that such a Beast was with him, and that, as the Jews say, three or four times; that the Owner might seek after it. But here they are pleased to make a Distinction; that they were to do this, if there were Marks upon the Beast; but if there were none, they were not bound to cry it; which doth not seem to be reasonable: see Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 4.

And thou shalt restore it to him again.] He paying the Charges of keeping it, from the Time it was brought to his House, till its being restored. But if no Body could prove a Right in the Beasts that were lost, they became his who found them, and he might lawfully keep them; for no other Owner appearing, they were his that was in present Possession of them; who did very piously, if he gave the Value of them to the Poor (and so the Law was in many Places); but he was an honest Owner of them, if he kept them to himself; as Grotius observes, lib. ii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 10. sect. 11.

Ver. 3. In like Manner shalt thou do with his Ass, and so shalt thou do with his Raiment, and with all lost Things, &c.] In all other Cases of like Nature, the same Law was to be observed.

Thou mayst not hide thyself.] Pass them by with Neglect, or pretend they did not see them.

Ver. 4. Thou shalt not see thy Brother's Ass, or his Ox, fall down by the Way, and hide thyself from them:] Turn away, as if they did not see the Danger they were in.

Thou shalt surely help him to lift them up again.] This hath been explained upon Exod. xxiii. 5. I shall only add here a famous Example of this sort of Piety, in Alphonfus King of Naples; who travelling upon the Road, attended by a great Number of Courtiers, and seeing a poor Ass with a Burden fallen into a deep Slough, (whom all that went before him passed by, without any Regard) when he came to the Place, stopt, and went himself to the Driver, and lent him Assistance to help the Ass out of the Dirt: so David Chytraus upon this Place.

Ver. 5. The Woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a Man, neither shall a Man put on a Woman's Garment; for all that do so are Abomination unto the LORD thy God.] The last Words of this Place plainly indicate, that it was an idolatrous Custom, which is here prohibited: for Moses and the Prophets are wont to speak in these Terms of utmost Abhorrence, concerning such Matters. And nothing was more common among the Heathen, than for Men, in the Worship of several of their Gods, to put on the Garments usually worn by Women, and Women those worn by Men: particularly in the Worship of Venus, Women appeared before her in Armour, and Men in Womens Apparel. And thus the Words literally run here in the Hebrew; Women shall not put on the Armour of a Man, (so the Word Celi frequently signifies Armour, as well as other sorts of Instruments) nor a Man (οὐδὲν the LXX translate it) the Stole of a Woman: see Selden, Syntag. ii. de Diis Syris, cap. 4. And thus Maimonides saith he found this Precept in an old magical Book, that Men ought to stand before the Star of Venus in the flower'd Garment of Women, and Women put on the Armour of Men before the Star of Mars: More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 37. Servius also, upon the second Book of Aeneids, mentions a Statue of Venus at Cyprus, (in which Island were antiently many Colonies of Phenicians) to whom the Women sacrificed in Mens Garments, and the Men in Womens. Many other Nations did the same. See J. Ger. Vossius, lib. ii. de Orig. & Progr. Idol. cap. 27. & 31. but especially our learned Dr. Spenser, lib. ii. cap. 17. sect. 1, &c.

But setting aside all this, every one knows, that if there were no Distinction of Sexes made by their Habits, it would open a Door to all manner of Impurity; for which Reason, if there were no other, this Law was very wise and pious.

Ver. 6. If a Bird's Nest chance to be before thee in the Way in any Tree, or on the Ground, &c.] By this Place, among others, (particularly Psal. viii. 8.) it appears the Word Tippor signifies all kind of Birds, and not only the smaller sort, as some have imagined, but he seems particularly to speak of clean Birds, such as it was lawful for them to eat. And this Precept seems to have been given, to breed in the Jews a Sense of a divine Providence, extending itself to all Creatures, and to teach them to exercise their Dominion over them without any kind of Cruelty.

Thou shalt not take the Dam with the Young.] R. Menachem, mentioned both by Drusius and Bochartus, was of Opinion, that it is not Pity towards Birds which is intended in this Law, but Kindness to Mankind; whom God intended by this Usage of other Creatures, to form unto Gentleness and Commiseration towards one another. But others, I think, have more truly determined, that this is a merciful Constitution, with respect to Birds as well as Men; it being a sufficient Affliction, as Maimonides calls it, to the Old-one to lose her Young; it being unreasonable also, that Men should consider only their own present Interest, without Regard to Posterity; to whom the Breed ought to be continued, by letting the Old-one go free. Unto which those Verses, commonly ascribed to Phocylides, have Respect:

Μηδὲ τις ἐρνίθας καλῆς ἅμα πάντας ἐλάδῃ,
Μητέρα δ' ἐκπρολήτους, ἢ ἐγγὺς πάλιν τ' ἐτελεύτης.

i. e. Let no Man take all the Birds together out of a Nest; but let the Mother go, that thou mayst have Young ones again of her.

Ver. 7. Thou shalt in any wise let the Dam go, and take the Young to thee,] For there is a great deal of Ill-nature in it, to take away the Liberty and the Life of any Creature, from whom we have received a Benefit; as Bonfrerius glosses upon these Words.

That it may be well with thee, and that thou mayst prolong thy Days.] Some of the Jews, from these Words, have fancied, that the Observation of this single Precept was of such great Value, as to procure for them even Forgiveness of Sins, and a long Life; which is such a foolish Conceit, that it makes all other Precepts unnecessary. The plain Meaning is, that God would reward them for their kind Usage even of brute Creatures, if other Virtues were not wanting, such as Charity towards their poor Neighbours. And so the Mishna, in the Conclusion of the Tract called Cholin, discourses very well, If in a light Precept concerning a Thing which is scarce worth a Farthing, the Law says, That it may be well with thee, and thou mayst prolong thy Days; how much more may this be expected in the weightier Things of the Law?

Ver. 8. When thou buildest a new House, then thou shalt make a Battlement for thy Roof;] The Jews, I think, are a little too curious, in setting a Mark upon the Word thy, fancying he saith, not simply the Roof, but thy Roof, to except the Temple, and the Synagogues, and Schools from this Rule; which were no private Man's House, but belonged to the whole Congregation. They say indeed the Temple had Battlements; but not for Necessity, but for Ornament, because the Roof of the Temple was not flat, as the Roof of another House was; for no-body walked upon the Temple, as they did upon their own Houses, to take the Air, and discourse together, or to meditate and pray, (in little Closets they had there) which made it necessary to have these Battlements, of three Foot and a half high, (as the Jews say) to prevent any Man's falling down, when he did not attend, but was thinking of some other Thing. See Constant. L'Empereur, in his Annotations on Codex Middoth, p. 160.

That the Roofs of their Houses were flat, which was the Ground of this Precept, we have many Proofs in the Scripture. For hither Rabab brought the Spies, and covered them with the Stalks of Flax, which she laid upon them, Josh. ii. 6. Here Samuel communed with Saul, upon the Top of the House, 1 Sam. ix. 25. David also was walking upon the Roof of his Palace, when he saw Bathsheba washing herself, 2 Sam. xi. 2. And in the same Place Absalom caused a Tent to be spread, that he might go in to his Father's Concubines in the Sight of all Israel, xvi. 22. See also Isa. xv. 3. xxii. 1. and in the New Testament, Acts x. 9. Nor was it the Manner of the Hebrews only, but of the Greeks and Romans also, to make the Roofs of their Houses so, that they might walk upon them; and stand there to see any publick Shew, or take the Air; as Is. Casaubon shews in a Multitude of Instances, lib. iv. in Athenæum, cap. 12. where he observes also out of Pliny and Seneca, that the Roman Houses wanted these Battlements, which Moses here ordered in this Law. By all which we may easily understand those Places in the Gospel, that speak of proclaiming these Things on the House-top, &c. Matth. x. 27. Luke v. 19.

That thou bring not Blood upon thine House, if any Man fall from thence.] And be killed by the Fall. For his Neglect being the Cause of his Death, it made him guilty before God of his Blood, and liable to be punished by the Judges for slighting so profitable an Institution as this is: Which the Jews extend to a studious Care about every Thing that might bring a Man's Life in Danger. For Example's sake: they might not keep a mad Dog, nor set up a broken Ladder in their House, &c. as L'Empereur observes upon Bava Kama, cap. 5.

Ver. 9. Thou shalt not sow thy Vineyard with divers Seeds,] What he had said concerning their Fields, Levit. xix. 19. he now says of their Vineyards, which they were not to sow with Seeds of a divers Kind: for this was an idolatrous Custom, as the Reason given against it plainly shews. This Maimonides saith he found in a Book of the Zabii, and in one Rabbi Josiab, who taught, that these three Things, Wheat, Barley, and Grapes dried in the Sun, should be sown together in the Ground with one and the same Cast of the Hand: Which was so senseless a Thing, that he could not but think they learn'd it from the Ways of the Amorites, as his Words are, that is, from the wicked Idolaters of the Country, to which the Israelites were going. For Wheat being sown properly at one Season of the Year, and Barley at another, and a Vineyard being an improper Place for the Growth of either of them, this Custom could not have its Original either from God, or from Man, but from the Devil, the Author of Confusion, who taught them this uncouth Rite, in Honour of Ceres, perhaps, and Bacchus, whom they joined in the same Act of Worship.

Left the Fruit of thy Seed, which thou hast sown, and the Fruit of thy Vineyard, be defiled,] If the Israelites had followed this Custom, it would have made both the Corn and the Grapes, that sprung up from such Seed, impure, because polluted by Idolatry; the very Smell of which God would not have to remain among the Israelites, as Maimonides speaks in his More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 37. See Dr. Spencer in his very learned Work de Leg. Ritual. Hebr. lib. ii. cap. 18. Every one also knows, that it was unlawful for the Israelites to eat any of the Fruits of the Earth, till the First-fruits of them had been offered unto God; which would not have been accepted by him of such Things as these, that were expressly forbidden by his Law, and consequently the whole Crop became unclean to them, and might not be used by them.

Ver. 10. Thou shalt not plough with an Ox and an Ass together.] Left that Law should be violated which we read, Levit. xix. 19. Thou shalt not let thy Cattle gender with a divers Kind. So some give the Reason of it; even Maimonides, in the Book fore-mentioned, P. iii. cap. 49. But it seems also to have Respect to those magical Rites of the idolatrous Nations in those Countries; who thought their Fields would be more fruitful, if, according to some Directions which had been given by their Gods, they were thus ploughed. For one cannot well think that Men, of themselves, would join together two Creatures so different in their Temper and Motions, to draw in the same Yoke, if they had not been led to it by some Superstition or other. For their Strength is unequal, as Aben-Ezra here observes, The Strength of an Ass, is not as the Strength of an Ox. Whence it was that Ulysses, to make it be believed that he was mad, joined an Horse and an Ass to plough: And Homer, Odyss. 5. would have Oxen ισορέες joined together; that is, ἰσος φέροντας καὶ ἐκλοντας, equally bearing, and drawing, as Bochart observes the Scholias there glosses.

The Jews commonly think this Law extends to all other Creatures of different Species, which might not be yoked together. But some understand it so, that they might join several Kinds together; provided one was not unclean, and the other clean. Baal Hatturim finds this Mystery in this Prohibition, That the Righteous ought to have no Society with the Wicked. And there are those who think the Apostle alludes to this, when he saith, 2 Cor. vi. 14. Μὴ γίνεσθε ἐτεροζυγῶντες ἀπίστοις, Be not unequally yoked together with Unbelievers; which Bochart himself thinks not improbable: see Hierozycon, P. i. lib. ii. cap. 13. and cap. 40. p. 401. where there are other Reasons of this Precept.

Ver. 11. Thou shalt not wear a Garment of divers sorts, as of Woollen and Linen together.] The Antients think God intended hereby to teach his People Simplicity in their Manners: see Bochart, in the same Book, P. i. lib. ii. cap. 45. p. 491. But there was something further in it, as I have observed upon Levit. xix. 19. to which I refer the Reader. And shall only add here, that the Jews carried this so far, as not to sew a woollen Garment with linen Thread; nor on the contrary.

Ver. 12. Thou shalt make thee Fringes] What these were, is sufficiently explained upon Numb. xv. 38, 39. See there.

Upon the four Quarters of thy Vesture,] They wore long Garments in those Countries, as most People do still at this Day. And, I suppose, the Garments of the Jews had usually four Skirts: But perchance they sometimes had more or fewer than four; and in this Case, if they had but three, their Doctors have resolved they were not bound to make any Fringes for them; but if they had five or six, they were bound to annex them to the four most remote Quarters, in which the intermediate were included. But this is a very unreasonable Subtlety; the Intention of the Law being, that they might be put in Remembrance of God's Commandments by these Fringes, which therefore were to be worn in the Skirts of their Garments, tho' they had been divided into no Wings or Quarters at all.

Wherewith thou coverest thyself.] Which they commonly wore: and it seems to signify the uppermost Garment, which covered all the rest, and was most seen; whereby they were distinguished from the People of other Nations: for that was one End of these Fringes, to be a distinctive Mark that they were of the Jewish Religion. And therefore fore I do not see any Reason in the Determination of their Doctors, who say, Women-servants and little Children were not bound to wear Fringes: for tho' little Children could not think of the Commandments of God, yet it was fit they should wear the Note of their Religion. There is no Reason neither in their Resolution, when they say, That if Women and Servants (who were bound as much as others to observe the Laws of God) would wear Fringes, tho' they were not obliged by their Constitutions, yet they might not put them on with the common Form of Benediction which they used. But I think they observe rightly enough, that these Fringes were so peculiar to the Jews, that the Samaritans, tho' acquainted with the Law, did not wear them. Nor do the Jews themselves at this Day use them upon their Upper-Garment: for that being no longer four-cornered, (because it made them a Laughing-stock) they wear only under their other Garments a kind of square Frock, with the aforesaid Tassels or Pendants fastened to it; as Leo Modena relates in his History of the Jews, Part i. chap. 5. Only in their Synagogues or Schools, at Morning-prayer, every Man puts over his Head a square woollen Garment, with the Tassels fastened at each Corner, which they call Taliib. Concerning which Baroloccius, in his late Rabbinical Lexicon, Tom. i. hath a long Dissertation, p. 576, &c.

Ver. 13. If a Man take a Wife, and go in unto her,] Have carnal Knowledge of her.

And hate her,] Do not like her; but is desirous to be rid of her.

Ver. 14. And give Occasion of Speech against her,] The LXX translate it ἐπιθῇ αὐτῇ πρὸς αἰσχύνην, lay to her Charge such Things (for so Words sometimes signify) as are opprobrious.

And bring up an evil Name upon her,] Or, as the Hebrew Words are, bring forth a Name of Evil, or Infamy: which signifies, as Mr. Selden observes, (Lib. iii. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 1. p. 321.) the Action itself, which he brought against her in the Court of Judgment. This appears from the Words following.

And say, I took this Woman, and when I came to her, I found her not a Maid;] This was the Form wherein the Action was laid against her, (as the same Selden there observes) in these Words, as the Jews say; Having lain with this young Woman, not of full Age, as her Husband, I found not in her the Tokens of Virginity; and making Inquisition into the Matter, it appears to me that she hath been guilty of Adultery, after I had espoused her: and these are Eye-witnesses of her Guilt.

Ver. 15. Then shall the Father of the Damsel, and her Mother, take and bring forth the Tokens of the Damsel's Virginity] If the Accusation, as they say, was to be made good by Witnesses of her Adultery, then her Defence was to be made, no doubt, by contrary Witnesses, who endeavoured to disprove the Testimony which was brought against her. For so they are constrained to interpret the Words we translate, Tokens of her Virginity; as I shall shew upon ver. 17. The Hebrews have many nice Subtilties about the Word Damsel, with which I shall not trouble the Reader: see Selden, in the fore-named Place, lib. iii. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 1.

Unto the Elders of the City] The Court consisting of twenty-three Judges; who had the Cognizance of Common, Capital, and Penal Causes, in every City.

In the Gate.] Where the Court sat, as I observed before upon xvi. 18. And this may be added to what I noted there, that by this may be explained those Words in the Book of Job, [v. 4. concerning the Children of the Wicked, that they are crushed in the Gate, i. e. lose their Cause, and are condemned in the Court of Judgment; and those of the Wife Man, Prov. xxii. 22. Oppress not the Afflicted in the Gate, i. e. Do him Justice, and not let him be overthrown, because he wants Money to defend his Cause. This appears to be the Sense from the very next Words, ver. 23. For the Lord will plead their Cause, &c.

Ver. 16. And the Damsel's Father shall say unto the Elders, I gave my Daughter unto this Man to Wife,] The Jews say, the Mother had no Power to espouse her Daughter, but the Father only, before she was of Age. Mishna Sotā, cap. 3. sect. 8. Where Wagenseil notes, that the Mother, and Brethren also, had some Power in this Matter; but such, that the Daughter, within a Time limited, might make the Contract void.

And be bateib ber:] Hath no Affection which an Husband ought to have to his Wife. If she had no Parents alive, the Judges appointed her a Guardian: and Josephus saith the next of Kin were to patronise her, as if they had been her Parents.

Ver. 17. And, lo, be hath given Occasions of Speech against her,] See ver. 14. He doth not add what there follows, and brought up an evil Name upon her, (i. e. accused her publicly before you of Adultery) because it is sufficiently comprehended in this.

Saying, I found not thy Daughter a Maid;] As such and give such Evidence.

And yet these are the Tokens of my Daughter's Virginity.] I have good Witnesses to the contrary; which are here ready to be produced before the Court, to disprove the former Testimony.

And they] That is, the Witnesses which the Father produces.

Shall spread the Cloth before the Elders of the City.] Tho' such Tokens of Virginity, as are commonly understood by these Words, might always be found in those Countries, (being very consonant to the Opinion of the chiefest Arabian Physicians, as Mr. Selden observes out of Avicenna, and of the Africans and other People at this Day, as many Authors testify: see Job. Geusius de Victimis Humanis, Pars i. cap. 9. and Pars ii. cap. 2. and Wierus L. Medicarum Observationum, Sect. de Hymene) especially in such Virgins as the Jews say were here meant, who were under thirteen Years of Age; and tho' all that some Physicians and Lawyers in these Parts of the World have said to the contrary, is of no Consideration, yet there are weighty Reasons to incline us to think, that no Man of common Sense would bring such an Action against his Wife, wherein he was sure to be cast, whether his Cause was right or wrong, if these were the Evidences whereby it was to be tried. For if he accused her falsely, he knew her Friends were able to produce the Sheet wherein they lay when they were married, with such Tokens upon it as would disprove him, and render him guilty of Defamation. And if he had a just Ground Ground to accuse her, because he knew they could produce no such Tokens; yet this was no Proof she had been vitiated since she was espoused to him; for she might have been corrupted before; and then he could not attain his End, which was to be rid of her, not by way of Divorce, (for then he must have given her a Dowry, which he was desirous to save;) but by having her put to Death as an Adulteress, which Ver. 21. shews to be the present Case. Such evident Reasons as these have constrained the Jews to understand these Words, not according to the very Letter of them, but figuratively, of such Witnesses produced by her Parents, as convinced the other of Falsity so evidently, that they made it appear as plainly as a Piece of Cloth that is unfolded, and laid before Mens Eyes to view it. And they think the Hebrew Word Simlah, which we translate the Cloth, favours this Exposition: for it never signifies a Sheet, or Linen Cloth, (which is wont to be called Sadin, Judg. xiv. 12. Prov. xxxi. 24.) but such Cloth as Mens Garments are made of, which commonly is Woollen, not Linen. And so it is used in this Book, Deut. x. 18. and in this very Chapter, ver. 5. So that the Sense is, They shall produce evident Proofs, and lay them before the Court, like a Piece of Cloth, which is spread for all that please to look upon it. Whether this be the Truth, or no, I will not dispute; but refer the Reader to Mr. Selden, lib. iii. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 1, 2.

Ver. 18. And the Elders of that City shall take that Man,] If they were convinced that he had accused his Wife falsely, he was to be delivered into the Hands of the Officers who executed the Sentence of the Court.

And chastise him.] Condemn him to receive forty Stripes save one, as both Josephus and the Talmudists agree; and it was to be done with a Scourge made of Thongs of an Ox's Hide. The Woman was dismissed with a solemn Benediction; the Form of which is set down in the Jewish Rituals: and, as for the false Witnesses against her, they were condemned to be stoned, according to the Law, xix. 18, 19.

Ver. 19. And they shall amerce him in an hundred Shekels of Silver, and give them unto the Father of the Damsel;] Who was to receive this Satisfaction for the Reproach which was thrown upon his Family. It is something strange, that Josephus should mention only arstataia silver, fifty Shekels to be paid to her Father, when the Scripture expressly saith an hundred, lib. iv. Archaeolog. cap. 8. But it is supposed by some, that he means fifty besides her Dowry, which he was to have given her, if he had put her away: which that he might save, he designed to take away her Life; and therefore was punished double to what it would have cost him, if he had been so wicked.

Because he hath brought up an evil Name upon a Virgin of Israel.] Laid the most infamous Crime to the Charge of an innocent Virgin; and that out of Hatred to her, and Love to his Money. For if he would have put her away, according to the Law of Divorce, no Man could have hindred him, as Maimonides observes: but then he must have paid her fifty Shekels, which they take to be the Dowry of Virgins, mentioned Exod. xxii. 16, 17. To keep which to himself, and be rid of her, he brought this scandalous Action against her; for which he was thus justly punished.

And she shall be his Wife; he may not put her away all his Days.] Besides the two former Punishments, in his Body and his Purse, he was deprived of the common Benefit which all Men had, who did not like their Wives; which was to sue out a Divorce. Here Maimonides calls upon his Readers to admire the wise Ordination of God, which appears in his Judgments, as well as in his Works. For, because this Man took away his Wife's Reputation, therefore God ordered him to be rendered vile, by being whipt: and because he basely contrived to save her Dowry of fifty Shekels; he ordered him to be amerced as much more: and because he indulged his Lust, and sought nothing but his Pleasure, therefore he was bound to keep her as long as she lived, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 49.

Ver. 20. But if this Thing be true, and the Tokens of Virginity be not found for the Damself;] If the Witnesses which appeared for her, could not prove the Falsity of their Testimony who appeared against her.

Ver. 21. Then they shall bring out the Damself to the Door of her Father's House,] Where she was to be punished, as a Disgrace to her Parents, who had taken no better Care to preserve her Chastity, while she lived with them.

And the Men of her City shall stone her with Stones, that she die;] This was the Punishment of such Adulteresses, except only of a Priest's Daughter, who, if she was guilty of this Crime: was burnt alive, Lev. xxi. 19. And it plainly shews he speaks here of a Woman corrupted between the Time of her Espousals, and her Husband's completing the Marriage. Otherwise he could not have had this capital Action against her, none being put to Death for simple Fornication. And this Maimonides saith in Seder Zeraim, that from Moses to his Time, it was never doubted, the Woman he here speaks of, was one that proved false to her Husband after she was contracted to him.

Because she hath wrought Folly in Israel,] A great Wickedness; as the Word Folly signifies in Scripture, and as the Vulgar translates it.

To play the Whore in her Father's House:] Where she remained after her Espousals, as in a safe Place, till her Husband brought her Home to his own House.

So shall thou put Evil away from among you.] See xix. 19.

Ver. 22. If a Man be found lying with a Woman married to an Husband, then they shall both of them die, &c.] It is not said what Death, either here, or Lev. xx. 10. But the Jews say they were to be strangled: which is an Opinion so settled among them, that Buxtorf saith he never saw any Hebrew Book which assigned any other Punishment for Adultery but this. Stoning indeed was the Punishment of her that after her Espousals play'd the Whore (as was noted before) between that Time and her Marriage: but after the Marriage was completed, if she were guilty of this Crime, this was the only Punishment, according to their Tradition: see upon Lev. xx.

10. and Buxtorf. de Sponsal. & Divortii, p. 32, 33. and Grotius, in John viii. 5.

Ver. 23. If a Damsel, that is a Virgin, be betrothed unto an Husband,] But not yet known by him : for there was generally some Space between the Espousals and the Bringing her Home to her Husband's House. And the Time allowed was more or less, according to her Age : see Selden lib. ii. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 8.

And a Man find her in the City, and lie with her :] If he lay with her any-where else, the Crime was the same ; but it was not so easy to corrupt her in her Father's House, or among her Friends, where she remained till the Completion of the Marriage, as it was to do it abroad in the City, or in the Field.

Ver. 24. Then ye shall bring them both out unto the Gate of that City,] That is, to the Court of Judgment, which sat there ; as I noted upon xvi. 18.

And ye shall stone them with Stones, that they die ;] After they had been sentenced to this Death by the Court.

The Damsel, because she cried not,] Which was a Demonstration she was not forced, but lay with him by Consent.

Being in the City ;] Where the Neighbours might have heard her Cry ; and the Force, if there had been any, prevented.

And the Man, because he hath humbled his Neighbour's Wife :] For so she was by such a Contract, as made her only his. This is supposed to be the Case of the Woman taken in Adultery, mentioned John viii. 5. See my Notes upon Lev. xx. 10.

So thou shalt put away Evil from among you.] See ver. 21, 22.

Ver. 25. But if a Man find a betrothed Damsel in the Field,] Where no body was near, as in the City.

And the Man force her, and lie with her ;] It was presumed, by the Circumstances of the Place, that she did not consent, but was under a Force ; as she also affirmed, and he could not prove the contrary.

Then the Man only that lay with her shall die :] Because he only was guilty of a Crime, as it follows in the next Words.

Ver. 26. But unto the Damsel thou shalt do nothing ; there is in the Damsel no Sin worthy of Death ;] To make her liable to suffer Death : for it was her Misfortune, as we speak, not her Fault, that she was ravished.

For as when a Man riseth against his Neighbour, and slayeth him,] He not being able to defend himself.

Even so is this Matter.] It is here observed by many, (particularly by Grotius and de Dieu) that Chastity is equal unto Life.

Ver. 27. For he found her in the Field,] Far distant from all Company.

And the betrothed Damsel cried,] For Help, as she affirmed, and as it was presumed ; because, if she had consented, some other Place might have been found, more convenient for their Purpose than the Field.

And there was none to save her.] None appeared to rescue her, as she desired.

Ver. 28. If a Man find a Damsel that is a Virgin,] In the Field, before-mentioned.

Which is not betrothed ;] To a Husband.

And lay hold on her, and lie with her, and they be found ;] There be Witnesses of it ; or they themselves confess it. This Case is different from that in Exod. xxii. 16, 17. in many Respects. For that Law speaks of one that was drawn in to consent to the Man's lying with her by inticing Words, (which is expressly there mentioned) and fair Promises, perhaps, of Marriage ; but here Moses speaks of one that laid hold of her, i. e. deflowered her by Force and Violence. In this Case the Man was bound to marry her, if she and her Father pleased (for both their Consents were required, tho' the Man that deflowered her could not refuse) ; but in the former Case the Man himself might choose whether he would marry, or no, which he could not refuse in this ; and besides, was bound to pay fifty Shekels, as a Mulct upon him for the Crime, as follows in the next Verse : see Selden, lib. i. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 16.

Ver. 29. Then the Man that lay with her, shall give unto the Damsel's Father fifty Shekels of Silver,] Here is another Difference between this Case, and that in Exodus ; where the Man was bound to settle a Dowry upon her ; but here to pay a Fine unto her Father. The Reason is plain ; because there was no Need of settling a Dowry in this Case, as in the former ; for the Dowry was settled upon her in that Case, lest the Husband might lightly and wantonly put her away by Divorce, and she have nothing to maintain her ; of which there was no Danger here, because this Law saith expressly, in the Conclusion of this Verse, that he may not put her away all her Days. Yet there are those who think it likely, that in this Case also he settled a Dowry of fifty Shekels upon her, besides what he paid to her Father ; for otherwise the Condition of a Virgin, deflowered by Force, was worse than hers deflowered by her own Consent.

They have some Exceptions concerning this Payment to her Father, which are not very material, nor certain. But this is considerable, that this Fine was the same, whether the Woman was of noble, or of mean Parentage, neither more nor less was paid by the Law. But in after-times, the Sankhedrim, they tell us, added some other Mulcts besides this here mentioned ; because it seemed so small, that the Honour of a Virgin was not thought sufficiently repaired by it. Therefore he that inticed a Virgin paid other two ; one for the Shame and Dishonour he had done her ; and the other for the Loss of her Virginity, and vitiating her Body. And he that forced a Virgin paid a third besides these two, upon the Account of the Pain unto which he was supposed to have put her. And in these three they proportioned the Penalties to the Quality of the Person, and other Considerations, which made them vary : see Selden, in the fore-named Place, p. 123.

And she shall be his Wife, because he hath humbled her ;] Tho' she were blind, or lame, or leprous, he could not refuse her, if she and her Father required him to marry her.

He may not put her away all his Days.] This was a third Part of his Punishment for the Force he had committed, that he should be forced not only to take her to Wife, but constrained also to keep her as long as she lived, and not have the Liberty of giving her a Bill of Divorce, as other Men might do, who were desirous to part with their Wives.

If it be ask'd, How it could be known whether she was inticed, or forced? They answer, as was observed before, that it was reasonably presumed that he forced her, if the Thing was done in the Field, or in a Place far from Inhabitants: but if in the City or Town, that she consented; unless the contrary was evidently proved.

Ver. 30. A Man shall not take his Father's Wife,] That is, shall not marry her.

Nor discover his Father's Skirt.] Nor so much as lie with her. For this is a modest Phrase, borrowed from the antient Custom in those Countries; where the Bridegroom, when he brought his Bride into the CHUPPA, as they called it, or Bridal Chamber, spread the Skirt of his Robe over her, to signify his Right to her, and Power over her, and that he alone might lawfully enjoy her, Ruth iii. 9. Ezek. xvi. 8.

And this Verse seems to me to be here inserted as a short Memorandum, that they should be careful to observe all the Laws which he had delivered against incestuous Marriages, in the eighteenth Chapter of Leviticus: see there ver. 8. and xx. 11.

C H A P. XXIII.

Verse 1. *H*E that is wounded in the Stones,] Bruised or compressed in those Parts; as the Manner was of making Eunuchs, who are here spoken of, and were sometimes made that Way, when they were Infants; or by taking them quite away; which was done in some, when they were grown up. And there were those, who had none of these Parts left remaining; as it follows in the next Words.

Or hath his Privy Member cut off,] In Whole, or in Part; which was not used, till they found the other did not effectually answer their Purpose in this unnatural Practice. Wherein some thought they honoured their Gods, particularly Cybele the Mother of the Gods, unto whose Service her Priests devoted themselves, by cutting off their Genitals. So not only Minucius Felix, Tertullian, and several other of the antient Christian Writers testify, but many also of the Pagan: see Job. Geusius de Victimis Humanis, Pars ii. cap. 1.

Shall not enter into the Congregation of the LORD.] These Persons were so much abhorred by some among the Pagans, that Lucian saith they were excluded not only from the Schools of Philosophers, but, which was more, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἱερῶν αὐτοῖς, καὶ τῶν ἐκκλησιαστικῶν, καὶ τοῦ κοινῶν ἀπαιτῶν συλλέγων, from their holy Offices, and their Sprinklings, and all common Meetings. So Diocles is introduced speaking in his Eunuchus. But no-body thinks this to be the Meaning here, that they should not entertain such a Person as a Profelyte; or that he should not come to worship GOD at the Temple: for that was free for all Nations, if they renounced Idolatry. But the Meaning of this Law is, either to forbid the Israelites to marry with such Persons, or not to admit them to bear any Office in the Jewish Commonwealth. The Hebrew Doctors generally take it in the first Sense: see Selden de Jure Nat. & Gent. lib. v. cap. 16. and so do a great many among Christian Writers. And there is an eminent Example of the Use of this Phrase in this Sense, Nehem. xiii. 1, 2, 3. But some think it was superfluous to forbid this, because none would marry with such Persons, as were incapable to perform the Marriage Duty: and therefore they follow the second Sense, it being certain that the Hebrew Word KAHAL, Congregation, signifies, in many Places, not the whole Body of the People of Israel, but the great Assembly of Elders, into which no such Person was to be admitted; because they were unfit for Government, Eunuchs being observed generally to want Courage. Thus Simeon de Mais, and others, who seem to have great Reason on their Side. Yet it is so plain, that the Congregation of the LORD, in the following Part of this Chapter, signifies the People of Israel, who might not marry with the Persons mentioned ver. 2, 3, 8. that I cannot but think it ought to be so interpreted here. For tho' such Marriages were useless and unprofitable, as Maimonides speaks, yet they made a Distinction between those who were made Eunuchs by GOD, (that is, born so) and those made by Men: and this Law, they say, is not to be understood of the former, but only of the latter. Some of which, it is certain, were left in such a Condition, that they were desirous of Marriage; as appears by the Constitution of the Emperor Leo, who did not think it superfluous to forbid Marriage with them. For it appears by it, that some Women choose such Husbands: see also Ecclesiasticus xxx. 20. but especially the Book ascribed to St. Basil, (de vera Virginitate, Tom. i. p. 719, &c.) where there is too free a Description of the unextinguishable Lust of such Eunuchs as were only deprived τοῦ διδύμου, whose Company he charges Virgins to avoid, not only because they hoped to corrupt them without Danger of Discovery, but were insatiable in their Desires. And on the other Side, tho' they were unfit for Marriage, yet it appears by many Instances in History, that they were not unfit for Government; nor wanted Courage for the greatest Undertakings. I need only refer the Reader for this to Xenophon's Cyropædia, lib. vii.

They that follow allegorical Senses, free themselves from all these Difficulties: see Filescus, lib. i. Selesterum, p. 169, & 185. But one cannot think that Moses intended any of those Things; tho' such pious Use may be made of his Words.

Ver. 2. A Bastard] The Hebrews do not understand by the Word Mamzer, one that was begotten in simple Fornication, out of the State of Marriage; but one that was begotten of such Persons as the Law forbade them to marry, or lie withal, under Pain of being cut off, viz. those mentioned in the eighteenth of Leviticus. They only except this single Case, If a Man lay with a menstruous Woman, and begat a Child of her at that Time, it was not a Mamzer: see Selden, lib. de Succession. in Bona Defunct. cap. 3. and lib. v. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 16. and Wagenfeil lately, in his very learned Annotation upon Mischna Sotæ, cap. 4. sect. 1. where he observes out of a MS. which he calls very precious, (Etz-Hachajim in Hilcoth Nidda) that Mamzer, whether Male or Female, was excluded from the Congregation of the LORD. And they were Mamzers who were born of any Woman whom the Law prohibited them to have Knowledge of, whether it was by Violence or by Consent, by Error, or advisedly, it made no Difference.

Shall not enter into the Congregation of the LORD;] Not marry with an Israelite. So all the Doctors, none excepted, expound it, as Mr. Selden observes, lib. ii. de Successione in Pontific. cap. 2. p. 209. If any Man of Israel married such a Woman, or any Woman of Israel married such a Man, and they were found in Bed together after Espousals, they were both whipt, for violating this Precept. But if they lay together without any Espousals, this Punishment was not inflicted on them.

Even to his tenth Generation shall he not enter into the Congregation of the LORD.] That is, never, as the Hebrew Doctors expound it. And Maimonides (More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 49.) gives this Reason for it, that People might be deterred from such Marriages or Conjunctions, which would leave an indelible Blot upon their Posterity. And indeed some Heathens antiently put such a Mark of Infamy upon mere Bastards, as to prohibit both Males and Females to come to their sacred Offices. Such a Law there was at Athens, mentioned by Isæus; as Casaubon observes upon Athenæus, lib. vi. cap. 6. p. 410.

There were some also of these Mamzers, who were not manifestly born of such incestuous, or other forbidden Mixtures, but were called dubious, because their Fathers were not known, or being exposed, and found in the Fields, or the Streets, neither Father nor Mother were known. Yet it being uncertain whence they were descended, the Israelites might not marry with them, for fear they should be polluted by those who perhaps were born of incestuous Parents. But Profelytes of Justice, they say, might marry with Mamzers; and, that they might not for ever be excluded from the Congregation of the LORD, they contrived this Remedy for the Restitution of their Blood. They might marry a Slave, (who was baptized, and become a Jew) whose Children were not reputed Mamzers, but only Slaves: who being made Jews, and having their Freedom given them, might lawfully marry with a Jewish Woman; and then they were intirely incorporated into the Congregation of the LORD: for Proles sequitur Matrem, the Issue follows the Mother, (as that MS. of Wagenfeil hath it, p. 565.) and there was no Regard had to the Father.

Ver. 3. An Ammonite or Moabite shall not enter into the Congregation of the LORD; even to their tenth Generation, shall they not enter, &c. for ever:] These last Words, for ever, in this Verse, the Jews think, warrants them to interpret those Words to the tenth Generation, in the fore-going Verse, as if he said, never. It is certain indeed that Moses intended to exclude the Moabites and Ammonites from marrying with the Jews for ever; for so Nebemiah understood him, when he quoted this Law, xiii. 1. as a Reason against the Israelites Marriages with them in his Time, when more than ten Generations were past. But then these Words, for ever, being omitted in the foregoing Verse, where he speaks of Mamzers, it seems reasonable that they should not be so interpreted; but that after ten Generations were past, all Distinction between them and others should be abolished. This, one would have expected, should have been the Sense of those who examine every Word so nicely as the Jews do: for here being mention made only of an Ammonite and Moabite, that is, of the Males of these two Nations, they will not have their Women concerned in this Law: but say, that an Israelite might take one of them to Wife, if she embraced their Religion. For thus they expound this whole Matter of Marriages with Profelytes of Justice, that is, such of other Nations as became intirely of the Jews Religion. With such Profelytes of some Nations, whether Men or Women, the Israelites were never to make any Marriages. With those of some other Nations, they were prohibited only to marry with their Men; with others, they were prohibited to marry only for some Generations; and there were others, with whom they might marry as soon as they were made perfect Profelytes. Of the first kind were the seven Nations of Canaan, mentioned Deut. vii. 1. with the Males or Females of which they might never contract an Affinity. To the second Kind belong the Ammonites and Moabites; to whose Males an Israelitish Woman was forbid by this Precept to marry: but a Man of Israel might marry any of their Women, after they professed the Jewish Religion; otherwise David, who descended from Ruth, a Moabite, had been illegitimate. Of the third Kind, were the Edomites and Egyptians: with whom, and with their Children, the Israelites might not marry; but their Grandchildren might. And of the fourth Kind, were all other Nations besides these mentioned. This is an Abridgment of what our great Selden hath more largely shewn to be the Sense of the Jews, in his fifth Book de Jure Nat. & Gent. &c. cap. 14. which another excellent Person, J. Christop. Wagenfeil hath confirmed out of his inestimable MS. as he calls Etz-Hachajim, in Hilcoth Nidda, cap. 10. See Excerpt. Gem. in Sota, cap. 1. p. 143.

Ver. 4. Because they met you not with Bread, and with Water, in the Way, when ye came forth out of Egypt:] This seems to belong to the Ammonites, who had no Compassion towards the Israelites, when they were distressed in the Wilderness: but tho' they were near of Kin to them, did not shew them that Civility, which is commonly expressed to mere Strangers in their Travels, Gen. xiv. 18. xviii. 2, 31. xix. 1, 2. We do not find any mention of this Barbarity of theirs in the foregoing History; but we read how kind God ordered the Israelites to be to them, in not meddling with them, much less distressing them, as they passed by their Country, (Deut. ii. 19.) Which aggravated their Inhumanity, in not vouchsafing this common Kindness to the Israelites, or giving them the Refreshment of Bread and Water as they went by them.

And because they hired against thee Balaam, the Son of Beor or Pethor of Mesopotamia, to curse thee.] As the foregoing Passage peculiarly refers to the Ammonites, so this doth to the Moabites; who, with the Assistance of the Midianites, invited Balaam, by the Promises of a great Reward, to come from the Eastern Country, and curse the Israelites: see Numb. xxii. 5, 6, 7. For these two Reasons GOD laid this Prohibition upon his People; in which Maimonides observes the divine Justice, in proportioning Punishments to Offences: for Amalek coming out against the Israelites, when they were newly come forth from Egypt, to cut them off with the Sword, GOD commanded their Memory to be blotted out (xxv. 19.); but the Ammonites being only basely covetous, and the Moabites acting against them only by Craft, and not by Force, GOD inflicted no other Punishment upon them but this, that his People should avoid all Affinity with them, and shew no Love to them, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 41. And the MS. Author of Etz-Hachajim, mentioned by Wagenseil, in the Place fore-named, makes this the Ground of the Distinction mentioned before between the Males and Females of those Countries. Their Males, saith he, might never marry with an Israelitish Woman; but by a Tradition delivered down to us from Moses in Mount Sinai, we hold, that the Women of those Countries (if they embraced the Jewish Religion) might be married to a Man of Israel. For the Women must be thought, in all Reason, not to have been guilty, as the Men were, of that which was the Reason of this Law; it not being the Custom for Women to bring out Bread and Water to Travellers; nor did they send Ambassadors to hire Balaam to come, and curse the Israelites. Accordingly we find Ruth, who was a Moabite's, married to Boaz, the Ancestor of David.

Ver. 5. Nevertbeless the LORD thy GOD would not hearken unto Balaam; but the LORD thy GOD turned the Curse into a Blessing unto thee, because the LORD thy GOD loved thee.] Balaam indeed did not curse the Israelites as the Moabites desired, and he intended; but no Thanks were owing to him for that: but it was to be ascribed to the Love of GOD to his People, who constrained him, against his Will, to bless them.

Ver. 6. Thou shalt not seek their Peace, nor their Prosperity, all thy Days for ever.] By entering into any League with them, much less by taking them into conjugal Society: but on the contrary, they were to look upon them as dangerous Enemies; who being their near Neighbours, would watch all Opportunities to ensnare or disturb them.

Some of the Jews would have this to be an Exception to the General Rule, xx. 10. that they might not offer them Terms of Peace, as they were bound to do to all Men, but the Seven Nations of Canaan: tho', if they desired Peace, they were bound, they say, to grant it: see Schickard, in his Mischpat Hammelech, p. 118. But Grotius hath well observed, upon Matt. v. 43. that GOD did not give the Jews any Right to their Country (as appears from Deut. ii. 19.); and therefore the Meaning here is, that they should not make any League with them of mutual Assistance, which they called fœdera συμμαχίαι.

Ver. 7. Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite;] So as never to enter into the Society of Marriage with them, they being a circumcised People.

For he is thy Brother:] Nearer of Kin to them than the Ammonites and Moabites; Esau their Father being the Twin-Brother of Jacob. And so Moses calls them, when he delivers GOD's Command to the Israelites not to meddle with them, Deut. ii. 8. We passed by from our Brethren the Children of Esau, &c. Here it may be observed, that the Word Brother comprehended more than the Israelites, as our Saviour shews the Word Neighbour did, Luke x. 29, &c.

Thou shalt not abhor an Egyptian; because thou wast a Stranger in his Land.] That is, the Egyptians in a fore Famine sustained them, their Children, Flocks and Herds, very kindly; the Memory of which Benefit GOD would not have forgotten, tho' in future Generations they were cruelly oppressed by them.

Ver. 8. The Children that are begotten of them shall enter into the Congregation of the LORD in their third Generation.] When they had been Profelytes for three Generations, it was lawful to marry with them. Nay, some of the Jews are so liberal here of their Kindness, as to understand by Banim, not Children in general, but Sons; with whom only Marriage is forbidden till the third Generation, Marriage with their Daughters being lawful, as they think, as soon as they turned complete Profelytes. Upon which account Solomon took Pharaoh's Daughter to Wife: see Selden, lib. v. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 14, 15. where he observes that all this held good only till the Captivity of Babylon, when all these Nations being confuted, they might marry with any of them, if they became Jews: for Wars, and Colonies, and Deportations, had made such a Mixture of People, that one could not be known from another. This Wagenseil hath lately confirmed out of several Hebrew Authors, whom Mr. Selden did not trouble himself to mention; and particularly out of the MS. Etz-Hachajim, which he most highly commends: see p. 149. upon Sota. They all agree likewise, that none of these Laws extended to Profelytes, who might marry with any of these Nations: see Selden ib. cap. 18.

Ver. 9. When the Host goeth forth against thine Enemies, then keep thee from every wicked Thing.] This was a Rule to be observed at all Times; but then especially, when they had the greatest Need of the divine Help, (for which wicked People could not reasonably hope) and when there was the greatest Danger of being wicked, in a Time of such Licence as Soldiers commonly take. There is a Sentence very like this in Agathias, lib. ii. (mentioned by Grotius towards the Conclusion of his Prolegomena to the Book de Jure Belli & Pacis). Ἀδμία γὰρ καὶ Θεῷ ἀσεβεία φευκτά μὴ δὲ καὶ ἀσέβεια: μάλιστα ἢ ἐν τῷ πολεμικῷ καὶ ἀνδραγαθῷ. Injustice and Neglect of GOD's Service are ever to be avoided, as most pernicious; but especially in a Time of War, and when Men are upon the Point of giving Battle. Which he proves elsewhere, by the illustrious Examples of Darius, Xerxes, and the Athenians in Sicily.

Ver. 10. If there be among you any Man that is not clean, by reason of Uncleaness that chanceth him by Night;] This seems to be only one Instance of Uncleaness, from which they were to keep themselves carefully; tho' it was no moral Impurity, not a voluntary Pollution.

By which it was easy for them to understand, how watchful they were to be over themselves, in all other Cases, especially such as had an inward Turpitude in them.

Then shall he go abroad out of the Camp:] There is no such Thing required before in Levit. xv. 16. There the same Pollution is mentioned. The Reason, I suppose, was, that he speaks there of what happen'd to them in their own Houses; where they had private Chambers, into which they might retire, and keep themselves from defiling others: but here, of those that were abroad in the Army, where it was hard to keep their Fellow-Soldiers from touching them, without removing out of the Camp.

He shall not come within the Camp.] This some understand, particularly Drusus, of not coming within the Camp of GOD, and of the Levites, that is, to the Tabernacle: but it seems to be an Exclusion of him from the whole Camp of Israel, as I have expounded it.

Ver. 11. But it shall be, when Evening cometh on, he shall wash himself with Water; and when the Sun is down, he shall come into the Camp again.] See Levit. xv. 16. The End of all this (as Maimonides observes, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 61.) was, that every Man might have this fixed in his Mind, that their Camp ought to be as the Sanctuary of GOD (into which every one knows no Man might enter in his Uncleaness); and not like the Camps of the Gentiles, in which all manner of Corruption, Filthiness, Rapines, Thefts, and other Wickednesses, were freely committed.

Ver. 12. Thou shalt have a Place also without the Camp, whither thou shalt go forth abroad.] A Place distant from all Company; where they might ease themselves, as it is explained in the next Verse. For natural Honesty directed all Men on such Occasions to seek Privacy; and it tended, as all Cleanliness doth, to the Preservation of Health: which was one Reason of ordering them to find a Place without the Camp, that there might be no offensive Smell among them. And hereby, as Maimonides observes, they were distinguished from brute Beasts, which commonly ease themselves any-where, and before any body. But besides all this, Moses himself gives us the principal Reason of this Command, peculiarly respecting the Israelites, ver. 14.

Ver. 13. And thou shalt have a Paddle] An Instrument wherewith to dig up the Ground, and cover it again, Epiphanius, Hæres. lxxvii. calls it παυλον σιδηρον, an Iron Paddle.

Upon thy Weapon.] Their Sword, I suppose.

And it shall be, when thou wilt ease thyself abroad,] It was not in their Choice when they would do this, but when their Needs required: yet the Jews will have it, that they were to accustom themselves to do this Business in the Morning, as soon as they were up. Thus the Jews at this Day, (as Leo Modena tells us, in his History of them, Part i. chap. 6.) afterwards washing their Hands, that they may go clean to their Prayers.

Thou shalt dig therewith,] A Hole in the Ground.

And shalt turn back, and cover that which cometh from thee.] That there might be no Appearance, nor Scent of it remaining. This is still practised by the Caribians; among whom there is never any such Thing as Ordure seen. So the Authors of the History of the Caribbee Islands tell us, Book ii. chap. 14. Where they observe also out of Busbequius, that the Turks use the same Cleanliness in their Camps, making an Hole with a Piece of Iron, wherein they bury their Excrements. And in this Matter the Essenes were extremely superstitious; for, as Josephus relates, they would not ease themselves at all on the Sabbath-day, because they look'd upon it as a Labour to dig in the Earth, and Excrements not fit to be seen on that Day.

Ver. 14. For the LORD thy GOD walketh in the midst of thy Camp,] At this Time the Ark, which was the Token of the divine Presence, was settled in the midst of their Camp; and whithersoever they moved, was carried along with them; two Standards going before, and two following, and the Ark between them in the midst, as appears from the Tenth of Numbers. It is likely also, that it was carried in After-times in the midst of them, when they went to War; as some think it was, when they went against the Midianites, Numb. xxxi. 6. and when they encompassed Jericho. Now this Presence of GOD among them was the Reason why no Uncleaness, tho' in itself natural, might be found in their Camp; but out of Reverence to the divine Majesty, which dwelt between the Cherubims over the Ark, be removed afar off. And by such Actions as these, Maimonides well observes, GOD intended to strengthen and confirm the Faith of the Soldiers, that GOD dwelling among them, would go along with them, and fight for them against their Enemies, as it here follows, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 41. And thus Abarbinel discourses upon these Words; the Camps of the Israelites ought to be holy, having a special Providence of GOD among them: for they do not make War by mere Human Power and Courage, but by the Power of GOD and of his Spirit, on which they depend for Deliverance from all Evil, and Victory over their Enemies, &c.

To deliver thee, and to give up thine Enemies before thee.] This is the constant Sense of this Phrase, Of GOD's being in the midst of them, to defend, protect, and deliver them from all Evil, as I observed before: see Deut. vii. 21. Josh. iii. 10. Psal. xlv. 6. Zechar. iii. 15. Now this Cleanliness being commanded with respect to the divine Presence, which dwelt among them, the Jews are strangely mistaken in using such Superstitions as they do in every Place, when they have no such Presence of the divine Majesty in the midst of them; see Schickard in Mischpat Hammelech, cap. 5. Theorem. 18. p. 144, &c.

Therefore shall thy Camp be holy,] Free from all Manner of Defilements, tho' they be only of this sort.

That he see no unclean Thing in thee,] In these Words, saith Maimonides, (in the Place before named) he deters them from Fornication; which is far worse than the fore-mentioned Uncleaness; but too common among the Soldiers, when they are absent from their own Homes. And therefore, that he might keep them from such Impurities, he commands them such Actions, (he means covering their Ordure) as might call to their Mind the glorious Majesty of GOD, which which dwelt among them. But tho' the Hebrew Word, which we here translate unclean Thing, properly signifies Nakedness, and all those impure Mixtures mentioned in the eighteenth of Leviticus, and therefore, by Maimonides particularly applied to such Uncleanneſs; yet Mr. Selden hath well obſerved, that it ſignifies all manner of Filthineſs; and therefore is well ſo tranſlated by us, both here and in the next Chapter, where he ſpeaks of the Matter of Divorce.

And ſo it is uſed by the Prophet Nabum, iii. 5. (to name no more) where the Nakedneſs of Nineveh, which God ſaith he would ſhew to all Nations, ſignifies all the Murders, Robberies, Deceit, and other great Wickedneſſes, which abounded in that City: ſee Uxor. Hebr. lib. iii. cap. 23. And thus Abarbinel here extends it, to all the horrid Sins which were uſually committed in the Camps of Idolaters.

And turn away from thee.] As Princes are wont to do, when they ſee any Thing offensive to them. And the Meaning is, he would not deliver them from their Enemies, (as he promiſed before) but give them up into their Hands. I conclude all this Matter with the Words of R. Zacharias, in Pirke Eliezer, cap. 44. The Pillar of the Cloud (in which the Glory of the LORD dwelt) encompassed the Camps of Israel round about, and made them like a City girt about with a Wall, that no Enemy might aſſault them. But this Cloud threw all Uncleanneſs out of the Camps of Israel, for they were holy: and he quotes this Place for it.

Ver. 15. Thou ſhalt not deliver unto his Maſter, the Servant which is eſcaped from his Maſter unto thee.] The Hebrew Doctors underſtand this of a Servant of another Nation, who was become a Jew: Whom his Maſter, if he went to dwell out of Judea, might not carry along with him againſt his Will; and if he fled from him, when he had carried him, he might not be delivered to him, but ſuffered to dwell in the Land of Israel. Which they underſtand alſo of a Servant, that fled from his Maſter out of any of the Countries of the Gentiles into the Land of Israel; which was to be a ſafe Refuge to him: ſee Selden. lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. juxta Diſcipl. Hebr. cap. 8. p. 711.

Ver. 16. He ſhall dwell with thee, even among you.] Having embraced the Jewish Religion.

In that Place which he ſhall chooſe, in one of thy Gates where it liketh him beſt:] He was not to be abridged of his Liberty, but permitted to ſettle himſelf where he pleaſed, in any Part of their Country.

Thou ſhalt not oppreſs him.] For there was an expreſs Law againſt all manner of Injuries or Hardſhips put upon Strangers, Levit. xix. 33, 34.

Ver. 17. *There ſhall be no Whore of the Daughters of Israel, nor a Sodomite of the Sons of Israel.]* Or a Whoremonger of the Sons of Israel; as the laſt Part of the Verſe may be tranſlated, with the ſame Reason that the foregoing Words are tranſlated, no Whore of the Daughters of Israel. So Bonfrerius truly obſerves, and ſo the Vulgar Latin and the LXX tranſlate it, and ſeveral other Versions mentioned by Mr. Selden, lib. iii. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 23. p. 487. Which ſort of Perſons Moses would not have to be tolerated among the Israelites, as they were among the Egyptians; many of which, if we may believe Sextus Empiricus, were ſo far from thinking it a Reproach for Women to prostitute themſelves, that they looked upon it as honourable, and gloried in it, τὸ τὰς γυναῖκας ἐπαίρειν, &c. ὅτι τῖς πολλοῖς Αἰγυπτίαν ἐυνεῖς, &c. lib. iii. Pyr. Hypot. cap. 24. p. 152.

“ And Reason there was for this Prohibition, becauſe by Whoredom Families are founded and deſtroyed, as Maimonides obſerves; “ and their Iſſues are looked upon by all Men as “ Aliens; ſo that none will own them as their “ Kindred, and their Neighbours become Strangers “ to them; than which nothing can be worſe for “ them, and for their Parents. For which Cauſe; “ ſaith he, all publick Stews were diſallowed “ among the Israelites; who had this Benefit by it, “ among others, that many Brawls and Quarrels, “ Fightings and Bloodſhed, were prevented; which “ frequently happened, when ſeveral Men were “ aſſembled at the ſame Time, contending for the “ ſame Woman. For ſo the Scripture ſaith, “ Jer. v. 7. They aſſemble by Troops in the Harlots “ Houſes. For the preventing of theſe, and ſuch- “ like Miſchiefs, and that the Diſtinction of Fa- “ milies might be preſerved, both Whores and “ Whoremongers are here condemned; and no “ other Conjunction permitted, but with a Man’s “ own Wife, publicly married. For if a private “ Marriage had been ſufficient, many would have “ kept Women in their Houſes as their Whores, “ and pretended they were their Wives. Therefore, “ after a Man had privately eſpouſed a Woman, “ he was bound publicly to keep his Wedding.” Thus that great Man, More Novechim, P. iii. cap. 49. and ſee Selden, lib. v. de Jure Nat. & Gent. juxta Diſc. Hebr. cap. 4. p. 554.

How much more abominable then were ſuch Perſons as prostituted their Bodies, in Honour of Venus, and of Priapus, and ſuch-like filthy Deities! of which ſort there were both Males and Females conſecrated to ſuch impure Services! And this was practiſed even in the Days of Moses; as appears from the Hiſtory of thoſe who committed Fornication with the Daughters of Moab, who expoſed themſelves in Honour of Baal-Peor; for their lying with them was accounted Idolatry. And ſuch there were at laſt among the Israelites, as appears from 1 Kings xiv. 24. 2 Kings xxiii. where we read, that the Houſes of the Sodomites (as we tranſlate it) were by the Houſe of the LORD. Which ſhews they were not vulgar, but conſecrated Sodomites, or Whoremongers. I need not mention the Heathen Writers, who tell us this was a Piece of Religion among them: ſee our Learned Dr. Spencer, lib. ii. de Leg. Hebr. Ritual. cap. 22. and Heideggerus, in his Hiſtor. Patriarch. Exercit. i. ſect. ii. where he obſerves a great many very learned Men underſtand this very Place, not merely vulgar Whores, but of ſuch as I have mentioned; which were famous in antient Times among the Phenicians, Babylonians, and other Nations, whom Strabo calls ἱεροδούλαις, lib. viii. Geograph. where he ſaith, (pag. 378.) that at Còrinth, there was a Temple ſo richly endowed, that it maintained πλείους ἢ χιλίας ἱεροδούλαις, above a Thouſand of theſe conſecrated Whores: whom both Men and Women had dedicated to the Goddeſs. Οἱ γὰρ ναυκλήσις ῥαδίως ἐξαινεύοντο, for Sea-faring Men (who arrived in great Numbers at this Port) parted with their Money eaſily. And, lib. xii. ſpeaking of Comana, he he saith, There were a Multitude of Women there, οἱ ἐργαζόμενοι τὸ σῶμα; who maintained themselves by prostituting their Bodies; and most of them were ἱερεῖς, Sacred Persons: This City being a little Corinth, to which great Numbers of People resorted at their Festivals, διὰ τὸ πλῆθος τῶν ἱερέων, διὰ τὸ Ἀγοστήναι τῶν ἱερέων, because of the Multitude of Harlots, which were here sacred to Venus, p. 559. And the like Account we find in Albenaus, lib. xiii. Deipnos, cap. 6. where he saith, They that went to pray there, were wont, for the obtaining their Petitions, to add, that they would bring some Women to be devoted unto Venus; as Xenophon the Corinthian did, when he returned Conqueror from the Olympicks.

Ver. 18. Thou shalt not bring the Hire of a Whore,] If such Persons as are mentioned in the foregoing Verse, offered unto God what they had got by prostituting their Bodies, it was not to be accepted, but rejected as abominable. For this was a Custom among the idolatrous Nations, as appears by a great many of their Writers; who tell us, they were wont to dedicate some Part of that which they received for the Use of their Bodies, at the Temples of their pretended Deities. Particularly Herodotus mentions it, as done among the antient Babylonians, lib. i. p. 199. Which explains what we read in Baruch vi. 42, 43. Where see Grotius's Annotations.

Or the Price of a Dog, into the House of the LORD thy God,] There was a peculiar Reason for this, besides the Vileness of this Creature, (which Maimonides only mentions, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 46.) which was, as Bochartus, and some other great Men think, because a Dog was highly honoured among the Egyptians, from whom the Israelites were lately come. For Nile was wont to overflow and enrich their Country at the Rising of the Dog-Star, and a Dog was the Symbol of one of their Principal Deities, called Anubis, who was represented with a Head like that of a Dog: see Hieroicoicon. P. i. lib. ii. cap. 56. p. 690, &c. If we can think this vile Idolatry was so antient as the Days of Moses, which it is certain prevailed afterward, this may pass for a very likely Reason, why God would not accept so much as the Price for which a Dog was sold, or exchanged; for so the LXX expound it: As for Example, If a Man gave a Lamb for a fine Dog, God would not have that Lamb offered at his Altar; as Maimonides explains it.

For any Vow:] There was the greatest Obligation lay upon Men to make good their Vows, wherewith upon any Occasion they had bound themselves; but God would have them discharged from such vile Obligations as these.

For even both these are Abomination unto the LORD thy God.] It is hard to give an Account why these two (the Price of a Whore and of a Dog) are associated in the same Law; unless it be in Opposition to some such Rites as those before-mentioned among the Egyptians; who in After-times, it is certain, had such Harlots sacred to Isis, as many think are spoken of in the Beginning of this Verse; and a Dog was no-where else sacred as a Symbol of Anubis or Mercury. Tho' this may be said with some Probability, that these two are joined together, because a Whore and a Dog are both alike impudent. Josephus thinks, that the Price of a Dog here mentioned, was Money given, ἐν ὀχλοῖς κνύς, for the Loan of a good Dog to breed withal, as Mr. Selden observes, in his History of Titbes, p. 57. where he notes also, that the Jews would not admit the Tenth of Usury, or of War, to be offered. But the Talmudists expound it quite otherwise, as I have done, for the Price of a Dog, either sold or exchanged for some other Thing; which the same great Man approves of as the truer Interpretation, lib. v. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 4. p. 557.

Ver. 19. Thou shalt not lend upon Usury to thy Brother,] i. e. Unto an Israelite: see Exod. xxii. 25. Levit. xxv. 36.

Usury of Money, Usury of Victuals, Usury of any Thing that is lent upon Usury.] Here the Word Nesekh is used for all sort of Usury; whether that which was made by the Loan of Money, called here Nesekh Ceseb, or that which was made by the Loan of Food, and such-like Things, called Nesekh Okel. But commonly there are two Words used to express this Matter, viz. Nesekh, Usury, and Tarbit, which we translate Increase. Which are not two kinds of Usury, one more griping, the other more moderate, as some have conceived; for the same Usury is called Nesekh, with respect to the Debtor, to whom it is grievous, and Tarbit to the Creditor, to whom it is beneficial: see Salmasius, in his Book de Usuris, cap. 7. p. 188. Yet there is some Difference between Nesekh and Tarbit; else one cannot tell why they are so often both mentioned in the same Place. And Nesekh properly signifies the Interest, as we speak, which was paid for Money; and Tarbit, the Interest of Corn, and other Fruits of the Earth; as the same Author shews in that Book, cap. 20. p. 614, &c. And in the next Book, de Modo Usurarum, he shews, that as the LXX and R. Levi ben Gersom thus understood the Difference; so do the antient Fathers, particularly Origen, and St. Hierom, cap. 8. p. 320, &c.

Ver. 20. Unto a Stranger] One that was not an Israelite, whether he dwelt out of their Land, or in it; if he were not a Profelyte to the Law; of whom they might not take any Usury, but use him as a Brother.

Thou mayst lend upon Usury,] Some of the Jews would have this to be an Affirmative Precept, obliging them to take the Usury of a Gentile, if they lent him any Money. For this Maimonides quotes a Passage out of Siphri; which others say he mistook: see J. Wagenfeil, in his Annotations upon Lipman's Carmen Memoriale, p. 598. where he shews that he was of this cruel Opinion. But this is not the common Sense of the Jews, and their wise Men have been so modest also as to decree, That tho' their Law did here permit them to take Usury of a Gentile, yet they were not to practise it, unless it were that they might provide for themselves; that they might live more safely among the Gentiles. And they add this Reason for this Limitation; lest the Jews, by this Way of Commerce and Traffick, should grow too familiar with the Gentiles, and learn their Manners: only Men that studied the Law, and thereby were out of Danger of being inticed to their Religion, might freely lend them Money upon Usury; for this very End, as they think, that they might make a Gain of it, and enrich themselves: see Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 10. where he observes, that the Mahometans forbid Usury only among themselves, not to Strangers. Which Salmasius shews is thus limited in the Alcoran by these Words, in their own Territories. That is, if Mahometans live among Christians, they may take Usury of them; but of Christians who live among them, they may not take any, no more than of a Mussulman, as they call themselves.

But unto thy Brother thou shalt not lend upon Usury:] He repeats this again, that they might not fail to be kind one to another in this Matter. And the Author of Etz-Hachajim, mentioned by Wagenfeil, saith, according to their antient Doctors, this is six times forbidden in the Law, not to take Usury of their Brethren, p. 601. upon Sota. And indeed, as there was nothing more rational than this, that their Neighbours making great Gain by Merchandize, (such as the Sidonians, Tyrians, and those that lived upon the Red-Sea, and the Egyptians) they should not borrow Money of the Israelites for nothing; so it was no less reasonable, the Israelites themselves, whose chiefest Profit was by Husbandry and Breeding of Cattle, should have Money lent them freely, by one another, without any Interest, their Land not being a Country of Traffick, whereby Money might be improved, as in other Countries. For by the Laws of other Nations, (as Grotius observes on Luke vi. 45.) that Usury was odious which was practised upon Husbandmen. Abarbanel also is so tender in this Point, as to say, that Usury hath something in it so unequal, (at least as it is commonly practised) that GOD did not permit the Israelites to exercise it among all their Neighbours, but only upon those of the seven Nations of Canaan. And thus far he is in the Right, that every one who was not a Jew, was not to be deemed a Stranger: an Edomite, for Instance, is called their Brother in the seventh Verse of this Chapter; and therefore this Precept, Thou shalt not lend upon Usury to thy Brother, is to be extended to Edomites. In like Manner, saith he, neither do the Ismaelites come under the Name of Strangers, nor other People but those of the seven Nations. And this Opinion Leo Modena follows in his History of the present Jews, Pars ii. cap. 5. where he saith by the Word Stranger, in this Place, none other can be meant but only those seven Nations, from whom GOD commanded them to take away even their Lives. And that it is only their present Distress, in which they have no other way of Livelihood left, that makes them think it lawful to lend upon Usury to those among whom they live. In which I think he is mistaken; tho' this Doctrine is better natured, than that of some of the Jews, who are so full of Hatred to us Christians, whom they call Edomites, that they deprive us (as Wagenfeil observes in the Place above-named) of the Name of Brethren; and think it lawful to oppress us with Usury. Of which Number are R. Bechai, and the Author of the old Nitzacon, set forth by Wagenfeil, (antienter than that of Lipman's, set forth by Theodorick Hackspan) who was so full of Malignity, that he shut his Eyes against the Light which he plainly saw. For he could not deny that the Edomites were their Brethren; and consequently that Moses required the Jews not to take Usury of them; and that it was antiently unlawful. But then he pretends, that they forfeited this Privilege, by not coming to help to preserve Jerusalem and the Temple from being destroyed, yea, by rejoicing at their Ruin. And fearing this would not satisfy, he hath devised this Justification of their Usury, that the Edomites have made themselves Strangers by the Neglect of Circumcision: see p. 139.

That the LORD thy GOD may bless thee in all that thou settest thine Hand to, in the Land whither thou goest to possess it.] Charity to their poor Brethren, had many Promises of a great Reward: and this Law was made peculiarly for the Relief of such Persons, as appears by those Places before-mentioned, both in Exodus, and in Leviticus. It extended indeed to all; but chiefly was intended, as a Provision for the Poor and Needy; whom they were not to neglect: for GOD ordered them all to live together as Brethren, Children of the same Father. And indeed they were all, Rich and Poor, descended from one and the same Original. And therefore he designed there should be no indigent Person unrelieved among this People, upon whom he had heaped so many Blessings; and delivering them from the Slavery of Egypt, had planted them in the good Land promised to their Fathers. To which Purpose all those Precepts were given, which require them to lend gratuitously to their poor Brother; to restore the Pledge left with them; to leave the Corners of their Fields unreaped; not to gather the Gleanings of the Harvest and Vintage; to observe the Year of Release and of Jubilee; and such-like peculiar Provisions for the Comfort of the poorer Sort, that they might share in the Happiness which GOD bestowed upon his elect People.

Ver. 21. When thou shalt vow a Vow unto the LORD thy GOD,] In a Thing lawful and possible; and by a Person who had Power to make, and was not subject to the Authority of another, who had Power to make it void: see Numb. xxx. 2.

Thou shalt not slack to pay it;] Left they should prove less able, and so be unwilling to perform what they had vowed, or should perhaps forget it. If they lost the Thing they vowed, while they delayed, they were bound to give the Value of it. Which was one Difference between a Vow, and a Free-will Offering; that in the latter Case, (as Maimonides saith) if that which he designed was stolen or dead, he was not bound to make Reparation. The same Author applies this to a Vow a Man made of giving an Alms to a poor Body, suppose a Shekel; which he was to bestow immediately, if any poor Body was at hand; if not, he was to separate it, and lay it by till he met with one, &c. cap. 8. de Donis Pauperum, sect. 1.

For the LORD thy GOD will surely require it of thee,] Demand that which thou hast made to be his own.

And it would be Sin in thee:] Be punished by GOD's just Judgment upon thee, for the Wrong thou hast done him.

Ver. 22. But if thou shalt forbear to vow, it shall be no Sin in thee.] GOD was so very merciful, as Maimonides observes, that if a Man was not able to offer him an Ox, or a Lamb, he accepted of of Turtles and young Pigeons, of which there was great Plenty in that Country. And if this was beyond his Ability, but he had a Desire to testify his Affection to GOD by a Free-will Offering, he was pleased to accept an Oblation of Bread baked in an Oven, or Pan, or any other usual Way. And if this was too heavy, he accepted of bare Flour, without putting him to the Charge of baking it. For he would have Men to be easy in his Service, and all their Offerings to be free and chearful; and therefore tells them here, that if they vowed nothing at all to him, he would not take it ill of them, nor impute it to them as a Sin, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 46.

Ver. 23. That which is gone out of thy Lips thou shalt keep and perform, even a Free-will Offering, according as thou hast vowed, &c.] This was to make them consider well before-hand, what their Ability was, and not rashly resolve and promise any Thing. For tho' they were not bound to vow the smallest Matter, yet having once vowed, they were no longer free, but bound to make it good, tho' it proved very chargeable to them. Yet there is a traditional Doctrine among them practised at this Day, that if any Man or Woman make a Vow which afterward they wish unmade, and it be not to the Prejudice of any third Person that it should be broke, in this Case they may go to a Rabbin, or to any other three Men, who hearing their Reasons why they repent of having made such a Vow, and judging them good, they may free them from their Obligation, saying to such a Person thrice, Be thou absolved from this Vow, &c. and so he is discharged. Thus Leo Modena, in his History of the present Jews, Pars ii. cap. 4.

Ver. 24. When thou comest into thy Neighbour's Vineyard, then thou mayst eat Grapes thy Fill, at thine own Pleasure;] This the Hebrew Doctors take to be a Law made in favour of poor Labourers, who were hired to work in their Vineyards, in the Time of Vintage; whom the Owners might not hinder from eating as many Grapes as they pleased, (and the same held good in Olives, Figs, Dates, and all other Fruit) as long as they were at Work; but not after they had done working. And if their Masters would not suffer them so to do, they were to be scourged with forty Stripes save one; for it was not reasonable to deny them this Liberty, when the very Oxen were not to be muzzled, whilst they trod out the Corn: see Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 2. p. 670. Which must be confessed to be as good a natural Law, as that of Plato's was harsh and unnatural; which enacted, a Servant should receive as many Stripes as he eat Grapes or Figs: see Eusebius, lib. xiii. Præpar. Evangel. cap. ult.

But I see no Reason at all to restrain this Indulgence only to Hirelings, of whom there is no mention at all in this Law; and therefore Josephus seems to me to have justly enlarged this Benefit (lib. iv. Archæol. cap. 8.) to all Travellers on the Highway, tho' they were not Israelites, (to whom, and to Profelytes of Justice alone, the Jews confine this Privilege) but mere Strangers of any other Nation, who had Occasion to pass by a Vineyard, and needed a Refreshment. Which Permission may seem to have caused great Inconvenience, if not Mischief in it, because they might tread down the Vines, and make great Waste among the Grapes. Therefore by coming into their Neighbour's Vineyard, is not meant going into every Part of it, with a Liberty to pick out the best Grapes; but only stepping aside out of their Way, into the Skirts of the Vineyard, which lay near the Road, and satisfying their Hunger, without entering further into the Vineyard. This made it no Damage to the Owners, considering the great Plenty of Fruit in that Country.

But thou shalt not put any in thy Vessel.] They were only to eat for their present Necessity or Delight, but not to carry any away with them, for the Benefit of others, or their own Refreshment at another Time. And therefore might not put any in their Pouches, or their Garments, or Bosoms, or so much as carry away in their Hands what they could not eat.

Ver. 25. When thou comest into the standing Corn of thy Neighbour's, then thou mayst pluck the Ears with thine Hand;] As the Disciples of our Saviour did, when they walked through the Corn, Matt. xii. 1. which they might have justified by the strictest Rules of the Pharisaical Doctors, who granted this Privilege unto Jews, but not unto Gentiles.

But thou shalt not move a Sickle unto thy Neighbour's standing Corn.] They might not cut down any Corn, but only pluck with their Hands as much as was necessary to satisfy their Hunger, or for their Pleasure.

C H A P. XXIV.

Verse 1. When a Man hath taken a Wife, and married her;] The Hebrew Doctors make a Difference between these two; understanding by taking a Wife, his espousing her to be his Wife; and by marrying her, his completing the Contract, by lying with her.

And it come to pass,] Either after he hath espoused her, or after he hath consummated the Marriage.

That she find no Favour in his Eyes,] i. e. He dislikes her; or, as is expressed, ver. 3. bates her. Which signifies either an absolute Dislike to her; or comparatively with some Person, whom he likes better.

Because he hath found some Uncleaness in her;] This is assigned as the Reason and Ground of his Dislike, which signifies something odious to him, tho' perhaps it might not be so to another, whom Moses supposes she might marry after this Husband had discharged her. Some of the Jews indeed extend this Liberty so far, as to fancy they might, without any Reason at all, for their mere Pleasure, part with their Wives: see Buxtorf. de Sponsal. & Divortiiis, sect. 89. But others are more modest, and acknowledge that these Words [Matter of Uncleaness] signify some weighty Cause. Yet they distinguish between the first Wife a Man took, who might not be put away but for some Uncleaness; and the second, who might be put away for a lesser Reason. But there were great Differences between the School of Hillel, and the School of Samai, (whom the Talmudists so much talk of) about this Matter of Uncleaness: yet both agree it hath a far lower Signification here, than in the Book of LEVITICUS, where it signifies Adultery, Incest, or such like Turpitude. For if Adultery had been here meant, she might have been put to Death; or the mere Suspicion of it tried by the Water of Jealousy.

See Buxtorf in the Book before-named, sect. 90. and our Selden, lib. iii. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 20, 21. Abarbanel thinks the two plainest Causes of Dislike signified by these Words, were either such Behaviour as might make her suspected of Impurity (as going with her Face uncovered, or her Breast naked; sporting with young Men; or washing in the same Place with them: or having her Arms bare); or, Secondly, when they were of such a different Temper, Humour, Disposition, that they disliked and nauseated each other's Company, and consequently lived in continual Brawls and Contentions. And besides such moral Causes, they allowed also such natural, as made a Woman offensive, viz. Leprosy, or some such Disease in her Body, as he did not discover before Marriage. And sometimes they extend this as far as to a stinking Breath.

[Then let him write her a Bill of Divorcement,] Whatsoever was the Cause of the Husband's Dislike, this Law provides the Wife should not be damaged by it, being made rather for her Advantage than her Husband's, viz. to free her (as Dr. Hammond observes) from the Pain and Vexation of her Husband's Unkindness, and the Danger of seeing another taken in, and preferred before her; and she might be perfectly at Liberty to leave one, who did not love her, and take another Husband, who might possibly delight in her: see Answer to Six Queries, Q. iii. cap. 2. Some think, that this Custom of putting away Wives, which they did not like, prevailed before the Law of Moses. Which Opinion hath something to countenance it, from the Mention of Divorces in several Places, (Levit. xxi. 14. xxii. 13. Numb. xxx. 9.) before the Book of Deuteronomy was written, wherein he orders a Bill to be given in Writing to discharge them. If this be true, it gives a good Reason why God was pleased to grant this Permission; because they were so settled in this Practice, that it was safer still to indulge it to them, than quite to abolish it. Which he did with this Caution, That Husbands should not discharge their Wives with a Word, bidding them be gone out of Doors, (i.e. putting them away rashly, and in a sudden Fit of Anger) but first write them a Bill containing their Pleasure herein. Which being a deliberate Act, might possibly hinder this Divorce; to which they might be prone in a Passion, but not after some Consideration. The Form of this Bill is in Mr. Selden, and exactly scanned lib. iii. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 24. Who observes also, in another Place of that Book, (cap. 19.) That as for five hundred Years, or more, the Roman State flourished without the Use of Divorces, so for seven Hundred Years after the making of this Law, there is no Mention of any Bill of Divorce among the Jews, that is, till the Days of Isaiab. (see Chap. i. 1.) and but rarely afterwards.

[And give it in her Hand,] Saying these, or some such-like Words, Behold, this is thy Bill of Divorce; otherwise it was not good: and there were to be at least two Witnesses unto it, as the Jews say. Who make ten Things necessary (which they think to be founded upon the Law itself) to make the Bill legal: see Selden, in the same Book, cap. 25.

[And send her out of his House.] This Doctor

Hammond (in the Place above-mentioned) looks upon as an Obligation upon her Husband to furnish her for her Journey, to endow her, and make Provision for her. For so the Word עזר ופרנס, to send out, signifies in the New Testament, to provide a Victicum, 1 Corin. xvi. 6, 11. Titus iii. 13. where it is explained by letting nothing be wanting. But the Jews are of Opinion, that the Divorce was perfect and legitimate, before he sent her out of his Doors: for it was sufficient to give her a Bill in such a Form, as plainly shew'd their Matrimony was dissolv'd; and that she was no Part of his Family, tho' he had not actually sent her away. Yet if he kept her still in his House, after this Bill was delivered into her Hand, it was presumed they cohabited together, and he was to give her a new Bill of Divorce.

In all which I can see nothing like a Command for putting away their Wives, if they were disagreeable; which the Jews would fain extort out of these Words. And so they spake unto our blessed Lord, Matth. xix. 7. tho' in another Place they spake of it only as a Permission, Mark x. 3. The plain Intent of this Law being this: That if a Man did put away his Wife, (as they are suffered to do) she might marry another Man; but if that new Husband died, she might not return to her first Husband again: see Buxtorf de Sponsal. & Divort. p. 107, 108, &c. and to shew that Moses rather supposed, than permitted Divorces, p. 113, &c.

[Ver. 2. And when she is departed out of his House,] So that it is publickly known, she is no longer his Wife.

[She may go and be another Man's Wife.] The Bond of Marriage being wholly broken by the Bill of Divorce, whereby he renounced all Interest in her, and expressly said, in the very Body of the Bill, (as we speak) It may be free to thee to marry with whom thou wilt. Much more was the Bond broken by Adultery, for which our Saviour gives a Man Leave to put away his Wife, and take another: see David Chytraeus concerning this Matter, p. 117, &c. where he reports a very wise Resolution of Luther's Pomeranus and Melancthon, in the Case of the criminal Person.

[Ver. 3. And if the latter Husband hate her, and write her a Bill of Divorcement, and give it in her Hand, and sendeth her out of his House;] This shews that no other Way of putting away a Wife was allowed, but only this. For, as Maimonides well observes, [More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 49.] if it had been lawful to do it by bare Words, or simply sending her out of his House, any Woman might have left her Husband, and said she was put away; both she, and he that committed Adultery with her, pretending a Divorce, when her Husband had given her none. Therefore the Law wisely provided none should be put away, but by such a Bill as is before-mentioned, whereby an authentick Testimony was given of it.

[Or if the latter Husband die, which took her to be his Wife;] Whereby she became free again, as the Apostle hath observed, Rom. vii. 2.

[Ver. 4. Her former Husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his Wife,]

One would have thought there could have been no Danger of any Man's desiring her again, whom he had solemnly sent away with Dislike. But such is the Levity and Fickleness of human Nature, (the Jews at least were so inconstant) that it seems Men sometimes fought after that which they had rejected: and this was the Punishment of their Injustice, in putting away a Wife without sufficient Cause, (as by this they acknowledged) that they might not again enjoy her.

After that she is defiled:] This is the Reason why the former Husband might not marry her again, (as the Jews take it) because by her second Marriage she was defiled. Which, they say she was, (so that he could not have her again) tho' she had been only espoused to a new Husband, who had never lain with her. For they make no Difference between her second Marriage and second Espousals, but think a Woman contracted such a Pollution by her second Espousals, that she would not have been so much polluted, if she had play'd the Whore after her Divorce. For in that Case, they say, he might notwithstanding have married her again; but not after she had been married to another. Thus Mr. Selden reports their Opinion, lib. i. Uxor. Heb. cap. ii. where he observes that the Mabometans, who are wont in many Things to ape the Jews, here quite differ from them; allowing a Man Liberty to take his Wife again, tho' he had divorced her three times.

Now the Ground upon which a divorced Woman was accounted defiled, or unclean, after another Man had married her, I suppose, was, that this was looked upon as a solemn Renunciation of her former Husband on her Part, who had been renounced by him by the Bill of Divorce; but he was not absolutely renounced by her till she married another, whereby she was totally alienated from him. This made her unclean, not in herself, nor with Respect to her second Husband, whom she married, nor with Respect to any other Man, (who might marry her without any Pollution) but only with Respect to her first Husband, unto whom, by this Law, she was made unclean; for so all Things forbidden to the Jews were accounted, as appears from Acts x. 14, 15. where all Meats prohibited by the Law are called unclean; and God is said to have cleansed them, by taking off that Prohibition.

For that is Abomination before the LORD,] That is, to return to her first Husband, and to be his Wife again: for this, saith Abarbinel, was to imitate the Egyptians, who changed their Wives; and took them again into their Houses; which was the Occasion of great Filthiness. But this intimates, that if she had not been married to any other Man, but kept herself free, she might have been his Wife again, if he had a Mind to be reconciled to her. And this shews also, that God intended to discourage them from putting away their Wives, by making them incapable, after they had been married to another, for ever to enjoy them again, tho' they grew very rich, or otherwise desirable, which inclined many, no doubt, to consider well before they parted with them.

And thou shalt not cause the Land to sin, which the LORD thy God loveth thee, &c.] The People of the Land might, by such a large Indulgence, have been tempted to pollute it with many Sins, and thereby bring God's Judgments upon it: see Jerem. iii. 1. For, as Isaac Arama glosses, if this had not been prohibited, a Gate had been opened unto vile Men, to make a Trade of changing their Wives, and thereby filled the Land with Whoredoms.

Ver. 5. When a Man hath taken a new Wife,] The Hebrews think, (as I observed before, xx. 7.) that whether he had married a Virgin, or a Widow, he was to have the Privilege here mentioned; yea, they extend it to him, who had married his Brother's Wife; but not to him who had married her whom he put away, and might take again, if she had not been married since that to another Man. For she could not be said to be a new Wife.

He shall not go out to War,] See Deut. xx. 7. Neither shall he be charged with any Business,] No publick Employment was to be put upon him, which might occasion his Absence from his Wife; not so much as watching, or such-like. For the better Understanding of which, it must be remembered what was said about the Fearful and Timorous, who were bid to return Home from the Army, lest they disheartened their Brethren, xx. 8. And yet these Men were bound to furnish the Army with Victuals and Water, to clear the Ways, and take up their Quarters; but a new Bridegroom was free from all these. Only they made a Difference between a War by the divine Commandment, and one undertaken voluntarily: Unto the former of which they think this Immunity doth not extend, but only to the latter. In the Margin these Words are translated, nor any Thing pass upon him, that is, he shall not pay Tribute.

But he shall be free at home one Year,] The same Time of Freedom it was thought reasonable to grant unto Builders and Planters, because they are joined with new-married Men in the Speech the Priest made before they went to Battle, xx. 5, 6, 7.

And shall cheer up his Wife which he hath taken.] Make much of her, as we speak, and so endear himself to her by his Kindness, that there might be no Occasion of a Divorce. For the Prevention of which, this Law seems to have been intended; that by so long a Conversation together, without any Interruption, they might have so perfect an Understanding one of another, and such a mutual Confidence might be settled, that he might not easily entertain any Jealousies of her, when he should be absent in the Wars, or elsewhere.

Ver. 6. No Man shall take the nether, or the upper Mill-stone to pledge:] This is a Law of the same Nature with that Exod. xx. 26, 27. for the Preservation of Mercy, Beneficence, and Clemency towards the Poor, as Maimonides speaks, More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 39.

For he taketh a Man's Life to pledge.] That is, his Livelihood; by which he maintains himself and his Family, and keeps them from starving. By this Reason it was unlawful to take any other Thing for a Security, by the Want of which a Man might be in danger to be undone. For Instance, they did not allow any Man to seize upon the Oxen which were at plough. He who broke this Law was scourged.

Ver. 7. If a Man be found stealing any of his Brethren of the Children of Israel,] If he were either taken in the Fact, or it was plainly prov'd against him. So the very Words of the Athenian Law were, Ἐάν τις φανείη γινώσκαι ἀνδραποδισίζμενον, if a Man be an apparent Man-stealer.

And maketh Merchandise of him, or selleth him,]
This was the End of Man-stealing, to make a Gain of him, either by exchanging him for some Commodity, or selling him for Money.

Then that Thief shall die;] This Crime was punished with Death, tho' stealing of Beasts, or other Things, was not; (see Exod. xxi. 16.) because it was very heinous on a double Account, both by depriving the Community of one of its Members, and making him a Slave in another Country. And, indeed, the most moderate Lawyers did not know how to secure Men in the Possession of Things very valuable, but by inflicting such a Punishment on those that stole them. Thus, after Solon had tempered the rigid Law of Draco, which punished all Theft with Death, by ordering in most Cases only the Payment of double, he enacted the stealing of a great Sum of Money to be capital; nay, he made it a great Crime to steal Dung, because it was a Thing of great Value in that Country, which was very barren, and needed it for their Ground. How much more valuable was a Man, in all Mens Account? whom if any Man stole, the Law was, τὸ πρὸς θανάτῳ εἶναι τὸν ἑμιπύαν, that Death should be his Punishment; as Xenophon reports it. And he was accounted ἀνδραποδιστὴς, a Man-stealer, who not only by Force, or by Fraud, carried away a Freeman, and sold him for a Slave, or oppressed him; but he who inveigled away another Man's Servant, and persuaded him to run away, or conceal such a Fugitive, as Samuel Petitus observes out of Pollux and others, lib. vii. Leges Atticæ, Tit. v. p. 533. Which makes me think, not only he that stole one of his Brethren of the Children of Israel, but he that stole a Profelyte of any sort, or the Servant of a Stranger, was liable to the Punishment mentioned in this Law of Moses.

And thou shalt put Evil away from among you.] By these Words we may understand the Greatness of this Crime; for they are never used in this Book, but when Moses speaks of the Punishment of some enormous Sin: see xiii. 5. xvii. 7. xix. 19. &c.

Ver. 8. Take heed in the Plague of Leprosy, that thou observe diligently,] This was the highest legal Uncleanneſs, and therefore the greateſt Caution was to be uſed to prevent its Contagion.

And do according to all that the Priests the Levites] They were constituted by the Law the sole Judges, whether a Man had the Leprosy, or no; and were to order his Separation from others, if he had; and frequently make Inspection whether it spread, or was at a Stand, &c. See the thirteenth and fourteenth Chapters of LEVITICUS; where there are Laws about Houses and Garments, as well as Persons, infected with this Disease by the Hand of GOD, as the Jews understand it.

Shall teach you:] To teach, in this Place, signifies to declare the Obligation of the Law by the Judges of it, the Priests the Levites. Thus Jehosaphat is said to have sent his Princes to teach in the Cities of Judah, and with them he sent Levites and Priests, 2 Chron. xviii. 18. where R. Solomon notes, that it was the Business of the Priests and Levites to teach and instruct, as is here written in this Place (which he quotes); and the Princes went with them, that none might disobey them; but be constrained by their Authority, to do according to their Command: see Mr. Thorndike, in his Religious Assemblies, chap. ii. p. 22. where he observes; that in LEVITICUS Direction is given to the Priests how to proceed in judging Leprosies; but no Provision made till now, that the People should stand to their Judgment.

They who imagine that the Priest had the Care of Lepers, as their Physicians, forget that no other diseased Persons are ordered to repair to them; which is a Sign they did not pretend to cure them, but only to preserve others from being defiled by them; and to do what was necessary for their cleansing, when they were healed by GOD:

As I commanded them, so ye shall observe to do.] They were so to observe the Priests, as to mark what God commanded; and accordingly obey them, not against, but according to his Command.

Ver. 9. Remember what the LORD thy GOD did unto Miriam by the Way, after that ye were come forth out of Egypt.] This seems to be mentioned, that they might not think much to be shut up seven Days, when they were but suspected to have the Leprosy, and seven Days more to make farther Trial, and to be put out of the Camp, when it appeared plainly they had this Disease, (Levit. xiii. 4, 5, 45, 46.) since so great a Person as Miriam was excluded so long from the Society of GOD's People, Numb. xii. 15. And this may be look'd upon as an Admonition to take care, lest they spoke evil of Dignities, (which brought this Punishment on Miriam) or disobeyed the Commands of the Priest, which might bring the like, or some other Judgment upon them.

Ver. 10. When thou dost lend thy Brother any Thing, thou shalt not go into his House to fetch his Pledge:] This was a very merciful Provision for the Poor, whose Houses he would have so privileged, that no Man might enter into them without their Consent, and there choose what he pleased for the Security of his Debt. But he was to take what the Borrower could best spare.

Ver. 11. Thou shalt stand abroad,] Keep without Door.

And the Man to whom thou dost lend, shall bring out the Pledge abroad unto thee.] So the Debtor, not the Creditor, was to choofe what Pledge he would give; for he best knew what he could, with most Convenience to himself, part withal; and if it was sufficient, the Lender had Reason to be satisfied with it.

Ver. 12. And if the Man be poor, thou shalt not sleep with his Pledge :] But restore it before Night. Which is to be understood of such Things as were necessary for the Preservation of his Life or Health, as the following Words demonstrate.

Ver. 13. In any Case thou shalt deliver him the Pledge again, when the Sun goeth down, that he may sleep in his own Raiment,] And not to be forced to borrow of others a necessary Covering to defend him from the Cold ; and not be able, perhaps, to procure it : see Exod. xxii. 26, 27. Which Law seems to have been intended, to keep them from taking any Pledge of a very poor Man. For to what Purpose should they every Morning fetch a Pledge, and every Evening carry it back again, which would only create them a great deal of Trouble?

And bleſs thee:] Pray GOD to bleſs thee.

And it ſhall be Righteouſneſs unto thee before the LORD thy GOD.] Procure thee a Bleſſing from GOD, who will eſteem it an Act of great Mercy: which is often called by the Name of Righteouſneſs in the holy Books, Pſalm cxii. 9. Prov. x. 2, &c. Nay, ſuch-like Actions are properly called Tzedekab, or Righteouſneſs, according to the Opinion of Maimonides, who obſerves, (More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 53.) that this Word doth not merely ſignify giving to every Man his own. “For when a Man pays the Hireling his Wages, “or a Debtor pays his Creditor, that is not called Tzedekab; but what a Man doth out of “pure Love to Virtue and Goodneſs, (as when “a Man cures a poor Wretch of his Wounds) “is properly called by that Name. From whence “it is ſaid, concerning the reſtoring of a poor “Man’s Pledge, it ſhall be to thee for Righteouſneſs.” That is, ſaith Dr. Hammond, (in his Practical Catechiſm) that Degree of Mercy which the Law required of every Jew, without which he could not be accounted righteous: But there was a Degree of Bounty beyond this, called Chasidab, which was an Exceſs of Righteouſneſs or Goodneſs.

Ver. 14. Thou ſhalt not oppreſs an hired Servant.] Either by putting more Work upon him than he is able to do, or by detaining his Wages when it is done. The latter of theſe is moſt properly here denoted, as Conſt. L’Empereur obſerves out of D. Kimchi, who in his Book of Roots, ſaith, the Difference between פָּשַׁע (which is the Word here) and גָּזַל doth not lie in this, that the former ſignifies to defraud, the latter to take away by Violence; but the former ſignifies to detain by Force, and the other to take away by Force what belongs to another. And for the Proof of it alledges this Place in Deuteronomy, which he thus tranſlates, Thou ſhalt not detain by Force the Wages of the Hireling. Which is expreſſed more clearly Malachi iii. 5. Annot. in Bava Kama, cap. 9. ſect. 7. p. 247.

That is poor and needy:] And therefore the more to be pitied, and not oppreſſed, either by giving him leſs Wages than another Man, when he ought rather to have greater, or by keeping back his Hire beyond the Time wherein it ought to be paid: for, as the antient Lawyers ſay, Minus ſolvit, qui tempore minus ſolvit; as it is obſerved by Grotius upon James v. 4.

Whether he be of thy Brethren, or of thy Strangers, that are in thy Land, within thy Gates.] No Difference was to be made between a natural Jew, and a Proſelyte of the Gate, according to the general Law, Levit. xix. 34. For ſuch Oppreſſion might tempt them to do very wicked Things; for Inſtance, expoſe or kill their Children, when they were not able to maintain them; after the Manner of the Heathen, who were frequently guilty of this, and thought it no Crime, when their Poverty conſtrained them to it: ſee Petrus Petitus, lib. iii. Miſcell. Obſerv. cap. 17. where he produces many Proofs of it, both out of Greek and Roman Authors.

Ver. 15. At his Day thou ſhalt give him his Hire,] Which was due to him, either by Contract, or by natural Equity; and whether he had agreed to ſerve him for a Day, or a Month, or a Year. At the Time when his Wages was due, it was to be punctually paid, unleſs he were willing to have it remain in his Hands. For this was not an Act of Mercy, but of Juſtice, to pay an Hireling his Wages.

Neither ſhall the Sun go down upon it; for he is poor,] This ſhews he ſpeaks, particularly, of one that ſerved for a Day’s Wages, and could not forbear the Payment of it, becauſe he was ſo poor, as not to be able to provide himſelf and Family Neceſſaries without it.

And ſetteth his Heart upon it;] Eagerly expects it, as the Support of his Life. So the Vulgar tranſlates it, with it he ſupports his Soul, that is, his Life.

Leſt he cry againſt thee unto the LORD,] Make grievous Complaints to him who made both Rich and Poor.

And it be Sin unto thee.] GOD will hear his Cry, and ſeverely puniſh thee: ſee James v. 4.

Ver. 16. The Fathers ſhall not be put to Death for the Children; neither ſhall the Children be put to Death for the Fathers: every Man ſhall be put to Death for his own Sin.] This is a Rule of common Reaſon, which was antiently expreſſed in this vulgar Saying, Noxa Caput ſequitur: and is excellently expreſſed by Dion Chryſoſtom, ἵνας αὐτὸς ὑπὸνται τὸ ἀνὸντας ἀνὸντας, Let every Man be the Author of his own Misfortune. Which Amaziah, King of Judah, thought extended to the Children of Traitors, unto whom he allowed the Benefit of this Law, as we read in ſo many Words, 2 Kings xiv. 6. 2 Chron. xxv. 4. And not only Philo, but Dionys. Halicarnarſeus condemns the Cuſtom of thoſe Nations who put to Death the Children of Tyrants or Traitors: ſee Grotius lib. ii. de Jure Belli & Pacis, cap. 21. ſect. 13, 14. where he obſerves, that God indeed threatens to viſit the Sins of the Fathers upon the Children; but in this Caſe, Jure domini, non pœne utitur, he uſes the Right of Dominion, not of Punishment.

Ver. 17. Thou ſhalt not pervert the Judgment of the Stranger, nor of the Fatherleſs,] Nor of the Widow, who is joined with them, ver. 19. For ſuch Perſons commonly have none to ſtand by them, and plead their Cauſe; and therefore the Judges were to take the greater Care to ſee them have Juſtice done, Exod. xxii. 21. xxiii. 9.

Nor take a Widow’s Raiment to pledge.] Which is to be underſtood of one that is poor; as appears from ver. 12. See Exod. xxii. 21, 26, 27.

Ver. 18. But thou ſhalt remember that thou waſt a Bondman in Egypt, and the LORD thy GOD redeemed thee thence; therefore I command thee to do this Thing.] The Remembrance of their own miſerable Condition in Egypt, till GOD took Pity upon them, was to work Compaſſion in them towards others, in like forlorn Eſtate; otherwiſe they did not remember as they ought. This is often urged as a Reaſon for ſhewing Mercy to Strangers, and ſuch-like helpless Perſons, particularly in Levit. xix. 33, 34. and in this Book, x. 19, 20. xv. 15.

Ver. 19. When thou cuttest down thine Harvest in thy Field, and hast forgot a Sheaf in the Field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it:] There are many merciful Laws about the Poor: see Levit. xix. 9, 10. xxiii. 22. They are all put together by Mr. Selden, lib. vi. de Jure Nat. & Gent. cap. 6. where the Exposition the Talmudists give of this Law seems to me to be so strict, that it could do little Good. For they say a Sheaf was not taken to be forgotten, unless not only the Owner of the Field, but all the Labourers forgot it: and if none of them remembered it, yet if any Man that passed by that Way came and gave them Notice of it, it was not look'd upon as left by Forgetfulness. Yet they are so kind as to extend this Law not only to the Sheaves of Corn left in the Field, but to Bunches of Grapes, and other Fruit, which was left behind in their Vineyards or Orchards. And it seems no unreasonable Interpretation of this Law, that if an Owner of a Field, or his Workmen, called to mind, before they were gone quite out of the Field, that a Sheaf was left in such a Place, they might go back and fetch it; but not, if they did not remember it till they came into the City. They that would see more Cases about this Matter, may look into Maimonides de donis Pauperum, translated by Dr. H. Prideaux, cap. 5. and his very learned Annotations upon it. Josephus seems to me to have interpreted this Law most charitably, lib. iv. Archæolog. cap. 8. where he saith, they were not only not to go back to fetch what they had forgot, but to leave on purpose Corn, and Grapes, and Olives, &c. for the Benefit of the Poor.

It shall be for the Stranger, for the Fatherless, and for the Widow,] Who are commonly put together, as proper Objects of Charity: and are (as Mr. Selden speaks) a kind of Paraphrase upon the Word Poor.

That the LORD thy GOD may bless thee in all the Work of thine Hands.] Make their Land still very fruitful: which was a Reward of their Charity.

Ver. 20. When thou beatest thine Olive-tree,] As they were wont to do, in those Countries, with Sticks, to bring down the Olives.

Thou shalt not go over the Boughs again:] Not search the Boughs, after they are beaten, whether any be left.

It shall be for the Stranger, &c.] Who might go into the Olive-yards, after the Owner had carried out his Fruit, and gather what they found still remaining on the Trees.

Ver. 21. When thou gatherest the Grapes of thy Vineyard, thou shalt not glean it afterward:] By making a new Gathering after the first. But if the Poor themselves left any behind, after the usual Time allowed for the Gathering such Fruits or Corn as were left for them, it was lawful for the Owner to take it himself; and he was not bound, either to pay the Poor the Price of it, or to leave it for the Beasts and Birds. For the Command is, (say the Jewish Doctors, who nicely scan these Things) that it shall be for the Poor, and that it be left for them; but not any Thing given them in lieu of it: see Selden, in the fore-named Place, p. 699.

It shall be for the Stranger, for the Fatherless, and for the Widow.] The Jewish Doctors, by the Stranger here mentioned, in this and the foregoing Verses, would have only Profelytes of Justice understood, who had intirely embraced the Jewish Religion; so that other Profelytes, and mere Gentiles, had no Right to these Things. For by the Law, say they, concerning the Tythe for the Poor, xiv. 29. the Levite and the Stranger are put together: and the Levite being a Child of the Covenant, so must the Stranger be, who is joined with him. But this Restriction confined this Charity within such narrow Bounds, that they themselves are not satisfied with it: and therefore they add, that tho' such only as were within the Covenant, had a Right to these Things by the Law, yet if Profelytes of the Gate, or mere Gentiles, mixed themselves with the Jews, by the Decree of their wise Men, they were not to be hindered from gathering their Share in these Fruits of the Earth which were left for the Poor. And they give this Reason for it, because of the Way of Peace, that is, Offices of Humanity and Charity ought to be extended to all: see Selden, p. 700.

Ver. 22. And thou shalt remember, that thou wast a Bondman in the Land of Egypt; therefore I command thee to do this Thing.] If they had been only Strangers there, and neglected by the Natives of the Country, the Remembrance of GOD's Mercy in providing for them, had been a powerful Motive to obey this Command: and therefore the Remembrance of the Slavery and grievous Oppressions under which they there groaned, was a far greater: see ver. 18.

CHAP. XXV.

Verse 1. IF there be a Controversy between Men, and they come unto Judgment,]* It is evident, by the Sequel, that he speaks of criminal Causes.

That the Judges may judge them,] Who were appointed to be constituted and settled in all their Gates: see xvi. 18.

Then they shall justify the Righteous,] Acquit him who is falsely accused of doing any Wrong.

And condemn the Wicked;] To suffer such Punishment as his Crime deserves.

Ver. 2. And it shall be, if the wicked Man be worthy to be beaten,] For what Crimes Men were to be beaten, by the Sentence of the lower Courts, as well as by that of the great Sanhedrim, see Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 13. n. 7, 8. They were in all, as they reckon, two hundred and seven.

That the Judge shall cause him to lie down, and to be beaten] By his Officers who attended the Court.

Before his Face,] In open Court. But he was first to be admonished; and the Witnesses were to be produced against him, as in capital Causes: after which the Judge commanded him to lie down before a low Pillar, to which his Hands were tied; and he being stript down to his Waist, the Executioner stood behind him upon a Stone, where he scourged him both on the Back and Breast, with Thongs made of an Ox's Hide, before the Face of the Judges: for tho' one Judge be only mentioned, the Execution was done before the whole Bench, after the Sentence was pronounced by one of them.

According

According to his Fault,] For the Violation of a negative Precept he might be scourged before the Court consisting of three Judges; but not for the Violation of an Affirmative, which was to be done before the Court of Twenty-three, as Selden observes in the Place fore-named, sect. 6.

By a certain Number.] He was condemned to receive more or fewer Stripes, proportionable to his Crime: and all the Time the Executioner was scourging him, the principal Judge proclaimed these Words, Deut. xxviii. 58. with a loud Voice, If thou observest not all the Words of this Law, &c. then the Lord shall make thy Plagues wonderful, &c. Adding those, xxix. 9. Keep therefore the Words of this Covenant, and do them, &c. Concluding at last with those of the Psalmist, lxxviii. 38. But be being full of Compassion, forgave their Iniquities. Which he was to repeat, if he had finished these Sayings before the full Number of Stripes were given: see Selden, lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 13. n. 6. which I find in the Title Maccoth, cap. 3. sect. 16. And see G. Schickard, Mischpat Hammelech, cap. 2. p. 57, 58.

Ver. 3. Forty Stripes he may give him,] Which was more merciful than the Athenian Law mentioned by Aeschines, which was inflicted upon Criminals, τὴν ἑξήκοντα μάστιγι πενήκοντα πάλους, fifty Stripes by the public Scourge. But none among the Jews were to receive above forty for any Crime; fewer they might inflict, tho' not more.

And not exceed;] Of this they were so careful, that as one of the three Judges commanded the Executioner to strike, another told the Stripes, while the third pronounced the Sentences out of the Scripture before-mentioned, to admonish him, and every one else, of the Justice of the Punishment. So Schickard observes, out of Maimonides, in the Place above-named. For the Prevention also of Excess in this Punishment, they were wont to give but thirty-nine Stripes, and no more; tho' the Offender was ever so strong or pertinacious. Thus the Jews generally affirm, and it appears to be true, by what St. Paul saith of himself, 2 Corinth. xi. 24. Of the Jews five Times I received forty Stripes save one; which is exactly the Phrase of Mischna in Maccoth, cap. 3. sect. 10. where they interpret forty Stripes by the next Number to forty, i. e. thirty-nine. For which they give a foolish Reason in the Gemara, (as Job. Coch there observes); but Maimonides gives a sober Account, That this was ordered, lest the Executioner, by Carelessness, might exceed the Number of Forty, beyond which the Law required them not to go; but it was lawful to fall short of it, and therefore they required him to stop at the thirty-ninth Stroke. Yet if any Man deserved this Punishment twice together, they did sometimes exceed the Number of forty, and went so far as to sentence such a Malefactor to receive seventy-nine Stripes; as Mr. Selden observes in the same Place: where he likewise notes, on the other Side, that if a Man was so weak, that he was ready to faint away, before he had received thirty-nine, the Judges ordered the Executioner to stay his Hand,

Left, if he should exceed, and beat him above these, with many Stripes, then thy Brother should seem vile unto thee.] Being beaten like a Dog, as we speak, that is, so cruelly, that the Marks of it remained afterward, to make him contemptible. Which the Law was so far from intending, that the Jews say, no Man was to be reproached afterward with this Whipping, or the Crime for which he was whipped, because he was still a Brother, as the Word here is. And therefore he was to be restored to the same Respect among them that he had before, nay, to any Office which before he enjoyed; except he was the President of the Sanhedrim, who was never to be restored to his Power, if he had been scourged, nor equally honoured with his inferior Colleagues. So Schickard observes, out of Maimonides, in the fore-named Book, p. 62.

Ver. 4. Thou shalt not muzzle the Ox, when he treadeth out the Corn.] It was the Custom not only in this Country, but among the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans, to use Oxen in treading out their Corn, either with their Feet barely, or by drawing a Cart or other Instrument over it. And while they were at Work, some muzzled them; and others daubed their Mouths with Dung; others hung a wooden Instrument about their Necks, which hindered them from stooping down; or put sharp Pricks in their Mouths; or kept them without Drink; or covered their Corn with Skins, that they might not be able to come at it: see Bochartus, in his Hierozycon, P. i. lib. ii. cap. 40. p. 401. Which Inhumanity God here forbids, and instructs his People, by shewing Mercy to their Beasts, to be kind one to another, particularly to their Servants and Labourers, but above all, to those who laboured in the Work of the Ministry, for the Salvation of Souls, as St. Paul argues, 1 Corinth. ix. 9. See Bonfrerius.

Ver. 5. If Brethren dwell together,] They are said to dwell together, not only who were in the same Family, but in the same Country, Gen. xiii. 5, 6.

And one of them die, and have no Child,] If he left a Child, tho' he were a Mamzer, or an Apostate, his next Brother was not bound to marry his Wife; but if he left a Child by a Slave, or a Gentile, he was. If he left his Wife with Child, and she miscarried, he was bound; but if she brought a live Child, after she had gone with it nine Months, he was free. And by a Child is to be understood either a Son or Daughter: see Selden, lib. de Successionibus ad bona Defuncti, cap. 14.

The Wife of the Dead shall not marry without unto a Stranger:] This shews the End of this Law was to preserve Inheritances in the Family to which they belonged.

Her Husband's Brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to Wife,] The Hebrew Doctors understand this Obligation to lie upon the eldest Brother that was surviving; and only of a Brother that was by the same Father. For tho' they had the same Mother, if they had not the same Father, no Obligation lay upon him: For Brethren (saith Maimonides) by the Mother's Side, are not accounted Brethren either in the Matter of Inheritances, or of marrying a Brother's Wife: but they are as if they were not Brethren; for there is no Fraternity which is not from the Father: see Heideggerus, Exercit. i. de Oeconom. Patriarch. 10. 16. and Selden, Uxor, Hebr. p. 80. But the King, they say, was excepted from this Law, as Schickard observes in his Jus Regium, p. 56.

And perform the Duty of an Husband's Brother unto her.] This was a Law before the Time of Moses, among the Patriarchs, as we learn from Gen. xxxviii. 7, 8, &c. And it was so well understood to be a bounden Duty, that the Hebrew Doctors say, it was not necessary there should be any solemn Marriage celebrated with such Widow; because, unless her Husband's Brother renounced her, she was esteemed his Wife, Min Hashamajim, by the Authority of God; and that whether she had been only espoused by the deceased Brother, or his complete Wife. Yet by the Constitution of their Elders, he was to contract with her before two Witnesses, and give her a Piece of Money; before which it was not lawful for him to lie with her. There was to be also a sacred Benediction of the Marriage; and her Dowry assigned her by an Instrument. But if he did lie with her before these Solemnities, there was no formal Contract exacted of him afterward; he was only scourged for contemning the Constitution of their Elders, and compelled to settle a Dowry upon her: see Selden, lib. i. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 12. where he observes, that in case a Man left several Widows, if his Brother either married, or renounced one of them, all the rest were free from this Law. And if several Brethren died, and left every one of them a Wife, without Issue, the surviving Brother might either take, or reject them all; or take one or two, and let the rest alone, as he pleased. And if the eldest Brother, that married his Brother's Relict, died also without Issue, then the next surviving Brother was to marry her; and so forward, according to the Case supposed in the Gospel. And yet that Brother only was admitted to this Marriage, who was born before his Brother's Death; which they gather from the first Words of this Verse, if Brethren dwell together; which cannot be meant of one born after his Brother's Death. They might likewise have concluded, from this Phrase, that such of the Brethren as had Wives already, were not bound to take her to Wife, but only he that was unmarried; who might be supposed to be meant by him that dwelt together with his Brother, and was not yet gone to a House of his own. But I fear I have said too much of a Matter now quite antiquated, unless it be among some of the Indians and Persians, and among the Tartars that inhabit Iberia and Albania, who still retain this Custom; as Huetius observes, in his Demonstratio Evangel. Propos. iv. cap. 11. n. 1.

Ver. 6. And it shall be, that the First-born which she beareth, shall succeed in the Name of his Brother which is dead,] Shall be reputed the Son and Heir of the Deceased; but there was no Necessity to give him his Name.

That his Name be not put out of Israel.] That a Family in Israel might not be lost; for this was a Provision for the Preservation of Families: see Numb. xxvii. 4. And therefore, if there was no Brother, properly so called, to perform this Duty, the next of Kin (who is also called a Brother in a large Sense) was bound to marry her: see of this Word Name, Numb. xxvii. 4.

Ver. 7. And if the Man like not to take his Brother's Wife,] Here now was a great Mitigation of that ancient Law, which had been before the Time of Moses, that a Man might refuse to marry his Brother's Wife, if he did not like her. Which was not permitted before, as appears by the Story of Onan, (Gen. xxxviii.) who married Thamar against his Mind, (as his Behaviour towards her demonstrates) which he need not to have done, if this Permission, which here follows, had been then in Use.

Then let his Brother's Wife go up to the Gate,] Where the Court of Judgment sat, as I have often observed: see xvi. 18.

Unto the Elders,] A Court consisting of three Elders, was sufficient to judge in this Matter. And it was of no Consequence whether these three were created Elders, according to the solemn Form among them, by laying on of Hands; but it was sufficient, if they were such as they called Elders of the Street, or common Men: see lib. i. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 15. and lib. ii. de Synedr. cap. 7. n. 3.

And say, My Husband's Brother refuseth to raise up unto his Brother a Name in Israel: he will not perform the Duty of my Husband's Brother.] She was to put a Bill of Complaint against him in these Words.

Ver. 8. Then the Elders of his City shall call him, and speak unto him, &c.] He being summoned to appear before them, together with the Woman, (who they say was to be fasting) and two Witnesses at the least, she opened the whole Matter. And then the Question being asked, Whether it were three Months since her Husband's Death, (which were to be allowed, to see whether she proved with Child, or no) and whether this Man was next of Kin, and a satisfactory Answer being returned; the Judges laid the Law before them, and admonished them seriously to consider, on each Side, their Age, or any Disparity or Incommodity that might be in their Marriage, and accordingly to resolve; and then they asked the Man, in express Words, whether he would marry her, and raise up Seed to his Brother. If he stood to his first Resolution, as it here follows, and said, I like not to take her: then the Woman read the Words foregoing, ver. 7. My Husband's Brother refuseth to raise up unto his Brother a Name in Israel, &c. and then proceeded to do as follows, ver. 9. See Selden in the Book fore-named, cap. 14.

Ver. 9. Then shall his Brother's Wife come unto him, in the Presence of the Elders, and loose his Shoe from off his Foot,] From his Right Foot, as the Hebrew Doctors say; which was done, I suppose, as a Mark of Infamy, for his Want of natural Affection; which made him unworthy to be reckoned among Freemen, but rather deserve to be thrust down into the Condition of Slaves, who were wont to go bare Foot.

And spit in his Face,] In contempt of him who had despised her. The Hebrew Doctors indeed expounded this, only of her spitting upon the Earth, directly before his Face; so that the Spittle might be seen by the Judges. And they give this as a Reason, why the King was not subject to this Law of marrying his Brother's Wife, (and they might add the High-priest, Levit. xxi. 13, 14.) because it would have been below his Dignity to have had his Shoe pulled off, (if he had not liked the Woman) or to have had her spit before him, as Bartenora's Words are: which would have been a better Reason, if they had said, it had been very very unbecoming for her to have spit in the King's Face : see Selden, lib. i. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 10. and Hacksplan, lib. i. Miscellan. cap. 7. n. 8. where he observes the King was bound to all the six hundred and thirteen Precepts, but only this of marrying his Brother's Wife.

And shall answer.] To his peremptory Refusal of her.

And say, So shall it be done unto that Man, that will not build up his Brother's House.] She was immediately to read these Words of the Law. And then the Judges gave her a Writing, signifying his Renunciation of her, in the Manner now related, that so it might be free for any other Man to marry her: see the Form of it in Selden, lib. i. Uxor. Hebr. cap. 14. where he hath observed certain Niceties about the kind of the Shoe that was to be pulled off, but gives no Account why this Ceremony was used.

Ver. 10. And his Name shall be called in Israel, The House of him that hath his Shoe loosed.] As soon as she had loosed his Shoe, both the Judges, and all the By-standers round about, cried aloud three times, The Shoe is pulled off, the Shoe is pulled off, the Shoe is pulled off! And thereupon his Family had this Name, as a Disgrace, for not doing the Duty of a Brother. Some will have this pulling off the Shoe to have been only a Mark, that he parted with his Right to her; but these Words shew that it was in the Nature of a Brand upon him and his Posterity. And so Josephus saith, lib. iv. Archæolog. cap. 8. that he went out of the Court with a Mark of Ignominy. Which doth not relate merely to her spitting in his Face; for Maimonides saith expressly, (in his More Nevochim, P. iii. cap. 49.) that this Action (viz. of pulling off the Shoe, as well as the other) was a foul and ignominious Thing in those Days, intended to move Men to perform the Duty of a Husband's Brother, that they might avoid such Reproach. J. Wagenfeil hath given us the exact Form of the Shoe, which was used on such Occasions, in his Annotations upon Sota, p. 664. and see 1212. where he commends Leo Modena's Account of this whole Business; which differs not at all from that which I have given; only I observe that he saith, When the Woman taketh off the Shoe from the Man's Foot, she lifts it up on high, and throweth it against the Ground; which I take to be a Note of Indignation and Contempt. And he saith also, it was antiently accounted a more laudable Thing to take her, than to release her; and imputes it to the Corruption of Mens Manners, and the Hardness of their Hearts, that now they look only after worldly Ends, either of Riches or Beauty: which makes very few in these Days, (especially among the Dutch and Italian Jews) to marry their Brother's Widow: see his History of the Rights and Customs of the Jews, Part. iv. chap. 7.

Ver. 11. When Men strive together, one with another,] Fall out, (as we speak) and fight, either with their Fists or Sticks, or other Weapons.

And the Wife of the one draweth near for to deliver her Husband out of the Hand of him that smiteth him,] Who had wounded him, and was likely, I suppose, to be too hard for him.

And putteth forth her Hand, and taketh him by the Secrets:] As a sure Means to make him let go his Hold of her Husband, that he might preserve himself.

Ver. 12. Then thou shalt cut off her Hand;] This was to be done by the Sentence of the Court, as a Punishment for her Impudence, and for the Hurt which perhaps the Man might have received hereby in those Parts whereby Mankind is propagated.

Thine Eye shall not pity her.] The Word her not being in the Hebrew-Text, several of the Jews (and Grotius seems to approve their Opinion) interpret this Law quite otherwise; as if the Woman might both take hold of his Secrets for the Delivery of her Husband, and also cut off the other Man's Hand; and they should not pity him who suffered thus, nor punish the Woman, who might do any Thing of this Nature, to preserve one so dear to her as her Husband: but this is a very forced Interpretation. Maimonides is a little more reasonable in his Exposition of these Words, which he will have to signify, that they should lay a Fine or a Mulct upon her, for her Immodesty; which is suitable to their Interpretation of that Law, Exod. xxi. 24. Eye for Eye, Tooth for Tooth, &c. See L'Empereur on Bava kama, p. 198. But it is an intolerable Presumption in Maimonides to say, that if any one interpret this of a proper Abscission of the Woman's Hand, tho' he pretend to be a Prophet, and say, The LORD hath said unto me these Words, Thou shalt cut off her Hand, are to be understood as the Words found, (i. e. literally as we speak) and do a Miracle to confirm it, he is to be look'd upon as a lying Prophet, and may be put to Death, because it is contrary to the constant Tradition of their Elders. So he writes Seder Zeraim, translated by our famous Dr. Pocock, p. 15. and p. 38. Upon which Principle they killed our Blessed Saviour.

Ver. 13. Thou shalt not have in thy Bag divers Weights,] In the Hebrew the Words are, A Stone and a Stone: for their Weights then were made of Stone, as are ours now commonly of Lead or Brass.

A great and a small.] To buy in Commodities with the great, and sell them out again by the small; which was then, and is now an usual Way of cheating.

Ver. 14. Thou shalt not have in thine House divers Measures, &c.] In the Hebrew, an Ephah and an Ephah: for this was the most known Measure among them, by which all the rest of their Measures were made: see Exod. xvi. 36. From hence it was that Lucius Ampelius thought Mochos, that is Moses, (who by antient Writers is called Moschos) was the Inventer of Weights and Measures, because he took such pious Care there should be no Deceit in them, as the most Learned Huetius observes in his Demonst. Evangel. Prop. iv. cap. 8. n. 16.

Ver. 15. But thou shalt have a perfect and just Weight, a perfect and just Measure, &c.] Neither too scanty, nor too large: see Levit. xix. 35, 36. where all these three Verses are sufficiently explained.

That thy Days may be lengthened in the Land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.] Justice, as well as Charity, was necessary to prolong their Happiness in the Land of Promise, xvi. 20.

Ver. 16. For all that do such Things, and all that do unrighteously,] All that any way wrong their Neighbours.

Are an Abomination unto the LORD thy GOD.] This is an Expression commonly used, to declare GOD's Hatred of all idolatrous Practices. See xviii. 9, 12.

Ver. 17. Remember what Amalek did unto thee by the Way, when ye were come forth out of Egypt:] The Jews have framed three Precepts out of this and the two following Verses. One is, that they should remember what Amalek did unto them. Which Maimonides, according to their oral Tradition, refers to the Mouth, that they should always be talking of what Amalek did to them. The Second, not to forget it; which he refers to their Heart: That they should never let slip out of their Mind the Hatred Amalek had to them. And the Third, that they should blot out their Remembrance from under Heaven, i. e. utterly destroy them, and leave none of them remaining. But none of the Jews hath explained this better than Abarbinel; who, inquiring why such Severity was expressed against the Amalekites, when the Edomites, who were of the same Race, were dealt withal very favourably, (as we read before, xxiii. 8:) observes four Reasons given here by Moses himself, why they should remember, when they were settled in the Land of Canaan, and able to effect it, to exterminate this Nation: For that is the single Precept he gives them in Charge; only he bids them not forget what Amalek had done to deserve that heavy Sentence long ago passed upon them, and remaining on Record, (Exod. xvii. 14, 15, 16.) confirmed with a solemn Oath, though they were not able to execute it, till they were settled in the Land of Promise. The first of these Reasons is, Because, whereas Men undertake War against others, either to defend their own Country, or to subdue their Enemies Country, the Amalekites came forth against the Israelites without any such Cause; for the Israelites did not pass by their Country, and consequently gave them no Apprehension of an Invasion; nor had the Israelites then Possession of any Land of their own, which might tempt the Amalekites to covet it, and drive them out of it. But they undertook this War, with a petulant Malice, only to bring them into Slavery again. Which is the Thing here intimated in this Verse, Remember what Amalek did unto thee, &c. Unto which he should have added, That their Barbarity was much aggravated, by their assaulting them when they were newly delivered from grievous Oppressions, and were unaccustomed to War, and without any Provocation.

Ver. 18. How he met thee by the Way,] This the same Abarbinel takes to be the second Cause of GOD's high Displeasure against Amalek; That whereas it is the Custom of all Countries, before they begin a War, to denounce it by Heralds, shewing the Grounds of it, they rose up against the Israelites unexpectedly; which was a Piece of the basest Treachery. Which he thinks is intimated in these Words, He met thee by the Way; that is, on a sudden, by Surprise, without any Notice by a Declaration of War. He might have added, That they did this when the Israelites were in a Journey, and had travelled a great Way, and in a Wilderness, where they stood in need of Refreshment; but were very unfit for fighting. Then, saith one of their Rabbins, in Pirke Eliezer, Cap. 44. They came in like a Bear in their Way, to devour the Mother with the Children.

And smote the hindmost of thee, even all that were feeble behind thee, when thou wast faint and weary;] This he makes the third Cause; That they did not offer them a pitch'd Battle, but only fell upon their Rear, (as we speak) and there cut off such as lagged behind through Feebleness and Weariness, being unable to march so fast as the rest of their Brethren. This is, in a very sober Sense; suitable to the Use of the Word in Josh. x. 19. But what some of the Jews say, That the Amalekites cut off the Privy Members of certain of the Tribe of Dan, in Derision of Circumcision, is disowned by others of them, as having no Foundation. See Schickard, in his Jus Regium, p. 112, 113. Where Carpzovius observes, this was only a Fancy of their Midrashim, or Preachers, where-with they entertained the People in their Sermons, on Occasion of the Ambiguity of the Word we translate cut off the hindmost. Which R. Zacharias much better interprets, in Pirke Eliezer, Cap. 44: where he makes it to signify all that were behind the Cloud, (which protected those who were under it) as those who went out of the Camp, by reason of some Uncleaness, to wash themselves. But this is no more than an ingenious Conceit; for the Laws about Cleansing were not then delivered.

And be feared not GOD.] This he makes the fourth Cause; That though they feared Israel, whom they durst not look in the Face, but cut them off behind, yet they feared not GOD, who had done such wonderful Things for them in Egypt, and brought them thence with a mighty Hand, and overthrown Pharaoh in the Red-Sea. Which might have made them understand, that he sets up Kings, and pulls down Kings, as Daniel speaks, ii. 21. But instead of considering this, they would have prophaned the Glory of the LORD, (as he speaks) by enslaving those whom he had but newly delivered, and continued under the Protection of a glorious Cloud. Unto all which may be added, that they were originally derived from the same Stock with the Israelites, viz. from Isaac.

Ver. 19. Therefore it shall be, when the LORD thy GOD hath given thee Rest from all thine Enemies round about, in the Land which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee, &c.] GOD did not require them to put this Command in Execution immediately after they were possessed of the Land of Canaan, but after they were well settled there: So that there were some Ages passed before they went about it; and then GOD himself put them in Mind of it; or rather strictly enjoined it to be performed by Saul their first King: And we do not find them blamed for not doing it in the Time of the Judges, i Sam. xv. 1, 2, 3.

That thou shalt blot out the Remembrance of Amalek from under Heaven;] So GOD commanded Saul in the Place now mentioned, Utterly destroy all they have, and spare them not; but slay both Men and Women, &c. For by the same Justice that one Person is cut off, a whole Family, or a whole Nation may be utterly destroyed: That other Families or Nations, seeing or hearing GOD's Judgments upon them, may be moved to flee from that Wickedness, for which they are punished. They are the Words of Maimonides, P. III. More Nevochim, Cap. 41.

If we could believe all that the Talmudists say, we might think there were some among the Jews who endeavoured to mollify the Severity of this Precept: For they tell a Story in Bava-Batra, of Joab's Master, who taught him to read it thus; Blot out Zechar, the Male of Amalek, not Zeber, the Remembrance. But at the same Time they tell us, Joab thought to have killed him, for leading him into an Error.

Thou shalt not forget it.] This is not a distinct Precept, but only a Repetition of the foregoing, to imprint it more on their Minds and Hearts. And accordingly the Jews pretend to have had their Hearts so set upon it, that when the Officers were about to proclaim Freedom from War to those Persons mention'd xx. 5, 6, &c. they always excepted the War against seven Nations and Amalek, in which every Body was bound to assist.

I shall end this Matter with an Observation of Abarinel, That in this Paragraph about Amalek, the Injunction which God gave to Moses, Exod. xvii. 14. was fulfilled by him: Write this for a Memorial in a Book. No other Book, saith he, is hereby meant, but the Book of the Law, which when Moses wrote, he was bound to mention this Precept about Amalek; which he doth in this Place. And if we suppose that he immediately wrote a distinct History of this Matter, yet he inserted it afterwards into the Pentateuch, both here and in the Book of EXODUS.

CHAP. XXVI.

Verse 1. AND it shall be, when thou art come in unto the Land which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee for an Inheritance, and possessest it, and dwellest therein;] When they had a settled Possession of the several Inheritances, which fell to their Share in the Land of Canaan.

Ver. 2. That thou shalt take of the first of all the Fruit of the Earth.] This is not meant merely of the First-fruits they should have after they were settled in Canaan, but of the First-fruits they should have every Year; which being the most desirable (as Conradus Pellicanus here observes) of all other, and coveted by every one, majori aviditate, with a greater Appetite than ordinary, Nature itself directed Men to offer them to God, the Giver of all good Things. And these were distinct from that mentioned Levit. xxiii. 10. being of all the Fruits of the Earth. The principal of which being Seven, the Jews commonly say, these only were to be carried to God, viz. Wheat, Barley, Grapes, Figs, Pomegranates, Olives, and Dates. Some of the Doctors say, the First-fruits of all kind of Things whatsoever were due; and a Question being raised, whether a Stranger was bound to pay them, or not; some of them say, No; because they could not use the Protestation mentioned Ver. 3. But the more common Opinion is, that they might both bring First-fruits, and use the Protestation, because Abraham was also the Father of Strangers, Gen. xvii. 5. And it may be, saith R. Bechai, that is pointed at, Ver. 11. of this Chapter; where it is said, Thou, and the Levite, and the Stranger that is among you.

Which thou shalt bring of thy Land, that the LORD thy GOD giveth thee;] In order to which, they say, every Owner of Land, when he went into his Ground, and found any Figs, or Bunch of Grapes, or a Pomegranate, more forward than the rest, he was to tie a Rush about it, and write upon it, These are First-fruits. So Wagenseil, and many others, have observed out of the Title Biccurim, Cap. 3.

And shalt put it in a Basket.] The Quantity of each, they say, was to be at least a sixtieth Part. And they might be all put into the same Basket, provided they were not mingled, but preserved distinct; Barley being laid at the Bottom, and then Wheat, and next Olives, and above them Dates, and then Pomegranates; and last of all, Figs and Grapes being hung on the Outside; and Leaves of Palm, or other Trees, put between every kind of First-fruits.

R. Bechai saith, that the Rich brought these Fruits in Baskets of Gold and Silver, that is, covered with Gold or Silver (as Maimonides speaks); and we read of the like golden Baskets carried by Virgins, in the Feast of Bacchus at Athens. See Ezek. Spanhemius on Callimachus's Hymn to Ceres, p. 733. Now, if the Basket here mentioned was made of these, or any other Metal, the Jews say, the Priest was to restore it to the Owner, when he had emptied it: But if it was a wicker Basket, or such-like, the Priest had it together with the First-fruits. See Wagenseil upon Mischna Sotæ, Cap. 7. Seft. 3.

And shalt go unto the Place which the LORD thy GOD shall choose, to place his Name there.] The Man himself was to go, as the Jews say, with the Basket upon his Shoulder: And a great Company were wont to go together, who met at the chief City of their Province. The Time of going was at the Feast of Pentecost, (Exod. xxiii. 16.) not before, but at any Time after, till the Feast of Dedication, which was in our November: After which they were not accepted. Of the Manner of going up with a Bullock before them, whose Horns were gilt, and Head crowned with an Olive Garland, with Music, and singing in the Way the first Verse of Psal. cxxii. &c. see Wagenseil, in the Place above-mentioned; and Selden, Lib. III. de Synedrui, Cap. 13. n. 3. with Dr. Lightfoot in his Temple-Service.

And here I cannot but think fit to note, that the Heathen, in all Probability, from hence derived the Custom of carrying their First-fruits, as a Tithe every Year, unto the Island Delos, where Apollo was supposed to have his special Residence. And this not only from the Islands thereabouts, and the neighbouring Countries, but from all Parts, of the World; as the Jews, we find every-where, sent, from the Countries where they dealt, a Sum of Money every Year, instead of First-fruits and Tithes, unto Jerusalem; which Privilege the Romans allowed them, after they had conquered them, as Josephus tells us, Lib. VII. de Bello Jud. Cap. 13. That Heathen Custom, now mentioned, is expressed by Callimachus, in his Hymn upon Delos, in those remarkable Words, Ver. 278, 279, &c.

Ἄρα τῶν ἀγρίων θανάσιον αὐτῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ
 Πάριον. τὰς δὲ χορὰς ἀνάγει πάλιν
 Ἄρα τοῖς ἱσθί, δι' ἑστῆας, δι' ἑνὸς μέρους
 Κλίμας ἐσθῆας, αὐτὸ δὲ καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ θανάσιου.

The Sense of which is this; That First-fruits were sent for Tithes every Year from all Countries, not only from the East, and West, and South, but from the North also. And they were sent with such Joy, as the Jews expressed on this Occasion; for all Cities, he saith, did χορὰς ἀνάγει. And so we read in several Authors, that there were ἑσθῆας, as they called them, Solemn Embassies, sent from several People, by chosen Persons, unto Delos, to celebrate there the Feast of Apollo with Music and Dancing, &c. Particularly the Athenians, Peloponnesians, and Messenians, &c. of whom see Ezek. Spanheim, in his Observations on Callimachus, p. 487. And, which is most strange, the Hyperboreans, a very northerly People, sent frugum primitias to this Island, as Pliny, and I know not how many other Authors testify. Only what he calls the First-fruits of their Corn, and such-like Things, they call the First-fruits of their Holy Things: As the same excellent Person observes there, p. 490, 492, &c. Which was done to testify their Honour to this God, and for the Maintenance of his Priests and other Ministers, who attended upon him there. For Delos, of itself, was but a barren Isle, the Soil being dry and stony, and called therefore by Callimachus, Ver. 208. Συριεστῆς.

There are other Foot-steps of this among the Heathen; the Mystica vannerus Iacobi, mentioned by Virgil in his Georgicks, being nothing else, (according to Servius) but Vas vimineum, a wicker Basket, in which their First-fruits were carried. See the same Spanheim, p. 495.

Ver. 3. And thou shalt go unto the Priest that shall be in those Days,] Who was then in Attendance at the Sanctuary, and particularly appointed to wait for their coming. When they enter'd the Gates of the City, they sung the second Verse of Psal. cxxii. Our Feet shall stand in thy Gates, O Jerusalem: And then they went to the Mountain of the Temple, and sung the whole Hundred and fiftieth Psal: And as soon as they enter'd the Court of Israel, the Levites began to sing, Psal. xxx. 1. I will extol thee, O LORD my GOD, &c.

And say unto him,] The following Confession in this Verse, was made by them with the Baskets on their Shoulders, to stir them up to Humility, as Maimonides interprets it. His Words are these: "While they were compelled to carry their Baskets on their Shoulders, and in that Manner to proclaim the Divine Benefits, it signified that it was a considerable Part of God's Worship and Service, for a Man to be mindful of his Afflictions and Tribulations, when God had given him Ease and Rest from them. This the Law takes care of, in several Places; as when it saith, Thou shalt remember that thou wast a Servant, &c. with this Intention, That he who lived in Riches and Pleasure, might be secured from the Vices which spring from thence, such as Pride, Haughtiness, Apostasy, and the like. According to what is said in this Book, viii. 12. Lest thou eat, and art full, &c. and xxvii. 15. Jesurun waxed fat, and kicked, &c. To prevent which, God commanded the First-fruits to be thus offered every Year to his divine Majesty, Mose Nevochim, P. III. Cap. 39."

I profess this Day unto the LORD thy God, that I am come unto the Country which the LORD swore unto our Fathers for to give us.] This is a thankful Acknowledgment of God's Faithfulness to his Promise, whereby they were put in Mind to be faithful unto him, of whom they held this good Land, by his gracious and free Gift, and held it by this Tenure, of paying to him this yearly Rent.

Ver. 4. And the Priest shall take the Basket out of thine Hand, and set it down before the Altar of the LORD thy God.] After the foregoing Words were said, the Basket was taken down from their Shoulders, and every one holding his Basket by the Handle, or the Rim of it, the Priest put his Hands under it, and waved it about, according to the Prescription in the Law, while the Men recited the following Words, Ver. 5, 6, &c. This Waving was a manifest Token that it was offered to the LORD of the World, as an Acknowledgment, that he was in a peculiar Manner their Lord and Sovereign, of whom they held this Land.

Ver. 5. And thou shalt speak and say before the LORD thy God,] Audibly pronounce in the Presence of God.

A Syrian ready to perish was my Father,] Their Father Jacob was not a Syrian by Birth, for he was born in the Land of Canaan. But one and the same Person may be said to be of divers Countries, (as Bochartus hath observed) with Regard either to the Place of his Nativity, or of his Education, or of his Life and Conversation; which occasioned three Countries to be ascribed to our blessed Saviour, viz. Bethlehem, Nazareth, and Capernaum. See his Phaleg. Lib. II. Cap. 5. Thus Jacob, who was born and bred in Canaan, is notwithstanding call'd a Syrian, because he lived twenty Years with his Uncle Laban, who was a Syrian, Gen. xxv. 20. and consequently Jacob's Mother was so, as were both his Wives, and all his Children, who were born there, except Benjamin. But he is more particularly here called a Syrian, to put them in Mind of his Poverty, when he went first into that Country, and there lived as a Servant, under a hard Master, which is expressed in these Words, ready to perish, that is, very poor, and reduced to great Streights; being forced to flee from the Fury of his Brother Esau, and to travel on Foot to Padan-Aram (which was comprehended antiently under the Name of Syria, Gen. xxxii. 10.); where he was so cruelly used by his Uncle Laban, (xxxi. 7, 39, 40, 41.) that Onkelos takes these Words, which we translate ready to perish, in an active Sense, for him that destroys another. For by the Syrian here he understands Laban, (who is so called, as I noted before, Gen. xxviii. 5.) as if the Meaning were, the Syrian (that is, Laban) sought to destroy my Father. For as he used him barbarously when he was with him, so he followed after him, when he went away, with a Mind to ruin him. And thus Manasseh ben Israel understands it, and many others mentioned by Fesselius; which is the Sense also of the vulgar Latin, Syrus persequabatur patrem meum.

And he went down into Egypt,] Though he brought him from Laban with great Substance, yet as he was still but a Sojourner in the Land of Canaan, so he was forced by Famine to go down into Egypt for Sustenance.

And sojourned there with a few,] They were but seventy Persons, and lived there as Strangers. All which they were now bound to commemorate, for their Humiliation before God, (which I observed before out of Maimonides) which might move them the more to exalt and magnify the Mercy of God to them, who had made them (as it follows) a mighty Nation. For this Confession consists of these two Parts, Their own Unworthiness, and God's great Goodness.

And became there a Nation, great, mighty, and populous.] See Exod. i. 7.

Ver. 6. And the Egyptians evil entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard Bondage.] The Goodness of God unto them, in making them so numerous, was the Occasion of sorer Affliction, than either they or their Fathers had endured. See Exod. i. 9, 10, &c. The Remembrance of this was exceeding useful, to stir up their Gratitude to God; not only for their Deliverance from the Egyptian Slavery, but bringing them into a Country of their own, most plentifully stored with all Manner of good Things.

Ver. 7. And when we cried unto the LORD GOD of our Fathers, the LORD heard our Voice, and looked on our Affliction, &c.] Having acknowledged their low, and poor, and distressed Condition, now they proceed to an Acknowledgment of God's wonderful Goodness; which appeared the more in relieving them, when they were utterly helpless. See Exod. ii. 23, 24, 25. iii. 7, 8.

Ver. 8. And the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt, with a mighty Hand, and with an out-stretched Arm, and with great Terribleness, &c.] See iv. 34. and vii. 19. This is so vehemently inculcated upon them, (as Maimonides speaks in the Place fore-named) that they should remember the Day they came out of Egypt all the Days of their Life, xvi. 3. Exod. x. 2. Which it became them especially to remember at this Time, that they might demonstrate the Truth of Prophecy, both concerning Punishments and Rewards.

Ver. 9. And he hath brought us into this Place, and hath given us this Land, even a Land that floweth with Milk and Honey.] As they remember the terrible Plagues upon Egypt in the foregoing Verse, so they commemorate the singular Blessings bestowed upon them in this.

Ver. 10. And now, behold, I have brought the First-fruits of the Land, which thou, O LORD, hast given me:] Thus they concluded this solemn Right, as they began it, (Ver. 3. with an Acknowledgment, that they held this Land of God, as the supreme LORD; and that by his free Gift.

And thou shalt set it before the LORD thy God,] Having said these Words, they left the Basket by the Altar, as the Jews say, where it had been placed, (Ver. 4.) and then the Priest set it before the Sanctuary; where God dwelt by his special Presence there.

And worship before the LORD thy God.] They made a profound Reverence towards the holy Place, by bowing their Bodies as low as they could, and so went out of the Temple: So the Hebrew Word imports. And this outward Act of Worship, no doubt, was accompanied, in all good Men, with humble Thanks to God for his Benefits, and Prayer for the Continuance of them.

Ver. 11. And thou shalt rejoice in every good Thing which the LORD thy GOD hath given unto thee, and unto thine House; thou, and the Levite, and the Stranger that is among you.] They were to make a Feast at the Time of offering these First-fruits; and there to entertain the Levites, and the Strangers, as well as their own Family. These Feasts were made out of the Provision mentioned, xii. 6, 7. xvi. 10, 11, 12. Besides which, the Bullock which went before them, when they carried up the First-fruits from their several Cities, was offered for a Peace-offering, when they came to the Sanctuary; as Mr. Selden observes in the Place above-mention'd, Lih. III. de Synedr. Cap. 13. p. 203.

Ver. 12. When thou hast made an End of Tithing all the Tithes of thine Increase,] For there was a second Tithe to be paid after the first to the Levites, as was observed above, xix. 6. and is plainly spoken of, xiv. 22, 23, &c. Which the Jews call the Consummation or Finishing of Tithing, as I observed there, Ver. 29. And so these Words may be translated, When thou hast finished all the Tithes of thine Increase.

The third Year, which is the Year of Tithing,] Every third Year, the second Tithe, before-mention'd, was to be employed to a peculiar Use; (see xix. 28, 29.) as it follows here in the next Words. (So the Jews expound it, whose Sense our Mr. Mede expresses in a few Words). For two Years together they paid the Levites Tithe, and the Festival Tithe; but in the third Year they paid the Levites Tithe, and the Poor Man's Tithe; that is, what was wont in other Years to be spent in Feasting, was wholly spent every third Year upon the Poor. B. I. Discourse XXXII. p. 228. But there are some that think, they were bound every third Year to pay this Poor Man's Tithe, besides that to the Levites and the Festival Tithe: About which I shall not here dispute.

And hast given it unto the Levite, the Stranger, the Fatherless, and the Widow, that they may eat within thy Gates, and be filled;] According to the Commandment, xiv. 29. See there.

Ver. 13. Then thou shalt say] As they were every Year to make the foregoing Profession, when they brought their First-fruits, so they were to make another Profession, which here follows, every third Year; When the Course of all Manner of Tithing (as Mr. Mede there expresses it) was come about.

Before the LORD thy God,] This sounds as if they were to make this Profession before the most Holy Place at the Sanctuary. Which seems to confute the common Exposition of the Jewish Doctors, that this Tithe of the third Year was not to be spent there, but at Home, within their own Gates. But it may be supposed, that every Man was privately to make this solemn Profession, as in the Presence of God, who knew the Truth of what he said. Or rather, that the next Time he went up to worship at God's House, he was bound to make this Declaration before the Divine Majesty. Which is the most likely Interpretation, because these Words, before the LORD, are always so used in these Books. And unless they had been obliged to this, their covetous and cruel Disposition might have inclined them to defraud the Poor; which by this Means was prevented. For though Men might have satisfied themselves in omitting this Profession, if it had been left merely to their own private Consciences; yet when they were bound to come and make it publicly at God's own House, as they could not avoid it, so few would be found so impudently prophane, as solemnly to tell a Lye to God himself.

Decla-

I have brought away the hallowed Things] Things separated by the Divine Commandment from their own private Use, for the Use of the Poor.

Out of mine House,] From the rest of the Fruits of the Earth which they had gathered.

And also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the Stranger, to the Fatherless, and to the Widow,] That is, unto the Refreshment of the Poor. So the Hierusalem Targum paraphrases, Ver. 2. which is worth the mentioning: In the third Year, which is the Year of Titling for the Poor, ye shall give the first Tithes to the Levites, and then the Tithes of the Poor to the Strangers, Fatherless, and Widows, that they may eat in their Cities, and be filled.

According to all thy Commandments, which thou hast commanded me:] According to the Direction before-mentioned, xiv. 29.

I have not transgressed thy Commandments, neither have I forgotten them.] Neither done contrary to God's Precepts, nor forgotten to perform them; either by keeping these Tithes to themselves, or by bestowing them otherwise than God appointed.

Ver. 14. I have not eaten thereof in my Mourning,] After the general Profession, mentioned in the Verse foregoing, that they had brought all hallowed Things out of their Houses, and employed them as God directed, they were to make three particular Professions, which are mentioned in this Verse. And it is probable they have respect to some Idolatrous Customs which were in those Days: The first of them is, That they had not eaten thereof in Mourning, or in Lamentation. For so the Hebrew Word Oni signifies, very bitter Grief, and sore Mourning. Such the Egyptians made in Harvest-Time, when they offered the First-fruits of the Earth, and kept the Feast of Iffs with doleful Lamentations. So Diodorus Siculus, and other Authors, tell us, particularly Julius Firmicus, who severely reproves their Folly, or Madness rather, saying, Cur plangitis fruges terræ, &c. "Why do you bewail the Fruits of the Earth? Why weep you at the Growth of your Seed? &c. You should rather give Thanks for these Things to the most high God, whose Bounty is not to be lamented; but bewail rather your own Error, &c." If there was such a Custom in the World, when Moses lived, it may very well be thought that he taught the Israelites to disclaim such senseless and impious Practices. And as the Egyptians, by this Mourning acknowledged Iffs; that is, the Earth, to be the Giver of all these good Things; so he required God's People to bring in their Harvest with the greatest Joy and Thanks unto the most High: For there was no Joy so great, as that of Harvest and Vintage; directly opposite to the Heathen, who kept the Feast of Bacchus also with Lamentations. See our learned Dr. Spencer, Lib. II. de Ritual. Hebr. Leg. Cap. 24. Sect. 1.

Neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean Use,] As some of the old Idolaters were wont to do; who separated some Part of the First-fruits for Magical Purposes, and sometimes for carnal and filthy. So Julius Firmicus informs us, who immediately after the Mention of their Lamentations, when they gathered the Fruits of the Earth, asks this Question, Quid addis incestum & adulterium? Which shews that there were unclean Rites which accompanied their Offerings; and that they made them minister unto Venus. See the same Learned Author in the same Place, Sect. 3.

Nor given ought thereof for the Dead:] If this be the right Translation of the last Words, for the Dead, St. Austin hath given us a likely Reason of this Clause, which was to profess they had not imitated the Gentiles, who were wont to set Meat and Drink upon the Graves of the Dead, as he tells us, Serm. 15. de Sanctis. But it doth not appear that they set any Part of their Tithe, or First-fruits upon them, nor that they did it only in Harvest-Time; but rather common Bread and Wine, which at all Times they set upon their Graves when they were interred: And therefore it may be translated to the Dead, (as the same excellent Person observes, Sect. 3.) And so it is a Profession, they had not offered any of the Fruits of the Earth to Heroes, (after the Manner of the Gentiles) particularly to Osiris. For that they honoured them with their First-fruits, appears by a Passage in Porphry, Lib. IV. περὶ Ἀποχρῆς, Sect. 22. where he mentions three Laws made by Triptolemus, an ancient Lawgiver among the Athenians: One of which is this, Θεὸς καρπῶς ἀγαλλεῖ, To worship the Gods with the Fruits of the Earth. Which Draco thus expounds, as he shews in the Conclusion of that Book; Θεὸς τιμῶν καὶ ἡρώων ἐσχατέως ἐν κοινῷ, ἐπομένους νόμοις παλαιοῖς ἰδίᾳ κατὰ δύναμιν σὺν εὐφρονίᾳ καὶ ἀπαρχαῖς καρπῶν, &c. To honour the Gods, and the Heroes of their Country publicly, according to the Laws of the Nation; and privately, as much as they were able, with speaking well of them, and with the First-fruits, and the annual Offerings. See Meursius, in his Themis Attica, Lib. I. Cap. 1. But however we take this, the giving any Part of Tithe, either for the Dead, or to the Dead, shews there was such a superstitious Custom: Unto which this Clause having a manifest Respect, we have Reason to think the two former have so likewise.

But I have hearkened to the Voice of the LORD my GOD, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me.] Performed all that God required, and done nothing contrary to it. All these Words from Verse 13. to this Place, were to be spoken with a low and humble Voice, because they are a sort of Commendation of themselves, and of their own Integrity; which is not to be proclaimed aloud. But when they made the foregoing Profession, at the presenting of their First-fruits, (Ver. 5, 6, &c.) they being an Acknowledgment of their own Meanness, and poor Beginnings, and of God's infinite Goodness in their Advancement, they were to lift up their Voice, and say aloud, A Syrian ready to perish was my Father, &c. Thus the the Doctors resolve in the Gemara of Mischna Sotæ, Cap. 7. in the Beginning of it.

Ver. 15. Look down] Have a gracious Regard.

From thy holy Habitation, from Heaven,] This is an humble Acknowledgment of the infinite Majesty of GOD, who, though he was graciously pleased to dwell among them by a glorious Symbol of his Presence in the Sanctuary, yet dwelt in a far more transcendent Glory in the Heavens, the highest of which could not contain him, as holy Men acknowledged, 1 Kings viii. 27. 2 Chron. ii. 6.

And bless thy People Israel, and the Land which thou hast given us,] Having performed their Duty, they had the greater Confidence to beg the Continuance of GOD's Mercies to them, and to their Country; which it had been Presumption to expect, if they had not acknowledged him to be the Donor of all the good Things they enjoyed in the Manner before appointed. For this was the End of all Oblations, both of this Tithe, and of the First-fruits, and any other, to acknowledge GOD to be the LORD, of whom all Things come, (as David speaks) and of whose own we give unto him. See 1 Chron. xxix. 11, 12, 13, &c.

As thou swarest unto our Fathers,] He teacheth them to conclude as they began, (Ver. 3.) with a thankful Acknowledgment of GOD's Faithfulness to his Promise.

A Land that floweth with Milk and Honey,] See xi. 9. The Hierusalem Targum paraphraseth it thus, A Land producing Fruits as pure as Milk, and as sweet and delicious as Honey.

Ver. 16. This Day] This refers to the Time when Moses spake all these Words unto them.

The LORD thy GOD hath commanded thee] By me.

To do these Statutes and Judgments] These two Words comprehend the Precepts in the foregoing Chapters: Some of which concern Matters of Religion, and others of Civil Government.

Thou shalt therefore keep and do them, with all thine Heart, and with all thy Soul,] Set yourselves sincerely and heartily to the Performance of them.

Ver. 17. Thou hast avouched] So the Hebrew Word signifies, as Job Ludolphus observes, who renders it, asseverare, seriò affirmare; being the same with the French Word avouer, and may be here translated, thou hast solemnly professed, or rather protested.

The LORD this Day] The Word this is not in the Hebrew, (as it is in the foregoing Verse) but he saith simply Hajom, (not Hajom Hazeth) the Day, or that Day; which signifies the Time when Moses delivered these Laws from GOD.

To be thy GOD,] Then they owned him to be their King and Governor. For so the Name of ELOHIM properly signifies Dignity, Empire, and Authority, as Grotius observes upon Exod. xx. Fortunatus Scacchus, before him, expounds these very Words: Which, saith he, have respect to GOD as their Emperor, who had the supreme Government of the Commonwealth of Israel, with a Right and Authority of constituting Laws, and giving Mandates for the Establishing of that Government. Sacror. Elæochristi, P. II. Cap. 52. p. 509. See Exod. xxiv. 3, 4, &c. and xxxiv. 27.

And to walk in his Ways,] By his Ways, that Author understands the Moral Precepts written on Tables of Stone.

And to keep his Statutes,] The Ritual Precepts.
And his Commandments,] Concerning the Duties of his Worship and Service.

And his Judgments,] The Political Precepts belonging to their good Government.

And to hearken unto his Voice,] In all Things which he should declare from his Oracle, when they consulted it.

Ver. 18. And the LORD hath avouched thee this Day to be his peculiar People, &c.] At the same Time, (for the Word this is not in the Hebrew) the LORD assured the Israelites that they should be his People, in a special Manner, provided they made good their Promise of keeping his Commandment: For the Covenant was mutual. See Exod. xxiv. 3, 7. xix. 5, 6. It is observable that the Hierusalem Targum paraphrases these two Verses in this Manner: Ye have taken the Word of the LORD to reign over you To-day, that he may be your GOD, &c. And the Word of the LORD reigneth over you, a People dedicated to his Name, as his peculiar, &c. Where MEMRA, the WORD, cannot be understood otherwise than of the second Person in the Deity.

Ver. 19. And to make thee high above all Nations which he hath made,] It is a pious Note of Conr. Pellicanus, that there is no greater Glory to the Faithful, than that they are peculiarly grateful, devoted, dedicated, obedient unto GOD, as his Children.

In Praise, and in Name, and in Honour, &c.] These Words express his singular Kindness to them, in that, though all Nations were his, (being made by him, and he the LORD and Governor of them all) yet he promised to have such a special Favour to them, that all Nations round them should take Notice of it, and speak with Admiration of their Happiness, and the Honour he had done them. All this is included in those Words before-mentioned, Exod. xix. 5, 6. where the last Words of this Verse are explained, That thou mayest be an holy People unto the LORD thy GOD, as he hath spoken.

All this Moses called to their Mind, that it might prepare and dispose them to renew the same Covenant with GOD, before he left them; which he presses upon them in the Nine and twentieth Chapter of this Book, after he had given them some other Admonitions, and laid before them the Blessings and Curses that would come upon them, according to their Fidelity or Falseness in that holy Covenant. Which is the Subject of the two following Chapters.

CHAP. XXVII.

Verse 1. AND Moses with the Elders of Israel, commanded the People, saying,] I observed in the Preface to this Book, and upon Chapter iv. 41. and other Places, that Moses did not speak all that is contained in this Book at once, but at several Times; and that he commonly took the Elders to his Assistance, as is here expressly affirmed; though some Things he spake himself alone to all the People, as I observed upon Verse 1.

Keep

Keep all the Commandments which I command you] This is a new Exhortation to Obedience; which he could not press too often, considering the great Proneness of this People to break God's Laws.

This Day.] At this Time, and formerly: For it doth not precisely signify one Day; and the Word this, is not in the Original.

Ver. 2. And it shall be, on the Day when you shall pass over Jordan, &c.] Here it is evident, the Word Day doth not signify precisely the very same Day they passed over, but not long after, as soon as they were come to Mount Ebal, Ver. 4. after the taking of Jericho and Ai, as appears from Joshua viii. 30. For they were to pass over Jordan, unto the Land which the LORD their GOD gave them, (as it here follows) before they were obliged to do what is here required.

That thou shalt set thee up great Stones,] It is not said how many; but some say there were twelve, according to the Number of Pillars which Moses employed, (Exod. xxiv. 4.) when he made the Covenant between GOD and his People. But unless we could certainly determine how much of the Law was to be written upon these Stones, we cannot give a good Guess at their Number. For if only the Ten Commandments, fewer than Twelve would serve; if the whole Book of Deuteronomy, so many are not sufficient. As for the Marginal-Reference in our Bibles, unto Josh. iv. 1. it can have no respect to this Place; for those twelve Stones were ordered to be taken out of Jordan, and left there, where they lodged that Night, which was at Gilgal. See there, Ver. 3, 8, 20.

And plaister them with Plaister.] That being plain and smooth, they might write what is here commanded upon them; which they could not do, while they were rough and uneven.

Ver. 3. And thou shalt write upon them all the Words of this Law,] Many think he means the whole Book of Deuteronomy; which because it is long, great Stones are ordered to be provided for this Purpose. Others think only the Ten Commandments are here intended, which were the principal Words of the Covenant, as Moses calls this Law, xxix. 1. But Josephus, Lib. IV. Archæol. Cap. ult. is of Opinion, that he means the Cursings which here follow from Verse 15. to the End of the Chapter. Which is no improbable Opinion, they containing several select Precepts, and the last of them seems to respect the whole Law of Moses, Ver. 26.

But however we understand this, it is certain that before the Use of Paper was found out, the Antients, particularly the Phœnicians and Egyptians, were wont to write their Minds upon Stones, as a great many Authors testify, mentioned by Huetius, who observes that this Custom continued long after the Invention of Paper, especially if they desired any Thing should be vulgarly known, and conveyed down to Posterity. See Demonstr. Evang. Propos. IV. Cap. 2. n. 15. where he observes, that Moses ordered the Book of Deuteronomy to be inscribed upon Stones. I suppose he means all the Laws contained in this Book, (not all the Exhortations and Historical Passages: which agrees very well with this Injunction, that they should write on the Stones all the Words of this Law.

When thou art passed over, that thou mayst go in unto the Land which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee, &c.]

When they were gone over Jordan, to take Possession of the Land of Canaan, and were come to the Place where he directed these Stones to be set up, and this Inscription made upon them. Which Place is particularly named in the next Verse. And from these Words Fortunatus Scacchus thinks he hath Reason to assert, That none of the Things forementioned are meant by the Words of this Law, here commanded to be written; but that upon the very Top of these Stones (or the Altar made of them, as he would have it understood) were written only the Words of this Covenant, whereby the People of Israel confessed themselves to have received the Land of Canaan from GOD, and to hold it on Condition of their Obedience unto him. For so he interprets the Words, Write upon them, in summa superficie. And to make us know what he means by the Words of this Law, he thinks the following Words are added, that thou mayst go in unto the Land which the LORD thy GOD giveth thee, &c. that is, Thou shalt declare who brought thee hither; and gave thee Possession of this Country, and upon what Condition, viz. That thou shouldest keep the Commands given to thee by GOD in Horeb. And therefore Moses doth not bid them write on the Stones the Law of the LORD, nor the Law absolutely, but the Words of this Law. Where the demonstrative Particle hæc limits the Sense to the present Matter of which he is speaking. Thus he, Myrothec. 2. Sacror. Elæobrijm, Cap. 57. where he endeavours to strengthen this Interpretation, by observing, that after this Command for writing this Law upon the Stones, Moses, and the Priests, and Levites, spake unto all Israel, saying, Take Heed, and hearken, O Israel; this Day thou art become the People of the LORD thy GOD, &c. Ver. 9, 10.

Ver. 4. Therefore it shall be, when ye be gone over Jordan, that ye shall set up these Stones, &c.] This Phrase set up seems to imply that they were a kind of Pillars erected for this Purpose, that the Inscription might appear more fairly upon them.

In Mount Ebal, &c.] Here the Samaritan Pentateuch hath, in Mount Gerizim; which is a manifest Corruption, to justify their building a Temple there, which they pretend GOD commanded in these Words.

Ver. 5. And there shalt thou build an Altar unto the LORD thy GOD,] That they might offer Sacrifice to GOD, and renew their Covenant with him.

An Altar of Stones:] Upon which Josephus himself fancies the fore-named Inscription was to be made; and so the Talmudists also, in Misebna Sotæ, Cap. 7. But it is plain, the Stones designed for that Use were to be set up before the Altar was built; the Intention of it being (as I shall shew presently) that they might promise to observe the Words which were there written.

Thou shalt not lift up any Iron Tool upon them.] See Exod. xx. 25.

Ver. 6. Thou shalt build the Altar of the LORD thy GOD of whole Stones:] Not hewn, nor polished; whereby all Manner of Imagery was avoided. Such rustick Altars of rough Stone, piled one upon another, were in Use among the Heathen, who seem to have imitated this Pattern. The Form of one of them Fortunatus Scacchus hath given us out of some antient Monuments at Brixia, related by Ottavius Rescius. See his fore-named Book.

Book, Chap. 59. p. 585. Such Altars the Israelites were permitted to build upon some special Occasion, as Gideon and Manoah did, Judg. vi. 24. 26. xiii. 19. and Samuel, 1 Sam. vii. 17. and Saul, 1 Sam. xiv. 35. and David, 2 Sam. xxiv. 25. And such an one Moses himself built, Exod. xxiv. 4. And as Moses there set up twelve Pillars, according to the Number of the Tribes of Israel, when they entered into Covenant with GOD at Horeb, so the fore-mentioned Author thinks, at the Confirmation of it, when they came into Canaan, they built not twelve Altars, but heaped up twelve Stones, which made one Altar, without any Cost at all bestowed upon it. And thus Elijah took twelve Stones, and on a sudden built an Altar with them, when he endeavoured to bring the Israelites back again into the Covenant of GOD, 1 Kings xviii. 31, 32.

And thou shalt offer Burnt-offerings thereon, &c.] As they did at Horeb, Exod. xxiv. 5. and as Joshua did, when they came into Canaan, and had built the Altar here commanded, Josh. viii. 31. which Burnt-offerings were an Acknowledgment of GOD's Sovereign Dominion over them; and that they held this Land of him, as their Supreme LORD, from whom they had received it. They kept the Passover as soon as they came into Canaan; but we read of no Altar erected, nor Burnt-sacrifices offered, till they came to Ebal.

Ver. 7. And thou shalt offer Peace-offerings,] So Moses also did at Horeb, as we read in the fore-named Place, Exod. xxiv. 5. and so Joshua did, when they came into Canaan. And they were offered as Thanksgivings to GOD, for bringing them into that good Land.

And shalt eat there, and rejoice before the LORD thy GOD.] The Sacrificers had a Part, of the Peace-offerings given them, that they might feast with GOD, in Token that they were in Covenant with him. See Levit. vii. 5. And therefore GOD ordered these Sacrifices to be offered, as soon as they came to this Place, where his Law was to be inscribed upon the Stones before-mentioned; that the People of Israel, to whom GOD promised the Possession of the Land of Canaan, upon the Condition that they observed his Laws, might confirm their Covenant with him, when they took Possession of it; and be given to understand, that GOD having performed what he promised, expected that they should be mindful of their Obligation, faithfully to observe his Divine Laws. So that this Altar may be properly called (as the same Fort. Scacchus terms it) the Altar of Confederation, or Confirmation of the Covenant, into which they had entered at Horeb.

Ver. 8. And thou shalt write upon the Stones all the Words of this Law, very plainly.] So that they might be read easily. How the Talmudists came to fancy they were written in seventy Languages, I cannot imagine: But such a Conceit there is among them, as Mr. Selden observes, Lib. II. de Synedr. Cap. 9. p. 396. for so many Languages they think there were in the World. And Bartemora saith, GOD would have every Body that came into their Country, learn these Truths, if he pleased; and no Pagan be able to excuse his Ignorance, by saying, He had no Means to know them. See Job. Wagenfeil upon Sota, Cap. 7. Sect. 5. Annot. 5.

Ver. 9. And Moses, and the Priests the Levites, spake unto all Israel, saying,] It seems, by this, that Moses and the Elders (Ver. 1.) took the Priests and Levites to their Assistance, to deliver what follows.

Take heed,] Attend to what we say. The Hebrew Word is found no-where else; and seems to belong to their outward Posture.

And hearken, O Israel;] So as to consider.

This Day thou art become the People of the LORD thy GOD.] These Words following after the Precept concerning building an Altar of Confederation, must be understood as relating unto that; and therefore the Word this Day doth not respect only that particular Day on which Moses spake this to the People, or the Day wherein GOD declared it, but the Day upon which such an Altar, for the Renovation of the Covenant, was to be erected, when Joshua was to speak these Words; for then, and not before, the Blessings were pronounced to those that observed the Laws of GOD, and the Curses against those that broke them; and GOD had not fulfilled his Promises to them till they came over Jordan. Therefore he did not order this Altar to be built, and these Sacrifices to be offered, whereby they obliged themselves to him, and became his People by a new Bond, till their Entrance upon the Possession of what he had promised.

Ver. 10. Thou shalt therefore obey the Voice of the LORD thy GOD, and do his Commandments, &c.] These Words, and the foregoing, are plainly Words of a mutual Covenant between GOD and them. Into which Covenant they enter'd three Times: First at Horeb, Exod. xxiv. and then just before Moses died, twenty-ninth of this Book, Ver. 1, 12, 13, &c. and when they were come into Canaan, Josh. viii. 30, 31, &c. And because the Divine Laws delivered to them were confirmed and ratified at all these Times, therefore it is that those Laws are so frequently called by the Name of the Covenant; and when they transgressed them, they are said to break this Covenant.

Ver. 11. And Moses charged the People the same Day, saying,] Which Charge, I suppose, the Elders, with the Assistance of the Priests and Levites, delivered throughout the whole Camp of Israel, Ver. 1, 9.

Ver. 12. These shall stand upon Mount Gerizzim] This is a Mountain upon which Samaria was afterwards built.

To bless the People,] By saying Amen, when they heard the Blessings read by the Priests. For it was not the People who stood upon the Mountain, that blessed, (i. e. pronounced the Blessings) but the Priests below, Ver. 14.

When ye are come over Jordan;] See Ver. 2.

Simeon, and Levi, and Judab, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin.] These six Tribes, who stood upon Mount Gerizzim, (i. e. upon the Top, and on the Descent of it down to the Bottom) were all descended from the Sons of Free-Women, Leab and Rachel; and therefore many think appointed to bless, which was more honourable than to curse.

Ver. 13. And these shall stand upon Mount Ebal to curse;] This was a Mountain opposite to the other; and there lay a Valley between them. Abimelech seems to have been made King upon this Mountain, when he had killed all the Sons of Gideon, but Jotham: For it was done in the Plain, (or by by the Oak) of the Pillar, which was in Shechem; that is, by this Pillar, on which the Curses of the Law were written, Judges ix. 6. whereupon Jotham got upon Mount Gerizim, and then cursed the Men of Shechem. Which shews that the Tops of these Mountains were not so far distant one from another, but what was said upon the one, might be heard by those who were on the Top and the Sides of the other. And yet there was such a Valley between them, that they could not presently come at Jotham to apprehend him; but he had Time to flee, and get away, after he had spoken his Apologue.

Reuben, Gad, and Asher, and Zebulun, Dan, and Naphtali.] Four of these were Children of the Handmaids; and Reuben had lost his Dignity by going up to his Father's Bed; and Zebulun was the youngest of Leah's Sons; who was therefore chosen, rather than any of the other, for this less honourable Employment. For otherwise there would not have been an equal Number of Tribes upon each Mountain.

Ver. 14. And the Levites] That is, the Priests, who are often called the Priests the Levites; particularly in that very Place, where we read of the Execution of this Command, Josb. viii. 33. And the Levites were among those that stood upon Mount Gerizim, (Ver. 12.) who did not pronounce the Blessings, but answered Amen to them. Yet the Gemara upon Sota, Cap. 7. Sett. 23. will have it, that as many of the Levites as were fit to minister, (that is, all from thirty to fifty Years of Age, who were fit to carry the Ark) stood round about the Ark with the Priests; the rest of the Levites being upon Mount Gerizim, with the other Tribes appointed to have their Station there.

Shall speak, and say unto all the Men of Israel] The same Gemara rightly gathers, that the Ark with the Priests, were below in the Valley, between the two Mountains; because it is said, in the Place before-mentioned, that all Israel, and the Elders stood about it, Josb. viii. 33. Which could not have been, unless it were placed between the two Mountains, whereon they stood, upon both Sides, from the Top to the Bottom.

With a loud Voice.] That every one that stood on the Side or Top of the Mountains, might hear what they said, the Priests being placed so in several Parts of the Valley, that their Voice might reach them all. For which End they were advanced, perhaps, upon a Pulpit, (as Ezra afterwards was, Nehem. viii. 4.) and a Signal likewise given when they should say Amen.

Ver. 15. Cursed be the Man that maketh any graven or molten Image.] The People upon the Mountains being to bless as well as curse, the Mischna, in the Title Sota, (Cap. 7. Sett. 5.) rightly explains this; That first the Priests, turning their Faces towards Mount Gerizim, proclaimed with a loud Voice, Blessed be the Man that maketh not any graven, &c. unto which all the People that stood there, answered Amen; and then turning their Faces towards Mount Ebal, they said these Words, Cursed be the Man that maketh, &c. to which they that stood there made the same Answer. See also the Hierusalem Targum, which paraphrases these Words in the same Manner.

An Abomination unto the LORD.] Which is odious, and far to be removed from the Presence of the LORD, as the same Targum interprets it.

The Work of the Hands of the Craftsman.] A mere Device of Men, and therefore not to have divine Worship given to it of any sort.

And putteth it in a secret Place.] Though he was not a publick declared Worshipper of Images, yet if he did it privately, in some Closet of his own House, or in any other secret Place, to conceal his Wickedness, though he escaped the Punishment of the Law, which sentenced open Idolaters to Death, yet he could not escape the Vengeance of God.

And all the People] The forenamed Mischna and Targum say, that the People on both Mountains answered Amen, both to the Blessings, and to the Cursings; which doth not agree with what goes before, Ver. 12, 13.

Shall answer, and say Amen.] Express their Consent to it. For the Word Amen, as the Talmudists say in Sebeuoth, hath sometimes the Force of an Oath, sometimes only declares Consent and Approbation; and sometimes is used for the Confirmation of any Thing. An Example of the first they think there is in Numb. v. 22. and they alledge this Place for an Example of the second; and for the third, Jer. xxviii. 6.

Ver. 16. Cursed be he that setteth light by his Father or his Mother.] It is observed by Interpreters, that as the Precept of honouring Parents stands next to the Commandment concerning the Honour that is due to God, (Exod. xx. 12.) so the Curse pronounced against those who dishonoured them, is here placed next to the Curse against Worshippers of Images. And as Idolaters were to be put to Death, so were those that cursed their Parents, Exod. xxi. 17. Levit. xx. 9. And I may add, from the foregoing Words, that though they did it ever so secretly, they lay under this Curse.

And all the People shall say, Amen.] But before this Curse was pronounced, they had said Amen to the Blessing opposite to it, (Blessed is he that setteth not lightly by his Father or Mother) as was observed in the foregoing Verse. And the same is to be noted concerning the following Curses, which were preceded with a Blessing, till they were all ended.

Ver. 17. Cursed be he that removeth his Neighbour's Land-mark, &c.] Against which there is an express Precept in the foregoing Part of this Book, xix. 14. And Pellicanus well observes, that by this particular Instance of God's Displeasure against Injustice, they were deterred from all Encroachments upon their Neighbour's Possessions.

Ver. 18. Cursed be he that maketh the Blind to wander out of the Way, &c.] By giving him wrong Directions, or misleading him. See Levit. xix. 14. Some apply this to giving pernicious Advice to simple People; which is certainly worse than misleading of the Blind, because it leads Men into Sin, as well as into Danger.

Ver. 19. Cursed be he that perverteth the Judgment of the Stranger, Fatherless, and Widow, &c.] These three, I observed before, (xxiv. 19.) are commonly put together, as a Paraphrase on the Word Poor: Whose Cause God himself undertakes to plead, x. 18. and see Exod. xii. 21; 22. And therefore all good Lawgivers have taken special Care of them, particularly of Orphans; concerning whom Plato ordains, that the Conservators of the Laws should be ἀντιγενεσιόται, instead of their Natural Parents, and look after them so well, that they should not fare the worse for wanting their Fathers. See Lib. VIII. de Legibus, Fol. 926, &c. Edit. Serrani.

Ver. 20. Cursed be he that lieth with his Father's Wife, &c.] See xxii. 30. and Levit. xviii. 8.

Ver. 21. Cursed be he that lieth with any manner of Beast, &c.] Exod. xxii. 19. and Levit. xviii. 23. This some of the Jewish Doctors, out of an unaccountable Pride, apply to the vulgar Sort of their own Nation, (whom they call the People of the Earth) as if they were no better than Beasts, with whom they were not to marry.

Ver. 22. Cursed be he that lieth with his Sister, the Daughter of his Father, or the Daughter of his Mother, &c.] This hath been explained also, Levit. xviii. 9.

Ver. 23. Cursed be he that lieth with his Mother-in-law, &c.] See Levit. xviii. 17. and xx. 14.

Ver. 24. Cursed be he that smiteth his Neighbour secretly, &c.] Though it be but with his Tongue, whereby he wounds the Fame of an absent Person. But the Word smite is often used for killing, Exod. xxi. 12. Levit. xxiv. 17. Of which if a Man was guilty, though he committed the Murder so secretly, that he could not be put to Death by the Sentence of the Judges, yet he lay under this heavy Sentence of God.

Ver. 25. Cursed be he that taketh Reward to slay an innocent Person, &c.] This seems to have respect to the Judges, who for Money not only gave wrong Judgment in other Causes, but condemned those, that were not guilty, to Death. See Exod. xxiii. 7, 8. and in this Book, x. 17. xvi. 19.

Ver. 26. Cursed be he that confirmeth not all the Words of this Law, to do them, &c.] The Word we here translate confirm, is more plainly translated perform, in 1 Sam. xv. 11. And so it certainly signifies here; the performing of what God commands, being a kind of Establishment of the Law, as Disobedience is a Subversion of it, and, as far as lies in the Offender's Power, an Abolishing it, and taking it away. Therefore the Apostle exactly translates the Sense of these Words, Galat. iii. 10. Cursed is every one that continueth not in all Things, &c. where the Apostle adds the Word all, (as the LXX, and the Samaritan did, even in St. Hierom's Time) to expound the Words of this Law, to signify not merely all that is contained in these Blessings and Curses, but all Things which are written in the Book of the Law. So that whether this whole Book, (i. e. all the Laws contained in it) written upon the Pillars, or only these Blessings and Cursings, the Matter comes to the same Issue; because all that is contained in this Book, is comprehended in this last Curse, yea, all that is contained in the whole Law of Moses. Therefore it is not very material neither, whether only these Curses and Blessings were recited upon Mount Gerizim and Ebal, or the whole Law of Moses, from one End to the other, about which the Jews themselves differ. But they that are of the latter Opinion, think it well grounded upon Josh. viii. 33. where we read how Joshua carefully performed what Moses here enjoined. And that his Words might not be forgotten, Moses seems to have ordered the Continuance of this Solemnity every seventh Year, in the twenty-ninth Chapter of this Book, Ver. 10, 11, &c.

The Mishna in Sota, (which I have often mentioned) concludes this Matter with these Words; When the Blessings and the Cursings were ended, they brought Stones, and built an Altar, which they plaistered over, and wrote upon them all the Words of this Law in seventy Languages. But I have shewn before, that the Stones on which the Law was written, were different from the Altar, and were erected before the Building of the Altar. The Gemara there adds, Cap. 7. Sect. 24. That every one of the Israelites there present stood bound one for another, (that is, for the whole Company) that they would observe these Laws. Which I know not how they extract out of Moses's Words; but their Doctors frequently mention it in their Books, and make this pious Use of it, That by Virtue of this Security which they gave for each other, every Man was bound to reprove his Neighbour, if he saw him offend, unless he was content to undergo the Punishment which was threatened unto the Breach of God's Laws, and come under the Curse, Levit. xix. 17. And unto this they apply those Words, they shall fall one upon another, (as we truly translate, Levit. xxvi. 37.) as if they signified, every one shall fall by his Brother, that is, by his Brother's Crimes: For we all promised, say they, (in the Gemara Sanhedrim, Cap. 3. Sect. 6.) and engaged one for another; and so from that Time were punished one for another.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Verse 1. AND it shall come to pass,] In this Chapter he repeats, with many Inlargements, the Rewards and Penalties which he had promised and threatened in the Book of Leviticus, unto the Observance or Breach of the Covenant they had made with God: And here in this Verse he promises in general the Blessings which are more particularly enumerated in the following Verses.

If thou shalt hearken diligently unto the Voice of the LORD thy God, to observe and to do all his Commandments, &c.] See vii. 12. where the same Thing is said; only here he adds the Word diligently, to make them attend with the greater Seriousness to what he delivered. See Chap. xi. 13, 22.

That the LORD thy God will set thee on high above all Nations of the Earth.] By bestowing on them the following Blessings. See vii. 14. They were already endued with singular Privileges above other Nations, (Exod. xix. 5, 6.) which by their Obedience would be confirmed, continued, and augmented in greater Plenty of all Things.

Ver. 2. And all these Blessings shall come on thee, and overtake thee,] Blessings that come unexpectedly, and when we are not in Pursuit of them, are most welcome, and highly delight us. And such God here promises to bestow on them, by his gracious Providence, without their laborious and anxious seeking after them. By which very Thing he set them above all Nations: For what they followed after eagerly, and many times in vain, he undertakes should come to them, and prevent their Desires.

If thou shalt hearken unto the Voice of the LORD thy God.] So as to observe and do all his Commandments; as it is explained in the foregoing Verse.

Ver. 3. Blessed shalt thou be in the City, and blessed shalt thou be in the Field.] That is, in all their Affairs within Doors, or without. Or, whe-whether they lived by Employments in the City, or by Husbandry in tilling the Ground. It is not a natural Interpretation of these Words; which one of the Hebrew Doctors gives of them in Bava Metzia, where he expounds, Blessed shalt thou be in the City, Thy House shall be so nigh unto the Synagogue, that thou needest not be troubled by going a long Way to it; and, Blessed in the Field, Thy Ground shall lie so near to the City, that thou mayest quickly bring the Fruit it produces to be sold in the Market. But if he could have gone on in this Manner, it had been something tolerable; but he expounds what follows in a most undecent Manner. See Wagenfeil upon the Gemara of Sota, Cap. 3. Sect. 9. Annot. 5.

Ver. 4. Blessed shall be the Fruit of thy Body,] This seems to be a Promise of preventing Mischances, when they were with Child: For a numerous Progeny is promised afterwards, Ver. 11.

And the Fruit of thy Ground,] This signifies they should have seasonable Harvest and Vintages. For Fruit of the Ground comprehends not only all Sorts of Corn, but Grapes, Figs, Pomegranates, and such-like Fruit which grow on Trees.

And the Fruit of thy Cattle,] By the Word Behema is sometimes meant all Sorts of Brute Creatures, in Opposition to Men; sometimes tame Creatures, in Opposition to wild Beasts: But here all sorts of Domestick Creatures, (except Kine, Sheep, and Goats) viz. Asses and Camels; which Jacob brought with him, as well as Oxen and Sheep, when he came from Laban into Canaan, Gen. xxxii. 5, 7.

The Increase of thy Kine,] The Breed of these was very profitable, being a considerable Part of the Riches not only of that, but of other Countries; as appears by what Pausanias saith of them. See Bochartus, P. I. Hierozoicon, Lib. II. Cap. 40. in the Beginning.

And the Flocks of thy Sheep,] Under the Name of Sheep, in the Hebrew, are comprehended Goats also. All which God promises to increase, that is, to make them very wealthy. And here it may be observed, that the Israelites were generally Husbandmen or Shepherds, and did not commonly follow any other Trades: And therefore no mention is made of them here, unless it be in Verse 6. where he seems to speak of all sorts of Business.

Ver. 5. Blessed shall be thy Basket,] The Hierusalem Targum refers to the Basket wherein they carried up their First-fruits, xxvi. 2. But the Vulgar Latin translates it thy Barns: And so do the LXX, αἱ ἀποθήκαι σου, the Place where they laid up their Corn and other Fruits of the Earth. Which God promises both to fill, and to preserve from the Fire, or Thieves, or other Distresses.

And thy Store,] The LXX and the Vulgar translate it, all that was remaining; of which they had not present Use, but kept till they had Occasion for it. So it is a Promise, that they should never want; but still have something lying by them in Store (as we translate it) above what they needed.

Ver. 6. Blessed shalt thou be when thou comest in; and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out.] This the Hierusalem Targum interprets, of their entering into their Schools, and going Home again. But it rather signifies, they should have good Journeys, when they had Occasion to travel; and find all safe, when they returned Home: Or be prosperous both in Time of Peace, and in Time of War; when they are said, in the Hebrew Phrase, to go out against their Enemies. Or it may signify in general, good Success in all their Affairs; which is expressed by the Phrase of coming in and going out, xxxi. 2. 2 Sam. iii. 25. But I see no Ground to think that it relates to Traffick or Manufactures: For they were of little Use among a People, whose plain Way of Living made few Things necessary, but what every Man could make himself. And therefore we find by Ezekiel, who describes (Chap. xxvii.) the great Variety of Merchandize which was brought to the Mart of Tyre, that the Israelites carried nothing thither but Wheat, and Honey, and Oil, and Balm, (Ver. 17.) which are the Commodities the Earth itself produceth.

Ver. 7. The Lord shall cause thine Enemies, that rise up against thee, to be smitten before thy Face:] God had promised before, that when they went up to serve him at their solemn Festivals, their Enemies should not so much as desire their Land; Exod. xxxiv. 24. and now he assures them, that when they did invade their Country, they should not prevail, but be overthrown by them.

They shall come out against thee one Way, and flee before thee seven Ways.] He not only promises them Victory, but a complete Victory. For fleeing seven Ways, (i. e. many Ways) imports a total Overthrow; which made every Man shift for himself, as Soldiers do when they are intirely routed.

Ver. 8. The Lord shall command the Blessing upon thee] Protect them in their Enjoyments by his Sovereign Power and Providence; when otherwise they would have been in Danger.

In thy Store-houses,] The LXX translate it ταμεία, and the Vulgar Cellaria; which signify Places wherein other Goods were laid up within Doors, as Corn was in Barns without, Ver. 5.

And in all that thou settest thine Hand unto:] In all Manner of Undertakings and Employments.

And he shall bless thee in the Land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.] Make them live long therein.

Ver. 9. The Lord shall establish thee an holy People unto himself,] Confirm them in that noble Relation wherein they stood to him. See vii. 6. xiv. 2.

As he hath sworn unto thee,] See vii. 12.

If thou shalt keep the Commandments of the Lord thy God,] He had separated them from all People; by peculiar Laws and Privileges; for this Purpose, that they should be governed by him, and be obedient to him.

And walk in his Ways.] No Body can see any Reason to make this a special Precept, (as the Jews do) that we should walk in the Ways of the Lord. Which contains all the Duty owing to him: Whether by his Ways we understand those Divine Qualities, of Mercy, Holiness, Goodness, and Truth, whereby we approach to him; or (as the Word Ways is commonly used in Scripture) his Divine Precepts, whereby he comes (as it were) unto us, and declares his Mind and Will towards us, by Conformity to which we become like him in those those divine Qualities ; for that is the intire Meaning of walking in his Ways ; ordering all our Actions according to the Direction of his holy Will, whereby we resemble him.

Ver. 10. And all People of the Earth] Who were round about them, or should have any Knowledge of them.

Shall see that thou art called by the Name of the LORD ;] Be convinced that you are, after a peculiar Manner, the Lord's People, xiv. 1. xxvi. 18. For whosoever we read that a Person or Thing, hath the Name of God called upon it, or is called by his Name, the Meaning is, that it is his. As the City called by God's Name, Jerem. xxv. 29. is the City of God, where he dwelt, viz. Jerusalem. And thus the Ark is said to have the Name of GOD called on it, 1 Chron. xiii. 6. i. e. was the Lord's Ark, or the Ark of the Covenant. And as here the Children of Israel are said to be the People called by his Name, so it is said of the Christian Church, Acts xv. 17. For the very same Phrase (as Mr. Mede observes) is used of the like Relation that Men have unto that which is theirs. Thus Jacob saith, Gen. xlviii. 16. that his Name should be called on the two Sons of Joseph, that is, they should be his, as Reuben and Simon were. Which shews, these are Words of Adoption. See Discourse I. p. 7.

And they shall be afraid of thee.] Not dare to do thee any Hurt, or, fear to have thee their Enemy.

Ver. 11. And the LORD shall make thee plenteous in Goods,] Bestow on them Abundance of all good Things, that their Hearts could desire.

In the Fruit of thy Body,] By giving them a numerous and healthy Issue ; whereby they should be multiplied like the Stars of Heaven, or the Sand on the Sea-Shore ; according to the Promise made to Abraham, Gen. xv. 5. xxii. 17.

And in the Fruit of thy Cattle,] Which he promised likewise to increase exceedingly.

And in the Fruit of thy Ground,] Which should afford large Crops of Corn, and great Store of all other Fruits every Year.

In the Land which the LORD swore unto thy Fathers to give thee.] So that they should not need to send unto other Countries, to procure Food, (as they did in the Days of their Father Jacob) but have enough in their own Land to support them all, though never so numerous.

Ver. 12. The LORD shall open unto thee his good Treasure, the Heaven to give the Rain unto thy Land] The Heaven, or the Air, is called the good Treasure of GOD, because there he gathers together great Heaps of Clouds, from whence he enriches the Earth with fattening Showers of Rain : Which when he withholds, he is said to shut up this Treasure, xi. 17. and when he bestows it, to open it ; that his People might be sensible of their Dependence upon his Bounty for that Blessing, as well as others, which he dispenses as he pleaseth.

In his Season,] The former and the latter Rain, as the Scripture calls it. The former fell in Autumn, after the Seed was sown, to make it take Root, and spring up ; the latter fell in the Spring Time, to bring the Seed which was come up to Maturity. See xi. 14. See the learned Dr. Prideaux upon Maimonides's Treatise de donis pauperum, Cap. 1. Not. 25.

And to bless all the Work of thine Hand :] By these seasonable Showers he blessed their Ploughing and Sowing, and produced a plentiful Harvest : Which seems to be meant here by the Work of their Hand, viz. their Husbandry ; which included all Sorts of Plantations, as well as Tillage, Gen. ix. 20.

And thou shalt lend unto many Nations, and thou shalt not borrow.] A Token of great Riches, (see xv. 6.) which all Nations look'd upon as a Blessing : As indeed they are, with Piety. And therefore Callimachus, in his Hymn to Jove, prays him to bestow both Virtue and Riches upon them, Ver. 97.

—Δίδε δ' ἀρετήν τε καὶ ἔλθον.

Which puts me in mind of a pertinent Observation of Maimonides, in his Preface to Pereck Cbelek, in which he treats of the Foundations of the Jewish Religion. “ This is the Meaning, saith he, of the Promises and Threatenings of the Law, “ That if they were obedient to his Precepts, he “ would furnish them with all good Things that “ should further them therein, and remove from “ them all that hinder them ; for no Man can “ serve God as he ought, when he is sick, or oppressed with Famine, or vexed with Wars ; “ therefore God promises to remove all these “ Things, and to give them Health and Tranquillity, that they might perfect their Obedience, “ and be worthy of the Life of the World to come. For this is not the End of the Law, to “ make the Earth bring forth plentifully, and to prolong Mens Life upon the Earth, and give them “ healthful Bodies ; but that by all those Things they “ may be help'd and encouraged to perform Obedience “ to it, &c.”

Ver. 13. And the LORD shall make thee the Head, and not the Tail ;] This is a proverbial Speech, which is explained in the Words following ; And thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath. For the Head being the first and chief Part of all Animals, and the Tail the last and lowest, those Persons are said to be the Head who command over others, and those the Tail who are subject. And therefore this is a Promise that they should rule over other Nations, as their Lords (as they did in the Days of David and Solomon) ; but other Nations should not lord it over them.

If that thou bearken unto the Commandments of the LORD thy GOD, which I command thee this Day to observe, and to do them.] This was the Condition upon which all their Happiness depended ; as he had told them in the Beginning of this Discourse, Ver. 1.

Ver. 14. And thou shalt not go aside from any of the Words which I command thee this Day, to the Right-hand, or to the Left,] See Chap. v. 32.

To go after other Gods to serve them.] This was the principal Commandment of the Law, to serve no other Gods but the LORD alone. Which while they observed, he was pleased to bless them, and to bear with many other Sins which they committed. Upon which Account, this Commandment is so often repeated, as we find it in this very Book, vi. 14. vii. 4, 16. viii. 19. ix. 16, 28. xi. 3, 4, 30, &c.

Ver. 15. But it shall come to pass, if thou wilt not bearken unto the Voice of the LORD thy GOD, to observe to do all his Commandments, and his Statutes, which I command thee this Day,] Especially that great Commandment, Not to go after other Gods to serve them.

That all these Curses shall come upon thee, and overtake thee.] Pursue them so, that they should not possibly escape them. The same Phrase is used of the Blessings, Ver. 2.

Ver. 16. Cursed shalt thou be in the City, and cursed shalt thou be in the Field.] As miserable, that is, every-where, as he intended to have made them happy, Ver. 3.

Ver. 17. Cursed shall be thy Basket, and thy Store.] The Blessing of the Barn was to have it full, (Ver. 5.) and therefore the Curse upon it was to make it empty.

Ver. 18. Cursed shall be the Fruit of thy Body, and the Fruit of thy Land, &c.] He threatens to consume their Children, their Corn, and other Fruits, with their Herds and Flocks.

Ver. 19. Cursed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and cursed shalt thou be when thou goest out.] Have no Comfort in any Undertaking; either at Home or Abroad, in Peace or in War.

Ver. 20. The LORD shall send upon thee Cursing, Vexation, and Rebuke,] It is very hard to know what these three Words particularly import; the two first of them being very variously translated. The first of them, Meera, seems to signify in general, that God would blast them in all they designed and went about; for although the LXX and Vulgar here render it Famine and Want, yet elsewhere the LXX render it as we do, Καρία, Cursing: And the next Word, Mekuma, they translate Hunger: But in other Places the LXX render it by six or seven Words, which import the same with our English, Vexation, viz. Ταραχη, Trouble, or Disturbance; Θρυβον, Tumult; Σύγχυσιν, Confusion; Ἐλσασιν, Horror or Affrightment, &c. which relate to great Disorder, Disquiet, and Perplexity in their Mind. And the last Word, Migbereth, the Vulgar translate as we do, Rebuke; but the LXX Ἀνάλωσιν, Consumption; which are the same in Effect. For when God rebukes a Man for his Iniquity, he makes his Beauty to consume away like a Moth, Psal. xxxix. 11. For God's Rebukes consist not in Words, but in sore Afflictions, 2 Kings xix. 3. Psal. xvii. 15, &c. particularly in Disappointments and ill Success in their Undertakings, and continual Fear of worse for the future.

In all that thou settest thine Hand unto for to do,] In all their Affairs (Ver. 8.) they should meet with Trouble, Perplexity, and Defeats.

Until thou be destroyed,] He threatens that this Curse, Trouble, and Rebuke, from God should pursue them, till they had completed their Ruin.

And until thou perish quickly,] When God began to punish them, after long Patience with them, he was quick in his Executions, and many Times brought upon them sudden Destruction. So he threatens in Zephaniah i. 18. That he would make a speedy Riddance of all that dwell in the Land. And though the whole Nation was not rooted out speedily, but by Degrees, yet they enjoyed it but a short Time, in Comparison of what God designed, if they had been obedient; and in that Time, they were seldom without some Trouble or other, till they were expelled out of their Country.

Because of the Wickedness of thy Doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me.] And followed after other Gods, which was the great Crime that brought them to Desolation.

Ver. 21. The LORD shall make the Pestilence cleave unto thee,] The Pestilence is threaten'd in Levit. xxvi. 25. where he saith he will send it among them, and here adds, that it shall cleave unto them, that is, be incurable. And so the Author of Sebebt Judab confesses, that after they had been wasted and broken in Pieces by Wars, they that fled into Spain, in the Time of Alphonfus, were swept away in great Numbers by a Plague; and introduces one applying these very Words, as a Prophecy of it: Which I thought fit to note, though this Part of the Prophecy doth not belong to what hath befallen them since the last Destruction of Jerusalem, (as I shall shew hereafter) but to the Times before the first Destruction; when he often sent a Pestilence to destroy them, 2 Sam. xxiv. 15. Jerem. xiv. 12. xxi. 6, 7, 9. and many other Places of that Book, Ezek. v. 12. vi. 11, 12. Amos iv. 10. But it must be acknowledged also, that the Greeks call such unseasonable Weather, as destroys the Fruits of the Earth, by the Name of λοιμός, Pestilence. So Plato, Lib. X. de Legibus, saith, that which is called Νόσημα, a Disease in Bodies, ἐν δ' ὅραις ἐπὶ τῶν καὶ ἐνιαυτῶν λοιμός, &c. is called Pestilence in the Seasons of the Year. The Murrain also in Cattle is called by the same Name; which even the Pagans thought was sent by the Anger of their Gods, for the Sins of Men; as we learn from Callimachus, in his Hymn to Diana, where he saith, Verse 125. That when she was angry, Pestilence ate up their Cattle, and Hail destroyed the Fruits of the Earth.

Κτίνεσσι σφιν λοιμός μελαερώσκετο, ἔργα δὲ πείχον.

As on the contrary, when she was well pleased, she sent fruitful Seasons, and all Manner of Happiness, as it follows in that Hymn.

Until he have consumed thee from off the Land, whither thou goest to possess it.] Made a great Destruction, by sweeping away many People; the rest being reserved for other Judgments, which follow in the next Words.

Ver. 22. The LORD shall smite thee with a Consumption, and with a Fever, and with an Inflammation.] These three Words signify sore Diseases in Mens Bodies: The two first of which, Sachepbeth and Kaddacath, we translate in Levit. xxvi. 16. as we do here; only the second of them we render the burning Ague, which here we translate Fever. Unto which is here added Dalleketh, which signifies such an Inflammation as is accompanied with Itching, (according to the LXX, who translate it ἱεστισμόν) which is extremely grievous, because the scratching of it increases the Inflammation.

And with an extreme Burning, and with the Sword,] These two seem to relate unto the Indisposition of the Air, by extreme Heat and Drought; as we translate the Word Chereb in the Margin of our Bibles; for it signifies both the Sword and Driness; as the first Word Charchur signifies scorching Heat, which frequently causes Diseases: For it being the doubling of the Word Charar, it denotes the Extremity, or highest Degree of it, as all such Words do; of which Bochartus hath given many Examples in his Hierozyicon, P. II. Lib. I. Cap. 19.

And with Blasting, and with Mildew:] These two relate to the Destruction of their Corn, and the Fruits of the Earth, which follows upon the Corruption of the Air, as Famine follows upon the Corruption of the Fruits of the Earth. The first Word Schiddaphon, the LXX, and the other Greek Interpreters, translate Ἀνεμοστρίβειαι, blasting by biting Winds; though elsewhere the LXX translate it by Ἐμπνευσμὸν and Πύρωση, which signifies such Blighting as comes by Heat. And the second Word, Jerakon, (which comes from Jerak, Herb or Grass, or any green Thing) seems properly to be expressed by the LXX, who translate it ὤχρεον; for Corn, and Grass, and Herbs, turn pale and wan for want of Moisture.

And they shall pursue thee until thou perishest.] These Plagues upon their Bodies, and upon the Air, and the Corn, and Herbs, he threatens shall come upon them one Year after another, till they were consumed.

Ver. 23. And thy Heaven, that is over thy Head, shall be Brass;] That is, as Brass, having no more Moisture in it than Brass hath. It is remarkable, that he doth not say the Heaven, that is, the Air, or Clouds, but thy Heaven, that is, the Clouds which hung over their Country, should be dry, though they dropp'd upon other Lands. See Jeremiab xiv.

And the Earth, that is under thee, shall be Iron.] Hard as Iron, for want of Rain to soften it. See Levit. xxvi. 19. The Observation of Maimonides is worth noting upon this Part of the Law: "That the Zabii, an antient Sort of Idolaters in the Eastern Countries, thought the Fruitfulness of the Earth depended upon the Worship of the Planets, and the rest of the heavenly Bodies: And therefore their wise Men, and their Prophets, (as he saith he found in their Books, particularly in one concerning the Husbandry of the Egyptians) taught the People to keep Festivals in their Honour; because the Fruitfulness of the Earth, by which Men subsist, depends upon their Will and Pleasure. In Opposition to which, God ordered Moses to tell the Israelites in his Name, that if they worshipped the Stars, they should have no Rain; the Earth should be barren, the Trees yield no Fruit; the Season prove unhealthful, and their Lives be shortened. On the contrary, if they worshipped him, the LORD of Heaven and Earth, and him alone, they should have Showers from above; the Earth should bring forth abundantly, and they should be blessed with healthful Seasons, sound Bodies, and long Life. For it is the very Foundation of the Law (as his Phrase is) to root the fore-named false Opinion out of Mens Minds. More Nevochim, P. III. Cap. 30."

Ver. 24. The LORD shall make the Rain of thy Land Powder and Dust:] That is, there shall be such a long Drought, that, instead of Rain, Showers of Dust, blown up into the Air by the Wind, shall fall down from Heaven upon them.

From Heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed.] This seems to denote something more than the falling of Clouds of Dust, where-with the Air was filled by high Winds, viz. Showers of Ashes, which have sometimes fallen in great Quantities, as good Historians testify. Nothing is more known than the vast Clouds of Ashes which Mount Ætna hath often vomited; whereby all the Country thereabout hath been laid desolate. And the like hath been thrown out by Mount Vesuvius, which hath reached as far as Rome and Constantinople. See Bonsfrerius. But if there was any such Thing in Judea, it must be a miraculous Judgment, there being no such Mountains in those Parts of the World, to make such Evomitions.

Ver. 25. The LORD shall cause thee to be smitten before thine Enemies:] He saith the same in Effect, Levit. xxvi. 17. For to smite in Scripture (as I have before observed) signifies to slay or kill.

Thou shalt go out one Way against them, and flee seven Ways before them;] Though they marched out in a great Body against their Enemies, he threatens that they should soon be dispersed; the Hand of the LORD, as well as of their Enemies, being against them. For that Expression is remarkable, the LORD shall cause thee to be smitten. See Ver. 7.

And shalt be removed into all the Kingdoms of the Earth.] This is something more than is threatened, Levit. xxvi. 33. signifying not only their Dispersion into the remotest Parts of the World, but their being tossed up and down like Vagabonds, from one Country to another, without any certain Settlement; which hath been notoriously verified since their last Dispersion by the Romans, of which they themselves have given us large Accounts in several Books, viz. Juchasin, Schalscheleth Hakkala, Schebet Jebuda, and Zemuch David, wherein they have abundantly confirmed what Tertullian saith of them in his Time, Dispersi, palabundi, & cæli, & soli sui extorres vagantur per orbem; That being scattered, straggling up and down uncertainly, banished from their own Country, they wander about the World, without any King, &c. But this belongs to the Time of the first Captivity, when Nebemiab (i. 8.) confesses these Words were fulfilled. See Jerem. ix. 16. Ezek. vi. 8. xii. 14, 15.

Ver. 26. And thy Carcase shall be Meat unto all Fowls of the Air, and unto the Beasts of the Earth;] Nothing was accounted a greater Calamity among the Jews, than to have their dead Bodies lie exposed, to be buried only in the Bowels of Birds and Beasts; and therefore Jeremiab threatens this as the utmost Punishment of the King of Judah, xxii. 19. xxxvi. 30. and the Psalmist bewails it as one of the forest Judgments that was befallen them, Psal. lxxix. 2, 3.

And no Man shall fray them away.] That is, no Man took so much Compassion upon them, as to chase them away, and to interr the Remainers, which the Birds and Beasts had not devoured.

Ver. 27. The LORD will smite thee] Why the Hierusalem Targum should here, in a particular Manner, say, the Word of the LORD shall smite thee, I cannot imagine; unless it was to suggest, that he being their Conductor out of Egypt, was the Person more especially concerned to punish them for their shameful Ingratitude to their Deliverer. See Ver. 68.

With the Botch of Egypt.] Some take this to signify the Leprosy, unto which they in that Country were subject. Others, that Boil breaking out with Blains, wherewith God smote the Egyptians, Exod. ix. 9, &c. For that is called Schechin, as this is.

And with the Emerods,] The Hebrew Word Apholim, is no-where to be met with but here, and 1 Sam. v. 6, 9, 11. and in the rest of that History; which most Interpreters (and not without Reason) think signifies those painful Tumors in the Fundament, which sometimes turn into Ulcers. See Bochartus in his Hierozycon, P. I. Lib. II. Cap. 36.

And with the Scab,] The LXX here translate the Hebrew Garab (as they do also Levit. xxi. 20.) λώρα άγριο, a fierce or malignant Scab. And the Vulgar adds the Word Jugis, to signify that this was no small Punishment.

And with the Itch,] The Hebrew Word Cheres signifies, as is generally thought, a dry Itch; which is the most troublesome of all other.

Whereof thou canst not be healed.] This may refer both to the Scab, and to the Itch before-mentioned; which proceeded from such a Corruption of the Blood, that they were as incurable as the Leprosy.

Ver. 28. The LORD shall smite thee with Madness, and Blindness, and Astonishment of Heart.] All these three relate to the Mind: The First of them importing such a Distraction in their Thoughts, that they should not know what Course to take, when they consulted for their Safety: The Second, such a Stupidity, that they should not discern the true Way, but always take the wrong: The Third, that Amazement and Horror which followed thereupon, when they saw themselves ruined by their own foolish Counsels, and mad Contrivances. A famous Instance of which was in the Time of Trajan, when they committed such outrageous Massacres, both upon the Greeks and Romans, (as Dion, a very sober Author, relates) in Cyrene and Cyprus, (where great Numbers of Jews dwelt, after they were driven out of their own Country) that the LORD, no doubt, (to use the Words of Dr. Jackson on the Creed, B. I. Chap. 27.) had smote them with the Madness and Blindness of Heart here threaten'd, that they might hereby provoke that puissant Emperor's Indignation, which otherwise would have slept, but now pursued them throughout his Dominions, not only as Enemies, or Rebels, but as noxious Creatures to human Society, with a Revenge suitable to their former Outrages. And, indeed, this Prediction was verified in their blind Credulity, which made them follow every one that pretended to be their Messiah; which always brought great Calamities upon them, as R. Gedaliah himself confesses in Schalscheleth Hakkabala; where he mentions no small Number of these Deceivers, and shews how many Jews perished who followed them. Yet they are but a few, in Comparison of a long Catalogue that might be made of those pretended Messiahs. See the learned Wagenseil's Confutation of R. Lipman's Carmen Memoriale, p. 233, &c. Unto which I shall add only one Observation more out of Solomon ben Virgæ, who saith, in some Places of Germany they were possessed with such a Rabies, that they cut one another's Throats, to avoid the Oppression of their Enemies; and burnt themselves and their Neighbours in their Houses, setting whole Cities on Fire, and perishing in the Flames. Such was their extreme Rage and furious Revenge, upon those Christians who pressed them to change their Religion. Many Stories of the like Nature that Author tells in his Book, intitled, Schebet Jebuda; where he hath Sixty-four Relations of the Calamities which befel them in that, and in other Countries. But these Words, I doubt not, were fulfilled before in the first Desolation of Jerusalem, to which they belong. For though we have not such particular Relations as those now mentioned to illustrate them, yet the Prophets speak of their being mad, by drinking of the Cup of the LORD's Fury, Jerem. xxv. 16, 18. and blind, Zephän. i. 17. Lament. iv. 14. and astonished, Jerem. iv. 9. Ezek. iv. 17.

Ver. 29. And thou shalt grope at Noon-Days, as the Blind gropeth in Darkness:] This shews the Blindness spoken of in the foregoing Verse relates to their Mind; which was so darkened, that in the plainest and clearest Things they mistook the Way and Means of their Preservation, Zephän. i. 17.

And thou shalt not prosper in thy Ways:] But, quite contrary, whatsoever Course they took, it turned to their Undoing.

And thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore:] One Oppression followed upon another; (as the same Dr. Jackson observes) and such Rapines were committed in several Places upon them, as only made Way for new ones, even when the supreme Powers endeavoured to hinder them.

And no Man shall save thee.] This was so remarkably fulfilled in these Parts of the World, that the Magistrates who had a Mind in many Places to preserve them from such Outrages, as none but Jews can justify, durst not venture to appear for their Rescue. And those that did take them into their Protection, were the Instruments of their further Wrongs, by grievous Exactions for the Maintenance of the War undertaken in their Defence. So strangely (as that excellent Person forenamed speaks, Cap. 29.) did the Wisdom of God bring that to pass, which his Servant Moses hath foretold in this Verse, No Man shall save thee: For even Succour itself turned into their Sorrow; and it is hard to say, whether Mens Purposes for their Good, or for their Evil, brought greater Plagues upon them. Thus it was before their first Captivity; Pharaoh King of Egypt came to help them, but was not able, Jerem. xxxvii. 7. xlvi. 17.

Ver. 30. Thou shalt betroth a Wife, and another Man shall lie with her:] Take her away from thee, before thou canst consummate the Marriage. This was a sore Affliction, for all Nations accounted it a singular Blessing to compleat a Marriage; and on the contrary, a Curse to be defeated of such delightful Hopes. Whence Callimachus in his Hymn to Apollo, promising many Blessings to the Youths, who sung and danced before his Altar, mentions this in the first Place, Ver. 14.

Εἰ τελέω μέλλουσι γάμον.——

That he would be with them, and prosper them; if they were to be married.

Thou shalt build an House, and thou shalt not dwell therein:] But another take Possession of it, Zephani. i. 13.

Thou shalt plant a Vineyard, and shalt not gather the Grapes thereof.] So we rightly translate the Hebrew Word, which (as the Margin notes) is, thou shalt not propbane or make common the Grapes thereof; which was not to be done till the fifth Year after the Plantation: Before which Time God threatens another should enter into it, and enjoy the Fruits thereof.

Ver. 31. Thine Ox shall be slain before thine Eyes, and thou shalt not eat thereof; thine A's shall be violently taken away from before thy Face, and shall not be restored to thee, &c.] All these are but particular Instances of their grievous Oppressions in all Countries, where their Goods have been confiscated, the Bills of Debts owing to them all cancelled. Of which the same pious and learned Person, Dr. Jackson, gives several Instances in the forenamed Chapter.

Ver. 32. Thy Sons and thy Daughters shall be given unto another People,] This was literally fulfilled, when the Jews were banished out of Portugal, in the Time of King Emanuel; who ordered their Children under nineteen Years of Age to be taken from them, and brought up in the Christian Religion. When Infants also were torn from their Mothers Breasts, with far more Grief and Sorrow, than they had at their coming out of their Womb: And many hundred Years before that, when the Goths were Lords of Spain, and suffered no Parents to have any Commerce with their Children after the Seventh Year of their Age, but by publick Decree they were committed to Christians to be educated by them, who married them to their own Sons and Daughters. See the same Dr. Jackson, Chap. 28. Paragr. 1, 2.

And thine Eyes shall look, and fail with longing for them all the Day long:] Their Women filling the Heavens with more hideous Shrieks than the Egyptians did, when all their First-born were slain in the Night. For these were bereft at once of all their dear Children in the open Sun, in vain begging to have them restored to them. And to increase their Calamity, (as that excellent Person observes, Cap. 29. Paragr. 15.) many Moors professing Mabometism, were transported out of Portugal at the same Time, without such Violence offered to them. What was the Reason? (saith he) God would have a manifest Distinction made between the Jews and other People, that this Prophecy might be fulfilled.

And there shall be no Might in thine Hand.] Either to protect, or to rescue them from Violence. Where I cannot but take Notice, with the same Doctor, that the Moors then had some Power in their Hand, which moved the Portugals, perhaps, to abstain from such Usage of them, lest the Report of it coming to the African Mabometans, they might attempt to avenge their Wrongs. But these wretched Jews had no Power any-where, none to avenge their Injuries; which God had ordained they should suffer at all Times, and in all Places wheresoever they came, without Redress.

Ver. 33. The Fruit of thy Land, and all thy Labours, shall a Nation which thou knowest not, eat up:] This was remarkably fulfilled, when Salmaneser came and dispossessed the ten Tribes; and when Nebuchadnezzar carried the other two Tribes away, and placed other People in their Room.

There were many strange People also among the Romans, who devoured their Labours before their last Destruction by Titus. And ever since they have been subject to Depredations of various Sorts; having scraped up Riches with great Care, and have often fallen into the Hands of Strangers. Particularly in the Time of the famous Crusado's, when divers Nations marched in great Numbers to recover the Holy Land from Infidels, their Business was in their Way to rob and spoil the Jews, and to make great Slaughter of them, as both Jewish and Christian Writers witness; particularly the Author of Schalecheleth Hakkabala, and our Matthew Paris.

And thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed away:] That they should not only sometimes, or in some Ages, or in some one or few Kingdoms, but always, in every Kingdom whither they removed, (as he speaks, Ver. 25.) suffer such Violence and Wrong, as no other People hath done, must needs be thought to proceed rather from divine Justice, than Mens Inclination to Injustice; which could not but have varied with the Diversity of Times and Places, and the several Dispositions of Parties, among whom they have been dispersed. And yet the brief Enumeration of their particular Spoils, and hard Usage, which Dr. Jackson makes in the fore-named Chapter, (whose Words these are, in the Beginning of it) throughout the most civil and best-governed States of Europe, will abundantly confirm the Truth of Moses's Words in this Place, Thou shalt never but suffer Wrong and Violence away, as our old Translation hath it. The same is lately observed by an eminently learned Person, J. Wagenfeil, in his Confutation of R. Lipman's Carm. Memoriale, p. 241. where he takes Notice, that the Jews no sooner have grown rich, and by Degrees become considerable in any Country, but some great Calamity hath befallen them. This the attentive Consideration of their History will justify particularly, as he observes in France, Spain, and England; God not suffering them to be quite destroyed, like the Amalekites, Jebusites, and Philistines, of whom no Footsteps remain; but be scattered and tossed about through all Christian Countries, (for a Testimony to the Truth of our Religion) and there only oppressed, crushed, and squeezed, as Moses here foretold. One Instance of which fore Oppression I cannot forbear to add out of Schebet Jebuda, where R. Solomon Virga confesses what great Miseries they have been exposed unto, by Persons pretending to be their Messiah, who have drawn the Hatred of all Nations upon them; particularly in Persia, he saith, they were most lamentably handled upon this Score, being not only tripp'd of all, but forced to go about like Dogs, with a great Clog of Wood bound to their Necks, which exposed them to the Scorn and Laughter of all Men: For while some threw it behind their Backs, others would come and throw it down before their Feet; some dragging them backwards, and others cruelly beating them with it. This one told him who saw it.

Ver. 34. So that thou shalt be mad for the Sight of thine Eyes, which thou shalt see.] So they were, (as the forenamed Doctor observes, Chap. 29. Paragraph 6, 15.) when their Children were taken from them in Portugal. For some, being not able to rescue or dispatch them, killed themselves; others, who had better Opportunity, drowned their Children in Wells or Ditches. And here in England, one of their learned Rabbins persuaded four hundred of his Company, besieged with him in a strong Tower by the furious Multitude, to cut their own Throats, rather than fall into their Enemies Hands; himself confirming his Doctrine, by cutting his Wife's Throat first, then his Children, and lastly killing himself. And thus in the Time of the forementioned Crusado's, the Soldiers made such dreadful Havock of the Jews as they went along to the Holy Land, that many of them made themselves away out of Despair; as their own Authors, R. Gedaliah and David Ganz tell us ad An. 1096.

Ver. 35. And the LORD shall smite thee in the Knees, and in the Legs, with a sore Botch, that cannot be healed, &c.] This is the same word in the Hebrew [Schechin,] which is used Ver. 27. called the Botch of Egypt, and here an evil Botch, that is, a very grievous breaking out; which began in those lower Parts, and so spread (being incurable, and by no Means to be stopp'd) from the Sole of the Feet, unto the Crown of the Head.

Ver. 36. And the LORD shall bring thee, and the King which thou shalt set over thee, unto a Nation which neither thou nor thy Fathers have known.] This may seem to have been fulfilled literally, only when Jehoiacin was carried away captive to Babylon, 2 Kings xxiv. 15. and afterwards Zedekiah, xxv. 7. Jerem. xxxix. 7. lii. 11. For when they returned, they had no more any Kings. But the latter Part of these Words [a Nation which neither thou nor thy Fathers have known] may incline us to extend this Threatning as far as to their last Dispersion by the Romans. Since which they have been driven into several Countries, far less known to them than Babylon was, (with which they had Correspondence before their Captivity thither, 2 Kings xx. 12, &c.) And though they have had no King, yet they have set over themselves Rulers and Governors, who may be comprehended under that Name.

And there thou shalt serve other Gods, Wood and Stone.] Either sottiſhly following the Example of the Country to which they were carried, Jerem. xlv. 17, 18. or being compelled thereunto by their cruel Tyranny, Dan. iii. 6. The Author of Schebet Jebuda observes, that this was the just punishment of their Folly in running after Idols, that they were sent into other Countries to worship those Gods which they were so fond of in their own. And he refers it particularly to the Time of their Captivity of Babylon; in which they continued Seventy Years, according to the Number of Years wherein those Planets, whom they had worshipped, finished their Course: For Saturn, as he computes, finishes his in one and twenty, Jupiter in as many; and so he proceeds with the rest, which make up that Number. But this is too curious an Observation, and the Jews have little skill in Astronomy, therefore I pass it by, and only observe that Manasseh ben Israel also understands this of the Babylonian Captivity; for all the Punishments mentioned from Ver. 15. to Ver. 49. were fulfilled under the first Temple, and after the Ruin of it, till the Building of the second; which, though it be not exactly true, (some of these Predictions having been more completely fulfilled, as I have shewn, in After-Times,) yet it is reasonable to think, that this Threatning particularly belongs to what they suffered in Babylon; the very same Calamity being again threatened in the sixty fourth Verse, where I shall shew it belongs to their present Condition.

Ver. 37. And thou shalt become an Astonishment.] Their Neighbours, he means, who saw or heard of the Greatness and Strangeness of their various Plagues, should be dismay'd at the Sight, or Report of them; wondering that a People, who had been so flourishing, should be made so exceeding desolate. See 1 Kings ix. 8. Jeremiah xviii. 16. xix. 8.

A Proverb and a By-Word among all Nations whither the LORD shall lead thee.] So that when Men would express one extremely vile, they should say he was a Jew. The same is threatened by God when he appeared to Solomon, 1 Kings ix. 7. and by Jeremiah xxiv. 9. which it is likely was fulfilled at their first Captivity into Babylon; (See Lament. ii. 15, 16) but hath been notoriously fulfilled in their last Captivity, (as they call it,) since the Destruction of Jerusalem and their Temple by the Romans: For here in England, (from whence they have been banished above three hundred Years,) their Name serves as a perfect Measure, (to use the words of Dr. Jackson, B. I. on the Creed, Chap. 30.) to express the Height of Impiety in any Agent, or the Depth of an abject, worthless, forlorn Condition in any Patient. Better we cannot express the most cut-throat Dealing, than thus, You use me like a Jew; or none but a Jew would have done this. And when in common Speech we exaggerate Wrongs done to the most odious or despised People among us, we say, I would not have done so to a Jew.

Ver. 38. Thou shalt carry much Seed out into the Field, and shalt gather but little in.] This was fulfilled before they were carried Captive to Babylon, when God frequently sent sore Famine upon them, as we read in the Prophet Isaiah lii. 19. and Jeremiah xiv. 1, 2, 3, &c. and is often threatned by Ezekiel among other terrible Judgments, and by Jeremiah himself, xxix. 17, 18.

For the Locust shall consume it.] They were a great Plague in those Countries, falling sometimes in such vast Numbers, (from whence they had the Name of Arbe,) that they covered the whole Face of the Earth, and devoured every green Thing: For so another of their Names imports, which is Cbasil, coming from Chasal, which signifies to consume and eat up; which they did so entirely, that they were looked upon by all People, as a Plague sent by God, and are therefore called by Joel his Army, ii. 25. So not only the Hebrews, but the Arabs, esteemed them; who say, that some of them on a Time fell before their Prophet, as he sat at Meat, with this Inscription on their Backs; I am God, and there is none other besides me, the LORD of Locusts, who nourish them; and, when I please, send them forth, that they may be Food for the People; and, when I please, that they may be their Plague, by eating up their Food. See Bochartus, in his Hieroicoon, Par. II. Lib. IV. Cap. 6.

Ver. 39. Thou shalt plant Vineyards, and dress them.] Take a great deal of Care and Pains about them, after they are planted, to make them fruitful.

But shalt neither drink of the Wine, nor eat the Grapes.] Not enjoy the least Benefit by their Cost and Labour.

For worms shall eat them.] The Hebrew Word Tbolaath is a general Name for all Worms whatsoever: But there is a peculiar sort that infest Vines, which the Greeks call ines and ines, as Bochartus observes, in his Hieroicoon, P. II. Lib. IV. Cap. 27. where he takes notice that the Latines call this Worm Volvox, and Convolutus; because it wraps and rolls itself up in the Buds, and eats the Grapes up when they grow towards Ripeness, as the Roman Authors explain it.

Ver. 40. Thou shalt have Olive-Trees through all thy Coasts, but thou shalt not anoint thyself with the Oil.] Though the Country abounded with these Trees in all Parts of it, they produced nothing but Leaves; and a shew of Fruit, which came to no Perfection.

For thy Olive shall cast her Fruits.] Being blasted, as the Hierusalem Targum explains it, in the very Blossoms; or the Buds dropping off for want of Rain; or the Fruit being eaten with Worms. Maimonides observes, that the Idolaters in those Countries, pretended by certain Magical Arts, to preserve all Manner of Fruit, so that Worms should not gnaw the Vines, nor either Buds or Fruit fall from the Trees, (as he reports their Words out of one of their own Books, which he names;) therefore to deter the Israelites from all idolatrous Practices, Moses here pronounces that they should draw upon themselves those very Punishments, which they studied by such Means to avoid, More Nevochim, P. III. Cap. 37.

Ver. 41. Thou shalt beget Sons and Daughters, but thou shalt not enjoy them; for they shall go into Captivity.] Which is threatened in many Places of the Prophets, and fulfilled in several Invasions of their Neighbours; for the Syrians, no doubt, carried Captive more than that one little Maid, who waited on Naaman's Wife, 2 Kings v. 2. And in other Inroads upon them, till the Captivity of the whole Land. This we may be confident was a frequent Calamity, 2 Kings xiv. 26. xv. 37, &c. But it was never more remarkably fulfilled, than since they crucified our Saviour; their Children having been taken from them, (as I have observed before, Ver. 32, 34.) and transported sometimes into other Places. And who knows whether many of their Stock, detained by King Emanuel of Portugal, beforementioned, have not been transported into America? And whether many of the Spanish Colonies have not a Mixture of the Jewish Progeny in them, as Dr. Jackson observes? Manasseh ben Israel, I am sure, endeavours to prove (in his Book called Spes Israelis) that some of the ten Tribes are in America; though how they came there, he can give no Account.

Ver. 42. All the Trees, and the Fruit of thy Land shall the Locust consume.] So Onkelos and the Hebrew Writers generally translate the Word Tzelatzal; which signifies a peculiar Sort of Locusts which falls upon Trees, as others upon the Fields. And it seems to have this Name, because these Locusts come in such thick Clouds, that they darken the Sun; the Hebrew Word Tzalal signifying to over-shadow. The Hierusalem Targum translates it, All your Trees, and the Fruits of your Land, shall Spoilers possess.

I suppose these several Judgments fell in the Order wherein they are here mentioned in Ver. 38, 39, 40, 41, 42. there being first a great Dearth, of which we read, 2 Kings viii. 1, &c. and Joel i. 10, 11, 12, &c. then many Invasions of their Country, wherein several were carried Captive by the Bands of Moab upon the Israelites, 2 Kings xiii. 20. and of the Chaldeans, Syrians, and Ammonites, who came upon Judah, xxiv. 2. And we read expressly, that before this, in the Days of Abaz, a great Multitude were carried Captive by the Syrians, 2 Chron. xxviii. 5. After which more Spoilers came upon them in the Days of Jeremiah xii. 12. and a new Famine, xiv. 1, &c. in which this forty first Verse may be thought to be fulfilled.

Ver. 43. The Stranger that is within thee, shall get up above thee very high, and thou shalt come down very low.] There is no fiercer Punishment to a proud People, than to see those who are not only their Inferiors, but much beholden to them, (as all Strangers were to the Jews, among whom they lived merely by Permission,) get up above them, and become their Superiors. But so it was, that the Jews, by their foolish Endeavours to advance themselves, raised a mere Stranger to the highest Dignity, who humbled them into the lowest Condition. For this (as that excellent Person I have often mentioned observes) may be applied to Vespasian, who was appointed to command in the Wars against the Jews, and being a Person of mean Birth, and obscure Family, had no Thoughts of aspiring to the Imperial Seat; but by the unseasonable Desire of the Jews to exalt themselves above all Nations, they hoisted him up to the most sublime Pitch of Greatness, who was ordained by God to pluck them down from their Seat, and bring them beneath all People. See Dr. Jackson, Book I. on the Creed, Cap. 23. Paragraph 3, 4, &c. For he quite extinguished their Glory, which was their Temple at Jerusalem; and likewise shut up and prophaned the Temple which the Egyptian-Jews had built in the Country of Heliopolis, after it had stood above three hundred Years: But if any one think good thus to apply the Words of this Verse unto Vespasian, they must not take this for the literal Meaning of them; because it is evident, that by the Stranger, is to be understood those of other Nations, who lived among them; particularly, those Gentiles who were brought up into the Country by the Affryrians, instead of the Ten Tribes, as some of the best of the Jewish Writers expound it. What the Doctor also saith, concerning their advancing Vespasian to the Imperial Dignity, cannot be maintained.

Ver. 44. He shall lend to thee, and thou shalt not lend to him; he shall be the Head, and thou shalt be the Tail.] Thus the Covenant of God, to exalt this People, and humble their Foes, was quite inverted, as he also observes, (See Ver. 12, 13.) all the Plagues threatened to those who bare Ill-Will to Sion, lighting on them and their Friends; and all the Blessings promised to such as prayed for for her Peace, being heaped on those that wrought her Ruin.

Ver. 45. Moreover all these Curses shall come upon thee, and shall pursue thee, and overtake thee, till thou be destroyed.] These Punishments, he means, should not cease, but follow one upon another till they had brought them to utter Ruin. Which is so evidently fulfilled, that would but the Atheists consider it, and lay it to Heart, it would wring from them a Confession of the Truth of what these Divine Oracles have uttered, That this was a People who had been appointed to destruction. For though there be a great many of them remaining in several Parts of the World, yet they had never been suffered to grow into a Nation, but in that Sense are utterly destroyed, as Moses here prophesied.

Because thou bearkenedst not unto the Voice of the LORD thy GOD, to keep his Commandments, and his Statutes, which I commanded thee this Day.] It hath manifestly appeared the Hand of God is very heavy upon them for their Disobedience to him, there being no other Reason, why they who were once so favoured by him, should be so long as they have been more miserable than any other People.

Ver. 46. And they shall be upon thee.] That is, the Curses before mentioned should remain fixed upon them, and continue unremoved from Age to Age.

For a sign and for a Wonder.] That all Men may take Notice of them, and look upon them as extraordinary Tokens of God's high displeasure, and take Warning thereby to beware of their Infidelity and Disobedience: For, as that great Man often saith, No Sign can be given equivalent to the Desolation of the Jewish Nation, and their continuing still banished from their own Land, and miserably treated in all other Countries.

And upon thy Seed for ever.] All the World may clearly see (to use his Words again) that the God of their Fathers hath cast them off, they having no Signs or Badges of his antient wonted Favours, whilst innumerable Marks and Scars of his fearful Indignation against their Fathers remain unhealed in their Children, after more Generations than their Ancestors had of Prosperity in the promised Land.

Ver. 47. Because thou servedest not the LORD thy GOD with Joyfulness and Gladness of Heart for the Abundance of all things.] Or, In the Abundance of all Things; for this is opposed to the Hunger and Thirst in which (he saith in the next Verse) they should serve their Enemies, as a Punishment for their wanton Abuse of God's Mercies. Which being so exceeding great, justly required not only their Obedience, but Cheerfulness and Delight therein.

Ver. 48. Therefore shalt thou serve thine Enemies, which he shall send against thee.] He doth not call the LORD their GOD, as he did before, now they were abandoned by him for their Sins.

In Hunger, and Thirst, and Nakedness, and in Want of all Things.] This shews what he meant before by Abundance of all Things, plentiful Provision of Food and Raiment, and all other Things belonging to the Comfort of Life.

And he shall put a Yoke of Iron upon thy Neck.] The Loss of Liberty was as great a Misery as any other, which ended also in hard Servitude. And it was but just, that they should be Slaves in the Land of their Enemies to cruel Masters, who would not, in their own Country, serve so gracious and loving a Father as the LORD their GOD.

A Yoke of Iron.] Signifies an unsupportable Yoke, which could not be broken. See Jerem. xxviii. 13, 14.

Ver. 49. And the LORD shall bring a Nation against thee from far.] This evidently belongs to the Romans, as Manasseh ben Israel acknowledges; who thinks, that at this Verse begins his Prophecy of their Calamities under the second Temple, as in the foregoing he describes their Calamities under the first. And in this, I think, he saith right, that there is scarce any Thing mentioned in the following Part of this Chapter, but what relates to what they suffered under the second Temple, (as he speaks,) and since its Destruction; though I cannot say, as he doth, of the foregoing Part of it, that it was fulfilled in the Calamities which befel them under the first Temple; for many Things were never so compleatly fulfilled, as since they crucified our Saviour.

From the End of the Earth.] This shews he speaks of the Romans, rather than of the Chaldeans, who did not come from far, much less from the End of the Earth; but out of the North Country, which was not very far distant from Judea: Whereas the Romans, by whom they were last destroyed, came literally from far, and from the End of the Earth; particularly Julius Severus was called by the Emperor Adrian to their Destruction out of this Island of Britain; wherein Vespasian also had given great Proof of his Conduct. And Adrian himself, and Trajan, by whom they were still more crushed, after Vespasian had destroyed their City and Temple, were both Spaniards by Birth. And, therefore, Manasseh ben Israel says peremptorily, in his Book de Termino Vitæ, (Lib. III. Sect. 3.) this is to be understood of the Soldiers in Vespasian's Army, which he brought out of England, France, and Spain, and other remote Parts of the World.

As swift as the Eagles.] Which every one knows the Romans carried in their Ensigns. And these Birds are observed to fly upon their Prey with great Force and Violence; to whom, therefore, fierce Soldiers (such as the Romans were) are compared, when they set upon their Enemies. So Homer describes Achilles falling upon the Trojans.

Αἰετὶς οἰκιστὴν ἔχων in Iliad 9, where οἰκιστὰ signifies ὀχυρώματα, furious Assaults, as the Scholiast interprets it. And so he speaks concerning Hector, Iliad x. As David also speaks of Saul and Jonathan, 2 Sam. i. 23. and the Chaldeans are so described, coming against Jerusalem, Jerem. iv. 13. xlviii. 40. xlix. 22. Lament. i. 19. Ezek. xvii. 3. and see Dan. vii. 4. and Bochartus, in his Hierozoicon, Pars I. Lib. II. Cap. 9. P. II. Lib. II. Cap. 2.

A Nation whose Tongue thou shalt not understand.] The Roman Tongue was more strange to them than the Chaldean, especially the Language of many Nations, of which the Roman Army was composed; and being a People whom their Ancestors, perhaps, never heard of. Dr. Jackson justly looks upon the Destruction and general Desolation of their their Country, made by the Romans and their Tributaries in these Western Parts of the World, as an everlasting Monument of the Truth of Moses's Prophecy, in this and in the following Verses.

Ver. 50. A Nation.] This Word Nation being used thrice in this and the foregoing Verse Manasseh ben Israel (in the Place forenamed,) is so critical, as to observe, that this Repetition shews Jerusalem was to suffer thrice by the Roman Power: First, in the Time of Pompey; and secondly, when Sosius came to the Assistance of Herod against Antigonus; and, thirdly, when it was besieged and overturned by Vespasian and his Son Titus.

Of a fierce Countenance.] So we translate this Phrase, Daniel viii. 23. which, in the Hebrew, is a strong or hard Face. Accordingly we translate it impudent, (or, in our Language, brazen-faced;) Prov. vii. 13. and hard, Prov. xxi. 29. and bold of Face, Eccles. viii. 1. All which set forth a People stern, fierce, undaunted, cruel and hard-hearted; that had neither Mercy nor Modesty, but inflexibly pursued their Designs; which is the true Character of the old Romans.

Which shall not regard the Person of the Old, nor shew Favour to the Young.] These are wont to be pitied, being unable to hurt others; but in their Wars with the Jews, the Romans spared no Body, their Rage and Fury extinguishing all Reverence to gray Hairs, and all Tenderness to young Babes.

Ver. 51. And he shall eat the Fruit of thy Cattle and the Fruit of thy Land, until thou be destroyed.] For they brought such vast Armies, as devoured all the Provisions in the Country.

Which also shall not leave thee Corn, Wine, or Oil, or the Increase of thy Kine, or Flocks of thy Sheep, until he have destroyed thee.] He repeats it again, in more particular Words, to set forth the Desolation to be so great, that nothing should remain for their Support.

Ver. 52. And he shall besiege thee in all thy Gates.] The Country being wasted, the Jews fled into their fenced Cities, where they had laid up some Provisions, to enable them to hold out a Siege.

Until thy high and fenced Walls come down, where-in thou trustest, throughout thy Land.] This was literally fulfilled by the Romans, to whom the best fortified Places were forced to yield, as may be seen in Josephus his History of the Jewish War, which is the best Commentary on this Part of the Prophecy. The Walls of Jerusalem particularly were razed by Pompey; and Sosius took it again by Force in the Time of Augustus. But Tacitus tells us, That the Jews took such Advantage of the Covetousness of Claudius, that they purchased of him the Liberty to fortify their City again; which they did so well, that they trusted, as Moses here speaks, to its Strength; which was so great, that Titus could not take it but by a long Siege, which concluded in its utter Ruin.

He shall besiege thee in all thy Gates, throughout all the Land which the LORD thy GOD hath given thee.] He repeats it again, that they might not think to find Security in any Place whatsoever, though never so strongly fortified, and well provided with all Things necessary for its Defence.

Ver. 53. And thou shalt eat the Fruit of thine own Body, the Flesh of thy Sons, and of thy Daughters, which the LORD thy GOD hath given thee, in the Siege, and in the Straitness wherewith thine Enemies shall distress thee.] This was fulfilled to a Title by Vespasian and his Son Titus; who after they had vanquished them in the Field, begirt them so close in Jerusalem, that they could not stir out, and rather than surrender, perished by a lamentable Famine. For there were vast Multitudes of People shut up in the City, which run thither from all Parts for Safety; who brought the Famine sooner upon them, and made it more severe when it came. If we may believe R. David Ganz, it was furthered also by a Fire, which the seditious People kindled, whereby fourteen hundred Magazines were consumed, stored with Provisions to serve two hundred thousand People for twenty Years. For this he quotes Josephus; though no such Thing is to be found in him.

Ver. 54. So that the Man that is tender and very delicate among you.] The two Hebrew Words for tender and delicate, signify a Man that had lived in Pleasure, and fared daintily, like the rich Man in the Gospel.

His Eye shall be evil toward his Brother, and towards the Wife of his Bosom, &c.] Grudge every Bit which he sees his nearest Relations eat, being ready to snatch it out of the Mouth of his dear Consort and Children, and put it into his own: For this is the Effect of a ravenous Hunger.

And toward the Remnant of his Children which he shall have.] This imports that they should see many of them die in the Siege: For Famine forced them to feed on bad Food, and that bred Pestilential Diseases, which swept away many; and increased still more by the Carcases of those that were famished. If any Credit may be given to one of their own Authors, David Ganz, there were above an hundred and sixteen thousand dead Bodies of the rich and honourable Men of Jerusalem carried out at one Gate of the City, which was that of the Brook Kedron, besides those which were carried out at other Gates, and thrown over the Walls: And this he pretends to have out of Minchas, the Son of Seruk, who was a faithful Register in that City. Josephus mentions almost the same Number, Lib. VII. de Bello Judaico, Cap. ult.

Ver. 55. So that he shall not give to any of them of the Flesh of his Children whom he shall eat.] This is a Description of the forest Famine, which forced them, after they had eaten up their Horses, Dogs, Cats, and such like Creatures, and their very Belts and Shoes, to eat even their own Children; which Fathers, who used to live deliciously, Moses prophesies, should eat up themselves privately, and let none share with them.

Because he hath nothing left in the Siege, and in the Straitness wherewith their Enemies shall distress thee in all thy Gates.] They were so forely pinch'd with Famine in a long Siege, that they had nothing else remaining, but their own Offspring, and one another, wherewith to satisfy their Hunger. Josephus observes (Lib. VII. de Bello Judaico, Cap. 18.) that Jerusalem had been taken five Times before this; but never suffered so dreadfully as by Titus; whom the Talmudists therefore call by the Name of Impious: Which Epithet belonged rather to themselves, who having with wicked Hands (as St. Peter speaks) crucified and slain their Redeemer, were, by the just Judgment of God upon them them for their Infidelity, hardened in an obstinate Belief and Expectation of a Deliverer from the Romans, till they were reduced to those Extremities.

Ver. 56. The tender and delicate Woman among you, that would not adventure to set the sole of her Foot upon the Ground, for Delicateness and Tender-ness.] A Description of the greatest Softness and Delicacy; which both the Chaldees express by a Word that signifies the nicest Motion, and going so slow a Pace, as if they were loth to touch the Ground. See Bochartus, in his Phaleg. Lib. IV. Cap. 19.

Her Eye shall be evil toward the Husband of her Bosom, and toward her Son, and toward her Daughter.] This is only an higher Instance of the cruel Effects of their Distress by Famine: For Women, especially of the better Sort, are naturally more tender and pitiful than Men, and have the most passionate Love to their Children; which Moses here prophesies should be quite extinguished by Hunger. And it was literally fulfilled, both in the Siege of Samaria, wherein a Woman boiled her Son, 2 Kings v. 28, 29. as a Man did in the first Siege of Jerusalem by the Babylonians, Baruch ii. 3. and see Lament. ii. 20. iv. 10. But never so exactly fulfilled as in the last Siege by the Romans, when a noble Woman (which fully answers to this Prophecy, such Persons being very delicate) did the very same, as Josephus relates in his Book of the Jewish Wars, Lib. VII. Cap. 8. A most unnatural Fact, as he observes, which was never committed, either by Greek or Barbarian; and which he would not have related, because it might seem incredible, if there had not been many Witnesses of it besides himself.

Ver. 57. And toward her Young-one, that cometh out from between her Feet.] Toward her new-born Babe, which is wont to be welcomed into the World with great Joy; but in this Siege dispatched out of it, to assuage the Rage of their Hunger. In the Hebrew, (as we take Notice in the Margin,) the Word we translate Young-ones, properly signifies the After-Birth: And so the LXX. translate it, τὸ χέριον. Which makes this Passage most plain; that their Hunger should make them so unnatural, as first to eat the After-Birth which came from them, and then the Child which was wrapped in it.

And towards her Children, which she shall bear.] The rest of their Children, whose Cries for Food they had no Way to stop, but by killing them, and making them their own Food. So it follows in the next Words.

For she shall eat them for want of all Things.] Having nothing else left to eat: For they had devoured, not only the Leather of their Girdles, and their Shoes, and that which covered their Shields, but the very stale Dung of Oxen, and such Things as the most fordid of all living Creatures would not eat. See Josephus, Lib. III. ἀλώσεως, Cap. 16. Lib. VII. Cap. 7.

Secretly.] It was not done secretly for any other Reason, but lest any Body should have a Share with them, and so make their Hunger return the sooner: And yet it was a hard Matter to conceal what they had done of this Kind; for the seditious People presently smelling there had been something boiled, got into the House, when she had eaten one Half of her Child, and found the other Half, which she had left till another Time; of which she invited them to eat.

In the Siege and Straitness.] These two Words which are used here, and Ver. 53, and 55. may both relate to the grievous Miseries they should endure, when they were besieged, (Ver. 52.) and may be translated, in the Pressure and Straits wherewith thine Enemies, &c.

Wherewith thine Enemies shall distress thee in thy Gates.] We have not such an Account of their Distress in other Cities, as we have of what they suffered in Jerusalem; where ἀπειρον πλῆθος, an innumerable Multitude perished by Famine, (as Josephus tells us, Lib. VII. ἀλώσεως, Cap. 7.) and ineffable Calamities thereupon happened: For in every House, where the least Shadow of Food appeared, a War immediately began; and the dearest Relations fell to Blows, snatching away from each other the miserable Supports of Life. Nor would they let those that were dying expire quietly, not believing what they affirmed, when they told them they had no Food in their Houses; but the Cut-Throats came and searched their very Bosoms, as they lay drawing their last Breath, whether they had not there hid some Food.

Ver. 58. If thou wilt not observe to do all the Words of this Law, which are written in this Book [Among which those Words are most remarkable, xviii. 15, 18, 19. A Prophet shall the LORD thy God raise up unto thee, like unto me, unto him shall ye hearken, &c. Whosoever will not hearken unto the Words which he shall speak in my Name, I will require it of him.]

That thou mayest fear this glorious and fearful Name, the LORD thy GOD.] That is, fear the great LORD of Heaven and Earth, and their special Benefactor, who is most glorious in himself, and to be most humbly revered by us: For the Name of God, is GOD himself; from whence it is that he is sometimes called HASHEM, the Name, Lev. xxiv. 11. This shews the Reason why Moses repeats this Name the LORD THY GOD so often as he doth in the Preface to this Book, Chap. vi, vii, viii, ix, &c. In some of which there is scarce a Verse wherein we do not meet with these Words, and it is sometimes repeated no less than three Times in one and the same Verse, xii. 18. xvi. 15. that God might be in all their Thoughts, and the Fear of him might possess their Hearts.

Ver. 59. Then the LORD.] If they still persisted in their Infidelity and Disobedience, after Jerusalem and the Temple were destroyed, and such unheard of Calamities as they had suffered during the Siege of that Place, he threatens to bring upon them more astonishing Judgments.

Will make thy Plagues wonderful, and the Plagues of thy Seed, even great Plagues, and of long Continuance.] Though their great Plagues, under Vespasian, by Famine, Sword, and Pestilence, had lessened their Numbers exceedingly, yet by the Time of Trajan and Adrian, they had, like Traitors taken for a while from the Rack, (to use Dr. Jackson's Words.) recovered Strength enough to be put to greater Torture; for then they were made a Spectacle to the World of the Divine Vengeance again, which they brought upon themselves by their Rebellion; and shewed therein their natural Strength, by their grievous lingering Pains in dying: For not only in Mesopotamia, and in Cyprus, but especially in Cyrene, and throughout all Egypt, Egypt, they broke out into such Outrages, ὡς περ ἀπὸ πνεύματος δαίμων τινος καὶ σασιώδους, as if they had been possessed with some fierce and seditious Spirit, (as Eusebius speaks, Lib. IV. Eccles. Hist. Cap. 2.) whereupon Marcus Turbo was sent against them, and setting upon them both by Sea and Land with Horse and Foot, made a vast Destruction of them. See Dion, Lib. LXVIII. and Xiphilinus, who describe their Slaughter to have been so great, that now was fulfilled (as the forenamed Dr. Jackson thinks) what Moses foretold in this Place, The LORD will make thy Plagues wonderful, great Plagues, and of long Continuance. And indeed Eusebius saith in the forenamed Place, that Turbo destroy'd many Thousands of them, πολλὰς μάχας ἐν ὀλίγῳ τε χρόνῳ, &c. in many Battles, and in no small Time; the War being protracted a great while, to compleat their Destruction. And the Application of this Prophecy to this Time may be confirmed by a strange Relation which we meet withal in their own Books: For in the Hierusalem Talmud, one of their Doctors tells us, that when Trajan came upon them with his Army, they were reading these very Words of the Law, Ver. 49. the LORD shall bring a Nation against thee from far, from the Ends of the Earth, &c. which he understanding, (having ask'd them what they were doing,) he cried out, Here is the Man, (pointing to himself) who am come five Days sooner than I intended. And immediately compassing them about with his Legions, slew them all. Then he went to their Wives, and offered them Mercy, if they would submit themselves: But they reply'd, What thou hast done to the Ground, do to the Stubble: So he dispatched them also, and shed so much Blood, that it ran into the Sea, as far as Cyprus. At this Time (so he concludes his Story) the Horn of Israel was cut off from Israel, never to be restored into its Place, till the Son of David come. This Passage I find alledged by Job. Benedictus Carpovius, out of Massek. Sanhedr. in Explication of another Matter in Schickard's Mischpat. Hammelek, Cap. 3. Theor. 10. p. 199.

And sore Sickneses, and of long Continuance.] Such as Gonorrheas, Leprosies, and burning Fevers, as the Author of the old Nitzacon, set forth by J. Wagenfeil, explains it, p. 131.

Ver. 60. Moreover, he shall bring upon thee all the Diseases of Egypt, which thou wast afraid of, and they shall cleave unto thee.] The same Diseases he foretells should infect them in, and after their Destruction by the Romans, which had done formerly under the Chaldeans, and other Oppressors, Ver. 27. What these Diseases were, Pet. Cuncæus, Lib. II. de Republ. Jud. Cap. ult. hath expressed in these Words, Vitilignes, psorasque & tetra ulcera. &c. Leprosies, Itches, Botches, and foul stinking Ulcers, the greatest Physicians have antiently ascribed to the Egyptians and Syrians, as Plagues proper to those Nations; unto which Diseases, he observes, the Jews were strangely obnoxious.

Ver. 61. Also every Sickness, and every Plague, which is not written in the Book of this Law, them will the LORD bring upon thee, until thou be destroyed.] It had been too long to have set down all the Diseases and Calamities that Mankind are subject to: But he tells them, they should not escape any one of them, though very numerous, and be afflicted with them till their Destruction was compleated. For they were of such long Continuance, as was said before, and pursued them so closely whithersoever they went, that they are no longer a Nation, but a scattered, forlorn People, abandon'd and forsaken by him that formerly protected them. Of this they themselves are so sensible, that they have confessed the Truth of this Part of the Prophecy, in these later Ages: For Solomon ben Virgæ having related, (in the fiftieth Section of his Book, called Schebet Jebuda,) how they were transported out of Palestine into Spain, and so miserably handled, that not one of a thousand remained; and then how they were destroyed in Germany and France, where, of innumerable Multitudes, (equal to the Number which came out of Egypt,) scarce five thousand survived that Calamity; and what he himself saw in Castile and Portugal, (where they suffered such Things as cannot be expressed, nor conceived, by Famine, by Depredations, by Transportations, and by being sold for Slaves, or drowned in the Sea,) he thus at last concludes his sad Story, that they who fled to avoid that dreadful Tempest in Castile, found the Truth of this Oracle, "Every Sickness and Plague which is not written in the Book of this Law, shall the LORD bring upon thee, till thou be destroyed."

Ver. 62. And ye shall be left few in Number, whereas ye were as the Stars of Heaven for Multitude.] The multitude of the Jews killed in the Wars, was equal to the Number of living Men in Israel, in the Time of King David: For Josephus saith, that in the Siege of Jerusalem there were destroyed, by Pestilence, Famine, and other Ways, eleven hundred thousand, besides above ninety thousand carried Captive. For they being come from all Countries to keep the Passover, the whole Nation, (as his Words are, Lib. VII. Ἀλώσεως Cap. 17.) were shut up here by a Fate ὡς περ εἰς ἐρείδην, as in a close Prison, or rather driven thither (as Dr. Jackson speaks) into a Slaughter-House, after they had been foiled by the Romans in the Field. And yet after this they recovered Strength, (as I observed before,) merely to be more tormented, and miserably destroyed: For in the Reign of Adrian, (who succeeded the Emperor Trajan), they shook the Roman Empire by their rebellious Com-motions, as Dion, who lived not long after, relates in his History, Lib. LXIX. which moved Adrian to exercise the greater Severity upon them in their Punishment, there being slain of them in Battles and Skirmishes five hundred and eighty thousand, besides a vast Number consumed by Famine, and Sicknesses, and Fire, during the Time of this lingering War; which Julius Severus, a famous Commander, sent for on Purpose out of Britain, designedly protracted to a great Length, not being willing to try it out in the Field in one Battle with a desperate Multitude. And now, as Moses foretold, they were left few in Number: For Dion, as if he had intended to expound these Words, saith, that Severus so beset and attacked them separately, in several Parties, that very few of them escaped; fifty of their strongest Fortresses being utterly razed, and nine hundred eighty and five of their most noble and populous Towns sack'd and consumed by Fire, with the Slaughter of the forementioned Number; insomuch, that, as his Words are, all Judea was in a Manner laid waste, and left as a Desert. This we may truly call the last Conflict of this Nation with Death and Destruction tion in their own Land ; out of which they were now almost totally expelled.

Because thou wouldest not obey the Voice of the LORD thy GOD.] Who had spoken to them by that great Prophet, his Eternal WORD, promised in the eighteenth Chapter of this Book, Ver. 15, &c. but they would not hearken to him: For which Cause he gave them up to listen unto false Christs, whom they followed to their Destruction; particularly Barchocheba, who in the Time of Adrian, took upon him the Title of their King, and set up his Throne at Bitter, in the Tribe of Benjamin, which the Jews had made their chief Seat, after the Destruction of Jerusalem; and had in it, as they pretend, four hundred Synagogues. Here the Romans made such a Slaughter of them, when they took it, that the Jews themselves cannot find Expressions tragical enough to represent it. Twice as many, they tell us, perished now, as came out of Egypt; great Rivers ran with the Blood of the Slain, which (say some of them) carried great Rocks along with it in the Stream. With these, and many other such like hyperbolic Speeches, they themselves exaggerate their Calamities, as many have observed out of Juchasin and Gittin, particularly Const. l'Empereur, in his Annotations on Jacchiades, Dan. xi. 34.

But though now they were left few in Number in Judea, yet in other Countries where they were dispersed, they multiplied again, that God's Plagues might continue to be multiplied upon them, and this Prophecy more perfectly fulfilled: For some Ages after this, (Ann. 1009.) they had so incensed Christian People against them, by bringing the Persians upon them, who destroyed the Churches dedicated to our Saviour at Jerusalem, that it was resolved by the common Consent of all Christians, that no Jew should live in their Territories, but be driven out of them throughout all the World. By which Means the greatest Part of them died of several Kinds of Death, or made away themselves, so that vix pauci residui fierent in orbe Romano, there remained but a very few of them in the Roman World. They are the Words of Glauber, who relates this, Lib. III. Cap. 7.

Ver. 63. And it shall come to pass, as the LORD rejoiced over you, to do you Good, and to multiply you; so the LORD will rejoice over you, to destroy you, and to bring you to Nought.] The State of the Jews, from the Time of Adrian, till the Expiration of the Roman Empire, cannot be gathered from the Roman Writers; but the Fathers of the Church often mention their Miseries. And so do their own Authors; particularly the Author of Schebet Jebuda, who saith, "It is not in the Power of " Man to tell all the Kingdoms and Cities where " they were scatter'd; in which they suffer'd Things
" so horrid, that it is fitter to pass them over in " Silence, than to relate them: But therein was " verified the Divine Prediction, Lev. xxvi. 38.
" Ye shall perish among the Heathen, and the Land
" of your Enemies shall eat you up." Señt. 49.
And Dr. Jackson, to explain this, hath more particularly observed, that as God raised up Cyrus in Testimony of his rejoicing to do them good, who released them from their Captivity in Babylon; so to give the World a Proof of his rejoicing to destroy them, and bring them to Nought, he advanced Philip Augustus to the Crown of France, (about Ann. 1179.) to defeat all the Hopes, which some Kindness shewn unto them, had put into their Hearts: For he spoiled their Synagogues of all their Donatives and Ornaments, confiscated all their Lands and immoveable Goods, and granted Release of all Debts due unto them from Christians. See Book I. upon the Creed, Cap. 28. Paragr. 13.

And ye shall be plucked from off the Land whither thou goest to possess it.] This was wonderfully fulfilled by Adrian; who, after a strange Desolation, before mentioned, prohibited, by a Publick Decree ratified with the Senate's Consent, any Jew to come within Sight of Judea. This he did out of a Politick Respect, lest the Sight of their Native Soil might inspire them with some fresh desperate Resolutions to endeavour their Settlement there again; but herein he was unwittingly the Angel of God, (as the same excellent Person speaks,) to keep this wicked Race out of that Paradise, the good Land, out of which he had driven them.

Ver. 64. And the LORD shall scatter thee among all People.] That was the Effect of Adrian's severe Decree, of not coming within View of their own Country, which made them disperse all the World over, where they could find any Admittance.

From the one End of the Earth, even unto the other.] Such as were carried Captive in Adrian's War, were transported by his Order into Spain, his own Native Country, which was then accounted the End of the World Westward. And many of them, it is evident by their own Books, fled to Babylon, and the Countries thereabout, which was as far as they knew Eastward. In Spain they continued many Years in great Abundance, as it were, expecting a Wind for their Passage to some Place more distant from their antient Seat. And who knows whether many of them have not, since the Discovery of America, been transported thither, as I before observed? Certain it is, that the Jews themselves are sensible this Prophecy was not fulfilled, till this their last Dispersion after the Destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans: For thus R. Isaac, who had Occasion to mention these Words, (in his Munimen Fidei, lately brought to Light by Wagenfeil, Perek. VI.) glosses upon them: In the Roman Captivity, the Jews were dispersed and dissipated through all the Regions of the East, and of the West: For every Nation of which the Roman Army consisted, when they returned to their own Countries, carried some of them along with them, into Greece, Germany, Italy, Spain, France, and all other Countries, which either Christians or Mahometans now possess.

And there thou shalt serve other Gods, which neither thou nor thy Fathers have known, even Wood and Stone.] Here that excellent Person I have so often mentioned, (Dr. Jackson), commends it to the Reader's Consideration, whether this Part of Moses's Prophecy may not be understood of the Convert Jews throughout the Pope's Dominions, who are often urged to commit Idolatry with Stocks and Stones, upon more tyrannical Terms (if they gainsay) than their Forefathers were, either by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Egyptians, Romans, or any whatsoever, that led them Captive out of their Land.

If it be said, there is a great Difference between the Heathen Idolatry, and the present Image-Worship in the Roman Church, it is granted the Idolatry is of a diverse Kind, and so it seems Moses meant meant, when he threatens the Jews, after their final Transportation into these Western Countries, should serve such Gods as their Fathers had not known: For their Forefathers, before Moses's Time and after, had known the Heathen Gods too well; but were perfect Strangers to this Image-Worship now in Use. And to strengthen this Interpretation it ought to be observed, that these Words [which neither thou nor thy Fathers have known] are omitted the thirty sixth Verse of this Chapter; where he speaks of their serving of other Gods of Wood and Stone, as he doth here. But that Part of the Prophecy belongs to what they did in the first Captivity into Babylon, as Manasseh ben Israel observes, who understands these Words to be a Prophecy of what they have suffered in this last Dispersion: For reciting these words, (Lib. III. de Termino Vitæ, Sect. 3. p. 131.) as containing the greatest Calamity that hath befallen them, he saith, This we see fulfilled, after a singular Manner, in this present Captivity; because of all those Evils wherewith the Hebrews have been afflicted in France, and England, and Spain: For they had been often pressed, either to renounce their Religion, or to be undone; and many Times chose rather to comply with the Idolatrous Worship in the Roman Church, than to be banished, and have their Goods confiscated.

Ver. 65. And among these Nations shalt thou find no Rest.] This was wonderfully fulfilled in the Ages which followed that in which Adrian lived; when they both disturbed others, and could find no Rest themselves: For in the third Century, they raised Sedition in the Reign of Severus, by whom they suffered very much about the Year 202. after our Saviour's Birth: And in the next Century we are informed by St. Chrysostom, in his second Oration against the Jews, (Tom. VI. Edit. Savil. p. 333.) "That they rebelled again in the Time of Constantine; who causing their Ears to be cropp'd off, dispersed them, καὶ τὰς ὦτας ἀπέπετα καὶ μαρτυρίας, as vile Fugitives and Vagabonds, into various Countries, where they carried this Mark of Infamy along with them, that all might be instructed to make no more such Attempts." But in the fifth Century they made new Commotions, and were driven out of Alexandria, for their seditious Practices, where they had been settled ever since the Time of Alexander the Great, and dispersed into several Countries, as Socrates observes in his Ecclesiastical History, Lib. VII. Cap. 16. And in the next Chapter relates how miserably they were deluded in Crète, by one who pretended to be Moses come down from Heaven to lead them to their own Land through the Sea; into which many threw themselves, and perished. That Expulsion out of Alexandria is mentioned by David Ganz also, one of their own Authors. In the sixth Century, as Elmacinus tells us, they again rebelled in Palestine against the Romans, who slew a great Number of them. And in the seventh, they were expelled from Antioch by Phocas, and out of Hierusalem by Heraclius, and out of Spain (Ann. 604.) by Sisebutus, or, as some call him, Sisebodus, King of the Goths; and they flying in great Numbers into France, were shortly after put to this hard Choice, either to renounce their Religion, or lose all they had; which Persecution, Dr. Jackson observes, in the Book often mentioned, (Chap. 28. Paragr. 1.) is recorded by those who wrote the Life of Dagobert, as one of the chief Memorables of his Reign. What their State was in the next three Centuries, he saith, he had observed nothing remarkable: Nor can I find any Thing notable in the eighth, but the Appearance of a false Messiah, by whom they were deluded, and brought into Trouble. As for the ninth, there were no learned Men among them in that Age, nor in the Christian World: And in the tenth they were in the same Condition; inasmuch that they were fain to make a Weaver the Head of one of their Universities.

Neither shall the Sole of thy Foot have Rest.] They being not able to obtain a long Settlement any where; but were tossed up and down, and forced from one Country to another: For so it was, that in the Beginning of the eleventh Century, about the Year of our Lord One thousand, they were so vexed throughout the most Part of Europe, that quid agerent, aut quo se verterent nesciebant, they knew not what they should do, or which Way they should turn themselves, as the forenamed Doctor observes, (Paragr. 4.) out of Papirius Massonus, who hath it out of Glauber. To which I will add this Testimony out of David Ganz, in his Book called Tzemach David, that in the latter End of this Century, (Anno 1096.) when there was a famous Expedition for the Recovery of the Holy Land, the Jews felt it a most calamitous Time, (as he speaks,) being robbed, and pillaged, and killed by the Soldiers as they went along. And indeed, so much Cruelty was exercised upon them that it moved St. Bernard's Compassion, to write to the Bishop, Clergy, and People of Spire, not to persecute them, much less kill them, or drive them out of their Country: For they are dispersed, saith he, into all Lands, that while they suffer the just Punishment of their horrid Wickedness, they may be Witnesses of our Redemption, Epist. 322. And the Author of Schebet Judah, mentioning their Banishment out of Savoy, Piedmont, Lombardy, Sicily, and other Countries, quotes these very Words of Moses, (among those Nations thou shalt find no Rest, &c.) as a Prophecy of that Exile; which was accompanied with many other Mischiefs: For as they fled to other Countries, an immense Multitude of People fell upon them, and pillaged them of all the Gold and Silver they were carrying away with them, as he relates there, Sect. 11.

And the Lord shall give thee a trembling Heart.] They being always in Dread of some new Misery, their Condition still growing more dismal in the twelfth Century: For as there is a Progress in Moses's Prophecy of the Increase of their Calamities; so it proved in the Event, that their Sufferings grew greater and greater. They themselves (in Tzemach David, and other Books) relate, that in the Year 1142. an hundred and twenty of their Congregations were utterly subverted and dispersed. And in the Year 1170. they were expelled again out of France, and spoiled of their Treasure; which was renewed in the Year 1198. How they were used here in England, our own Chronicles tell us; and the like ill Usage they met withal in Germany and Spain: So that R. Zacut complains of no less than ten grievous Persecutions in this one Age to abolish the Name of Jews out of the World. This could not but give them a very trembling Heart.

And failing of thine Eyes.] Which looked for some Relief; instead whereof they were still more hardly hardly used in the thirteenth Century, being in the Year 1253. again expelled out of France, whither they had returned; and again in 1295. when they expected some Rest, there was a fresh Expulsion, mentioned by R. Levi ben Gersom, who saith they were spoiled of all their Goods, and sent away only with their Clothes upon their Backs. Which he affirms with the more Confidence, because it was done in his Time, when, he saith, there was such a Number of them, that they exceeded those that came out of Egypt. So he writes in his Exposition of those Words, Numb. xxiii. 10. Who can count the Dust of Jacob? I will forbear to mention how they were treated here in England, (1290.) and in Germany; into which they flying out of France, were most cruelly used.

And sorrows of Mind.] Which must needs seize upon them heavily to find their Miseries so far from abating, that they still increased in the fourteenth Century: When they were banished again out of France, and spoiled of their Goods, 1306. and once more 1395. which the Jews call their fourth and last Banishment. About the same Time they were banished out of Germany, Ann. 1392. In Castile indeed, they redeemed their Lives with Money, (which they could not part withal, without much Sorrow of Mind,) but in Catalonia, Aragon, and in other parts of Spain, such a terrible Storm fell upon them, that they themselves, in Fuchasin, say, there was no less than two hundred thousand turned Christians, with heavy Hearts. It would be too tedious to mention all that they suffered in the fifteenth Century in Germany, Hungary, Polonia; and in Italy, Spain, and Portugal. I will only observe what befel them in the Country last named, in the next Century, Anno 1506. when all that is said in this Verse is fulfilled, by that dreadful Massacre which was made of them at Lisbon for three Days together; where Men were not suffered to die of their deadly Wounds, but were dragged by their mangled Limbs into the Market-Place, where the Bodies of the Living and the Slain, with others half alive, half dead, were burnt together in Heaps. The Spectacle was so horrible, that it quite astonished the rest of this wretched People; two thousand of which perished in this barbarous Manner. Parents durst not mourn for their Children, nor Children sigh for their Parents, when they saw them haled to the Place of Torment; so that their Hearts, no doubt, were ready to break with Grief and Sorrow. In short, Sic eos metus exanimaverat, ut vivi non multum a mortuorum similitudine distarent: Fear had so dispirited them, that the Living in their Aspect did not much differ from the dead; which Words of Oforius (in his fourth Book de Rebus Emanuelis) our Dr. Jackson, who relates this sad Story out of him, looks upon as a Paraphrase upon these Words of Moses, (tho' Oforius did not think of them,) I will give thee a trembling Heart, and Failing of the Eyes, and Sorrow of Mind.

There are those who, by a trembling Heart, understand the Terrors of an Evil Conscience: So D. Chytraeus, p. 131. And by Failing of the Eyes may be understood the constant Disappointment of their Hopes, wherewith they were sometimes fed by false Messiahs in several Ages; which Disappointment bred great Sorrow of Mind, when after earnest Expectation of some Good, the quite contrary came upon them.

Ver. 66. And thy Life shall hang in doubt before thee.] That is, it should be doubtful whether they should live or die the next Moment. As it manifestly happened in the forenamed Massacre, when they durst not fetch a Sigh, and yet could hardly avoid it, at the Sight of their Parents or Childrens Tortures, for fear they should suffer the same before the Breath was out of their tortured Bodies.

And thou shalt fear Day and Night, and shalt have no Assurance of Life.] So it was then: None of them knowing who would be next seized, in those three Days Butchery. And so it was in some of their Banishments, which, they were told, should be the best Remedy for the Evils impending over them, as the Author of Schebet Juda speaks, who tells us, (Sett. 23.) that the Reason which some Princes gave for their Expulsion out of their Territories, was to prevent their being torn in Pieces by the People, who were most furiously set against them.

Ver. 67. And in the Morning thou shalt say, Would God it were Even.] That they might not see those miserable Spectacles, which they hoped would end in the Night, when Men went to Rest.

And at Even thou shalt say, Would God it were Morning.] Being afraid of unseen Dangers, to which the Night might give an Opportunity; or, that they might not see their Way, when they fled by Sea and Land, from one Country to another, as they were forced to do very often: For Abarbinel, in his Commentary upon Isaiah xl. 11. reckons up four universal Banishments, out of the Countries where they lived. The first out of England; the next out of France; the third out of Asia, Germany, Tuscany, Lumbardy, and Savoy; and the last out of Spain; when he himself was one of those who were constrained to leave that Country, and knew not whither to go. He hath given us a lively Description of that Calamity, (like to which, he saith, none had ever befallen them, since they were banished their own Country,) in his Preface to his Commentary upon the Book of the Kings, which he wrote in the very next Year after their Expulsion, (1493.) and the Author of Schebet Judah hath transcribed in his own Words. "A Decree was made "and proclaimed publickly, that all the Jews "should either change their Religion, or quit the "Country in three Month's Time. Abarbinel had "then a Place in the Court, where he petition- "ed the King, and besought his Ministers and "Counsellors to revoke the Edict, and be content "with their Estates, which they offered to him; "but all in vain: For three hundred thousand, "Old and Young, Men and Women, and he "among the rest, went away on Foot upon one "Day, not knowing whither to go. Some went "into Portugal, others into Navar; where they "conflicted with many Calamities: For some be- "came a Prey, or perished by Famine and Pes- "tilence. And therefore others committed them- "selves to the Sea, hoping to find a quiet Seat in "some other Countries. But on the Sea they met "with new Disasters; for many were sold as "Slaves when they came on any Coast, many "were drowned, many burnt in the Ships which "were set on Fire: In short, all suffered the just "Punishment of God the Avenger, as he speaks; "For after all this, a Plague came and swept "away the rest of the miserable Wretches, who "were

“ were hated by all Mankind ; so that all that “ vast Number perished by one Calamity or other, “ except a very few.” He that would see more of the woful Miseries of this People, may look into Sbebet Juda, Sect. 53. where he shews what befel those who went to seek new Habitations in the Kingdom of Fels, where they lived a long Time upon Grass, and eat its very Roots, and then died, and their Bodies lay exposed, none being so charitable as to bury them.

For the Fear of thine Heart, wherewith thou shalt fear, and for the Sight of thine Eyes which thou shalt see.] The one of these seems to refer to their dreadful Apprehensions in the Night ; and the other to the lamentable Spectacles they beheld in the Day.
And the simple Meaning of the former Part of the Verse may be, that they should be weary of Life, having no Comfort either Day or Night.

Ver. 68. And the LORD shall bring thee into Egypt again.] The Hierusalem Targum translates it, the WORD of the LORD shall bring thee back again. He, that is, who conducted them out of Egypt in a Glorious Cloud, would punish them for their foul Offences against him, by bringing them again into Bondage there. This was first fulfilled after the Desolation made by Titus ; when there was, as I observed before, (Ver. 62.)
above ninety thousand carried Captive, and many of them transported into Egypt, as Josephus relates, in the Conclusion of the sixteenth Chapter of the seventh Book, concerning the War of the Jews.
And here Manasseh ben Israel hath a very pertinent Observation, that Vespasian transported them into many and various Regions ; but Egypt is only here named, the more to reproach the Jews : As if he had said, ye shall be carried into that Land as Captives, out of which ye came in a Triumphant Manner, Lib. III. de Termino Vitæ, Sect. 3. which may incline one to think, that he was of the same Mind with our Dr. Jackson, who observing how cruelly they were used here in England, and many other Countries, concludes that this Island, and every Place of Europe, wherein their Condition of Life hath been more hard and burdensome than their Forefathers was in Egypt, may be said to be that Egypt, into which God threatens here to bring them in Ships.

And, indeed, we do not read of their being carried into Egypt after Vespasian's Time ; though it is set down here as a Punishment to come upon them after a long Train of other Miseries ; and must relate to their rigorous Usage, which I have observed in many Countries, in several Ages down to these latter Times. The Hierusalem Talmud, it must be observed, mentions another bringing into Egypt, (literally understood,) in the Massekhta before named upon Ver. 59. where they say, that as God forbade them three Times to return into Egypt, (which they there set down,) so they were forced thither three Times for their Transgressions against God ; first, in the Days of Sennacherib, King of Assyria, Isa. xxxi. 1, 3. secondly, in the Time of Jobanan, the Son of Kareab, Jerem. xlii. 16. and lastly, in the Time of the Emperor Trajan : But this I look upon as a Mistake ; for Trajan rather killed all those whom he found there, than carried them thither, as I noted before.

With Ships.] Which seems to put them in Mind, how different their Condition was now become, from what it was when they came out of Egypt without any Ships ; for the Sea gave them a Passage through it, by being made dry Land.

Their being carried also thither by Ships, made their Condition the more deplorable, because there was no Means of escaping out of them, as there might have been, if they had gone by Land.

By the Way whereof I spake unto thee.] Or, to the Way, (so the Particle beth often signifies, Gen.
xi. 4. xvi. 22.) that is, to the Place, whereof I said, Ye shall see it no more again : For it seems to be a manifest Allusion to what we read in the seventeenth Chapter of this Book, Ver. 16.

And there ye shall be sold unto your Enemies for Bond-Men and Bond-Women.] Exposed to sale like Beasts in the open Market ; and that at so vile a Price, that thirty of them (as both prophane and ecclesiastical Historians relate) were sold for one small Piece of Money. Josephus giving a particular Account how the Captives were disposed of by Titus, saith, that the most goodly young Men he reserved to attend his Triumph ; of the rest, he ordered those above seventeen Years old to be sent bound into Egypt, to labour in the Works there ; many he distributed in the Provinces to perish in the Theatre by the Sword and wild Beasts : And all under seventeen Years old he commanded to be sold. But while they were making this Distribution, twelve thousand of them died of Famine ; partly by the Hatred of their Guards, who gave them no Food ; and partly by the Weakness of others, whose Stomachs could not receive it, Lib.
VII. Cap. 16. By which a Judgment may be made how little worth these vile Wretches were, as it here follows. In After-Times, I have observed in the Course of this Commentary, how they were sold for Slaves in some Places, and in all used as no better. Benjamin Tudalensis, who went a Pilgrimage to visit his Countrymen, represents their Condition as most miserable, throughout the Eastern Empire. And particularly complains of their hard Usage among the Greeks at Constantinople : Within the Walls of which City they were not suffered to live, nor to come thither, but on Occasion of Traffick and Business ; and that only by Boat, (for they had their Habitation in a kind of an Island,) not a Man being permitted on Horseback, except only one Solyman the Emperor's Physician. Whose Advancement was their sole Comfort in that miserable Servitude, under which the rest groaned, without any Difference of good or bad, (as he acknowledges,) who were daily beaten and abused in the open Streets. Thus he confesses, though his principal Design was to set forth the Power they retained in the World. Itinerarium, p. 27, 28. Edit.
L'Empereur.

And no Man shall buy you.] Though some, as I said before, were sold at a very vile Rate, next to nothing ; yet others hung upon the Sellers Hands, (as we speak,) the Market being either so overstocked with their Numbers, that none would cheapen the greatest Part of them, or they were so contemptible, that no Body would give what was asked for such useless Slaves : For as no Money could purchase their Peace and Security from Calamities, so neither could the Calamities, though continually most grievous, (they are the Words of Dr. Jackson,) redeem their Estimation in the World ; nor all the Blood of their their Slain (though their Massacres were numberless) extinguish that hateful and loathsome Conceit, which most Men had entertained of them. For in the fifteenth Century they were become so abominable, that several Doctors began to hold it unlawful for Christians to let them live among them. Particularly the Famous Thomas Terrecremata, Inquisitor-General, forbid all Men to have any Dealings with them, or to afford them Meat, or Drink, or any Thing else. Whence proceed the direful Prescriptions which we read of in that Age, whereby they were forced out of Spain, Portugal, Hungary, and divers other Countries; where they were not suffer'd to live, though with a Note and Character upon them, to distinguish them from all other Men.

I conclude my Observations on this Chapter, with the Remark which the same great Man (Dr. Jackson) makes, Cap. 22. Paragr. 6. That the extraordinary Blessings and Plagues which were to overtake this People, being here set down by Moses; although their Blessings might have been more and more admirable than the Curses that have befallen them, yet he either foreseeing, or fearing what would be, rather than hoping the best that might be, is almost four Times as long in enumerating their Plagues, as he is in their Blessings. And so have the Miseries of the latter Jews been four Times as long, as the Prosperity of their worthy Ancestors. And since our Saviour's Death, all the Plagues which were in Part fulfill'd before, have been more than seven Times multiplied upon them. For in their former Overthrows or Captivities, though they suffered the Violence of War, yet after that Storm was past, so they did but submit to their Conquerors, they lived well enough, nay, usually found more than ordinary Favour at their Hands: But since our Saviour's Death, they have through all Ages been more and more miserable; the Memory of the foregoing Plagues having been but an Invitation to the like, or worse; and their continual bad Usage prescribing the Lawfulness of their Abuse.

C H A P. XXIX.

Ver. 1. THES E are the Words of the Covenant.] The Talmudists in the Gemara of Sota, Cap. 7. Setl. 24. refer these Words to the Benedictions and Cursings mentioned in the foregoing Chapter; which plainly belong to what God delivered unto Moses in Mount Sinai at the first; which he had now repeated in this Book, with the Addition of several Blessings and Curses, to make what he said the more effectual.

Which the LORD commanded Moses to make.] That is, to renew. For which End Moses repeated the Principal Laws of God, and explained them in this Book; which is from thence called Deuteronomy: Being a Compendium of the Pentateuch, a Breviary of the Covenant, compos'd for the familiar and daily Use of the Children of Israel.

With the Children of Israel in the Land of Moab.] Where he declared to them the Law which he had formerly delivered to their Fathers, Deut. i. 5.

Beside the Covenant which he made with them in Horeb.] This doth not signify that he made a Covenant with them, different from the former made at Horeb, (Exod. xxiv.) but only now renewed the same Covenant, after they had shamefully violated it more than once. Which was the more necessary, because they were ready to enter into the Land of Canaan, and he was just upon his Departure from them into another World; and therefore did all he could, to engage them in a more firm Obedience to God. And for that End, both more fully explain'd several Laws, and added others, and at large laid before them the Happiness or the Misery that would ensue, upon their Fidelity or Falseness in this Covenant.

Ver. 2. And Moses called unto all Israel.] This seems to import a new Summons which he sent out to them, to attend him, now he was about to conclude what he had to say to them, before he left them. Which he did not, as I have often observed, (see Ver. 1.) all at once, in one continued Speech, but at several Times; and now was about to wind up all in this and in the next Chapter.

And said unto them.] He argued with them from the Knowledge and Experience which they had of the Power of God, in his wonderful Works, particularly three, which were very memorable. Those in Egypt, which he mentions here in the two next Verses; and those in the Wilderness, Ver. 5, 6. and lately in the great Victory he had given them over two potent Kings, Ver. 7, 8.

Ye have seen all that the LORD did before your Eyes in the Land of Egypt, unto Pharaoh and unto all his Servants, and unto all his Land.] Some of them had seen (when they were young,) and others had understood from them, (which is here called seeing) all the Plagues which God brought upon Pharaoh and upon his Court, and upon his whole Country. This he had often called to their Mind, in his Preface to the Repetitions of his Laws, (vi. 12. vii. 18, 19. xi. 3, 4.) and makes it a great Aggravation of their Guilt, if they should forsake him, who had done such wonderful Things for them, xiii. 5, 10. And now he concludes with the same Argument, as most powerful to move them, if they had any Sense of their Obligations to the greatest Benefactor.

Ver. 3. The greatest Temptations which thine Eyes have seen, the Signs, and those great Miracles.] Of these he had put them in Mind before. See. iv. 34. vii. 19.

Ver. 4. Yet the LORD hath not given you an Heart to perceive, and Eyes to see, and Ears to hear, unto this Day.] They had not so considered and laid to Heart God's wonderful Works, as to have a lasting Sense of them bestowed upon them by God. He gives us an understanding Heart, but we must first consider what he hath done for us, as the Apostle instructs us, 2 Tim. ii. 7. And he gives us, what we do not receive; and so in effect it is not given. Thus he saith himself, that he purged Israel, but they would not be purged, Ezek. xxiv. 13.

What the Difference is between an Heart to perceive, and Eyes to see, and Ears to hear, need not be curiously enquired. They are perhaps but three various Expressions of their gross Stupidity, or three Degrees of it, which was so great, that they had no continued Sense of the wonderful Works God hath done for them; nor did so much as regard and observe them; no, nor hearken to those who put them in mind of them; which must not be imputed to any Want of Power in these Things to move them, much less of the divine Grace to work upon their Hearts by them, but was wholly to be ascribed to their own Negligence and Perverseness; of which God here complains, and with which he severely upbraids them, that he had not given them this Grace; which is a clear Demonstration the Fault was in themselves. And therefore Maimonides rightly and judiciously explains these Words, when he saith, the Meaning is, They had not disposed themselves to receive this Grace from God.

Ver. 5. And I have led you forty Years in the Wilderness.] By a glorious Cloud, which both conducted and protected them, viii. 2. xi. 5. Concerning these forty Years, see Chap. ii. 7.

Your Clothes are not waxen old upon you, and thy Shoe is not waxen old upon thy Foot.] See viii. 4. The Jews used no Shoes in Egypt, as Bochartus probably conjectures; but being to take a long Journey, through a rough Way in the Wilderness, he commanded them to eat the Passover with Shoes on their Feet, Exod. xii. 11. And these very Shoes which they put on at that Festival, when they were ready to march, God suffered not to decay in all their Travels for forty Years following. See Hierozycon, P. I. Lib. II. Cap. 50.

Ver. 6. Ye have not eaten Bread, neither have ye drunk Wine or strong Drink.] Not commonly; though when they passed by some neighbouring Country, they might possibly sometimes purchase both Bread and Wine, or other strong Liquors: But their ordinary Food was the heavenly Manna, and their Drink was the Water that followed them out of the Rock. So that the Meaning is, they were constantly supported by a miraculous Supply from God; who took care of them, and thereby laid a greater Obligation upon them to serve him, who graciously fed them without any Labour of their own. For they neither ploughed, nor sowed, nor reaped, nor took any other Pains for this Provision; as they must have done for Bread and Wine, or other Liquors pressed out of Dates or Figs, &c.

That ye may know that I am the LORD your God.] This he did for them, that he might breed and maintain them in a Sense of his omnipotent Power, and of his all-sufficient Goodness and Faithfulness to his Promises; which he intended to demonstrate at his first giving of Manna to them, Exod. xvi. 12.

Ver. 7. And when ye came into this Place.] For they were now in a Part of the Country which they conquered, iv. 45, 46, &c.

Sibon King of Heshbon, and Og King of Bashan, came out against us to Battle, and we smote them.] Numb. xxi. 24, 34, 35. Deut. ii. 30, &c. iii. 2, 3, &c.

Ver. 8. And we took their Land from them, and gave it for an Inheritance unto the Reubenites, &c. See Numb. xxxii. 33. and Deut. iv. 12, &c.

Ver. 9. Keep therefore the Words of this Covenant, and do them.] Preserve them in Memory, so as to make good your Engagements which you passed to God in Horeb; which Moses was now about to renew, and lay a fresh Obligation on them. For most of them being a new Generation, and now going to enter upon the Possession of the Land of Promise, it was necessary to make them sensible of the Condition of their Tenure, by engaging them in a solemn Covenant to observe the Laws of God faithfully; which was but a Renewal of what was made before at Horeb.

That ye may prosper in all that you do.] See iv. 6. The Hebrew Word, which we translate prosper, the LXX. translate act prudently; for they translate it ἐν σοφίᾳ. And the Vulgar, to the same Purpose, ut intelligatis, that ye may understand to manage yourselves wisely in all your Concerns, by observing the Rules God hath given you; which was the Way to prosper.

Ver. 10. Ye stand this Day all of you before the LORD your God.] The Summons which he sent out, Ver. 2.) it seems by this, was to appear at the Tabernacle, where they now stood; and from whence he delivered these Words to them, by the Priests and Levites, xxvii. 9. 14.

Your Captains of your Tribes.] In the Hebrew, your Heads of your Tribes, who were the greatest Persons in the Nation, called sometimes Princes.

Your Elders.] These were not only the seventy Elders, mentioned Numb. xi. 16. but all the other Judges in their several Courts, who are often called by the Name of Elders in his Book, particularly xix. 12, 18. xxi. 2, 4, 6. xxv. 8.

And the Officers.] Who attended upon the Judge, to execute their Sentence. See xvi. 18.

With all the Men of Israel.] All the Men of their several Tribes.

Ver. 11. Your Little-ones, your Wives.] Who were all now present, or elsewhere represented by the Men of Israel.

And thy Stranger that is in thy Camp.] Whether Egyptians, that followed them when they came out of Egypt, Exod. xii. 38. or other People who embraced their Religion, so far, at least, to renounce all Idolatry.

From the Hewer of thy Wood, unto the Drawer of thy Water.] The meanest Servant, whom they had bought, perhaps, with their Money, either in Egypt, or since they came from thence.

Ver. 21. That thou shouldest enter into Covenant with the LORD thy God.] In the Hebrew, the Words are pass into Covenant. For so Covenants were antiently made in the Eastern Countries, by dividing the Sacrifice, and passing between the Parts of it; as appears from the Manner of God's making a Covenant with Abraham in Gen. xv. 10, 17. whence some derive the Hebrew Word Berith (which signifies a Covenant) from Bara, which signifies cutting off; because something was always sacrificed at the making Covenants, and antiently cut in Pieces. For the same Reason the Romans called a Covenant Fœdus, which they derive à feriendo, from striking, that is, killing some Beast, particularly a Swine,) which was done with many Ceremonies.

And into his Oath.] The Hebrew Word, which we translate Oath, rather imports a Curse, which was annexed to an Oath. And so the LXX. ἐν ταῖς ἀπαῖς; for they enter'd into this Covenant with such Imprecations upon themselves, as are mentioned mentioned xxvii. 15, 16, &c. wishing, perhaps, that they might be cut in Pieces, as the Sacrifice was, (between whose Parts they passed,) if they did not faithfully perform their Engagement.

Which the LORD thy GOD maketh with thee this Day.] For the Covenant was mutual, as appears by the burning Lamp, representing the divine Majesty passing through the Pieces of the Sacrifice, when GOD enter'd into a Covenant with Abraham, Gen. xv. 17.

Ver. 13. That he may establish thee to Day a People unto himself.] Confirm them in all the Privileges which they had often forfeited by breaking his Covenant; of being his peculiarly above all People, Exod. xix. 5. Deut. xix. 2.

And that he may be unto thee a GOD, as he hath said unto thee.] Bless them, and do them Good, as he had solemnly promised.

And sworn unto thy Fathers, Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.] Gen. xii. 2, 3. xvii. 7, 8. xxii. 16, 17. xxvi. 3, 4. xxviii. 13, 14.

Ver. 14. Neither with you only do I make this Covenant and this Oath.] He means those mentioned Ver. 10, 11.

Ver. 15. But with him that standeth here with us this Day, before the LORD our GOD, and also with him that is not here, &c.] I think the Particle ki, (which begins this Verse,) should not be translated but; for this is the same with what was said before, not distinct from it; and therefore should be translated thus, As with him that standeth here with us before, that is not here with us this Day, i. e. with all that were absent from the present Assembly, and with all future Posterity, who were as yet unborn. So the Hierusalem Targum understands the latter Part of this Verse, With all Generations, which shall be after us, as if they stood here with us to Day; and so Vzielides, as they call him, with all Generations to come, unto the End of the World, as if they stood here with us at this present. For perpetual Leagues as sometimes made between whole Nations; for whom some contract in the Name and Place of all the rest, and bind not only themselves, but their Successors. And thus Kings give Fiefs to their Subjects, upon Conditions which their Families are bound to perform in After-Ages, or else lose the Benefit of them.

Ver. 16. For you know how we have dwelt in the Land of Egypt.] These Words, and those that follow in this or the next Verse, come in as an Argument to move them to enter into this Covenant, and to shew them the Necessity of renewing it. For as GOD had wonderfully multiplied them in the Land of Egypt, so he delivered them from thence no less wonderfully, when they were miserably enslaved; which was such a Mercy, as ought never to be forgotten, (and therefore frequently mentioned in this Book,) and laid an Obligation upon them to be wholly devoted to him, as his redeemed People, iv. 20.

And how we came through the Nations whom we passed by.] The Edomites, Midianites, Ammonites, and Moabites, through the Skirts of whose Countries they passed, and were preserved from receiving any Hurt by them.

Ver. 17. And ye have seen their Abominations, and their Idols.] They had Opportunity in Egypt of seeing too much of their vile Idolatries. And so they had, as they passed by the Country of Moab and Midian, when some of them were seduced to the Worship of Baal-Peor; though if they had not been blinded by their Lust, they could not but have seen how contemptible an Idol that was, and have abominated it. All the Idols of the Heathen are frequently called Abominations; and in Levit. xxvi. 30. they are called, as they are here, Gillulim, which we translate in the Margin Dung-bill Gods, to express the utmost Contempt of them. And some think they are so called, not only in regard of their Matter, sed ob formam scarabæi habitantis in stercore, but for the Form of the Beetle, which lives in Dung; for so Isis, the great Goddess of the Egyptians, was represented, as Plutarch tells us, in his Book de Iside & Osiride. But whether in such ancient Times, as this of Moses, it may be justly doubted.

Wood and Stone, Silver and Gold.] Generally they were made of Wood or Stone, which sometimes were silvered or gilded over. And if any of them were made of massy Silver, or Gold, yet being lifeless Things, they were no more able to afford them any Help, than the Dung on the Earth. And it was an abominable Thing to look upon dead Matter as a God, or to think he made his Habitation there, (which was the Opinion of the better sort of Heathen,) or would be represented by them, they having no Likeness at all unto him.

Ver. 18. Lest there should be among you Man, or Woman, or Family, or Tribe.] These Words are to be connected with Ver. 15. as the principal End, why he engaged every Soul of them to renew their Covenant with GOD, that none of them might revolt from him, to serve any other GOD. And the Order wherein he places these Words shew, that Idolatry is of a very infectious Nature, spreading itself strangely, from single Men and Women unto Families, and at last into whole Tribes.

Whose Heart turneth away this Day from the LORD our GOD.] Who had a Hankering, as we now speak, after other Gods; which might afterwards break out into Idolatry.

To go and serve the Gods of these Nations.] When the Heart, i. e. The Mind, Will, and Affections are depraved, Men easily find Occasions to follow, whither they lead them. And by this it appears, that the principal Part of the Covenant was to keep them close to the Worship of one GOD, and no other; as I have often observed, vi. 4. vii. 2, 25. ix. 1, &c.

Lest there should be among you a Root that beareth Gall and Wormwood.] Many take a Root here to signify an evil Principle, which the Apostle calls an evil Heart of Unbelief, Heb. iii. 12. But the Words going before in this Verse, and those that follow in the next, plainly lead us to take it for any Person lurking secretly among them, (like a Root under Ground,) that was tainted with Idolatry, who might poison others therewith, and in Time bring forth the Fruits of their Impiety, which he calls Gall and Wormwood. Where it must be observed, that the Hebrew Word Rosch, which we translate Gall, properly signifies an Herb growing among Corn, as bitter as Gall. Which in Hosea x. 4. we translate Hemlock; and commonly in Scripture is joined with Wormwood, as it is here, Jerem. ix. 15. Lament. iii. 19. Amos vi. 12. Unto which Idolatry is compared, because it is most ungrateful and distasteful, (if I may so speak,) Speak,) unto GOD, and produces bitter Effects, that is, most grievous Punishments unto Men.

Ver. 19. And it come to pass when he.] The Man spoken of before, under the Name of a Root of Bitterness.

Hearth the Words of this Curse.] Against Idolatry, which Moses engaged every one of them to renounce, by making a solemn Covenant with GOD to worship him alone, and dreadful Imprecations upon themselves, if they did not make good this Covenant, Ver. 12, 14, 15, 16. xxvii. 15.

That he bless himself in his Heart.] Secretly fancy none of these Curses shall fall upon him, but, quite contrary, promise himself all Manner of Happiness.

Saying, I shall have Peace.] Prosper and be happy.

Though I walk in the Imagination of mine Heart.] Or, in the Stubbornness of mine Heart, as it is in the Margin, that is, resolve to worship what God I best fancy.

To add Drunkenness to Thirst.] In the Hebrew the Words are, (as the Margin of our Bibles observes,) the Drunken to the Thirsty; for both Words are Adjectives, as Grammarians speak; and supposing a Substantive to support them, many think none so proper to be understood, as the Word Earth. Which makes this a proverbial Speech, To add the wet Ground to the Dry and Thirsty, or rather, the Thirsty to the Wet. For the Particle Beth, which in the Hebrew is the Note of the Accusative Case, is put before the Word Dry or Thirsty; and therefore that's the Thing which is to be added to the Wet or Drunken; not the Drunken to the Dry. And the Sense is, Draw others into the same Wickedness; just as if a drunken Man should draw sober Persons to Play the Fool with him, and do as bad as himself; or after one Piece of Land is overflowed, the Water should be let into that which is dry, and spoil that also. For this seems to be the Meaning of the whole Verse, If a Man shall be so presumptuous, as not only to cry Peace to himself, when he runs after his own Devices, in serving other Gods, but endeavours to draw others into the same Practices.

There are a great many other Interpretations of these Words (seven or eight) given by the Hebrew Doctors, besides others in Christian Writers; which may be seen in Cocceius in his Ultima Moses, Sect. 134. But this seems to be the most easy, at which the Chaldee aims, and the LXX. if the Particle וְ be omitted, which is not in the Hebrew, or the Chaldee, nor the Vulgar Latin. And if we take the Words as we translate them, (only inverting them,) add Thirst unto Drunkenness, the Sense is as easy, viz. add more Sins to the foregoing, Isa. xxx. 1. and to be still inflamed, (as the Scripture speaks,) with Love to more Idols, after the Service of many of them; increasing their Altars, as Hosea speaks, like Heaps in the Furrows of the Field, Hos. x. 1. xii. 11.

Dr. Jackson in his first Book upon the Creed, (Chap. xxx. Paragr. 4.) thinks the Meaning is, that Posterity added to the Wickedness of their Ancestors. For they being cast out of their good Land for their Infidelity and Disobedience, their Posterity, faith he, continue Exiles and Vagabonds for their Stubbornness in like Practices; not being willing to this Day, to offer up the Sacrifice of a contrite Heart for their Disobedience past, but rather (adding Thirst to Drunkenness) bless themselves when they hear the Words of that Curse, promising Peace to themselves, though they walk on according to the Stubbornness of their Forefathers Hearts.

Ver. 20. The LORD will not spare him.] That is, not pardon, or pass by his Wickedness without Punishment.

But then the Anger of the LORD and his Jealousy shall smoke against that Man.] These Words import the highest Degree of Anger, that is, the severest Plagues, which are the Effects of the Anger of an incensed Majesty.

And all the Curses that are written in this Book.] Particularly in the foregoing Chapter.

Shall lie upon him.] Not only fall, but remain upon him, to his utter Ruin, as it follows in the next Words.

And the LORD shall blot out his Name from under Heaven.] By his Name is meant himself; so that this is a Threatening of Destruction to him and his Posterity, till there be no Memory of him left.

Ver. 21. And the LORD shall separate him unto Evil, out of all the Tribes of Israel.] Though he offended never so secretly, (for he speaks of one that blessed himself in his Heart, &c. Ver. 19.) GOD threatens to make him a publick and notorious Example of his Vengeance to all the People of Israel.

According to all the Curses of the Covenant that are written in the Book of the Law.] It was a singular Condescension in the divine Majesty to enter into Covenant with them; but it contain'd not only Blessings to the Obedient, but Curses upon the Disobedient; the latter of which were as certain as the former.

Ver. 22. So that the Generations to come of your Children, that shall rise up after you, and the Stranger that shall come from a far Land, shall say.] That which follows, Ver. 24.

When they see the Plagues of that Land.] This shews that these Threatenings are denounced not merely against a simple Idolater, but such an one as made it his Endeavour to draw others from the Worship of GOD; not being content to be drunk himself with heathenish Superstition, but zealous to intoxicate as many as he could with it, and to root true Religion out of the Nation.

And the Sicknesses which the LORD hath laid upon it.] In the Hebrew it is, The Sicknesses wherewith he hath made it sick, i. e. the heavy Punishments which he hath inflicted upon it, and thereby made it a miserable Nation.

Ver. 23. And that the whole Land is Brimstone, and Salt, and Burning.] Or, as it may be translated, Is burnt up with Brimstone and Salt. For these make Land barren and unfruitful; as Pliny particularly observes of Salt, Lib. XXX. Cap. 7. Omnis locus in quo reperitur Sal, sterilis est, nihilque gignit. All Ground in which Salt is found, is barren, and produceth nothing. See Judges ix. 45. Psal. cvii. 34. Jerem. xvii. 6. Ezek. xlvii. 11, Zephan. ii. 9.

That it is not sown, nor beareth, nor any Grass groweth therein.] That neither Nature nor Art will make it fruitful.

Like the Overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah and Zeboim.] And the Country about them, which was the most beautiful of all other in that Part of the World, (Gen. xiii. 10.) but on a sudden turned into a filthy stinking Lake, where no Creature, neither Fish nor Fowl can live.

Which the LORD overthrew in his Anger, and in his Wrath.] Being highly incensed by their Wickedness. See Gen. xviii. 20. xix. 24, 25. as he was by the Wickedness of the Jews; which was the more provoking, because they had such an Example of his Vengeance continually before their Eyes, and yet went on in their evil Ways, till they brought the like Judgment upon all Judea. This was more exactly fulfilled in the last Destruction of the Jews by the Romans, than in their first by the Babylonians: For the whole Land was laid waste, and deserted by its Inhabitants, and made a Den of Thieves; being brought to Desolation by repeated Returns of Wars; more especially in the Time of Adrian, when Julius Severus, as I observed upon the foregoing Chapter, made such a Devastation, that the whole Country was turned, in a Manner, into a Wilderness.

Ver. 24. Even all Nations shall say.] All that were near them, or came that Way from far Countries; as it goes before, Ver. 22.

Wherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this Land? Which he formerly made so populous and plenteous.

And what means the Heat of this great Anger? These exceeding dreadful Calamities, which evidently proceeded from a divine Vengeance. For the Jews fought so valiantly, and defended Jerusalem so resolutely, (as appears by Josephus;) that the Author of Seebet Juda had Reason to say, That it was not Want of Arms, the unusual Terror of new Machines, but the Anger of GOD, provoked by their Wickedness, which was the true and only Cause of their Destruction. And indeed Titus himself said as much, That GOD fought for the Romans, and drove the Jews from their Fortifications, Ἐπεὶ χεῖρας τὸ ἀνθρώπων, ἢ μηχαναί, For what could the Hands of Men or Machines have done against such strong Towers? See Chap. xxxii. Ver. 22.

Ver. 25. Then shall Men say, Because they have forsaken the Covenant of the LORD GOD of their Fathers, which he made with them, when he brought them forth out of the Land of Egypt.] This Account must be supposed to be given by the pious Jews, or by those who were made sensible, when it was too late, how steadfast GOD was in his Covenant; which contained Curses as well as Blessings, as was before observed, Ver. 21. And see vii. 9, 10. xi. 26, 27, 28.

Ver. 26. For they went and served other Gods, and worshipped them whom they knew not.] This aggravated their Sin, that they fought for Acquaintance with strange Gods, directly contrary to the Covenant of GOD, xii. 30, 31.

And whom he had not given unto them.] Or, as it is in the Margin, had not given (or divided) to them any Portion; that is, never bestowed any Benefit upon them, as the LORD their GOD had done, who brought them out of Egypt. Or more simply, (as Boetius thinks the Words will bear,) to whom no Worship belonged.

Ver. 27. And the Anger of the LORD was kindled against this Land, to bring upon it all the Curses that are written in this Book.] So Moses foretold them, vii. 4. xi. 16, 17.

Ver. 28. And the LORD rooted them out of their Land in Anger, and Wrath, and in great Indignation.] Here is one Word more to express his Displeasure against them, than was used before, when he speaks of the Destruction of Sodom, &c. Ver. 23. And they all denote the great Plagues threaten'd in Levit. xxvi. and in the foregoing Chapter of this Book.

And cast them into another Land, as it is this Day.] This may seem to relate only to their Captivity in Babylon; for after they were rooted out by the Romans, they were scattered into all Lands, xxviii. 63, 64. But considering what goes before, (Ver. 23, 24.) and that they were not quite rooted out, (many of them remaining in the Land when Nebuchadnezzar conquered them,) till the Desolation made by the Romans, I think these Words relate to them also, and another Land is only the singular Number, as is usual, for the plural. And so the Author of Seebet Juda understood it, who, quoting these Words [cast them out into another Land,] adds, which Experience now proves to be true.

Ver. 29. The secret Things belong unto the LORD our GOD; but those that are revealed belong unto us, and to our Children for ever, &c.] The Jews generally take these Words to be meant of the Punishment of secret Sins, (particularly of Idolatry, spoken of before, Ver. 19.) which belongeth unto GOD, as the Punishment of open Sins belonged unto them, in Obedience to his Law, who commanded them to put to Death him that seduced any Person to Idolatry, and to raze the City that apostatized unto it, xiii. 5, 6, &c. 12, 13, &c. And their Negligence in doing their Duty in this Particular, made Idolatry spread among them to their utter Ruin. But these Words may be understood as a farther Answer to such Enquiries, as that Ver. 24. in which, if Men persisted, and still asked, But why doth GOD thus punish his own People with such unusual Severity, when there are many idolatrous Nations, far worse than they, who continue still in their own Land, and are not thus rooted out? Moses bids them silence such Demands, and rest satisfied in this, That we cannot give an Account of such Things, as GOD hath not revealed, particularly why he punishes some People, when he spares others who are as bad; but must mind our own Duty, which he hath plainly revealed unto us, that is, (as Moses concludes this Chapter,) to do after all his Commandments which he hath given us in his Law, believing he will greatly reward the Obedient, and terribly punish, one Time or other, all those that transgress it.

There may be also a more obvious Sense of these Words, if we translate them as some great Men have done, The Secrets of the LORD our GOD are revealed to us, and to our Children. Thus Onkelos, whose Judgment is very valuable; which Grotius follows, and before him Forsterius; and Paulus Fagius represents it as a commodious Sense, and makes it the same with the Words of the Psalmist, cxlvii. 20. He hath not dealt so with any Nation, &c. For this was a peculiar Favour to the Jews, that those Things which GOD before kept secret in his own Breast, he now manifested to them; that they might know how to order their Lives so, as to please him. But this made them liable to be punished more grievously than all other People, if they did not observe his Will, which he most graciously discovered to them. And if we could give any Credit to the Jews, who say that all Words in the Bible that have extraordinary Points upon them, (of which there are but ten in the Pentateuch, and these Words lanu ule-benu, to us and our Children, are the last of them,) denote something peculiar and extraordinary. I should think that they relate to the Revelation to be made by Jesus Christ, the great Prophet promised to them, (Chap. xviii.) unto which if they did not give heed, the most dreadful Punishments would be inflicted on them; as we see they have been for many Ages, and are not yet ended.

C H A P. XXX.

Verse 1. AND it shall come to pass when all these Things are come upon thee, the Blessing and the Curse which I have set before thee.] God at the first bestowed great and singular Blessings upon them; but when they grew so insensible of his Mercy, as to violate the Covenant he had made with them, then he sent his Curses which he had threaten'd upon them: Which were compleated in their Expulsion out of the good Land, which he had given them; especially in their last Expulsion by the Romans, which was rather an Extirpation.

And thou shalt call to mind.] In the Hebrew, Bring back to thy Heart, as we observe in the Margin of 1 Kings viii. 47. where there is the very same Phrase, and there translated, shall betink thy self, that is, reflect seriously both upon the Blessings and Curses, and consequently consider the Truth of God in fulfilling both. In which Consideration; Repentance and Conversion to God begins. See Ezek. xviii. 28.

Among all the Nations whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee.] Where they could not chuse but often think of all the Blessings they had enjoyed in their own Land, and might have still enjoyed if they had not been disobedient; and all the Curses which had befallen them till they were driven from thence, and had pursued them ever since. See Levit. xxvi. 40, &c. Deut. iv. 29, 30, &c.

Ver. 2. And shall return unto the LORD thy God, and shall obey his Voice, according to all that I command thee this Day, thou and thy Children, with all thine Heart, and with all thy Soul.] Repentance was compleated by forsaking their Idols, and returning to the Worship of the LORD their God alone, and by obeying all the rest of his Commands, and teaching their Children to do the same; and all this with Sincerity of Heart. This they did, in some Measure, after they were carried captive to Babylon; since which Time we read nothing of their Idolatry. But they fell into other Sins, which stopped their Ears to that great Prophet, the Lord Christ, when he came to them; for which they are punished to this Day, and will be till they repent and obey him.

Ver. 3. Then the LORD thy GOD will turn thy Captivity.] That is, bring those that were carried Captive, back again to their own Land. Thus the Word Captivity is used, Psal. xiv. 7. Ephes. iv. 8.

And have Compassion upon thee.] These Words express the Spring of all their Happiness, viz. the divine Compassion, in pardoning their Sins, which had been very provoking.

And will return and gather thee.] This is the Effect of his Compassion in their Restitution, and Recollection, again into one Body after their Dispersion.

From all the Nations whither the LORD thy GOD hath scattered thee.] This was fulfilled in Part when they returned from Babylon; for then they who were scattered in other Countries, flocked again to them; and will be more compleatly fulfilled, when they shall believe on our blessed Saviour.

Ver. 4. And if any of thine be driven out unto the uttermost Parts of Heaven, from thence will the LORD thy GOD gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee.] Unto this Promise Nebemias plainly alludes, in his Prayer to God, to prosper his Endeavours for the Restoration of Jerusalem, Nebem. i. 8, 9. And finding the Truth of it confirmed by the King's gracious Concession to him, he went about the Work, though one, who was accounted a Prophet, (yea, several of the like Quality,) dissuaded him from the Enterprize; as likely to prove dangerous to his Person, vi. 10, 11, 12, &c. Ezra also tells us, how Cyrus made a Proclamation throughout all the kingdom, which was very large, that all the Jews might return, if they pleased, into their own Country, Ezra i. 1, 4. And see Zacharias vii. 7, 8. And though in their last Dispersion by the Romans, they be far more scattered, and into more distant Regions than they were in the Babylonian Captivity, (according to Moses's Threatening, xxviii. 64. of this Book,) yet if they did now consider the Cause of it, and lay to heart their Sin in crucifying the LORD Christ, no doubt God would have Compassion on them, and wonderfully restore them. For the Jews themselves apply this Place, (and have long done so,) to their present Condition, being of Opinion that God hath appointed a prefixed Time in his own Mind, though he hath not declared it, when he will deliver them; but if they did repent, he would shorten the Days of their Banishment, and immediately bring them to their own Land. Thus the ancient Nitzacon set forth not long ago by Wagenheil, p. 254. And R. Isaac since him, and more lately often insists upon this, in his Chissuk Emuna, published by the very same learned Person; particularly Perck. VII. where he saith, "There can be no Time prefixed for their Deliverance, because it depends upon their Repentance; whereby they may cut off the Length of this Banishment, provided they turn to God with their whole Heart, and a full Repentance." For which he alledges this Place. And he repeats it again (Perck. XXVII.) as the great Comfort they have in this long Banishment, that upon their perfect Repentance, God will be merciful to them, and overcome their Sins, and perform this Promise. Which I find still more lately mentioned in Manasseh ben Israel's Book, de Termino Vitæ, Lib. III. Sect. 3. where he saith, "Herein all the Prophets imitate Moses, being wont, after terrible Threatenings, " to

“ to conclude with some singular Consolation: Which made R. Aquiba (as the Talmudists report) fall a laughing, when all the wise Men who were with him wept and lamented, at the Sight of the Ruins of Jerusalem and the Temple. Which they wondering at, he said, After the Clouds the Sun will break out; and after the End of the Evils which Moses threatened, we may hope for good Things: For God is not more faithful in fulfilling the One, than in performing the Other.”

But, alas! in all Ages hitherto there are no Signs of Repentance, much less of a perfect one; but they have been strangely hardened in their Unbelief, and have bitterly reproached the LORD Jesus and his Religion. Abarbinel himself, though a Gentleman of a noble Family, a well-bred Person, and of an excellent Understanding, is extremely guilty of this. And since his Time Solomon Virgæ, in the Age before us, considering the astonishing Plagues that have befallen them, and that never any People, as he acknowledges, conflicted with so many Miseries and so many Ages, as they have done, enquires the Causes why the Divine Majesty should be so angry with them: He reckons Seven; among which he accounts the putting of Jesus of Nazareth to death, as one; yet not as a Crime, but that which hath enraged Christians against them. For he wickedly illustrates this by that Speech of Moses, Exod. viii. 24. which he thus translates, If we slay and sacrifice the abominable Gods of the Egyptians in their Sight, will they not stone us? Which is the highest Reproach he could vomit against our Saviour; mingled with the most stupid Folly, in giving that as a Reason of the Divine Anger, which at the most is only a Reason in their Account of Mens Indignation, Schebet Jebuda, Sect. 63.

The most cruel Usage which they have met with in all Christian Countries, might thus exasperate and imbitter their Spirits; and I cannot excuse the violent Hatred of Christians to them, and their barbarous Treatment of them though they therein fulfilled the divine Threatnings, as I have shewn upon the twenty eighth Chapter; which being ceased since the Reformation of Religion, the Jews have not been so virulent against our Blessed Saviour; and it is to be hoped will be won to the Obedience of Faith, by our Christian Usage of them; when those other Stumbling-blocks, which hinder their Conversion, are removed out of the Way.

Ver. 5. And the LORD thy GOD will bring thee into the Land which thy Fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it. Be again planted in it, as they were at their Return from the Captivity of Babylon; especially after they had laid the Foundation of the House of the LORD, he blessed them exceedingly, Haggai ii. 18, 19. Zachar. viii. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12.

And he will do thee good. The Prophet Zachary hath given a full Explication of these Words, viii. 13, 14, 15. And the Prophet Jeremy before him, xxxii. 42, 43, &c. which was fulfilled in the Building of the House of the LORD, though great Opposition was made to it; and in the compassing Jerusalem with Walls, and settling them in a State of Liberty, according to the Prophecy of Isaiah, lii. 1, 2.

And multiply thee above thy Fathers. The Hebrew Words import that he would make them greater than their Fathers. Which he did, by their vast Increase after they returned from Babylon: See Zachar. viii. 4, 5. and before him Hosea i. 10. Which is manifest from their διασπορα, i. e. spreading themselves in so many Colonies through all Asia, both the Great, and the Less; with Egypt, Greece, Italy, and Spain. See Strabo, Lib. XVI. concerning Joppa. By this Means they were very much exalted, as Zachariah prophesied, after the Captivity, xii. 6. for as they had their Liberty in their own Country, (God being a Wall of Fire to them, while Jerusalem had no Walls,) and so spread themselves, as I said, and had their Synagogues in Babylon, Arabia, Syria, and divers other Countries before mentioned; and a great many Profelytes also joined themselves to them.

Yet one cannot well think that so magnificent a Prophecy as this is, was entirely fulfilled after their Return from Babylon, when they were Tributaries to the Persians, and afterwards fell under the Power of the Grecians, under whom they suffered very much, especially in the Days of Antiochus Epiphanes; whose Death did not conclude their Troubles; as Hermannus Witsius has shewn at large, in his Decaphylon, Cap. 10. n. 9, 10, 11, 12, &c. where he endeavours to prove that there was no Moment of Time, after their Return from Babylon, wherein they could be said to be made greater than their Fathers; especially in the Days of David and Solomon. And therefore he concludes that this Promise is still to be compleatly fulfilled. And thus R. Isaac (in his Book before named, Chissuk Emuna) argues, Perek. vi. that God did not bestow Benefits upon them equal to those which their Fathers enjoyed, much less superior, while the second Temple stood; but all that Time was full of Straits and Calamities; for which he alleges the Prophecy of Daniel, ix. 25. And therefore saith, these Words of Moses can by no Means be thought to be fulfilled, when the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin returned from Babylon, and left a vast Number behind them, who would not come back with them, but stay there to this Day.

Ver. 6. And the LORD thy GOD will circumcise thine Heart. By such singular Benefits bestowed upon them, in a miraculous Manner, God designed to take away the stubborn Refractoriness of their Spirits, (called Hardness of Heart, xxix. 19.) and to cut off all their wicked Inclinations and Dispositions to Idolatry and Superstition, which had been their Ruin; which is called humbling their uncircumcised Heart, Levit. xxvi. 41. But though God circumcised them, yet their Hearts might remain uncircumcised; as appears from xxix. 3, 4. And therefore he calls upon them to circumcise their Hearts themselves, (xvi. 10.) by laying to Heart his Benefits, and following the Motions of his Grace and Holy Spirit, which thereby he put into their Hearts: And their Neglect of this, and resting merely in the Circumcision of the Flesh, was that which ruined them again.

And the Heart of thy Seed. Accordingly we find they were freed from Idolatry, after their return from Babylon; though still they continued nued in other Sins. Which brought this present Captivity (as they call it) upon them; another Banishment being necessary (saith R. Isaac, in the Book before mentioned, Perek. vii.) to purge them from their Sins, by the severe Afflictions which they now endure, and have long suffered; because their manifold Sins, as he expresses it, needs much scouring, by Contusions and Pressures. After which, he saith, they shall sin no more, but that shall be fulfilled which is written in the Law, the LORD thy GOD shall circumcise thine Heart, &c. quoting these very Words of Moses. But, alas! they are not sensible for what Sin they suffer. See p. 96, 97. of Wagenfeil's Edition.

To love the LORD thy GOD with all thine Heart, and with all thy Soul, that thou mayest live.] See vi. 5. This Prophecy, the Jews say, shall be fulfilled in the Days of the Messiah, according to what Ezekiel saith, xxxvi. 26. A new Heart will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put into you, &c. So R. Isaac, in the Place above named, and in p. 83.

Ver. 7. And the LORD thy GOD will put all these Curses upon thine Enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecute thee.] Their very Restoration created them many Enemies; whose Hatred increased with their Prosperity in their own Land, and made them, when they had Power to persecute them. Whom GOD remarkably plagued, particularly Antiochus Epiphanes, who died in miserable Torments.

Ver. 8. And thou shalt return.] This may relate as well to their Return unto their own Land, as to their Turning unto GOD: Of both which he had spoken before. And now having mentioned their Persecution, whereby many of them might be driven out of their Country, I suppose he here promises their Restoration to it again, when he had cursed their Enemies.

And obey the Voice of the LORD thy GOD, and do all his Commandments which I command thee this Day.] Continue steadfast in their Love to him, by a strict Observance of all his Commandments.

Ver. 9. And the LORD thy GOD will make thee plentiful in every Work of thine Hand, and in the Fruit of thy Body, &c.] The Effect of their constant and sincere Obedience he promises should be still greater Prosperity, in all their Undertakings, and in all their Enjoyments. See xxviii. 4, 5, &c.

For good.] To encourage them to continue faithful in the Service of GOD.

For the LORD will again rejoice over thee for good.] Delight only in blessing them; and not send any Curses upon them. See xxviii. 63. and Jerem. xxxii. 41.

As he rejoiceth over thy Fathers.] In whose Obedience he delighted, Deut. x. 15.

Ver. 10. If thou shalt hearken unto the Voice of the LORD thy GOD, to keep his Commandments, &c.] Persist in Obedience to him.

And if thou turn unto the LORD thy GOD with all thine Heart, and with all thy Soul.] With a sincere Love to all his Commands, (Ver. 2.) who had planted them assuredly in their Land, with his whole Heart, and his whole Soul, as Jeremiah speaks, xxxii. 41. But herein they were defective, after they came out of the Captivity of Babylon. For though they never returned again to Idolatry, but kept close to the Worship of GOD alone, yet they rested merely in the outward Rites of Religion, and had not an hearty Love to GOD, and to all Goodness; which made them reject the Son of GOD when he came among them, and fall under those long Calamities, which will not end, till they turn to him with all their Hearts and Souls.

Ver. 11. For this Commandment which I command thee this Day.] Of hearty Love to GOD and sincere Obedience to all his Commands, Ver. 2, 6, 8, 16.

It is not bidden from thee.] Or, it may be translated out of the Hebrew, It is not too wonderful above thee; that is, abstruse and hard to be understood, because above their Reach; but easy to be known and acquainted withal, because plainly revealed. Which is as true of the Gospel (unto which St. Paul applies these Words, Rom. x. 6, &c.) as it was of the Law of Moses: For therein our Saviour hath declared the Mind and Will of GOD to us, in such familiar Words, that the most simple People may understand their Duty.

Nor is it far off.] So that they should go to seek it, and learn it in some distant Nation. R. Isaac, in his Chisbuk Emuna, Cap. 45. had his thoughts so fixed upon what is said Ver. 4. that he fancies these Words belong to that Matter; and that Moses still speaks to them of Repentance, which is of greater Value than any other Thing, and yet most easily acquired. Which cannot but make one wonder at their Blindness; for if Repentance be so very easy, how comes it to pass that they remain impenitent for so many Ages, and thereby, as they confess, prolong their Miseries? And yet he repeats the same Words in the second Part of his Work, Perek. lxxx. where he hath the Confidence to say St. Paul misapplies this Place.

Ver. 12. It is not in Heaven that thou shouldst say, Who will go up for us to Heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?] R. Jacob Hacfaei, in his Preface to that Part of the Misna, called Seder Nesim, (as Guil. Vorstius observes upon Abarbinel, about the Articles of their Faith,) hath very fairly expounded this: Which he takes to be a proverbial Speech, to shew that there is no need of hard, or rather impossible Labour, to come at the Knowledge of GOD's Will, as there is in many Human Sciences, where the Mind of Man is tired by several Propositions and Deductions, &c. before he arrive at what he seeks; But all Things are plain and easy to be understood, and not hard to be performed. For GOD had revealed his Mind clearly by Moses from Heaven, and therefore none had need to go thither to desire GOD to acquaint them with it, which he had done of his own Accord, out of his good Will towards them. And thus Grotius observes upon Rom. x. 6. out of several Greek Authors, that they expressed Things very difficult, by going up to Heaven. Maimonides, indeed, to Jesodebatorah, Cap. 9. and Abarbinel, in Rosh Amana, Cap. 13. make these Words an Argument for the Eternity and Unchangeableness of their Law, and that there should be no new Revelation from Heaven: But there is no Colour for for this from these Words, the Particle bu being of the Feminine Gender, and therefore doth not refer to God, but to the Command before mentioned, plainly importing, that Men could not pretend Ignorance of their Duty, nor had any Reason to desire that some Body would go to Heaven again, for those Things which Moses had already brought from thence. And thus the Apostle most justly accommodates these Words to the new Revelation from Heaven by the Son of God, which was not abstruse and difficult, but as plain and perspicuous as this now made by Moses.

Ver. 13. Neither is it beyond the Sea, that thou shouldst say, who shall go over the Sea for us? &c.] ὅς δ' αὖτε πολυχρόνις ἢ καμώσας ἀποδημίας, (to use the Words of Philo, in his Book concerning Rewards and Punishments,) so as to need long and tedious Voyages, laborious and wearisome Travels, to fetch it from foreign Countries. Such as the Greek Philosophers took, who travelled into Egypt, and the Eastern Part of the World, to learn Wisdom, which God now taught his People in the Wilderness, without any Pains to attain to it.

Ver. 14. But the Word is very nigh unto thee.] Being brought to their very Doors by Moses, the Servant of God; who now delivered to them the Mind of God, as the Son of God himself did afterwards, when he came and dwelt among them.

In thy Mouth, and in thy Heart.] Made so familiar to them, that they might always have it in their common Discourse, to teach it their Children; and had now been so often repeated, that it might be well laid up in their Memory, never to be forgotten by them, vi. 6, 7, 8, 9. xi. 18, 19, 20. It was also in the Mouth of their Priests, who were to teach them Knowledge (Malachi ii. 7.) and press it upon their Hearts. Here the forenamed R. Isaac, in both the Places forenamed, observes, that Repentance depends on the Confession of the Mouth, and Grief of the Heart: But the largest Confession and the sorest Grief will not avail them, till they repent of their crucifying the Lord Jesus, and shall confess him with their Mouth, and believe in their Heart, that God hath raised him from the Dead, &c. as St. Paul speaks, Rom. x. 9, 10.

That thou mayest do it.] That they might have nothing to do but to put it in Practice; and in order thereunto continually read it, and keep it in Mind. In which the Jews were so diligent, that, as Josephus tells the Gentiles, (Lib. II. contra Appionem.) they could as easily recite all the Laws of God, as tell their Names. But here was their Error, that they were not careful to do what they knew to be the Will of God: And so, when he sent his Son among them, who plainly declared to them more fully the Meaning of their Holy Books, they could not understand and receive that which they read every Day. And indeed this is the common Error (as Dr. Jackson well observes) of all corrupt Minds, to seek that afar off, as if they were Strangers to it, which is really in their Mouth, and in their Heart, so that they would but be Doers, and not only Hearers of the Word, as St. James speaks, alluding perhaps to these Words of Moses. As St. Paul applies this whole Passage to the Gospel; which is that Word of Faith, so preached and published by the Apostles, that it may be in all our Mouths and Hearts, without going to seek for any other infallible Teacher.

Ver. 15. See I have set before thee this Day, Life and Good, Death and Evil.] Life and Good, Death and Evil, may be but two Words for the same Thing, viz. all Manner of Happiness, and all Manner of Misery; both which he had at large set before them, in the twenty eighth Chapter. Or by Life may be meant, long Life in the Land God had promised them; and Good, all the Prosperity they could wish for there: As on the other Side, Death may signify their being cut off from the Land of the Living before their Time; and Evil, all the Calamities he had threaten'd while they lived: And so the next Verse seems to interpret it. Maimonides from these Words observes, that the Wills of Men are under no Force nor Coaction, but are free Agents; and therefore have Precepts imposed upon them, with a Punishment threatened to the Disobedient, and a Reward promised to those who keep God's Commandments. Of which he treats at large in his Preface to his Commentary upon Pirke Avoth, Cap. 8.

Ver. 16. In that I command thee this Day to love the Lord thy God, to walk in his Ways, and to keep his Commandments, and his Statutes and Judgments.] This includes their entire Obedience to all God's Laws, which are comprehended under these three Names. See vi. i, v. vii. ii. x. 12, 13.

That thou mayest live and multiply, and the Lord thy God shall bless thee in the Land whither thou goest to possess it.] This is the Explication of the Life and Good which he set before them, if they observed God's Laws with sincere Affection to them, Ver. 15.

Ver. 17. But if thine Heart turn away, so that thou wilt not bear.] Want of Love to God, and of a due Esteem of his wonderful Love to them, made their Heart turn away to other Things, and not regard what he had revealed to them from Heaven.

And worship other Gods, and serve them.] This was the principal Breach of the Covenant of God.

Ver. 18. I denounce unto you this Day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your Days upon the Land whither ye go, &c.] This is the Explication of the Death and Evil he set before them, Ver. 15.

Ver. 19. I call Heaven and Earth to record this Day against you, that I have set before you Life and Death.] God, Angels, and Men, were Witnesses that he had done his Duty. See iv. 26. viii. 19. and therefore is owned by God himself to be faithful in all his House, Num. xii. 7.

Blessing and Cursing.] They are the same with Life and Death: But he uses several Words, to make them sensible that both proceeded from God; the one being the Effect of his Love and Favour, and the other of his Anger and high Displeasure.

Therefore chuse Life, that thou and thy Seed may live.] That is, chuse to be obedient, without which they could not be happy. Or he wishes them to set their Hearts on the Happiness God had promised them, that it might incline them to do as follows.

Ver. 20. That thou mayest love the LORD thy God, and obey his Voice.] Love is the noblest, and the strongest Spring of Obedience.

And that thou mayest cleave unto him.] Obedience to God is the surest Preservative from Apostasy.

For he is thy Life, and the Length of thy Days.] The Author and Giver of Life; which he preserves and prolongs unto those who are obedient.

That thou mayest dwell in the Land which the LORD swore unto thy Fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them.] Which Promise confirmed by an Oath, being faithfully fulfilled, he justly claimed their Fidelity to him upon that Account. Which is the Reason it is so often mentioned, vi. 10. viii. 1. ix. 5. x. 11. xi. 9, 21. xix. 8.

CHAP. XXXI.

Verse 1. AND Moses went, and spake these Words unto all Israel. By this it seems plain to me, that after Moses had renewed the Covenant with the People, (mentioned in the foregoing Chapter,) he dismissed them, and retired to his own Tent. But not long after gave them a new Summons, (as he had done xxix. 2.) and went again to take his Leave of them. The LXX, indeed seem to take the first Words, as if the Meaning was, that he went on with his Discourse. For thus they render them, συνέλεξε καλῶν πάντας τὰς λόγους τούτους, He finished speaking all these Words. For which I see no Warrant, nor is it likely he could speak all that here follows, at the same Time.

Ver. 2. And he said unto them, I am an hundred and twenty Years old this Day.] This shews these Words were spoken not long before his Death; which was this Year, xxxiv. 7. Manasseh ben Israel would have us from hence observe, “The singular Care God hath of those who serve him with a perfect Heart, as Moses did; the Days of whose Years, saith he, are exactly proportioned. For so these Words are expounded in Sota, Cap. I. To Day my Years are compleated, to Day I was born, and to Day I shall die: For he was born on the seventh Day of the Month Adar, and on the same Day of the same Month he died. Thus Enoch (he adds) lived just three hundred sixty five Years, which are proportioned to the Days of the Sun’s annual Course, Lib. III. de Termino Vitæ, Sect. 5. But as there is no great Weight in this Observation, if it were true, so that which he saith of Moses is evidently false: For he did not die this very Day, as appears from Ver. 14. where he saith, The Days approach that I must die. Therefore the Time was not yet come.

And I can no more go out and in.] Discharge the Office I have long sustained of your Governor and Leader, (see Numb. xxvii. 17.) not because he wanted Vigour, either of Body or Mind,

(for that is contrary to xxxiv. 7. of this Book,) but because God did not think fit to permit him to conduct them any farther; as the following Words explain it.

Also the LORD hath said unto me, thou shalt not go over this Jordan.] The Particle we translate also, often signifies for; and is so translated by us in divers Places; particularly in Isai. iii. 7. Jerem. xvii. 8. And being so taken here, the Sense of these Words is plain and easy; giving a Reason why he could no longer take the Charge of them, as he had done, because God had otherwise ordered; having told him, he should not bring them into Canaan, which they were now ready to enter.

Ver. 3. The LORD thy God, he shall go over before thee.] Conduct them by the Ark of his Presence, Josh. iii. 5, 11. and see Exod. xxiii. 23. and Deut. ix. 3.

And he shall destroy these Nations from before thee, and thou shalt possess them.] Exod. xxxiv. 11.

And Jeshua, he shall go over before thee.] As their Captain and Leader, when Moses had left them, iii. 28. Josh. ii. 2.

As the LORD hath said.] When he was appointed the Successor of Moses, Numb. xxvii. 18, 21.

Ver. 4. And the LORD shall do unto them, as he did to Sibon, and to Og, Kings of the Amorites, &c.] See Numb. xxiv. 24, 34, 35.

Ver. 5. And the LORD shall give them up before thy Face.] As he had promised before, vii. 23. where he saith, The LORD thy God shall deliver them unto thee. In the Hebrew the Words are, before thy Face. See ix. 3.

That ye may do unto them according to all the Commandments which I have commanded you.] i. e. Utterly destroy them, and their Altars, and Images, and Groves, &c. See vii. 2, 3, 5, 27. xii. 1, 2, &c.

Ver. 6. Be strong, and of a good Courage.] By Faith in God; which their Forefathers wanting, were discouraged, and durst not go up and possess the Land, when God commanded them, i. 28, 32.

Fear not, nor be afraid of them.] Be not affrighted, much less dismay’d at their Multitude, their Stature and Strength, when you go to fight with them. The second Word (afraid) only expresses an higher Degree of the same Passion of Fear; signifying, being overcome with it. For that is the Import of the Hebrew Word aratz, which originally signifies to prevail over another. This he had said to their Forefathers, i. 21, 29. and after repeated to them, iii. 2, 22. vii. 17, 18, 21.

For the LORD thy God, he it is that doth go with thee.] According to the Assurance before given them, xx. 4.

He will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.] This Promise, which here is general, in the next Verse but one, is particularly made to Jeshua; and renewed to him by God himself, after the Death of Moses, when they were about to enter into the Land of Canaan, Josh. i. 5. And it is applied by the Apostle unto all faithful Christians, to encourage their Hope of being conducted through all Difficulties and Dangers, unto their heavenly Inheritance, Heb. xiii. 5.

Ver.

Ver. 7. And Moses called unto Joshua, and said unto him, in the Sight of all Israel.] That they might have the greater Reverence to his Person and Authority, and follow his Conduct, as a Leader appointed by God.

Be strong, and of a good Courage.] He exhorts him to give a good Example to all the People; these being the same Words he had spoken to them, Ver. 6.

For thou must go with this People.] Be their Leader and Commander in Chief, by God's special Order, Numb. xxvii. 21.

Unto the Land which the LORD hath sworn unto their Fathers to give them, viii. 1. x. 13. xxx. 20.

And thou shalt cause them to inherit it.] Put them into the Possession of it, iii. 28.

Ver. 8. And the LORD, be it is that doth go before thee, and will be with thee.] Josh. i. 9.

He will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.] See Ver. 6.

Fear not, neither be dismayed.] The same which he said to the People, Ver. 6. but was most necessary to be pressed upon him, who by his undaunted Resolution, was to put Courage into them. The Word we translate dismayed, is different in the Hebrew from that (Ver. 6.) which is, be not afraid: But the LXX. and the Vulgar use the same Word to express both; which denote such a Consternation, as disables a Man to do his Duty; which is the proper Import of this Word.

Ver. 9. And Moses wrote this Law.] Some understand by this Law, only the Book of Deuteronomy; for which I can see no Reason, the Scripture calling all that is contained in the five Books of Moses by the Name of the Law. St. Paul, for Instance, in Galat. iii. 21. asks this Question, Do you not hear the Law? and then quotes what we read in Gen. xvi. 21. And so Nehemiah saith, x. 34, 35. that they brought First-Fruits unto God, as it is written in the Law, viz. Exod. xiii. 12. xxiii. 19. And Josiah put away the Workers with familiar Spirits, &c. that he might perform the Words of the Law, (2 Kings xxiii. 24.) which we find Levit. xix. 30. xx. 6, 27. And Ezekiah also, 2 Chron. xxxi. 3. appointed the daily Oblations, and those required at stated Times to be offered, as it is written in the Law of the LORD, which plainly refers to the xxviiith and xxixth of Numbers. And Joshua built an Altar on Mount Ebal, viii. 30, 31. as it is written in the Book of the Law of Moses; which we find no where but in this Book of Deuteronomy, xxvii. 4.

And delivered it unto the Priests, the Sons of Levi.] Concerning this Form of Speech, the Priests, the Sons of Levi, see xvii. 9. It is probable Moses had wrote most of these five Books some Time ago, and so the foregoing Words may be translated, Moses had wrote this Law,) but did not finish them till a little before his Death, and then delivered them to the Priests. But there is no Necessity thus to understand it, for he might have had Time enough between this and his Death, to write the whole Pentateuch; it being only said, (Ver. 14.) Thy Days approach, that thou must die; which doth not imply he was to die in a Day or two, but there might be some Weeks before his Departure.

Which bare the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD.]

It was most proper to deliver it unto them, who alone might touch the Ark, in which this Law was to be laid, Ver. 26. The Kohathites, who were mere Levites, and not Priests, did carry the Ark in their Travels through the Wilderness, after the Priests had covered it; and put in the Staves thereof, (as I have shewn, Numb. iv. 5, 6, &c.) but it is evident they served only as Ministers to the Priests, who, upon great Occasions, bare the Ark themselves. As when they passed over Jordan, (Josh. iii. 3, 6) when they compassed Jericho, (Josh. vi. 6.) and when the Temple of Solomon was dedicated, and the Ark brought into it, 1 Kings viii. 3, 4, 6. When David indeed brought the Ark to Jerusalem, it is said the Levites bare it; but at the same Time the Priests also were summoned to take care of it; which shews, the Levites bare it as their Servants, 1 Chron. xv. 2, 11, 13, 14, 15.

And unto all the Elders of Israel.] As he delivered this Book of the Law, that is, the whole Pentateuch (as Abarbinel and others of the Jews understand it) unto the Priests, commanding them to preserve it safe, near the Ark, Ver. 24. so he delivered another Copy of this Book to the Elders of every Tribe, as the Jews affirm in Debarim Rabba: Where they say, (and it is highly probable,) that Moses before his Death, wrote thirteen Copies of the Law, (with his own Hand, as they add,) and having delivered one unto the Priests, to be preserved in the holy Place, gave one to each Tribe, which he committed to the Care of the Elders of it. Thus Maimonides also, in his Preface to Jad Chazakah, as Buxtorf observes, in Histor. Arca Fœderis, Cap. 5. The Intent of which was, I suppose, that all the People of each Tribe might resort to it, (as the whole Nation were to resort to that in the Sanctuary,) if they doubted of any Thing, which might be thought to be amiss, by the Errors of Transcribers.

Ver. 10. And Moses commanded them.] Both the Priests and the Elders, to take Care of what follows:

At the End of every seventh Year, in the Solemnity of the Year of Release] Mentioned xv. 1, &c.

In the Feast of Tabernacles.] When they had gathered in all the Fruits of the Earth, and thereby had great Leisure to attend to the hearing of the Law read to them; which, when Mens Minds were also freed from Cares by the Release of their Debts, was likely to make a greater Impression upon them.

Ver. 11. When all Israel is come to appear before the LORD thy God, in the Place which he shall choose.] As they were bound to do at this Feast, and at Pentecost, and the Passover, xvi. 16.

Thou shalt read this Law before all Israel, in their Hearing.] This Order being directed, not to all Israel, but to a particular Person, plainly imports, that the supreme Governor, whosoever he was, had this Charge laid upon him, to take Care these Laws should be read at this solemn Time, that all the People might hear them; and therefore, I think, the Jews rightly say, That their Kings, when they had them, were bound not only to look after this Matter, but to read the Law themselves, to as many (that is) as could hear them, appointing the Priests and and the Levites to read it in as many other Assemblies of the People, as were necessary for the fulfilling of this Precept. In order to which, a Pulpit was set up in the Court of the Men of Israel on the very first Day of the Feast, (for they did not think fit to defer it till the last, because it is here said, when Israel is come to appear before the LORD, not when they were ready to depart, as the Jews observe,) the King going up into it, the Minister took the Book of the Law, and delivered it to the Ruler of the Synagogue, who gave it to the Sagan, (or Vicar of the High-Priest,) who delivered it to the High-Priest, and he to the King; who stood up to receive it, and then sat down to read. All this expresses the Reverence with which this holy Book was delivered; and likewise the Reverence with which they approached to the King; who, they say, began to read at this Book of Deuteronomy, (which is a Compendium of the Law,) and proceeded, before he stopp'd, to those Words, vi. 4. Hear, O Israel, &c. which having also read, he omitted the rest till he came to Chap. xi. 13. And it shall come to pass, if thou wilt hearken diligently, &c. reading on to Verse 22. And then skipp'd to xiv. 22. And thou shalt truly tithe, &c. reading on to the Section concerning the King, xviii. 14. and then the Cursings and Blessings out of the xxviii. and xxviii. Chapters, till he had ended all that Section of the Law. Thus the Mischna, in the Title Sota, Cap. 7. Sect. 8. which Wagenseil hath lately illustrated with most learned Annotations, and our Dr. Lightfoot also hath given an Account of it long ago, in his Temple-Service, Chap. 17. Sect. 1. where he saith the King might sit down if he pleased, when he read, but it was esteemed more honourable if he stood; as King Agrippa did when he performed this Office. And before he began to read, he made a Prayer to God; and all this, (he adds,) was done in the Court of the Women. Which well agrees with what is said in the next Verse, Gather the People, Men and Women, &c. But it doth not contradict what I said before, of his reading it in the Court of the Men of Israel: For if the King were of the Family of David, it was always done there; if he were not, then in the Court of the Women, as Wagenseil observes out of Maimonides.

Ver. 12. Gather the People together.] All that came to this Feast could not meet in one Place, but were divided into several Assemblies, probably in their Synagogues. For as many as the Courts of Israel would hold meeting there, it is reasonable to think that the rest assembled in some other holy Place. Such were their Synagogues, which Philo (in his Book of the Embassy to Caius) calls Places of secondary Holiness. And Maimonides discourses at large of the Holiness of Synagogues and Schools in his Book of Prayer and the Priests Blessings, Cap. 11. See upon Levit. xix. 30.

Men, Women and Children.] Though the Males only were bound to go up to the great Feasts, yet many devout Women went also voluntarily, as appears by Hannab, 1 Sam. i. 3, 4. And all the Women in Jerusalem were likewise bound to attend at these Solemnities, with the Children who were capable of Instruction. See Nebem. viii. 2, 3. To whom some Person of Authority read the Law in their Court; while the King of the House of David was reading it in the Court of the Men of Israel.

And the Stranger that is within thy Gates.] Such as were Profelytes to the Jewish Religion; not excluding those who were only Profelytes of the Gate, if they would come to their Assemblies.

That they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the LORD your God, and observe to do all the Words of this Law.] That by this Means, they might be instructed in the true Way of worshipping God, (which is here called his Fear,) and to his Worship and Service add a careful Obedience to all that he commanded in this Book, which they might read (and were bound to do so) in their own private Houses, and which they heard read every Sabbath-Day in their publick Synagogues. For which indeed there is no particular Command in the Law; but they being commanded to teach their Children every Day at Home the Things contained in the Law, and consequently to read it, (vi. 7, 8. xi. 16.) they thought it most reasonable to have it read on the Sabbath in their publick Assemblies, where some Portion of the Law was read; but now the whole Volume, as an authentick Testimony of the whole Nation, to the Truth of what is contained in these Books.

Ver. 13. That their Children which have not known any Thing.] For the early Instruction of Posterity in the sacred Authority of this Law.

May hear and learn to fear the LORD your God, as long as ye live in the Land, &c.] Be preserved in the true Religion, by so solemn an Acknowledgment made by the King himself, that God delivered all these Laws to Moses. Accordingly we find that Joshua, their supreme Governor after the Death of Moses, did read all the Words of the Law, not omitting a Word that Moses commanded, before all the Congregation, with Women, and the Little-ones, and the Strangers that were conversant among them, Josh. viii. 34, 35. But from that Time to the Reign of Jehosaphat, (2 Chron. xvii. 7, 8, &c.) which is commonly computed to be five hundred and thirty Years, we find no Mention of a publick Reading of it. Nor from that Time to the eighteenth Year of King Joiab, (2 Chron. xxxiv. 30, 31) which was the Space of two hundred eighty and two years; nor from that Time till after the Captivity of Babylon, Nebem. viii. 2, 3, &c. By which neglect they more easily fell into Idolatry, and continued in it, more or less, till that Captivity; for a Forgetfulness of the Law ensued upon this Neglect.

Ver. 14. And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thy Days approach that thou must die.] He admonishes him, that the End of his Days upon Earth was near, when he must resign up his Office into the Hands of Joshua, who had been before appointed his Successor, Numb. xxvii.

Call Joshua, and present yourselves in the Tabernacle of the Congregation, that I may give you a Charge.] This was done, I suppose, in the Face of all the People, to whom Moses had been speaking, (Ver. 1, 2.) to give Joshua the greater Authority, and to make him revered by them, when they saw he was appointed by God himself to be their Governor ; as he had been before ordained publickly by God's Order, Numb. xxvii. 18, 19, &c.

And Moses and Joshua went and presented themselves in the Tabernacle of the Congregation.] In the Court of the Sanctuary, with their Faces towards it ; for it was not lawful for any but the Priests to go into the Sanctuary itself. Some indeed have thought, that by a special Order from God, Joshua was now admitted into it: But this seems to me to be contradicted by the next Verse, which saith God appeared in a Cloud over the Door of the Tabernacle.

Ver. 15. And the LORD appeared in the Tabernacle in a Pillar of a Cloud.] This signifies that the Glory of the LORD (as other Places speak) appeared unto them, and unto the People, as it had done upon many Occasions, Exod. xxxiii. 9, 10. Numb. ix. 15. Numb. xvi. 42, 43.

And the Pillar of the Cloud stood over the Door of the Tabernacle.] Being a Symbol of the divine Presence, whose Glory appeared out of the Cloud, as it did Numb. xvi. 42. For the Cloud was always upon the Tabernacle, (Exod. xl. 35, 38. Numb. ix. 18.) but when the LORD would strike an Awe into the People, and move them to regard what he said or did, then the Cloud stood at the Door of the Tabernacle, and the Glory of the LORD came out of the most holy Place, and appeared in it.

Ver. 16. And the LORD said unto Moses.] Out of the Cloud, I suppose, as he did, Numb. xvi. 44.

Behold, thou shalt sleep with thy Fathers.] He first admonished Moses again of his Departure, in the Audience, I suppose, of Joshua, who heard all the following Admonition, to make him more carefully observe the End and Design of it.

Sleep is a common Word for Death, either of good Men or bad ; which was not used merely as a soft Expression of that, which the Heathen dreaded as the most terrible of all Things ; but to put them in mind, perhaps, that Death should not last always, but they should as certainly rise again, as they lay down (so the Word is in the Hebrew) to sleep with their Fathers.

And this People will rise.] In Rebellion.

And go a whoring.] God, who searches all Mens Hearts, discerned such bad Inclinations in this People, that he knew they would fall into Idolatry, (which is called going a whoring from him, as hath been often noted,) notwithstanding all the Means he had prescribed to prevent it. And therefore he adds one more, which was the learning them the following Song ; notwithstanding which, he foresaw, that after the Death of Joshua, and the Elders who survived him, they would forsake him, and worship other Gods. See Psal. cvi. 36, 38.

After the Gods of the Strangers of the Land.] This is an unusual Phrase, signifying no more than what he calls in other Places strange Gods. Though some think it imports peculiarly the Gods of the Canaanites, who were the former Inhabitants, but being expelled, became Strangers of the Land. And thus Onkelos seems to have understood it, who translates it, After the Idols of the People of the Land. Which was an high Aggravation of their Sin, that they should worship such Gods, as had not been able to protect their Servants.

Whither they go to be among them.] This seems to countenance the foregoing Exposition. And God charges them in future Ages with this, as a very great Guilt, that they worshipped the Gods of the Amorites, in whose Land they dwelt, Judges vi. 10.

And will forsake me.] For he look'd upon himself as forsaken, (that is, not worshiped) if they worshipped any other God with him, Exod. xx. 3.

And break my Covenant which I have made with them.] This being the principal Thing in the Covenant, (as I have often observed,) that they should worship him alone, Exod. xx. 22, 23. xxiii. 32, 33. Deut. v. 3, 4, &c. vi. 3, 4, &c.

Ver. 17. Then my Anger shall be kindled against them in that Day.] So we read it was upon their very first Apostasy to Idolatry, Judges ii. 14. and continued so in all Ages, as we read frequently in that and the following Books. See there Ver. 20. and iii. 8, &c.

And I will forsake them.] Go no longer before them against their Enemies, but deliver them up into their Hands, Ver. 8.

And will hide my Face from them.] Withdraw my Favour and Protection. So that they were devoured, as it follows, by their Enemies, and wild Beasts ; and many Evils and Troubles beset them ; or, as the Hebrew Phrase signifies, came upon them on a sudden. The Prophet Ezekiel expresses this in these Words, My Face will I turn from them, vii. 22. The Effect of which was, the divine Presence departed out of the Sanctuary, and he left it, (as he there speaks,) to be polluted and defiled by Robbers. And so it here follows.

So that they will say on that Day, Are not these Evils come upon us, because our God is not among us ? For whithersoever they went out, the Hand of the LORD was against them for Evil, as we read Judges ii. 15. which was so remarkable a Change, that it could not but at last make them reflect upon the Cause of it ; as we find it did, and moved them to cry unto the LORD for Help, iii. 9, 15. iv. 3, &c.

Ver. 18. And I will surely hide my Face from them, &c.] He repeats it again, because they were a People dull of Hearing. Or the former Words may relate to their first Captivity, and these to the last, (as they call it,) wherein they now are. For they themselves take notice that these Words have been fulfilled by the many Calamities which have befallen them, since the Destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. This appears from Schebet Jebuda, where Solomon Virga quotes this very Verse, to prove that their present Sufferings proceed not from Nature, but from an angry God, more powerful than Nature, as he speaks, Sect. 13.

Ver. 19. Now therefore write ye.] This shews these words were directed both to Moses, and to Joshua, who was to take care, after Moses's Death, to see this Command observed.

This Song for you.] Which follows in the thirty-second Chapter.

And teach it the Children of Israel.] Make them get it by heart, as we now speak.

Put it in their Mouth.] That they might sing it, and thereby preserve it in their Memory. For it hath been always thought the most profitable Way of instructing People, and communicating Things to Posterity, by putting them into Verse; and especially Children, and young People, are best taught in this Way. And the greater Moment any Thing is of, the more carefully it ought to be preserved; which Plato himself thought could be done by no better Means than this. And therefore having spoken of the Songs which he would have composed for the Use of the People, he would have it enacted, Δεν πάντα ἀνδρες ἡ γυναῖκα, &c. That all Men and Children, whether Bond or Free, Male or Female, should be bound through the whole City to sing such Songs, and never cease so to do, &c. See Eusebius, Lib. XII. Præpar. Evang. Cap. 32. And Plato himself, Lib. II. de Legibus, where he gives a great many Cautions about this Matter, and concludes that τὸ τοιοῦτον θεῶν ἢ θεῶν τιμὴς, ἀν' ἐν, p. 657. This must be the Work of a God, or some god-like Man. As if he had been acquainted with what Moses, the Man of God, or rather God himself here ordained, that every one should have this Song in their Mouths, as a Means to preserve them in the Worship of God alone. However, this justifies the admirable Discipline of the Hebrews, in those ancient Times, who were taught by such Hymns, as the wisest Men among the Heathen in future Times thought the best Way of Instruction. For which Reason, as Aristotle reports in his Problems, (See 19. Probl. 28.) People anciently sung their Laws, as the Agathyrsi (he saith) continued to do in his Days, ὡς πρὸς μὴ ἀπαραδοῖν, that they might not be forgotten. Particularly the Laws of Charondas, (as Athenæus informs us out of Hermippus,) were wont to be sung at Athens, πρὸς οἶνον, over a Glass of Wine; and were therefore written in some sort of Verse, or tunable Measure, as our incomparable Dr. Bentley hath made it probable, in his late Dissertation on the Epistles of Phalaris, p. 373. Tully also (to add no more) tells us, that Cato, in his Book de Originibus, reports, that it was the Custom among the old Romans to have the Virtues and Praises of famous Men sung to a Pipe at their Feasts; which he thinks they learnt from the ancient Pythagoreans in Italy, who were wont, carminibus præcepta quædam occultius tradere, to deliver in Verses certain Precepts, which were the greatest Secrets in their Philosophy; and composed the Minds of the Scholars to Tranquillity, by Songs and Instruments of Musick. See upon Numb. xxi. 30. concerning this Way of Instruction.

That this Song may be a Witness for me against the Children of Israel.] Testifying that they were sufficiently warned, and could not complain that they were not taught their Duty, and told their Danger; and reproving also their Ingratitude, and putting them in mind how ill they requited their God, Ver. 21.

Ver. 20. For when I have brought them unto the Land which I swear unto their Fathers, that floweth with Milk and Honey.] vi. 10, &c. xv. 8, 9.

And they shall have eaten, and filled themselves, and waxen fat.] viii. 10, 11, 12, &c. xxvii. 15.

Then they will turn unto other Gods, and serve them, &c.] Against which he had most solemnly forewarned them, in the Places before mentioned, and xi. 16. xii. 29, 30.

Ver. 21. And it shall come to pass, when many Evils and Troubles are befallen them, that this Song shall testify against them as a Witness.] That they are most justly punished for their foul Ingratitude and Unbelief, with which this Song upbraided them; having told them plainly (xxxii. 18, 19.) what would be the Effect of their forsaking him; and at the Delivery of it, God having solemnly said here, (Ver. 17.) that when they went a whoring from him, he would forsake them, and hide his Face from them.

For it shall not be forgotten out of the Mouth of their Seed.] The Calamities which fell upon them, according to what is predicted in this Song, brought it to their Remembrance when they had forgotten it, or did not regard it. For these Words do not seem to be a Precept requiring them to remember this Song, but a Prediction, foretelling that their Miseries should not suffer them quite to forget it.

For I know their Imagination, which they go about, even now before I have brought them into the Land which I swear.] He saw the secret Inclinations and Designs which were in their Hearts; and perceived that at that very present they hankered, as we speak, after Idols.

Ver. 22. Moses therefore wrote this Song the same Day.] And so did Joshua, (as he was commanded, Ver. 19) who spake the Words of this Song unto the People, as well as Moses, xxxii. 44.

And taught it the Children of Israel.] Commanded them to learn it, Ver. 19. In order to which the Jews say, every Man was bound to write for himself a Copy of it; and more than that, they make it one of the affirmative Precepts, (as Maimonides tells us,) which obliged every Israelite to write out the whole Book of the Law with his own Hand. For so they interpret those Words, Ver. 19. Write ye this Song for you, as if they were spoken to all the People, and their Meaning had been, Write ye this Law for you, wherein is this Song; for they were not to write the Law by small Parts and Sections, (as his Words are,) but all of it entirely. And if a Man's Parents had left him a Copy, yet he was bound to write one himself; or if he could not write, to procure one to be written for him by some other Person, &c. See Schickard's Mischpat Hameleck, Cap. 2. Theor. 5.

Ver. 23. And he gave Joshua the Son of Nun a Charge.] That is, the LORD, who had hitherto spoken to him by Moses, now spake to him himself, and gave him this Charge, to gain him the greater Authority. For which End he had ordered Joshua to present himself before him, together with Moses, Ver. 14.

Be strong, and of a good courage.] Which he repeats to him after the Death of Moses, Josh. i. 6, 7.

For thou shalt bring the Children of Israel into the Land which I swear unto them.] I have appointed thee to be the Captain of my People, to lead them into the Land of Canaan.

And I will be with thee.] To give him Success in all his Enterprizes. Which Words being ing spoken in the Audience of all the People, (as may be supposed from Ver. 14.) made them readily submit to the Authority of Josbua, and confide in his Conduct.

Ver. 24. And it came to pass, when Moses had made an End of writing the Words of this Law in a Book, until they were finished.] The whole Book of his Laws, which he put together before his Death; as I said on Ver. 9.

Ver. 25. That Moses commanded the Levites, &c.] The Priests, who were of the Tribe of Levi. See Ver. 9.

Ver. 26. Take this Book of the Law, and put it in the Side of the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD your GOD.] Not in the Inside of it; for he doth not say, put it into the Ark, but in the Side of the Ark, that is, on the Outside, in a little Box, as Jonathan and others expound it. For it is the very same Phrase with that, 1 Sam. vi. 8. where the Philistines are said to have put the Jewels of Gold, which they returned for a Sin-Offering, in a Coffer by the Side of the Ark; where none could put it but the High-Priest, because no Body else might go into the holy Place, where the Ark was. And therefore those Priests who received the Book of the Law from Moses, delivered it to Eleazer, to be there placed. See Buxtorf. Histor. Arcæ, Cap. 5. and Huetius, more lately, in his Demonstratio Evangelica, Propos. IV. Cap. de Can. Lib. Sacrorum, Sect. 8. Where he observes that R. Meir, in both the Talmuds, Abarbinel himself, and many others, have been of Opinion, from this very Place, that the Book of the Law was put into the Ark itself, being no less precious than the Tables of Stone which were there. But the Scripture tells us, There was nothing in the Ark, save the two Tables of Stone, 1 Kings viii. 9. 2 Chron. v. 10. and their Reason is good for nothing, the two Tables far excelling this Book, because written by the Finger of GOD; and therefore other great Doctors among the Jews rightly place it without the Ark, as the very Words of Moses import.

That it may be there for a Witness against thee.] It was deposited in that Place, as a publick Record, that if any one should falsify or deprave any Thing in the Law, (as Abarbinel interprets it,) he might be convicted out of this Book, which was sacredly preserved to be produced as a Witness against him. Or, (as the Author of Tzeror Hammor expresses it,) that if they should be so wicked, as to lose the Books of the Law, this Copy, kept under the Care of the Priests, might remain to testify what was the Will of GOD. As we see it did in the Days of Josiah, when it was casually found in the House of GOD, as they were about the Reparations of it: Though I cannot say, they found it in the Side of the Ark, but rather upon the Roof of the House, or in the Rafters; where the Priests had hid it, as some of the Jews think, when Manasseh endeavoured to destroy this authentick Copy of the Law, as he had done all other that he could find; and when they came to uncover the House, there it appeared.

Ver. 27. For I know thy Rebellion, and thy stiff Neck.] I have been sufficiently acquainted with your perverse Disposition.

Behold, while I am yet alive with you this Day, ye have been rebellious against the LORD, and how much more after my Death? For it was not likely they would have a greater Regard to Josbua, than they had to him, who had such near Familiarity with GOD, as never any Man had.

Ver. 28. Gather unto me all the Elders of your Tribes.] I suppose after Moses had spoke to the People, what GOD ordered, Ver. 1, 2, &c. (see there,) he dismissed them again, that he might write the Book of the Law, (Ver. 9.) and deliver it to the Priests, &c. and then write this Song, (which follows in the next Chapter,) Ver. 19, 22, &c. Which being done, he is ordered here to summon all the Elders of the several Tribes, (and with them all the People came, Ver. 30.) that he might deliver to them, by Word of Mouth, the Song which he had wrote.

And your Officers.] I have frequently observed that these Schoterim (which we translate Officers) were but Ministers to their Elders or Judges. See Exod. v. 14. Deut. i. 15. xvi. 18. Unto which I shall add here only the Words of Abarbinel; The Office of the Schoterim was to see that the Sentence which the Judges had given was observed, and to compel Men to it. They who would have more, may find a long Roll of Authors, who are of this Mind, both Jews and Christians, in Jo. Benedic. Carpzovius upon Schickard's Jus Regium; who hath also said a great deal to the same Purpose, Cap. 4. Theorem 14.

That I may speak these Words in their Ears.] The Song which GOD had suggested to him, and commanded him to write, Ver. 19, 22.

And call Heaven and Earth to record against them.] Call the whole World to witness how wicked they are, if they fall from GOD, after such Care to preserve them in his Obedience.

Ver. 29. For I know that after my Death, you will utterly corrupt yourselves.] Fall to the foulest Idolatry, Judges ii. 19.

And turn aside from the Way which I have commanded you.] Departing from that Way of GOD, which I have delivered to you by his Command. It was a very melancholy Thing for Moses to leave the World in this Belief, that all his Pains would be lost upon them; but he comforted himself in doing his Duty to the very last, and omitting no Means to secure them from Apostasy.

And Evil will befall you in the latter Days.] This seems to express a Foresight, that they would not immediately revolt, but after the Death of Josbua, and of the Elders who survived him, Judges ii. 7, 11, 12, &c.

Because ye will do Evil in the Sight of the LORD, to provoke him to Anger, through the Work of your Hands.] By making Images, after the Manner of other Nations, and bowing down to them, and worshipping them, Judges ii. 12, 13. iii. 7. where the Groves signify the Images in the Groves.

Ver. 30. And Moses spake.] With the Assistance of Josbua, xxxii. 44.

In the Ears of all the Congregation of Israel.] Whom the Elders and Officers (Ver. 28.) had assembled, according to their Tribes and Families;

milies; unto whom they went severally, and spake these Words in their Hearing.

The Words of this Song.] Which follows in the next Chapter, and much differs in the raised Expressions, and Loftiness of the Style, from the rest of this Book hitherto.

Until they were ended.] Omitted nothing, but compleatly delivered this Song to them; or they spake all these Words to them at the same Time, with one continued Speech. I observed before that the most ancient Way of Instruction was by poetical Compositions, which was more antient than rhetorical Discourses. And as their chief Learning did consist of Poetry, so the Excellency of their Poetry was seen in the proper and native Subject of this Faculty, that is, in Matters of sacred Use or Observation: From whence the Title of Vates descended unto secular and Profane Poets, who retained the Manner of Speech used by the former. But, as Conradus Pellicanus here truly observes, (and see my Notes on Exod. xv. 1.) the Scripture Poetry doth not consist in the Cadency and Number of Syllables, contrived to please the Ear, but in brief and weighty Sentences, simply and sincerely composed in a lively Manner, to enlighten the Understandings, move the Affections, and stick in the Memory. And the Ancients (as a great Man of our own observes) had this Advantage of later Poets, “ That the Fashion of the World, (as he speaks,) “ in their Times, was more apt to ravish their “ Thoughts with Admiration; wonderful “ Events being then more frequent, and their “ frequency not abating, but rather increasing “ their Wonderment, because their Variety was “ very great, and the Apprehension of invisible or supernatural Powers in those Events “ was usual and undoubted. So that Admiration was then enforced upon Men, and the “ Breasts of those who diligently observed those “ Events, or were any Way disposed by Nature “ to it, were inspired with lively and sublime “ Affections; apt to vent themselves in such poetical Phrase and Resemblances as we cannot “ reach, unless we raise our Invention by Imitation, and stir up Admiration by Meditation and Study. But now, our Senses being “ neither moved with such extraordinary Effects of God’s Power, nor our Minds bent “ to observe the Ways of his Wisdom, so as to “ be stricken with true Observation of them, “ we have fewer good sacred Poems, than of “ any other kind.”

Thus Dr. Jackson, Book I. on the Creed, Chap. 14. David Chytræus also hath an excellent Discourse on this Subject, to shew that the ancient Poetry among the Heathen, contained the Doctrine of God, and of celestial Things; all the Offices and Rewards of Virtue, with the Punishment of Vice; the History of their Kings, and the noble Acts of famous Men, Tome I. of his Works, p. 154, &c. where he confirms this out of the Verses of Orpheus, who lived (as he computes) about an hundred and fifty Years before David; and those of Pindar, Simonides, and the rest, who lived in the Time of the War with Xerxes. But Moses led the Way to them all; whose Mind was raised to that Sublimity of Thoughts and Speech, which we find in his Songs, by Admiration of those strange Events which he saw, Exod. xv. Numb. xxi. and here in the next Chapter, wherein he was followed by Deborah, Barak, and Hannah, &c. in After-times, Judges v. 1 Sam. ii.

CHAP. XXXII.

Verse 1. GIVE Ear, O ye Heavens, and I will speak; and bear, O Earth, the Words of my Mouth.] He calls Angels and Men to bear witness (xxx. 19.) that the Israelites had been admonished of their Duty, and warned of their Danger; and this, not by Words of his own Invention, but which were put into his Mouth by the Spirit of God. Or (after an elegant Form of Speech,) he calls upon all insensible Creatures every where to listen to him, that he might awaken the Israelites out of their Stupidity, or upbraid them as a People that had Ears to hear, and would not hear him. And, as some of themselves have observed, he may be thought to intimate hereby, that if they would not hearken and keep his Precepts, the Heavens were forbidden to give them Rain, and the Earth to bring forth Fruit. The Gloss also of the Hierusalem Targum is not amiss, that Moses being shortly to die, calls the Heavens and the Earth, which endure through all Ages, to be Witnesses against them when he was gone. But the following Observation is too curious; That Isaiah when he prophesied, i. e. being far remote from the Heavens, and near to the Earth, calls upon the Heavens to bear, and the Earth to give Ear, or attend: Whereas Moses, quite contrary, approaching now very near to the Heavens, calls upon them to attend or give Ear, and being in Spirit remote from the Earth, bids it bear.

Ver. 2. My Doctrine shall drop as the Rain, my Speech shall distill as the Dew.] Or, Let my Doctrine drop, &c. For this seems to be a Prayer, that his Words which were sent from Heaven to them, might sink into their Hearts, and soften them, as the Drops of Rain and the Dew do the Earth, and produce such Fruits of Obedience as might make them happy.

As the small Rain upon the tender Herb, and as the Showers upon the Grass.] The aforesaid Targum thus paraphrases this whole Verse; Let the Doctrine of my Law be as sweet upon the Children of Israel as the Rain; and the Word of my Mouth be received by them, as the delectable Dew: Let it be as gentle Showers refreshing the Grass, and as the Drops of the latter Rain, descending and watering the Blades of Corn in the Month of March.

Ver. 3. Because I will publish the Name of the LORD.] For my Song shall be concerning the LORD of Heaven and Earth, whose glorious Perfections I will proclaim; which make him the sole Object of our Worship.

Ascribe ye Greatness unto our God.] Acknowledge therefore the infinite Power of our God; and his sovereign Dominion over all; and give Honour and Service to none besides him.

These

These three first Verses seem to be the Preface to the Song; and now follows the Song itself; which Josephus calls Πόσιν ἐξάμειρον, a Poem in Hexameter Verse, Lib. IV. Antiq. Cap. 8.

Ver. 4. He is the Rock.] Always endures, and never changes; so that in him we may find at all Times a sure Refuge.

His Work is perfect.] Whatsoever he undertakes, he perfects and compleats it.

For all his Ways are Judgments.] He doth nothing without the greatest Reason, and according to the Rules of the exactest Justice.

A God of Truth.] Who is faithful to his Promises.

And without Iniquity.] And never deceives or wrongs any Man.

Just and right is he.] Nor will he punish any Man without a Cause, or more than he deserves.

Maimonides takes the first Words of this Verse, He is the Rock, to signify the first Principle, and the efficient Cause of all Things without himself. For so the Word Rock is used, when God bids the Children of Israel Look to the Rock out of which they were hewn, Isa. li. 1. that is, to Abraham their Father, from whom they were descended. And so he thinks it signifies, Ver. 18. of this Chapter, Of the Rock that begat thee, thou art unmindful, i. e. of God, the Author of their Being. And again, Ver. 30. their Rock (i. e. the LORD) sold them. See More Nevochim, P. I. Cap. 16. And then by the next Words, His Way is perfect, he thinks is meant, That as he is the Creator of all Things, so there is no Defect or Superfluity in his Works. For he takes these Words to be the same with those, Gen. i. 31. God saw every Thing that he had made, and behold it was very good. See there, P. II. Cap. 28. and P. III. Cap. 25. And as his Works of Creation are most perfect, so are his Works of Providence; for he governs the World with the greatest Judgment and Justice. So he seems to understand the next Words, (P. III. Cap. 17.) all his Ways are Judgment. We are ignorant of the Methods and Reasons of his Judgments, yet no Injustice or Iniquity is to be ascribed to him. But all the Evil and all the Good that befalls any Man; or the whole Church, proceeds from the just and equal Judgment of God. And more largely, Cap. 49. "Our narrow Minds cannot apprehend either the Perfection of his Works, or the Equity of his Judgments; for we apprehend his admirable Works only by Parts, whether we look upon the Bodies of Animals, or the celestial Spheres: And in like manner we apprehend but a little of his Judgments; for that of which we are ignorant in both, is far more than that which we know of either." I conclude this with the Words of the Author of Sepher Cosri, (Part III. Sect. 11.) "He that believes this, that all God's Works are perfect, and his Ways Judgment, will always lead a sweet and pleasant Life; all Afflictions will be made light to him, nay, he will rejoice that his Iniquities are hereby alleviated, and that he shall one Day be rewarded for his Patience; which he teaches Men by his Example, and thereby justifies the Judgments of God." With respect to which, I suppose, the Jews now begin the Prayer which they make at the Burial of their Dead, with this Verse of Moses's Song. Which Prayer they call Tzidduck badin, i. e. just Judgment, as Leo Modena observes, in his History of the present Jews, Part V. Chap. 8.

Ver. 5. They have corrupted themselves, &c.] I know not how to justify this Translation, nor that in the Margin, [He hath corrupted himself.] Maimonides translates them better; making these Words a Question, and the next Words an Answer to them, in this Manner: Did he (i. e. God, the Rock before spoken of) do him any Hurt? For the Hebrew Word Scecheth, with Lamed after it, signifies to hurt or destroy, Numb. xxxii. 15. 1 Sam. xxiii. 10. (as Job. Cocceius observes, in his Ultima Moses, Sect. 701.) And so the Meaning is, Is God to blame for the Evils that befall him? i. e. Israel. Unto which the Answer follows in the next Words, which we thus translate:

Their Spot is not the Spot of his Children.] In the Hebrew, the first Word of this Sentence is lo, i. e. not, or no. Which the Accent Tipcha (as they call it) under it, shews it not to be joined with the Words that follow [banau Mummam,] but taken by itself, being a Denial of the foregoing Question. And these Words are thus to be translated, No, his Children are their Blot, i. e. all the Evil that befalls them, is the Fruit of their Children's Wickedness. And so these Words are in Effect the same with those of Solomon, Prov. xix. The Foolishness of Man perverteth his Way, and his Heart freeth against the LORD: He complains of God, when the Fault is in himself. See More Nevochim, P. III. Cap. 12.

Onkelos translates it thus: They corrupted to themselves, not to him, Children that served Idols, i. e. as Paulus Fagius observes, They hurt themselves, not God, when leaving him the true God, they turned to Idols; for the Word corrupt is commonly used in Scripture, where it speaks of the Sin of Idolatry. The Hierusalem Paraphrast aims at the same Sense.

They are a perverse and crooked Generation.] The whole Body of them are untoward and untractable, walking contrary to God in all their Ways; for there being a Gemination (as they speak) of a Syllable in the latter of these Words, [Pethalbol], it increases the Sense, and makes it the same with the superlative Degree among us, importing the highest Obliquity imaginable. And these Words were never more exactly fulfilled, than in the Days of our blessed Saviour, who calls them a wicked and adulterous, a faithless and perverse Generation, Matt. xvi. 4. xvii. 17. And in the Days of the Apostles, who call them ἄνομος, an absurd kind of People, 2 Thess. iii. 3. Who pleased not God, and were contrary to all Men, 1 Thess. ii. 15.

Ver. 6. Do ye thus requite the LORD, O foolish People and unwise?] He upbraids them with their senseless Folly, and foul Ingratitude; which in the following Words he demonstrates, by representing the Obligations he had laid upon them.

Is not he thy Father ?] Having adopted them in a peculiar Manner to be his Children, above all other People.

Who hath taught thee ?] When he rescued them from the Slavery of Egypt.

Hath not he made thee ?] Advanced them (for so the Word Afa is translated, 1 Sam. xii. 6.) to be a great and mighty People. See Psal. c. 3.

And established thee ?] By settling them in excellent Order, under the Government of most wise and righteous Laws. See the fourth Chapter of this Book, Ver. 7, 8.

Ver. 7. Remember the Days of Old.] Look back as far as you are able.

Consider the Years of many Generations.] Consult the most ancient Records ; which would inform them how God chose their Father Abraham long ago, and promised to bless his Posterity, as he did Isaac and Jacob in a most eminent Manner ; and sent Joseph by a wonderful Providence into Egypt to preserve them from starving, &c.

Ask thy Father, and he will shew thee ; thy Elders, and they will tell thee.] All this is to express the same Thing, that they should advise with those that knew more than themselves ; and particularly with old Men, (as the Word may be understood which we translate Elders,) who, by the Benefit of their great Age, had heard and seen more than others, and could tell them how God had dealt with them, ever since he brought them by a wonderful Power out of the Land of Egypt.

Ver. 8. When the most High divided to the Nations their Inheritance.] He directs them still to look farther back, and they would find, that long before Abraham's Time God had them in his Thoughts, even when he divided the Earth among the Sons of Noah and their Posterity after the Flood, Gen. x. 5, 25, 32.

When he separated the Sons of Adam.] Or, the Sons of Men ; who were one People, till he scattered them into several Parts of the Earth, and separated them into diverse Nations, by confounding their Language, Gen. xi. 8, 9.

He set the Bounds of the People, according to the Number of the Children of Israel.] He had then the Children of Israel in his Mind, before they were a Nation ; and made such a Distribution to other People, (particularly to the seven Nations of Canaan,) within such Bounds and Limits, as that there might be sufficient Room for so numerous a People as the Israelites, when they came to take Possession of that Country.

How the Seventy came to translate these Words thus, He appointed the Bounds of the Nations according to the Number of the Angels, it is hard to say. Bochartus hath made the best Conjecture about it, (which was hinted by de Muis before him,) Lib. I. Phaleg. Cap. 15. that they had a bad Copy before them, which left out the three first Letters of Israel ; and so they read Baneel, the Children of God, meaning the Israelites. Instead of which some Transcribers put the Angels of God, because they are sometimes called his Sons. Which led the antient Greek Fathers, who followed this Translation, into great Difficulties : And it grew a common Opinion, that every Nation was under the Government of an Angel ; which seems to be the Meaning also of the Son of Sirach, Ecclef. xvii. 17. And many others fancying that God divided the Nations according to the Number of the Children of Israel, when they came into Egypt, which was just seventy, they thence gather there were just so many distinct Nations, and so many several Languages ; which is a Conceit of some of the Jews, as Mr. Selden observes, Lib. II. de Synedr. Cap. 9. But Bochart, in the Place above-named, hath given the plain and simple Meaning of this Place, in these Words ; God so distributed the Earth among the several People that were therein, that he reserved, or in his Counsel designed, such a Part of the Earth for the Israelites, who were then unborn, as he knew would afford a commodious Habitation to a most numerous Nation.

Ver. 9. For the Lord's Portion is his People.] And not satisfied with this Kindness, he chose them alone out of all other Nations, to be under his special Care, and to enjoy singular Privileges, which none other had ; and therefore they are called his peculiar Treasure, Exod. xix. 5. This Origen maintains to be true, against all the Cavils of Celsus, Lib. V. p. 250. Edit. Cantabr. where he shews how beneficial their Laws were ; and that they were taught so early to know God, to believe the Immortality of the Soul, and Rewards and Punishments in the Life to come, as demonstrated they were distinguished from all other People whatsoever. See p. 260.

Jacob is the Lot of his Inheritance.] This is the same Thing repeated in other Words ; alluding to the Manner of measuring and dividing Lands by Cords, as the Word in the Hebrew is, which we translate Lot. See Psal. xvi. 6. and Chap. iv. of this Book, Ver. 20.

Ver. 10. He found him in a desert Land.] There he first took the Israelites to be his peculiar People ; for so the Word we translate found frequently signifies. As in Psal. cxvi. 3. The Pains of Hell gat hold upon me ; where in the Hebrew the Words are found me. And in the New Testament, Rom. iv. 1. What shall we say then, that Abraham our Father hath found ? that is, attained.

In the waste-howling Wilderness.] Desolate and void of all Sustainance ; where nothing was to be heard but the Howlings and Yellings of wild Beasts, Deut. viii. 15.

He led him about.] Conducted the Israelites from Place to Place, Numb. xxxiii. 1, 2, &c.

He instructed him.] Gave them his Laws, Exod. xx. 1, 2, &c. xxxiv. 1, 10, &c.

He kept them as the Apple of his Eye.] Protected and defended them from all Dangers with extraordinary Care ; for there is nothing of which we are more tender than the Sight of our Eyes ; which God hath guarded by several Coats and Humours, and Eye-Lids fenced with Hairs, to preserve it from Hurt. Unto which R. Levi ben Gerson thinks these Words allude.

Ver. 11. As an Eagle stirreth up her Nest, &c.] Eagles are observed to have a most tender Affection to their Young-ones ; who are here meant by her Nest, as Bochartus observes, (it

(it being a common Figure used by other Authors, to put continens pro contento,) whom she provokes to fly, (which is meant by stirring up her Nest,) by fluttering over them with her Wings stretched out. Upon which she takes them while they are so weak and feeble that they fail in their Attempt to fly, and supporteth them till they recover Strength to commit themselves unto the Air. See Hieroicoicon. P. II. L. II. Cap. 3. and J. G. Vossius de Orig. & Progr. Idolol. Lib. III. Cap. 77. Where he observes that this Kindness to her Young-ones is chiefly found in the black Eagle; though something of it be seen in others: Which may be the Reason they lay but a few Eggs, because they are not able to educate many Young-ones with such tender Care.

Ver. 12. So the LORD alone did lead him.] Numb. xiv. 14. This is an exact Resemblance of GOD's tender Care of his People Israel. Whom he solicited, by Moses and Aaron, to aspire after their Liberty, when they were oppressed in Egypt; just as an Eagle excites her Young-ones, when they lie drowsy in the Filth of their Nest, to fly away. And as the Eagle flutters over them, with her Wings spread abroad, so God by his Spirit moved the Israelites to be obedient to their Deliverers out of Egypt. For Moses uses the very same Word, when he speaks of the Spirit of God moving upon the Waters, Gen. i. 2. And as the Eagle carries her fainting Young-ones on her Wings, so God supported them when they were weary, and upheld them in dangerous Ways. Inasmuch, that he is said to carry them in his Arms, as a Father doth his Child, Deut. i. 31. Hosea i. 1. 3. See Bochartus in the Place above-named, Cap. 4.

And there was no strange God with him.] To help or assist him: But by his Almighty Power alone they were protected and preserved. Which made their Sin the more heinous, in sacrificing to other Gods, (Ver. 17.) as if they had been their Benefactors.

Ver. 13. He made him ride on the high Places of the Earth.] Brought the Israelites in a triumphant Manner to possess a noble Country, full of lofty and very fruitful Mountains, which were in Canaan, where they lived deliciously. So to ride signifies, as Bochartus thinks, laute & opipare vivere. Which he justifies by that Place in Hosea, x. 11. I will make Ephraim to ride; Judah shall plow, and Jacob shall break his Clods; That is, saith he, the People of Israel lived in Pleasure, when Judah lived laboriously, P. I. Hierozoic. Lib. II. Cap. 41. But to ride, signifies also, to subdue and conquer; which may be the Meaning here, Psal. xlv. 4. lxvi. 12. and to have Dominion and Rule, as Maimonides interprets it, in his More Nevochim, P. I. Cap. 70. In which Sense it is said of God himself, in the next Chapter of his Book, He rideth upon the Heavens, for thy Help, Ver. 26. And he rideth upon Araboith the highest Heavens, Psal. lxxviii. 4.

That he might eat the Increase of the Field.] Abundance of Corn and Fruit.

And he made him to suck Honey out of the Rock.] Wild Honey; which was esteemed an excellent Food in that Country, and was sometimes found upon the Ground, sometimes in the hollow Part of Trees, and sometimes in the Clefts of Rocks, as Bochartus observes out of good Authors. Hieroicoicon, P. II. L. IV. Cap. 15. This Rock-Honey seems to be spoken of as the best of this Kind, being joined with the finest Wheat, Psal. lxxxii. ult.

And Oil out of the flinty Rock.] No Part of this Country being barren, but affording something or other for their Sustenance; though some say that the Olive-Tree thrives best in Rocky Places. Columella himself observes, that it doth not delight either in low Places, or in high, but magis modicos clivos amat, but rather loves the Sides of moderately rising Hills, Lib. VI. Cap. 6. And D. Chytraeus notes, that as the most generous Wine is produced upon the Rhine, below Mentz, out of the hardest Flints; sic oleæ locis petrosis sterilibus non infeliciter proveniunt; so Olive-Trees grow prosperously in stoney and barren Places, Tom. I. p. 173.

Ver. 14. Butter of Kine.] The Use of Butter was very ancient among the Hebrews, though lately known to the Greeks, (as I observed upon Gen. xviii. 8.) and it was accounted an excellent Food.

And Milk of Sheep.] Which the Scripture often mentions, Isa. vii. 21, 22. 1 Corinth. ix. 1. 7. And under the Word Tzon, as hath been often observed, Goats also are comprehended, whose Milk likewise is mentioned, Prov. xxvii. 27. Aristotle mentions both, and so doth Columella, and a great many others, in Bochart's Hierozoicon, P. I. Lib. II. Cap. 45. Where he proves that they made Butter of these Milks, as well as of Cows.

With the Fat of Lambs.] Well fed. For Carim properly signifies Pasture Sheep, as the same Bochart there observes, Cap. 43.

And Rams of the Breed of Basban.] A Country famous for excellent Pasture; being ἐὺβοῦν, &c. as St. Cyril calls it. See Numb. xxxii. 1. 4.

And Goats.] Of the Breed of that Country.

With the Fat of Kidneys of Wheat.] The Hebrews call the best of every Kind of Thing, by the Name of the Fat. And the Kidneys of Wheat, signifies large and plump Corn, affording great Plenty of Flower. Cajetan thinks it signifies Wheat as big as a Kidney; or rather, having that Shape, as our Kidney Beans have.

And thou shalt drink the pure Blood of the Grapes.] Most generous red Wine; very clear and bright. So Achil. Tacius, Lib. II. calls Wine αἷμα βοτάνων.

Maimonides, in his More Nevochim, P. II. Cap. 47. takes all the Expressions in this Verse to be metaphorical, signifying (as Onkelos allegorizes them) the Possession of all their Enemies Cities and Goods, after they had poured out their Blood like Water on the Ground.

Ver. 15. Jeshurun waxed fat.] Grew Rich, saith Onkelos and the Hierusalem Targum.

And kicked.] Against him who fed him so plentifully and deliciously. It seems to be a Metaphor taken from Oxen, who being stirred up with a Goad to labour, lift up their Heels and kick against him who pricks them forward.

ward. So did the Israelites when they were urged and pressed to their Duty by the Prophets; not only despised, but evil-entreated them.

Why Israel is called Jeshurun, is not easy to resolve. Jo. Cocceius (in his Ultima Moſis, ſect. 973.) derives it from Shur, which ſignifies to ſee, behold, or deſcry. From whence in the Future Tenſe, and the Plural Number, comes Jeshuru, which, by the Addition of Nun paragogicum, as they ſpeak, makes Jeshurun, that is, The People who had the Viſion of God. I know nothing more ſimple, nor more probable than this; which highly aggravated their Sin, who having God ſo nigh unto them, (iv. 7.) and their Elders having had a Sight of him, (Exod. xxiv. 10.) were ſo ungrateful, as to rebel againſt him, and worſhip other Gods. Some refer this Kicking, to their Revolt from the Houſe of David; when Jeroboam, to preſerve his new Kingdom, ſet up the Golden Calves, to prevent the Return of the People to their old Maſter, by going up to Jeruſalem to worſhip.

Thou art waxen fat, thou art grown thick, thou art covered with Fatneſs.] This Variety of Expreſſions is uſed to ſignify how exceeding bountifully God had provided for them; and withal, how very wanton and insolent they were grown, as Cattle fed in a fat Paſture are wont to be. The Words with Fatneſs (after covered) are not in the Hebrew, but are well ſupplied out of other Places, particularly, Pſal. xvii. 10.

Then he forſook God.] The Hieruſalem Targum here hath it, they forſook the Word of God.

Which made him.] Advanced them from a Deſert where he found them, (Ver. 6. 10.) into a very rich and plentiful Country. This was the lamentable Effect of their Plethora, or Fulneſs; unto which we are all too prone, as an excellent Perſon of our own hath long ago obſerved. “Even ſuch as ſeem moſt upright, faith he, when they wax fat, ſpurn with the Heel, and caſt away the Memory of their Miſery, and of God’s former Mercy, behind their Backs. And what was the Reaſon that the Israelites waxed thus full and fat? Only becauſe they did not uſe that Exerciſe which God had appointed to keep them under, and preſerve their Hearts from being lifted up, Deut. viii. 11, &c. Take heed to thy ſelf, leſt, when thou haſt eaten, and filled thy ſelf, &c. then thy Heart be lifted up, and thou forget the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, &c. The daily and lively Representation, or Recognition of their Condition there, ſhould have been as uſual to them as their Meat and Drink, yea, as it were, their Thankſgiving before and after Meats, as our Dr. Jackſon ſpeaks, Book 11. “on the Creed, Chap. 34.” And Maimonides himſelf, mentioning thoſe very Words, Leſt when thou haſt eaten, and filled thy ſelf, &c. very well obſerves, that to prevent Pride and Apoſtaſy, which grow out of great Plenty, God commanded them to offer their Firſt-fruits before him every Year, with a Solemn Confession, how poor they were in the Beginning, and then raiſed by God to be a mighty People, Deut. xxvi. 5, 6, &c. For which End the Paſſover was inſtituted, That they might remember the Day when they came forth out of Egypt all the Days of their Life, Deut. xvi. 3. See More Novechim, P. II. Cap. 39.

And lightly eſteemed the Rock of their Salvation.] As there was a Progreſs in their insolent Forgetfulneſs of God, expreſſed in three Phraſes, which may ſignify three Degrees of their Stupidity, (waxen fat, grown thick, and covered with Fatneſs), ſo ſome obſerve as many Degrees of their Rebellion: Firſt, They kicked againſt God, i. e. threw off the Yoke of his Laws, and reſuſed to obſerve them: Secondly, They forſook God, and fell into Idolatry: And, Laſtly, They lightly eſteemed the Rock of their Salvation. Where the Hebrew Word Nibbel ſignifies more than a light Eſteem; for, if it come from Nebelab, a dead Carcaſe, (as ſome think it doth,) it denotes the greateſt Abhorrence, nothing being ſo much abominated among the Jews as a dead Carcaſe, the touching of which was the higheſt Pollution. And thus J. Cocceius and Campeg. Vitringa underſtand it; who obſerve that this was never ſo fulfilled as in their Behaviour towards our LORD Chriſt, who was indeed the Rock of their Salvation, and ſo vilely uſed by them, as if he had been the moſt loathſome Man upon Earth. So Vitringa expounds theſe Words (in his Obſerv. Sacr. Lib. II. Cap. 9. p. 173.) inſtar flagitii tractavit rupem ſalutis ſuæ. For this is a Word uſed by God himſelf, when he would expreſs his utter Detestation of Nineveh, and his dealing with her according to her abominable Wickedneſs, Nabum iii. 6. I will caſt abominable Filth upon thee, and make thee vile, &c. and when he ſpeaks of the Diſgrace he would put upon his own Temple, Jerem. xiv. 21. The LXX. indeed ſimply expound the Word ἀπέστη, he departed; but the laſt Words they expound ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ σωτῆρος αὐτοῦ, from God his Saviour, as Onkelos alſo, his moſt mighty Redeemer. Which in the moſt eminent Senſe, is the LORD Jeſus; for none brought ſuch Salvation to them, and wrought ſuch a Redemption for them, as he did; who is the Stone which God laid in Sion, &c. Iſai. xxviii. 16. But inſtead of flying to him, as Men in Danger do to a Rock, or ſtrong Fortreſs, they not only rejected him, but abuſed and put the higheſt Indignities upon him.

Ver. 16. They provoked him to Jealouſy.] Made him extreemly angry with them. For ſo Jealouſy is deſcribed as the Rage of a Man, Prov. vi. 34.

With ſtrange Gods.] Whom they fell in Love withal, and worſhipped. This was the Ground of his Jealouſy, their Falſeneſs to God, who had eſpouſed them to himſelf. And the Hebrew Word zar (ſtrange) we ſometimes tranſlate another, Job xix. 27. So that a ſtrange God, and another God, are the very ſame, Pſal. lxxxi. 9. Exod. xx. 3. Therefore God ſaith he will not give his Glory to another, Iſa. xlii. 8. and that their Sorrow ſhall be multiplied that haſten after another God, Pſal. xvi. 4.

With

With Abominations provoked they him to Anger.] I take this to be a Repetition of the same Thing, their Idols being called Abominations, because God exceedingly hates them, vii. 25. 1 Kings xi. 5. Though R. Solomon and Abarbanel, by Abominations, here understand those filthy Mixtures forbidden in Levit. xviii. with Witchcrafts, and such like Wickedness. And Abarbanel refers the first Part of this Verse to the Times under the first Temple, when they worshipped the Sun, Moon, and Stars; and the latter Part of it to the Times under the second Temple, when, though they were free from Idolatry, they were corrupted with other abominable Filthiness.

Ver. 17. They sacrificed to Devils, and not to God.] The Hebrew Word Schedim, which we translate Devils, imports as much as Destroyers, (as the Devil is called, in the Book of Revelation, ix. 11.) evil Spirits delighting in Mischief, and leading those that worship them into Perdition. Though some think they are called Schedim ironically, by way of Scorn, the true God being Schaddai, the Omnipotent, and All-sufficient; and these called, by way of Mockery, counterfeit Gods, who had no Power to help their Worshippers, nor were sufficient to preserve themselves. Either of these Accounts of the Word are better than that of Mánasseh ben Israél, who derives it from שדה a Field, because they frequent desert Places. But then they should have been called Sedim, not Schedim, as he must needs know, who was a great Master in the Hebrew Learning. The LXX. call them here δαίμονια, and so doth the Apostle, 1 Cor. x. 19. because the Dæmons led Men into the Impiety of worshipping other Gods, either themselves, or other Beings, which they persuaded simple People had some Divinity in them; and that not only the Stars, but even Beasts here upon the Earth, nay, Onions and Garlick, which they did not take to be Gods, but Things, by which, as intermediate Causes, their Gods were pleased or offended with them, and therefore worshipped them.

To Gods whom they knew not.] Or, as the Words may be translated, Gods that knew not them, that is, had never bestowed any Benefits upon them: For, as it follows, they were new Gods, never before heard of by their Ancestors.

New Gods, that newly came up.] Such as Jeroboam's Calves, invented out of his own Brain; and the Gods of other Nations, Moloch and Baal, which were new to the Israelites, and had not been known among them: For the Dæmon Gods were of no great Antiquity: Bel, or Baal, (as he is called in the Chaldee Dialect, (the first King of Babel after Nimrod, being the first that ever was deified, (as Mr. Mede observes,) or reputed a God after his Death; whence all other Dæmons were called Baalim, as all the Roman Emperors were called Cæsars, from the first Emperor of that Name. See p. 776. Besides which the Heathens had another higher sort of Dæmons, which had never been linked to a mortal Body, viz. those we call Angels, who the Israelites were taught to be but Ministers unto their God, and therefore not to be worshipped.

Whom your Fathers feared not.] That is, did not worship. This was a great Aggravation of their Guilt, that when they would have other Objects of Worship, they did not return unto those whom their Ancestors had revered, (the Teraphim, for Instance, which were the Gods of Laban and Rachel) for whose Worship they might have pretended Tradition; but chose Gods whom their Forefathers were not acquainted withal; which was a Token of a strange Proneness to Idolatry. And Maimonides, mentioning this Verse, observes that they worshipped not only Things that had a Being, but meer Imaginations: For which he quotes these Words of the Book Sipbri: It was not enough that they worshipped the Sun, Moon, and Stars, and celestial Signs, but they worshipped their Shadow. More Nevochim. P. III. Chap. XLVI.

Ver. 18. Of the Rock that begat thee.] God the Author of thy Being, See Ver. 4.

Thou art unmindful.] Being wholly intent to Idols, which they themselves had made.

And hast forgotten God, that formed thee.] Into a Kingdom of Priests, making them his peculiar People, Exod. xix. 5, 6.

Ver. 19. And when the LORD saw it, he abhorred them.] Cast them off as they had done him.

Because of the Provoking of his Sons and of his Daughters.] For so they were, till they corrupted themselves, and thereby highly incensed him against them: For nothing can be so provoking as the Rebellion of Children against a most indulgent Parent. Maimonides translates it, By reason of his Anger against his Sons and his Daughters. P. I. More Nevochim, Chap. 36. Where he observes, we never find the Word Caas (which is here used, signifying Indignation) in Scripture applied to God, but only when it speaks of Idolatry.

Ver. 20. And he said.] Resolved.

I will hide my Face from them.] See xxxi. 17, 18.

I will see what their End shall be.] Not cease my Judgments till I have brought the forest Calamities upon them, and made an End of them, that is, of their Polity and Government.

For they are a very forward Generation.] Incurably wicked.

Children in whom there is no Faith.] Who had broken their Covenant with him (xxxi. 16.) so often, that they were not to be trusted, when they made Profession of Repentance. The Book of Judges, and, indeed, their whole History, testifies to the Truth of this.

Ver. 21. They have moved me to Jealousy.] See Ver. 16.

With that which is not God.] By worshipping God's Creatures, or the Works of their own Hands.

They have provoked me to Anger with their Vanities.] The same Thing, in other Words; all the Gods of the Nations, whom the Israelites imitated, being mere Vanities, (or Things of naught, as the Hierusalem Targum hath it,) as hath been often observed.

And I will move them to Jealousy.] He threatens tents to be even with them, and serve them in their kind.

With those that are not a People.] Who either were not a Nation in being, at this Time; or so obscure, base, and ignoble, that they were not worthy the Name of a Nation. The Jews interpret it of the Chaldeans; whom God raised up on a sudden, when no Body would believe it, (Habak. i. 5, 6, &c.) to be a terrible Scourge to them. See Isa. xxiii. 13.

And I will provoke them to Anger with a foolish Nation.] The Jews thought all Nations so, except themselves. And in one Sense all the Gentiles were really so: For nothing was more foolish than to worship Creatures meaner than themselves, Jer. x. 8.

The Apostle applies this unto the bestowing the Blessing of the Messiah, whom the Jews refused, upon the Gentile World, (Rom. x. 19.) which strangely enraged the Jews; as we see, when our Saviour first mentioned it, Matth. xxi. 43, 44, &c. and when St. Paul did but speak of going to preach unto them, Acts xxii. 21, 22. And see 1 Thes. ii. 15, 16. And through all Ages since it hath made them gnash their Teeth, to see so many Nations subject unto our Saviour, and honour him as God, whom they rejected as the vilest of Men.

Ver. 22. For a Fire is kindled in mine Anger.] Great and fore Calamities are compared to Fire in Scripture, (Ezek. xxx. 8.) which God here threatens to send upon them, as the woful Effects of his heavy Displeasure.

And shall burn unto the lowest Hell.] Never cease till they have destroyed them. For Hell and Destruction seem to be the same, Prov. xv. 11. And therefore the lowest Hell signifies the Depth of Misery.

And shall consume the Earth, with her Increase.] Make an utter Defolation in the Country, Isa. i. 7.

And set on Fire the Foundations of the Mountains.] Subvert the strongest Fortresses, which were accounted impregnable. Such as Jerusalem, (which Rasi thinks is here meant,) in whose last Destruction this was perfectly fulfilled, as it was in Part at the first, 2 Kings xxv. 9. For Titus himself, as Josephus relates, (Lib. VII. de Bello Judæico, Cap. 43.) observing the vast Height of the Walls, the Bigness of every Stone, the exact Order wherein they were laid and compacted, &c. cried out, God was with us in this War, he drove the Jews from these Munitions; ἐπεὶ χάρις τε τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ἢ μηχαναί, τὴν πρὸς τέρας τὴν πύργους δύναμιν; for what could Mens Hands or Machines do against such Towers? Which calls to Mind, what is related, not only by S. Chrysostom, Sozomen, Sozocrates, but by Ammianus Marcellinus himself, an heathen Historian, (Lib. XXIII. beginning) how that when Julian the Apostate ordered the Temple of Jerusalem to be rebuilt, terrible Globes of Fire burst out, propefundamenta, from the very Foundations, which overturned all, burnt the Workmen, and made the Place so inaccessible, that they desisted from the Attempt. The Certainty of this hath extorted the same Confession from the Jews themselves, (David Ganz, in his Tzemach David, and R. Gedaliah, in Schal. Hakkabala,) though they pretend the Building went on, and was finished, but after many Years overthrown by an Earthquake.

Ver. 23. I will heap Mischiefs upon them.] Which shall miserably oppress and crush them.

And spend all my Arrows upon them.] His Judgments and Plagues are oft compared to Arrows shot at them, (Psal. vii. 12, 13. xxxviii. 2. xci. 5. And he speaks in the Language of an Archer, who shoots till he hath emptied his Quiver, and hath not one Arrow left.

Ver. 24. They shall be burnt with Hunger.] This Verse and the next explains what he means by Arrows, which are here enumerated. And first he threatens a Famine, with which he saith they should be burnt; either because these Judgments are compared to Fire, Ver. 22. or because extrem Hunger parches the inward Parts, and makes the Village as black as a Coal, as Jeremiah speaks Lament. iv. 8.

And devoured with burning Heat.] With Fevers and Calentures, as they are called in hot Countries.

And with bitter Destruction.] With the Pestilence; which he calls bitter, because it was incurable.

And I will send the Teeth of wild Beasts upon thee.] This was another of the fore Judgments which God threaten'd to their Disobedience. See Levit. xxvi. 22. Upon which Maimonides observed, that Magicians were wont to promise them, by their Arts, to free their Cities, Fields, and Plantations from Lions and Serpents, and such like hurtful Creatures; unto whose Power God delivered them, because they forsook him, and followed Idolaters and Magicians, More Nevoch. P. III. Cap. 37.

With the Poison of Serpents of the Dust.] Whose Bitings were deadly. And they were exposed to them, as well as to wild Beasts, when they were forced to fly into the Wildernesses, and hide themselves in Dens and Caves; where some of them could not avoid being devoured by wild Beasts, and bitten by Serpents, which lay lurking in those Holes. So Cocceius, in his Ultima Mosis, Sect. 1271. Where he notes also, that this was fulfilled in Part when they were thrown by the Romans to wild Beasts in the Theatres, as Josephus relates, Lib. VI. de Bello Judaico, Cap. 16. 20.

Ver. 25. The Sword without, and Terror within shall destroy.] They could no where be safe; for in the Field the Sword of their Enemies cut them off; and at Home, they did not think themselves secure in their closest Chamber, but died with Fear, or made away themselves, lest they should fall into the Hands of those that fought to destroy them. See Lament. i. 20. Or perhaps by the Terror within, may be meant Famine and Pestilence, Ezek. vii. 15.

Both the young Man and the Virgin, the Suckling, with the Man of grey Hairs.] He threatens to deliver them into such merciless Hands, as would spare none, nor make any Difference of Sex or of Age. This Huetius refers to the last Destruction of Jerusalem, in his Demonstr. Evang. Propos. IX. Cap. 173. And Abarbinel also confesses it was then fulfilled.

Ver. 26. I said.] i. e. Resolved.

I would

I would scatter them into Corners, I would make the Remembrance of them to cease from among Men.] Utterly destroy them, so that not one of them should be found; and if any remained, they should skulk, and not dare to appear among Men.

Ver. 27. Were it not that I feared the Wrath of the Enemy.] He that is Omnipotent is not capable of fearing any Thing: But he speaks in our Language, and gives this Reason why he did not make them cease to be a Nation, because he would not have their Enemies insult, and grow outrageous in their insolent Language, even against himself. Of which we find an Instance, Isa. xxxvii. 28, 29.

Lest their Adversaries should behave themselves strangely.] Ascribe all this to their false Gods, (as Cocceius understands it,) which are called strange Gods, Ver. 16.

And lest they should say our Hand is high.] Imagine their own Power and Valour had destroyed the Jews; as both the Assyrians and Chaldeans boasted, Isa. x. 7, 8, &c. Habak. i. 15, 16.

And the LORD hath not done all this.] And attribute nothing to the most High, in all the Business. Certain it is, the Wickedness of the Jews was so exceeding great, that their final Extirpation had been accomplished many Generations before it came to pass, had the LORD been only just, and respected nothing but their Deserts, whom he very often preserved when they might have been justly destroyed, for such Reasons as he himself here gives; That his Glory might not be impeached among the Nations, but they might see by the strange Deliverances and Restorations of the Jews, that their God was a God of Gods, most worthy to be honoured by all the World, as he himself speaks below, Ver. 36. So Dr. Jackson well observes, B. I. on the Creed, Chap. 22. Sect. 4.

The marginal Translation of this last Clause, is also agreeable to the Hebrew, Our high Hand, and not the LORD, hath done all this. To prevent which wrong Construction of God's Judgments upon them, he took such a Time for the Execution of them, (as Conradus Pellicanus well observes) when the World began to be better instructed by the Coming of Christ. So that Titus himself said, as I noted before, that it was God, and not the Hands of the Romans, that destroyed them. See xxix. 24. and this Chapter, Ver. 22.

Ver. 28. For they are a Nation void of Counsel.] The Hebrew word abad (which is commonly translated perish, and here we translate void) signifies, in the Ethiopick Language, is Foolish or Mad, as Job Ludolphus observes in his excellent History of that Country. Which makes it probable, this was the antient Sense of the Word among the Hebrews, and gives the best Account of this Place, which may be thus translated, They are a Nation foolish in their Counsel. Whose Counsels led them to such Courses as utterly undid them; and when they seemed most wise, they madly ruined themselves. And thus those Words of Jeremiah may be best translated, The Heart of the King is foolish, iv. 9.

Neither is there any Understanding in them.] They did not understand what was good for themselves; but imprudently chose that which did them Mischief. Some refer this to the Enemies of the Jews, before spoken of: But that seems not so agreeable to what follows, which relates to the same Persons, and most likely expresses God's Compassion towards the senseless Jews. Huetius applies this to their stupid Blindness at their last Destruction; which they were so far from preventing, that they drew it upon themselves, as Josephus shews. See xxviii. 28, 29.

Ver. 29. O that they were wise.] So as seriously to consider God's dealing with them exactly, according to what he foretold them.

That they understood this, &c.] Or, as it may be translated, Then would they understand this, they would consider their latter End. They would soon perceive the Hand of God in all that is befallen them; and that if they do not change their Course, they will, in the Conclusion, be utterly undone.

Ver. 30. How should One chase a Thousand, and Two put Ten thousand to flight?] Whence should such an amazing Change proceed? that the Israelites, who formerly with an Handful of Men put vast Armies to flight, (Levit. xxvi. 8.) should now, though never so numerous, be beaten by one or two of their Enemies, fleeing when none pursues them? Levit. xxvi. 17, 36, 37. Deut. xxviii. 25.

Except their Rock had sold them.] A little Consideration was sufficient to make them understand, that this had been impossible, if they had not forsaken their God; who thereupon delivered them up to the Will of their Enemies. For by their Rock is meant God; and his selling them, is his quitting his Interest in them, and giving them up to be Slaves to those that hated them.

And the LORD had shut them up.] So that they could not escape the Hands of their Enemies.

Ver. 31. For their Rock is not as our Rock.] None of the Gods of the Heathen (whom he calls their Rock, because they relied on them for Safety) have such Power, as he that gave us our Being. So Maimonides interprets the Word Tzur, the Spring and Fountain of all Things.

Our Enemies themselves being Judges.] Who were often forced to acknowledge his over-ruling Power and Providence, controlling all their Designs. As the Egyptians confessed, Exod. xiv. 2, 5. and Balaam, Numb. xxiii. 19, 22. and the Philistines, 1 Sam. iv. 7, 8. and the King of Babylon, Dan. iii. 29.

Ver. 32. For their Vine is the Vine of Sodom, and of the Fields of Gomorrah.] I suppose he speaks here of the Israelites (giving an Account why their Enemies so shamefully chased them, Ver. 30.) who are compared to a Vine, which God brought out of Egypt, and planted in Canaan, Psal. lxxx. 8. And the Prophet afterwards calls them, the Plant of his Pleasure, Isa. v. 7. Which was an antient Resemblance, as appears by this Place; where he represents them as such a degenerate People, that they were as bad (nay, worse, as the marginal Translation is) as the Sodomites, or the People of Gomorrab: And therefore deserved (Ver. 26.) to be utterly destroyed, as they were. See Iſa. i. 10. Jer. ii. 21.

Their Grapes are Grapes of Gall, their Clusters are bitter.] These Words represent their Actions (called Fruit in Scripture) to be so wicked, that they were not to be endured. And so Joſephus deſcribes them before their laſt Deſtruction, Lib. VI. de Bello Judaico, Cap. ult. where he ſaith, if the Romans had delayed to fall upon ſuch a wicked People, he thinks either the Earth would have opened its Mouth, and ſwallowed them up, or a Flood drowned their City, or Thunder and Lightning from Heaven deſtroyed it, as it did Sodom. Παλὸν γὰρ τῶν ταῦτα παθόντων ἦν ἑστὶ γενεὰν ἀθεωτέραν, For they were a more Atheiſtical Generation, than they who ſuffered ſuch Things. And again, Lib. VII. Cap. 30. he ſaith, That the Time when they were deſtroyed was ſo fruitful in all Manner of Wickedneſs among the Jews, ὥς μηδὲν κακίας ἔργον ἀπεργάζαν καὶ ἀλαλιπνῆν, That there was no one Work of Wickedneſs, that was not committed; nor can one imagine any Thing ſo bad, that they did not do; endeavouring publickly, as well as privately, to excel one another both in Impiety towards God, and Injuſtice to their Neighbour.

Ver. 33. Their Wine is the Poiſon of Dragons.] This ſtill represents their Fruit, that is, their Works, to be moſt pernicious, being compared to the Poiſon of Dragons. Many Authors indeed ſay that Dragons have no Poiſon in them, (as D. Chytræus and others obſerve,) but as the Hebrew Word Tbaanim ſignifies any Kind of Serpent, ſo it is certain, that the Dragons of Africk and Arabia had a deadly Poiſon in them, though thoſe of Greece had not; as the famous Bocharius ſhews at large, in his Hieroſoicon, P. II. Lib. III. Cap. 14. Who alſo obſerves in another Place, that the Hebrew Word Rofch ſignifying both the Head and alſo Poiſon; the Poiſon of Serpents lies partly in their Gall, partly in their Teeth, and partly in a little Bladder under their Tongue, P. I. Lib. I. Cap. 4.

And the cruel Venom of Aſps.] The Poiſon of Aſps is called cruel, becauſe it is accounted the acutest of all other, inſtantly penetrating into the vital Parts. Whence the Proverb δῆγμα ἀσπίδων, the Biting of Aſps, for an incurable Wound. For thy who are bitten with an Aſp, ſeldom eſcape with their Life; as Ariſtole, Pliny, and a great many other Authors obſerve, in Bochart. P. II. Lib. III. Cap. 5.

Ver. 34. Is not this.] That is, the Vengeance he is going to ſpeak of in the following Verſes. For this Particle hu, often refers to what comes after, not to what goes before; as Cocceius obſerves.

Laid up in Store with me.] To be produced in due Time.

Sealed up among my Treasures.] He ſpeaks of it as a Matter determined or decreed, as Deeds are which are ſigned and ſealed, though not preſently executed, but kept ſafely in a Cabinet. And the Meaning of this Verſe is, That though he did not ſpeedily puniſh Evil-doers, it is not becauſe he doth not obſerve them, or forgets what they do; for he hath prefixed a Time to reckon with them, as will appear in the Iſſue.

Ver. 35. To me belongeth Vengeance and Recompence.] As the ſupream LORD, Governor, and Judge of the World, whoſe Office it is to puniſh Offenders. It is evident the Apoſtle alledging theſe Words, Rom. xii. 9. ἐμοὶ ἐκδίκησις, Vengeance is mine, (or to me belongeth Vengeance,) exactly follows the Hebrew Text, and not the preſent LXX, which renders theſe Words, ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἐκδίκησεως ἀνταποδώσω, in the Day of Vengeance I will recompence.

Their Feet ſhall ſlide.] Though they think themſelves unmoveably fixed in their Dominion, they ſhall certainly fall.

In due Time.] Not ſo ſoon, perhaps, as Men may expect; but when the great Judge of the World ſees it moſt ſeaſonable.

For the Day of their Calamity is at Hand, and the Things that ſhall come upon them make haſte.] When they little thought of it, and prided themſelves in their Proſperity, God ſuddenly brought down the Chaldeans, who had been the great Inſtruments of plaguing the Jews, Iſaiah xlvii. 7, 8, 9, 10, &c. Jer. i. 15, 27, 31. li. 6, 8. And ſo ſhall the Plagues of Babylon the Great come in one Day. In one Hour her great Riches ſhall come to nought, Rev. xviii. 8, 10, 17.

Ver. 36. For the LORD ſhall judge his People.] Plead their Cauſe, as the Scripture elſewhere ſpeaks, (Jer. i. 34.) and deliver them from the Oppreſſion of their Enemies; as this Phraſe is often uſed in the Book of Pſalms, vii. 8. x. 18.

And repent himſelf for his Servants.] Have Mercy upon them, (as the Vulgar truly expreſſes the Senſe,) and turn his Hand, which puniſhes them, upon their Enemies. See Jerem. i. 20. li. 24.

When he ſees that their Power is gone.] That they are not able to help themſelves. That's the due Time or Seaſon, before mentioned, for God to interpoſe; when the Enemies of his People think themſelves irrefiſtible, there being none able to oppoſe them.

And there is none ſhut up, or left.] Some refer this to Perſons, and others to Things; and either Way it ſignifies their Condition to be ſo forlorn, that they could do nothing, either by Men or by Money, for their Deliverance. J. Forſterus translates theſe Words Cuſtoditum aut neglectum, i. e. precious or vile. By which wonderful Deliverance and Reſtoration, when they were ſo totally deſtitute of all Help, all the World was given to underſtand, that there is no God like unto the LORD.

Ver. 37. And he ſhall ſay.] Or, It ſhall be ſaid.

Where are their Gods, their Rock in whom they truſted?] It is dubious, whether theſe Words be directed to the Jews, or to the Gentiles who had oppreſſed them. It ſeems moſt agreeable to take them as a Reproach to the Enemies of the Jews, who had long bragged of the Power of their Gods, and aſcribed all their Succeſs to them, (Ver. 27.) who now could not deliver them in their Diſtreſs.

Ver. 38. Which did eat the fat of their Sacrifices, and drank the Wine of their Drink-Offerings.] For the same Rites were used among the Gentiles, as among the Jews; who offered all the Fat upon the Altar, and there poured out the Wine which accompanied the Meat Offering, &c. See Numb. xv. The LXX. refer this to the Worshippers themselves, and translate it thus, (agreeably enough to the Hebrew,) The Fat of whose Sacrifices ye eat, and drank the Wine of their Drink-Offerings. And Onkelos to the same Purpose.

Let them rise up and help you, and be your Protection.] From the Calamity which was unavoidably coming upon them, Isa. xlv. 1, 2, 7. Jer. li. 17, 18.

Ver. 39. See now.] Open your Eyes now at last, and be convinced, by your sad Experience, of your Error.

That I, even I am he.] That it is I, and none but I who have made these Changes in the World: First making you Instruments in punishing my People; and now inflicting the like Punishments upon you, Jerem. li. 24, 25, 49.

The Words in the Hebrew being, I, I am he, the Author of the Old Nitzacon was sensible that we Christians might hence observe, that there are two who are here called God, the Father and the Son. And therefore takes Care to inform his Reader, that there are not two first Principles of Things. Which, as no Christian is so foolish as to affirm, so their own Authors have acknowledged more Persons than one, here called God. Thus Jonathan in his Paraphrase, plainly supposes another Person in the Divinity, whom he calls the Word, when he thus explains this Verse; When the Word of the LORD shall reveal himself to redeem his People, he shall say to all People, I am he that have been and am, and shall be, (See Revel. i. 8.) and by my Word kill and make alive. I smote the People of Israel, and I will heal them in the End of the Days. Which makes these Words a plain Prophecy of the Messiah, and him to be God. And so the Hierusalem Targum: See, that I now am he in my Word, and there is no God besides me: I am he who kill the Living in this World, and raise the Dead in the World to come, &c.

And there is no God with me.] As I have no Superior, so neither have I any Equal.

I kill and I make alive, I wound and I heal.] If I please to destroy any People for their Sins, none can hinder me; and if any repent and implore my Mercy, I restore them to perfect Safety. R. Isaac, in his Chissuk Emuna, P. I. Cap. 6. Sect. 20. alledges these Words, as a Prophecy of the Resurrection of the Dead in the Days of the Messiah. And in another Place, Cap. 10. he alledges them as an effectual Confutation of those ancient Hereticks, who imagined two supreme Powers; one of them, the Author of all Good; and the other, the Author of all Evil, (which I observed upon Levit. xvi. to have been a very ancient Opinion:) For there could not be, they fancied, the same Care, which had an Influence upon both. To remove which false Conceit, God declares, I kill, as well as make alive, &c. And for the same Reason he saith, in Isa. xlv. 7. I form the Light, and create Darknes; I make Peace, and create Evil: I the LORD do all these Things.

Neither is there any that can deliver out of my Hand.] Nor can any reverse the Judgment, that I pass upon Men.

Ver. 40. For I lift up my Hand to Heaven.] Swear solemnly to do what follows, viz. be revenged on his Enemies, as well as deliver his People. Thus Abraham anciently swore, Gen. xiv. 22. And when God promised to bring the Israelites into Canaan, he is said to lift up his Hand, Exod. vi. 8. Nebem. ix. 15. From whence some think the Word promittere is derived, signifying to engage by stretching out the Hand. And that from thence sprang the Custom of stretching out, and lifting up their Hand, when they swore. Which the Gentiles practised, as those known Words of Virgil inform us, Æneid. XII.

Suspiciens Cælum tenditque ad sidera dextram.

When God therefore is said to lift up his Hand to Heaven, the Meaning is, he swears by himself; as it here follows.

And say, I live for ever.] As sure as I live.

Ver. 41. If I whet my glittering Sword.] Make all Things ready for the execution of my Judgments.

And my Hand take hold of Judgment. I begin to punish.

I will render Vengeance to mine Enemies.] None shall stop my Proceedings, to be fully avenged of them.

And will reward them that hate me.] For as Jeremiab speaks, li. 56. The LORD GOD of Recompences will surely requite. For it is the Vengeance of the LORD: (as he speaks in the foregoing Chapter concerning Babylon, l. 15.) Take Vengeance upon her; as she hath done, do unto her.

Ver. 42. I will make mine Arrows drunk with Blood, and my Sword shall devour Flesh.] Make an exceeding great Slaughter, Isaiah xxxiv. 5, 6.

With the Blood of the Slain, and of the Captives.] This signifies, none should be spared: For they should be killed who were taken Captive, as well as those that fell in the Battle.

From the Beginning of Revenges upon the Enemy.] How the Hebrew Word Paroth comes to signify Revenge, I am not able to give an Account; but in that Sense we take it both here, and in Judges v. 2. The Word Para, from whence it seems to be derived, signifies to make bare, or naked. And so the vulgar Latin here understands it; and thence Job. Forsterus hath given a probable Sense of these Words, (taking Rosch, which we translate Beginning, for the Head, as it properly signifies, or the King,) in this Manner, because of the Baring, (i. e. making bare) of the head by the Enemy; that is, the taking away of the Kingdom and Priesthood from Israel. The LXX. translate it ἀπὸ κεφαλῆς ἀρχόντων ἐχθρῶν, from the Head of the Princes of the Enemies. Which is a Sense very agreeable, if we could find any Word in the Hebrew like to Paroth that signifies Princes or Rulers. But I think there is a more simple Sense may be given of these Words, than any of the forementioned, only by supposing the Particle Lamed to be omitted (as in many other Places) before Paroth, which is this, from the King to the Slave of the Enemies. For they were wont to shave their Captives, as every one knows, by way of Contempt and Scorn. Which is the Reason God threatens Baldness so often to the Israelites by his Prophets, when he was so angry with them, that he gave them up to be Slaves. Next to this is the Translation of Onkelos, I will take away (those Words he adds) the Crowns from the Head of the Enemy. Which was the making the King's Head bare.

This universal Slaughter is most notably expressed by Jeremiab, l. 35, 36, 37, 43. And some think this Prophecy will be then most amply fulfilled, when the Jews shall be called, and made Members of the Church of Christ. See Dr. Jackson, Book XI. on the Creed, Chap. 12.

Ver. 43. Rejoice, O ye Nations, with his People.] Here the Particle Eth is omitted before Ammo, as I supposed, in the foregoing Words, Lamed to be before Paroth. Which made the Vulgar translate these Words, O ye Nations, praise his People. But the LXX. discerned the true Sense, and translate it as we do: The Apostle having justified their Translation in Rom. xv. 10. where he expresses this, Word for Word, as they do, εὐφρανθήσεσθαι μετὰ τῶ λαῷ αὐτοῦ, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his People. But it must here be noted, that before these Words the LXX. have some other, which are very remarkable, εὐφρανθήσεσθαι ἑσθινὸν ἅμα αὐτῷ, ἢ προσκυνήσασθαι αὐτῷ πάντες ἄγγελοι Θεοῦ, Rejoice, ye Heavens, together with him, and let all the Angels of God worship him, (and then follows, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his People;) which are not in the Hebrew, nor in the Chaldee, and yet the latter Clause of them, προσκυνήσασθαι αὐτῷ πάντες ἄγγελοι Θεοῦ, Let all the Angels of God worship him, are the very Words of the Apostle, Heb. i. 6. which seem to have been taken from hence out of the LXX. for they are no where else to be found in the Scripture. The Margin, indeed, of our Bibles refers us to Psal. xcvi. 7. But there the Words of the LXX. are otherwise, προσκυνήσατε, αὐτῷ πάντες ἄγγελοι αὐτοῦ, Worship him, all ye his Angels; which are in the second Person; whereas here, and in the Apostle, the Words are in the third. We may therefore suppose rather, that the LXX. from ancient Tradition among the Jews, added these Words, (before they translated this Verse,) to declare unto what Time the fulfilling of them should principally belong. For Psal. xcvi. seems to be but a Descant (as Dr. Jackson's Words are) upon this Part of Moses's Song; from whence the Jews might learn the Scope of it. And accordingly the Apostle uses the Words of the LXX. here in this Place, rather than those of the Psalmist; because he would have the Hebrews understand and consider, that Moses himself had predicted the Exaltation of the Son of God, as the Psalmist afterwards expounded him.

There is another Translation of these Words of Moses, which is very agreeable to the Apostle in Rom. xv. 10. Rejoice, ye Nations, who are his People. See Ver. 21. of this Chapter. Either Way, this is a plain Prophecy of the Gentiles becoming one Body with the People of Israel. And thus Kimchi himself translates it, Sing, ye Gentiles, who are his People: Which began to be fulfilled after our Saviour's Ascension to the Throne of his Glory in the Heavens, when all the Angels of God worshipped him. Hitherto Moses had supposed, in this Song, great Enmity between them: And that sometimes they had plagued Israel sorely; as at others, God rendered to them according to what they had done unto his People. But now he breaks out into a Rapture of Joy, to think that they should one Day be reconciled, and made one People of God. And the LXX. thus understanding it, might well preface to their Translation of this Verse, with the Words now mentioned, Rejoice, ye Heavens, together with him. For if there be Joy in Heaven, as Procopius Gazæus well glosses, at the Repentance of one Sinner, how much more for the Salvation of the whole World, by destroying the Devil's Tyranny? Which being to be performed by the Advancement of the Son of God into the Heavens, the next Words might well be added, Let all the Angels of God worship him. Which they had always done (the same Procopius observes) as their God who created them: But now they praise and extol his Humanity, exalted at the Right Hand of God.

For he will avenge the Blood of his Servants.] These Words seem to express some of the Motives that should persuade the Gentiles to become one Body with the Jews, (for such the Apostles, and all the first Converts were,) God's punishing all those who shed the Blood of his Servants; as the Christian Martyrs are called in the Book of the Revelation. In which Confidence the LXX. add another Sentence before these Words, ἢ ἐνισχυσάτωσαν αὐτῷ πάντες υἱοὶ Θεοῦ, And let all the Sons of God be strong in him.

And will render Vengeance to his Adversaries.] To all such as oppose this blessed Union; and first to the Jews, who set themselves against it, more than any others, (being mad at the Apostles for preaching to the Gentiles;) and then to the Romans, who persecuted all those who embraced Christianity.

And will be merciful unto his Land.] This cannot be meant of the Land of Israel, which was no longer God's Land than any other, but of the whole Earth, (as Conrad Pellicanus well explains it,) in which that one People of God dwells, reduced (as he speaks) in the whole Multitude of the Faithful into one Catholick Church. For they all acknowledge, from the greatest to the least, that one only Omnipotent God, with no less Devotion and Affection than Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Moses did.

And unto his People.] The whole World that believe in Christ, and are his faithful Servants; whose Blood he will avenge, Rev. xix. 2. and then set up his Tabernacle with Men, and dwell with them, and they shall be his People, and he will be their God, Rev. xx. 3. which I mention, because this Part of the Prophecy reaches reaches unto the last Times, and is not yet all fulfilled.

Thus this famous Song concludes, which, as the Jews reckon, consists of seventy Verses, each of which contains two distinct and entire Sentences, and, as they fancy, are a Compendium of the whole Law of Moses. Nay, some of them (such are the idle Conceits of this Nation) think this Hymn is so perfect a Prophecy, that it contains in it the Names of all the Men in the World; which they undertake to find, and by that Versicle where it is, to tell what Fortune he, whose Name they seek, shall have in the World. Thus instead of observing seriously what Moses foretold would certainly befall themselves, their Superstition and Hardness of Heart have led them to vain Conjectures concerning other Men. See Jo. Wagenfeil upon Sota, p. 164, &c. where he saith a Jew undertook to shew him his Name in this Song, which fell out in a Verse that signified Prosperity to him. And since him Martinus Mauritius, in his Book de Sortitione Hebræorum, Cap. 16. Sect. 3. 4. 5.

Ver. 44. And Moses came, and spake all the Words of this Song in the Ears of the People.] The very same that is said before he spake this Song, (xxxi. 30.) and is now repeated at the Conclusion of it, to express his Fidelity in his Office to the very last.

He and Hosea the Son of Nun.] Who was now his Assistant in this Work, as he was designed to be his Successor after his Death. He is commonly called Josua, but Oshea was his Name at the first, Numb. xiii. 8.

Ver. 45. And Moses made an End of speaking all these Words to all Israel.] When he had made an End of speaking them, then he added what follows.

Ver. 46. And he said unto them, set your Hearts unto all the Words which I testify among you this Day.] Apply your Minds to press upon yourselves the Observation of all these Things. For this Expression is a little more than letting them be in their Heart, vi. 6. or laying them up in their Heart, xi. 18. For they were so to retain the Remembrance of them, as to attend unto them, and consider them.

Which ye shall command your Children to observe to do.] This necessary Duty of instructing their Children is often pressed, (iv. 10. vi. 7. xi. 19.) because without this Care their Religion would soon be lost; but by this means might be preserved and propagated to all Generations.

All the Words of this Law.] Which they might be certain was delivered by God to Moses; there being as many Witnesses of God's Presence with him, as there were Men in their Nation. But he had seen so many Instances of their Unbelief, that he uses all the Ways, Manners, and Forms (as Pellicanus observes) that he could think of to urge them to Obedience: By delivering them Tables of their Laws written by God himself, by Books, by Pillars, by Blessings, Cursings, Obtestations, Threatenings, long Exhortations, Songs, Phylacteries, and other Ceremonies, &c. which he continued to do as long as he had Breath, and was able to speak, that they and their Posterity might be happy.

Ver. 47. For it is not a vain Thing for you.] You shall not employ your Diligence in this Matter unprofitably. The Jews upon these Words have founded a Maxim, which Maimonides often mentions, That every Precept hath its End and Use; which, though they do not appear to us, are grounded upon strong Causes and Reasons. More Nevochim, P. III. Cap. 26. and 50. The Design, for Instance, of many ceremonial Laws, cannot now be fully discerned, because they were instituted directly contrary to the idolatrous Rites of the Zabii; which are long since utterly abolished, and but imperfectly recorded in those ancient Authors that speak of them.

Because it is your Life.] The Means to make you an happy People. Here are two Benefits, saith R. Isaac, which are promised by the Observation of this Law; a spiritual and a corporal. The Spiritual in these Words, and the Corporal in the next, ye shall prolong your Days, &c. And he puts the Spiritual first, though among all corporal Blessings, this of long Life be the chief, Cbissuk Emuna, Part I. Cap. 18.

And through this Thing.] By teaching your Children to observe to do all that is commanded in this Law.

You shall prolong your Days in the Land whither you go over Jordan to possess it.] Have the great Blessing of a long Life in all Manner of Happiness, which your Posterity shall enjoy for many Generations in the Land of Canaan. By which it appears, that nothing else but Contempt of this Law could have ejected them out of this Country.

Ver. 48. And the Lord spake unto Moses that self-same Day.] Immediately after he had ended the foregoing Song, and given this Admonition at the Conclusion of it.

Ver. 49. Get thee up into this Mountain Abarim.] Which he had pointed him unto before, and told him what he doth now, Numb. xxvii. 12.

Unto Mount Nebo.] Abarim was a Ridge of Hills, whereof Nebo was one. See there upon Numb. xxvii. 2.

Which is in the Land of Moab, that is over-against Jericho.] This is a more particular Description of the Site of this Mountain, than he gave before in the Book of Numbers.

Behold the Land of Canaan, which I give unto the Children of Israel for a Possession.] Which he might easily do from the highest Part of the Mountain, called Pisgab, Deut. iii. 27.

Ver. 50. And die in the Mount whither thou goest up.] After he had taken a View of the Land every Way.

And he gathered unto thy People.] To Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. This signifies, saith R. Isaac, that he should be associated and joined to the Souls of the Just, who are called his People. For the People of Moses were not buried in Mount Abarim; and therefore he doth not speak, of gathering his Body to their Bodies, but of his Soul to their Souls. Cbissuk Emuna, Part I. Cap. 11.

As Aaron thy Brother died in Mount Hor, and was gathered unto his People.] See Numb. xx. 24, 28. xxxiii. 38.

Ver. 51. Because ye trespassed against me among the Children of Israel, &c.] Rebelled against his Commandment, as he speaks, Numb. xxvii. 14.

Because ye sanctified me not in the Midst of the Children of Israel, Numb. xx. 12. xxvii. 14.

Ver. 52. Yet thou shalt see the Land before thee.] He had earnestly begged of God that he might go over Jordan; but he denied him that Favour, Deut. i. 37. iii. 25, 27. yet he was pleased to mitigate his Punishment, by letting him enjoy a Sight of that good Country, into which he might not enter.

But thou shalt not go thither unto the Land which I give the Children of Israel.] By which the Israelites should have learnt, that as Moses left them short of the promised Land, and could not bring them into the Possession of it; so his Law did not contain a perfect Revelation of God's Will, but they were to expect something beyond it.

C H A P. XXXIII.

Verse 1. AND this is the Blessing.] As Jacob blessed his Children, at his Departure out of the World, when God had begun to fulfil the Promise to Abraham, of giving him a numerous Offspring; so Moses having seen them vastly increased, and ready to enter upon the Land promised to them, (Gen. xv. 18, &c.) takes his Farewel of them, with a Blessing pronounced upon the People in general, and upon each Tribe in particular. Which is in Part prophetical, as the Blessing of Jacob was, and delivered in the prophetick Stile, which hath some Difficulty and Obscurity in it; on purpose, perhaps, to excite their diligent Study to enquire into the Meaning. See Gen. xlix. 1, 3.

Wherewith Moses the Man of God.] Or, the Prophet of the LORD, as Onkelos translates it: For Prophets are called Men of God in the Holy Books, 1 Sam. ix. 6, 7, 8. 1 Kings xiii. 1. 1 Tim. vi. 11. 2 Tim. iii. 17. 2 Pet. i. 21. because in the Exercise of their sacred Function, they did not deliver their own Sense, nor the Sense of other Men, but the Mind and Will of God who spake by them.

Blessed the Children of Israel before his Death.] Before he went up into Mount Abarim to die, (xxxii. 49.) he pray'd God to bless them; and also foretold their future State and Condition. Such had been the ancient Custom among the holy Patriarchs, (as we learn from the Example of Jacob;) to admonish their Posterity upon their dying Beds of such Things as they thought most imported them: For then they could not but be thought to speak most sincerely; and their Words were apt to be entertained with greater Respect, and preserved in Mind with greater Care. Moses therefore, their Deliverer, Leader, and Law-giver, concludes his Life in the same Manner; and it's very likely deposited these dying Words with them, in Writing.

Ver. 2. And he said, the LORD came from Sinai.] And in the first Place, he endeavours to make them sensible of what God had done already for them: And the chief of all his Benefits being the Revelation of his Mind and Will to them, he commemorates that as a common Blessing to them all, before he begins to speak in particular to each Tribe: For that is meant by the LORD came from Sinai; where he appeared in a most glorious Manner, and from thence promulgated his Law with the greatest Solemnity, Exod. xx. And thus the Gentiles took an unwonted Brightness in any Place to be a Token of the Επιφάνεια, Appearance or Advent of some of their Gods in that Place. As also a great Commotion in any Place, they took for another Token of it. See the illustrious Spanhemius, in his Annotations upon Callimachus's Hymn to Apollo, Ver. 7. which they seem to have learnt from this Appearance of God on Mount Sinai, and the Quaking of that Mountain, when God appeared on it.

And rose up from Seir unto them, and shone forth from Mount Paran.] There is no Difficulty in the foregoing Words, it being evident that God came down on Mount Sinai, and thence delivered his Commands to the Israelites, and espoused them for his People. But how he rose up from Seir unto them, the Country of Edom, and shone from Paran the Country of Ishmael, is not so easy to understand. The Jews indeed, who were wont to solve all Difficulties, by inventing what they please, are not troubled to give an Account of these Words; which signify, they fancy, that the Divine Glory first resided upon Mount Seir, where God propounded his Law to the Children of Esau; but they would not have it, because they found these Words in it, Thou shalt not kill; he went therefore to Paran, and offered it to the Children of Ishmael, but they refused it also, because they found these Words in it, Thou shalt not steal; so he came to Sinai, and gave it to the Israelites, who said, All the Words which the LORD hath said, will we do, Exod. xxiv. 3. Thus the Hierusalem Targum, and Pirke Eliezer, and some other more ancient Authors, with this Addition, that he offered the Law to all the Nations of the World, but they rejected it, because it is written, Thou shalt have none other Gods but me. But this looks so like a Fable, that some of themselves are ashamed of it, and have given a better Sense of the Words, though I cannot say the true one. For thus Abraham Peritfol expounds them, The true Law came out of Sinai to the Israelites, by which the Edomites were so enligbened, that God might be said to rise up to them also: And afterward the celestial Influence shone out of this Law to the Ishmaelites, who were the better for it. Thus Const. L'Empereur reports his Sense in his Annotations upon Bava kama, Cap. 4. Sect. 3. where he endeavours to make out a plainer Sense of these Words, in this Manner: Though the Mountain of Paran was higher to Sinai than Seir was, and first occurred to those that went out of Egypt; yet there was great Reason to mention Seir before it, it, because Moses had Respect to the Order of their Journeys, and not to the Site of the Places. And their Journeys were so directed by divine Providence, that fetching a long Circuit, forward and backward, they should come to Canaan. In all which Turnings and Windings they were marvellously preserved and provided for, by the same good Providence which conducted them. Of this Moses here makes a thankful Commemoration, how he led them from Mount Sinai to the Borders of the Land of Canaan, towards Mount Seir, as is expressly noted by Moses, (compare Deut. i. 19. with ii. 1. and Numb. xx. 14.) From whence, by reason of their Infidelity, they were led back again towards the Red Sea, and encamped in the Extremity of the Wilderness, Numb. xxxiii. 35. where Ptolemy places Paran, (though there was another Part of it called Paran near Kadesh, Numb. xiii. 3, 27.) And from thence they were led back again in a long Circuit, to the East Part of the Land of Canaan. This may be one Reason why these two Places are mentioned together with Sinai, that God, who there appeared to them, was with them all the Time they wandered about in the Wilderness, till he brought them to the Borders of Canaan, where they now were. And another may be, because in Mount Seir the brazen Serpent was erected by God's Order, for the Cure of such as were bitten by Serpents, when they looked on it; which was an illustrious Type of our blessed Saviour, and the Salvation wrought by him, Numb. xx. 4, 9. And in the Desert to which Paran gave the Name, (because it over-looked the Whole, though very large, they received the joyful News, that they should march into Canaan: Or, as D. Chytraeus understands it, in the Wilderness of Paran the Seventy Elders received the Spirit, to make them Assistants unto Moses in the Government, (Numb. x. 12. xi. 24, &c.) And here, I may add, Moses repeated his Law to them, Deut. i. 1, 5. who seems in this Verse to follow a Metaphor borrowed from the Sun, which first illuminates the Air, and then rises, and then spreads abroad his Beams; as God by Degrees declared his Presence with his People, whithersoever they went, first at Mount Sinai, then at Seir, and last of all here in the Wilderness of Paran.

But it must be acknowledged, that these Words may be interpreted in a more simple Manner, they being but a farther Amplification of what was said in the first Words, the Lord came from Sinai. When at the same Time he rose up from Seir, and shone forth from Mount Paran. For these Mountains were very near one to another; or rather Parts of one and the same Ridge of Mountains, as Conr. Pellicanus here observes; and is more clearly made out by a very learned Man among ourselves, (Dr. Hyde, in his excellent Notes on Abram Peritfol, Itinera Mundi, p. 73.) for Teman (which is the same with Paran, Habak. iii. 3.) was near to Edom, whose chief City was Bosra, Amos i. 12. as that was near to Sinai.

The Ignorance of the Mahometans is much to be pitied, who out of this Place imagine they have found as good an Authority for the Alcoran, as there is for the Law of Moses, and for the Gospel of Christ. For thus they interpret these Words, God gave the Law from Sinai, and the Gospel from Seir, (which they would have to be the same with Galilee, which our Saviour much frequented,) and the Alcoran from Mount Paran; which they fancy is a Mountain not far from Mecca. See Dr. Pocock upon Greg. Abul Pharaji, p. 183. and Guadagnolus Resp. pro Relig. Christiana. But the last Words of this Verse, for them, are sufficient to confute these Conceits; for they plainly shew that the whole Verse speaks of the People of Israel.

And he came with ten thousand of Saints.] Or, as our Mr. Mede thinks it should be translated, with his holy ten Thousands, or Myriads, that is, attended with an innumerable Company of Angels, who waited on him at the giving of the Law. See Psal. lxxviii. 7. Dan. vii. 10. of which Enoch, perhaps, prophesied in Part, Jude 14, 15. And from hence it may be thought, that Notion of the Jewish Doctors, followed by St. Stephen and St. Paul, that the Law was given by Angels, had its Beginning, Mede, Book II. p. 437. that is, they attended upon God, as his Ministers, when he himself gave the Law.

From his Right-Hand.] With which we are wont to deliver Things to other Persons.

Went a fiery Law for them.] For the Law of Moses was given out of the Midst of Fire, and therefore called a Fire of Law, as the Words are in the Hebrew, Exod. xix. 16, 18. Deut. iv. 11, 12. v. 22, 23, 24. The Cabalists (as Reuchlin observes) fancy that God wrote the Law in a Globe of Fire, and sent it to them. But the Hierusalem Targum is more sober, which thus expounds it, He stretched his Right-Hand out of the Midst of Flames of Fire, and gave the Law unto his People. And Onkelos still better, The Law written with his Right-Hand he gave us out of the Midst of Fire. Or, as Campeg. Vitringa would have this latter Part of the Verse translated, On his Right-Hand a Fire, and out of the Fire a Law for them. The Meaning being, that God came to Mount Sinai with that Fire; for in Scripture, to be on the Right-Hand of any one, is to accompany him, Lib. II. Observ. Sacr. Cap. 4.

By the Conclusion of this Verse, it is apparent that the former Part of it belongs entirely to God's Mercy unto the Children of Israel, upon whom he bestowed his Law, in most illustrious Tokens of his Presence. Which makes it highly probable, that his rising up from Seir upon them, and shining from Mount Paran, belongs to the same Matter, that is, the Cloud wherein he descended on Sinai, with a vast Host of Angels, extended itself so far, as to cover the neighbouring Mountains of Seir and Paran. Though the Meaning may be, as I have shewn, that he continued his Presence with them after they went from Sinai, through all their Journeys in the Wilderness of Seir and Paran, till they came to the Place where they now were.

Ver. 3. Yea, He loved the People.] All this was the Effect of his Love and Kindness to the People

People of Israel, whom he owned for his Son, and his First-born, (Exod. iv. 22.) and therefore in a tender Manner brought them out of Egypt, (Exod. xix. 4.) that he might instruct them in his Laws.

All his Saints are in thy Hand.] Whereby he made them an holy Nation, (as it there follows in Exod. xix. 5.) whom he took into his special Care and most gracious Protection, as this Phrase signifies in many Places, Numb. iv. 28, 33. And Onkelos refers it to the mighty Power, whereby he brought them out of Egypt. But it may have Respect to God's Preservation and Support of them, when he gave the Law in such a terrible Manner, that Moses himself quaked, and yet none of them received any Harm. As for the Change of the Person from his to thy, it is very frequent in this Language, particularly in Dan. ix. 4.

And they set down at thy Feet.] The first Word (which we translate sat down) being no where else found but here, and Isa. i. 5. where it plainly hath another Sense, hath occasioned various Interpretations of this Sentence. But most agree in this, of Sol. Jarchi, that as Scholars sat at the Feet of their Master round about him, while he taught them their Lesson, so the People encompassed the Mount where God was, and heard his Law, which he thence delivered. But it is a Question, whether there was such a Custom of Scholars in those Days; and the People did not sit, but stood at the Foot of the Mount, Exod. xx. 18. Therefore Onkelos understands this of their sitting down, or pitching their Tents, where the glorious Cloud that led them rested, Numb. x. 12, 33.

Every one shall receive of thy Word.] This still is commonly referred to the People's receiving the Law. But Onkelos thinks it hath Respect to their Journeys at the Commandment of the LORD, Numb. x. 13. For so he interprets it, They went forward according to thy Word. And so the Hierusalem Targum expounds these and the foregoing Words; Behold they were led, and came to the Foot of his Cloud, and went forward and rested, according to the Command of his Word. It takes in also the other Sense of the Word Tucchu, (as it signifies smiting in Isa. i. 5.) in this Manner, Though he inflicted many Chastisements upon them, yet they did not cease, nor desist from the Doctrine of the Law.

Ver. 4. Moses commanded us a Law.] He commanded them to observe that Law which God had given them, when he was about to depart from them. This he did in this very Book, i. 3. v. 1. vi. 1. viii. 1, &c. He speaks of himself in the third Person, which is very usual throughout all this Book.

Even the Inheritance of the Congregation of Jacob.] As a peculiar Blessing which God had bestowed on them, and on their Posterity, above all other Nations in the World, Deut. iv. 8. who, as they had not this Law given to them, so they were not bound to observe it; as the Jews themselves conclude from this very Place. Nor did they force any Body to embrace this Law, when they made a Conquest of a neighbouring Country, but left them to their Liberty, provided they would become Profelytes of the Gate, that is, forsake Idolatry, and keep the common Precepts enjoined to all Mankind. Thus Maimonides interprets the Word Inheritance. See Schickard, in his Jus Regium, Cap. 5. Theorem. 17. and Grotius de Jure Belli & Pacis, Lib. I. Cap. 1. Sect. 16.

The Author of Ez Hachajim (a MS. highly valued by the famous Wagenseil) saith, That when a Child began to speak, the Father was bound to teach him this Verse. In which, instead of מושת hereditary, some of the Jews read מאומת espoused; as if the Law were espoused to the Jewish Nation. See Wagenseil on Sota, p. 519, 520.

Ver. 5. And he was King in Jeshurun.] Or, For he was King, that is, under God, the supreme Ruler and Governor of Israel; and therefore, in his Name, and by his Authority, required them to observe these Laws. Which plainly shews him to have had the supreme Power in all Things, both civil and sacred. Which is excellently expressed by our Mr. Thorndike, in his Review of the Rights of the Church, &c. p. 68. where he observes, "That the Israelites "being made a free People by the Act of God, "bringing them out of Egypt, and entitling "them to the Land of Canaan, upon the Co- "venant of the Law, had Moses not only for "their Prophet and their Priest, (for by him "Aaron and his Successors were put into the "Priesthood, the Tabernacle and all belonging "to it consecrated,) but also for their King, "their Lawgiver, their Judge, and Commander "in Chief of their Forces under God, if not "rather God by Moses. For we find, that af- "ter Moses's Decease, either God by some ex- "traordinary Signification of his Will and Plea- "sure, stirred up some Man in his Stead for the "Time; or if there was none such, ruled their "Proceedings himself, by Urim and Tummim "answering their Demands, and directing what "to do, and what Course to follow, in all the "publick Affairs that concerned the State of "that People. Whereupon, when they re- "quired Samuel to make them a King, he "declared it was not Samuel, but himself, "whom they had rejected: Because they had "rejected him whom God had immediately "set over them in his own Stead, by whose "Death the Power returned to God, as at the "Beginning."

Concerning the Word Jeshurun, see xxxii. 15. and Selden, Lib. II. de Synedr. Cap. 2. n. 2.

When the Heads of the People, and the Tribes of Israel were gathered together.] To renew their Covenant with God, and to receive his last Commands. See xxix. 1, 2, 9, 10. xxxi. 28, 29.

Ver. 6. Let Reuben live, and not die, and let not his Men be few.] In the last Clause of this Verse we repeat the Word not (which is wanting in the Hebrew) without any Necessity: For the Words may be thus translated exactly, Let Reuben live, and not die, though his Men be few. Which seems to be a Confirmation of the Prophecy of Jacob, Gen. xlix. 4. That he should not excel, and yet should live, and not perish, that is, be in some measure a flourishing Tribe, tho' not so numerous as some others. See there. And possibly it may be here suggested, that though they passed armed over Jordan before their Brethren, to settle them there, (according to their Engagement, Numb. xxxii. 27. Josh. iv. 12, 13.) yet none of them should perish, but both they, and their Wives and Children, that staid behind them, should be all preserved.

Ver. 7. And this is the Blessing of Judab.] As much as to say, Judab shall be remarkably blessed. For these Words [this is the Blessing] are used of none of the rest of the Tribes, either of Reuben which went before, or the others that follow after. Here is no Mention made of Simeon, (who was next to Reuben,) because that Tribe was included in Judab, with whom their Possessions were mixed, Josh. xix. 1. and therefore they went together to make Expeditions, Judg. i. 3. Judab also is here put before Levi, because it was to be the royal Tribe, according to the Prophecy of Jacob; which Moses was assured God would fulfil, and therefore prays as follows; And he said, Hear, LORD, the Voice of Judab. Grant this Petition, when he calls for Help against his Enemies. So Onkelos paraphrases it, Hear his Prayer, when he goes forth to War.

And bring him unto his People.] Return him home in Peace unto his People; as the same Onkelos expounds it.

Let his Hands be sufficient for him.] To avenge him of his Enemies, as he also explains it.

And be thou an help to him from his Enemies.] Suffer them not to prevail over him, but give him the Victory, when he fights with them. So the Hierusalem Targum paraphrases these two last Passages; Let his Hands exercise Revenge upon his Enemies in Battles, and do thou support and sustain him against those that hate him. This was notoriously fulfilled in this Tribe, which was the most valiant and successful of all other. For in all their Wars this Tribe was the principal; and the Safety of all the rest seems to have depended upon this. See Judg. i. 1, 2, &c. xx. 18. And as these Places shew that this was the most considerable Tribe, before they had Kings; so after that, it was able, together with Benjamin, to maintain its Ground against the other ten Tribes, and all other Opposers.

Ver. 8. And of Levi he said, let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy Holy-one.] Continue in this Tribe the high Dignity of consulting with thee, and receiving Directions from thee, by the High-Priest, concerning the publick Safety. Or, as some take it, (because Thummim is here set before Urim, which is not in any other Place,) make them upright and faithful, as well as understanding and knowing, in the Discharge of their Duty. For though by Holy-one be principally meant the High-Priest, who was in a peculiar Manner anointed to be separated to the Service of God, especially in this Part of it, to approach him with Urim and Thummim, (which gave Aaron the Name of the Saint of the LORD, Psal. cvi. 16.) yet it comprehends all the rest of the Priests and Levites, in conjunction with him; for they were all separated unto the LORD, having signalized themselves (as we speak) by their early Zeal for the LORD, when their Brethren apostatized to Idolatry. Of which Moses takes notice in the next Verse, Who said unto his Father, &c. I have not seen him, &c. regarded, that is, no Relation when they executed the Commands of God against the Worshipers of the golden Calf. See our learned Dr. Spencer de Leg. Hebr. Lib. III. Cap. 7. Dissert. 7. where he treats also of these Words, as they may be applied to our LORD Christ, the true Holy-one of God; who is, indeed, a Priest for ever, holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from Sinners, &c. Hebr. vii. 26.

Whom thou didst prove at Massab.] Or, whom thou hast thoroughly proved. For the Words in the Hebrew are, Whom in proving thou didst prove; the ancient Interpreters not taking Massab for the Name of a Place, (as we do,) but for trying or proving. And so indeed the Words in the Hebrew seem to import; the Particle [betb] before Massab, being different from that before Meribab, [which is al,] though we translate them both alike by the Word at. And thus the Hierusalem Targum paraphrases, Whom thou didst prove, or try; and bestod in the Trial; that is, approved himself perfect or upright, as Onkelos expresses it. This procured that Tribe a Blessing from the LORD, Exod. xxxii. 26, 29. and brought them into special Grace and Favour with him, as the Word we translate Holy-one signifies. For it is not kadoth, but chafid.

And with whom thou didst strive at the Waters of Meribab.] Though God did severely chide and reprove Moses and Aaron, (who were the Heads of this Tribe,) when they were tried at the Waters of Strife, Numb. xx. 12, 13. yet they did not forfeit their Office by the Offence they then committed; and therefore Moses prays it might still continue in Aaron's Posterity.

Ver. 9. Who said unto his Father and to his Mother, I have not seen him, neither did he acknowledge his Brethren, nor know his own Children.] This relates unto the impartial Execution of Judgment by the Levites, upon the Worshipers of the Golden Calf, without Respect of Persons, Exod. xxxii. 26, &c. And as some will have it, to Phineas's Zeal, mentioned in Numb. xxv. But that it hath any Respect to a more ancient Judgment, given in the Case of Judab and Thamar, (as the Hierusalem Targum fancies,) there is no Ground to believe. See Selden, Lib. II. de Synedr. Cap. 8. n. 2.

For they have observed thy Word, and kept thy Covenant.] Exod. xxxii. 28, 29. Abarinel and others make this to be the Reason of what follows.

Ver. 10. They shall teach Jacob thy Judgments, and Israel thy Law.] Because they were so upright, as to take no Notice of their dearest Relations, in Judgment, therefore they were intrusted with this Office of teaching the People the Statutes of God, that is, deciding all Controversies which arose about any Thing in the Law. So the Jews expound it; and it is agreeable to what we read in the seventeenth Chapter of this Book, Ver. 9, 10. and many other Places, as Mr. Selden shews in the Place forenamed, p. 372, &c. and our Mr. Thorndike, in his Religious Assemblies, Chap. 2. where he observes, the TEACHING here mentioned consisted in declaring the Meaning and Obligation of the Law, in Matters doubtful; as is apparent from Levit. x. 8, 9, 10, 11. For though others might be Members of their Courts of Judgment, yet they consisted chiefly of Priests and Levites. As for teaching the People in their religious Assemblies, that was not so much the Office of the Priests and Levites, as of the Prophets. For though the Prophets and the Disciples of the Prophets, were commonly Priests and Levites, (who being most free from the Care of Estates and Inheritances, and by their Office, in his ceremonial Service, came nearest to God of all other Men, were most likely to be endued with an extraordinary Degree of Knowledge, and of the Fear of God,) yet it is certain, that the Charge of teaching the People in their Assemblies, belonged as well to those Prophets who were not Priests and Levites, as to those that were. See him, p. 25. And this was one Reason, as Maimonides observes, why the Tribe of Levi might have no Inheritance in the Land, that being free from the Trouble of ploughing and sowing, &c. they might wholly attend to the Study of the Law, and be able to teach Israel God's Judgments, More Nevochim, P. III. Cap. 39.

They shall put Incense before thee, and whole Burnt-Offerings upon thine Altar. This was the peculiar Office and Honour of the Priests alone, to offer Incense on the golden Altar, and Burnt-Offerings upon the brazen. The Hierusalem Targum thus paraphrases it, They shall put Incense of precious Spice before thee, to pacify thine Anger, and offer a most acceptable Sacrifice upon thine Altar.

Ver. 11.] Bless, LORD, his Substance. The Word we here translate Substance, is translated Wealth, viii. 17, 18. which consisted most in Cattle, (they having no Land to till,) which he prays God to increase, that they might have sufficient Sustenance for themselves and their Family. It is a strange Fancy of some of the Jews, that whosoever offered Incense grew rich, and therefore no Priest was suffered to offer Incense more than once, that so Riches might be derived to them all. Thus they trifle, while their Hearts are set on getting Money, and not on growing good. See Sheringham on Joma, p. 35, 36. and Mauritius de Sortitione Hebræorum, Cap. 24. Sect. 4.

And accept the Work of his Hands.] All their Ministry at the Altar, where the Priests officiated; or about the Tabernacle, of which the Levites had the Care.

Smite through the Loins of them that rise against him, and of them that hate him, that they rise not again.] For they who were Enemies to the Priests and Levites, were Enemies to Religion, and to all civil Government; which was chiefly administered by them, as was before observed. See xvii. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12.

Ver. 12. And of Benjamin be said.] He mentions him next to Levi, because the Temple, in which the Priests officiated, was partly situated in his Lot.

The Beloved of the LORD.] Or, being beloved of the LORD, as the LXX. interpret it, ἡγαπημένος τοῦ κυρίου.

Shall dwell in Safety by him.] i. e. By the LORD; which signifies the Stability of his Portion, which had Jerusalem the holy City in it, as we read Josh. xviii. 28. For though Mount Sion was in the Tribe of Judab, and so the Sanctuary was there, (Psal. lxxviii. 68.) yet the City wherein it stood was not. Nay, the Ancients think the Altar of Burnt-Offering was in the Tribe of Benjamin, as Kimchi observes upon that Place before mentioned in Joshua. See upon Gen. xlix. 27. And there are Reasons to make one think, that Sion, in the Place forenamed, and in others, is to be taken in a large Sense, comprehending Mount Moriab also, (on which the Temple was built, 2 Chron. iii. 1.) which was in the Tribe of Benjamin, and consequently the Temple was situated in this Tribe.

And the LORD shall cover him all the Day long.] The Glory of the majestic Presence of the LORD shall be a Shield over him (to defend him) continually; as the Hierusalem Targum expounds it.

And he shall dwell upon his Shoulders.] For the divine Majesty (saith Onkelos) shall dwell in his Country. It being in the Temple, and the Temple in the Tribe of Benjamin, where it stood upon Mount Moriab, as the Head of a Man doth upon his Shoulders; as Dr. Lightfoot glosses in his Temple-Service, p. 145. Edit. 1. Or the Word we translate here Shoulders may signify, as it is translated in other Places, Sides (Numb. xxxiv. 11.) or Borders. And nothing is more certain, than that the divine Habitation was in the Borders of Benjamin, whose Lot touched Judab's at Jerusalem; and was so united to it, that when the rest fell off from Judab, the Tribe of Benjamin always adhered to it.

This being the Sense which the ancient Interpreters give of this Verse, and very agreeable to the Words, I shall not trouble the Reader with any other; but only mention a Conceit of Conradus Pellicanus, who by the Beloved of the LORD here understands David, who dwell in Safety by Benjamin, though the King of that Tribe persecuted him, for God covered and protected him continually from Violence, &c. It is strange that a Man otherwise judicious, and well acquainted with the Jewish Learning, should propound this as the best Interpretation he could think of, when there is nothing of a Blessing upon Benjamin in it.

Ver. 13. And of Joseph be said.] This Tribe follows next, his Lot falling near to Benjamin, who lay between Judab and Joseph.

Blessed of the LORD be his Land.] He foretels, that this Tribe should be situated in a most plentiful Country, and enriched by the divine Blessing upon it.

For the precious Things of Heaven.] Sending fruitful Showers from Heaven.

For the Dew.] Together with the Evening and Morning Dews, which are no less refreshing to the Earth than Rain.

And for the Deep that coucheth beneath.] He means Springs of Water which burst out of the Bowels of the Earth, for the Use of Man and Beast.

Ver. 14. For the precious Fruits of the Sun.] Whose kindly Heat brings them forth, and makes them grow to Maturity.

And the precious Things put forth by the Moon.] For all Fruits are plumped by the Moon's cool and fattening Moisture in the Night, which is digested by the Sun in the Day. Or, this Passage may relate to the several Sorts of Fruit, which are produced every Month. So Onkelos interprets it, It produced also sweet Fruits at the Beginning of every Month. For the Word Jerachim in the Hebrew, being in the plural Number, signifies Moons, i. e. Months. And so the Hierusalem Targum translates it, in every new Moon, which comprehends the whole Month.

Ver. 15. And for the chief Things of the antient Mountains, and for the precious Things of the lasting Hills.] Such as Mount Ephraim, and Samaria, and Basban, which were exceeding fruitful in Grapes and Olives, and such like excellent Fruit: And called antient and lasting, because they were made together with the Earth, in the Beginning; and not Mounts cast up by the Art of Men. See Gen. xlix. 20.

Ver. 16. For the precious Things of the Earth.] This seems to relate to their arable Land, which he foretels should bring forth great Store of all Sorts of Corn.

The Word Meged, which we translate precious, is repeated five Times in these three last Verses, signifying that which in its kind is most excellent and eximious, as that great Man Ezekiel Spanhemius observes upon Callimachus's Hymn to Diana, V. 245. where mentioning several Instruments of Musick among the Greeks, whose Names came from the Hebrew, he thinks one called Μάγadis, (which was ἀρχαῖον ὄργανον, as Athenæus saith, but he could not tell whether a wind or stringed Instrument,) came from this Hebrew Word Meged, for it was not of a Greek Original. And in Cant. iv. 13. this Word is translated pleasant, as all Musick is; but that especially which was made by this Instrument Μάγadis. For Plato, who took it for a stringed Instrument, calls it πολυχordaτον, Anacreon, saying he had one of twenty Strings, as Spanhemius notes upon the Hymn in Delum, p. 472.

And Fulness thereof.] By the Fulness of the Earth, may be meant either the Plenty and Abundance of its Fruits, or the Ripeness thereof, as Bochartus observes in his Canaan.

And for the good Will of him that dwelt in the Bush.] That is, of God, whose Majesty (as Onkelos paraphrases) dwells in the Heavens, and was revealed to Moses in the Bush, Exod. iii. 2, 4. That is, the SCHECHIMAH there appeared in a most glorious Manner, and the LORD told Moses he was there present, whose good Will, which is the Fountain of all Blessings, (for so it they owed their Deliverance out of Egypt, which God then promised to Moses out of the Bush;) he wished may be the peculiar Portion of Joseph.

Let the Blessing come upon the Head of Joseph.] The Word Blessing is not in the Hebrew; but this being connected with the foregoing Words, may be thought a Prayer, that the good Will of God, the Fountain (as I said) of all Blessings, may rest upon Joseph. Or, as Onkelos translates it, Let all those Things (before named) come upon the Head of Joseph. And so the Hierusalem Targum expounds it, Let all these Blessings come, and be made perfect upon the Head of Joseph.

Upon the Top of him that was separated from his Brethren.] That is, saith the same Targum, upon him that was made Ruler over all the Land of Egypt, and splendid in the Honour given him by his Brethren. See this explained upon Gen. xlix. 26.

Ver. 17. His Glory is like the Firstling of his Bullock.] The Antients thought there was so much Majesty in the Countenance of a Bull, especially of a young Bullock in its Prime, lifting up its Head, that they made it an Emblem of kingly Power, as Bochartus hath shewn out of several good Authors, in his Hierozoicon, P. I. Lib. II. Cap. 29. And accordingly here it signifies, that the Tribe of Ephraim should have Royal Authority established in it. For he doth not compare the Person of Joseph to a young Bullock, (though he was a goodly Man, eminent for his Beauty and comely Proportions, Gen. xxxix. 6.) but the Tribes which sprang from him, as appears from the last Words of this Verse; whose Glory he here comparing to that of a young Bullock, and its Glory consisting in its Strength, the Power of the Tribes of Joseph is hereby denoted; which was so great, that they were the chief Support of the Kingdom of Israel, which began in Jeroboam, who was King of ten Tribes; after whom there followed a long Race of Kings, till the Captivity. There may be also some Respect in these Words unto Josbua, the first Governor of all the People, who was of the Tribe of Ephraim; as of Manasseh were Jair, Jephthab, and Gideon, who were famous Men among the Judges.

It is remarkable also here, that Joseph is compared to the Firstling of a Bullock, because Reuben being set aside for his Incest, Joseph had the Right of Primogeniture, in Part, translated unto him, 1 Chron. v. 1, 2. and in consequence of it, had a double Portion in the Land of Canaan.

It is to be noted likewise, that he is said to be like unto the Firstling of his Bullock, because there were not more goodly Bulls any where, than in Basban, (Amos iv. 1.) which fell to the Share of some of the Children of Manasseh, Josh. xvii. 5.

There have been some great Men, who from this Place and other Conjectures, have fancied that Joseph was worshipped in Egypt after his Death, under the Form of an Ox, by the Name of Serapis, which Bochartus hath confuted in the Book forenamed, Cap. 34.

And his Horns are like the Horns of an Unicorn.] This is a farther Description of the Power and Strength of the House of Joseph: For an Horn is every where an Emblem of mighty Power and Force, and an Unicorn (as we translate the Word Reem) is a very strong, as well as a stately Creature. But Bochartus hath alledged a great many Things to prove, that Reem is a sort of wild Goat in Arabia, as big as a Deer, and of the same Colour, which they now call Gazellas, P. I. Hierozoicon, Lib. III. Cap. 27. There were some of them sent lately to the French King by the Divan of Tripoli, which had black Horns, in Shape like those of a Goat, only they were round and pointed. But the Tallness, Strength, and Swiftneſs of this Creature, together with its fierce untameable Nature, hath made Ludolphus (who at first was of Bochart's Opinion) to conclude, upon second Thoughts, that the Reem in Scripture signifies the Rhinoceros, as the Vulgar Latin here translates the Word. See Lib. I. Commentar. in Histor. Æthiop. Cap. 10. n. 74. which seems not so well to agree with these Words of Moses; which suppose the Creature here spoken to have two Horns, (he using the plural Number,) with which the two Tribes descended from Joseph are very fitly compared. And so David mentions the Horns of the Reem, Psal. xxii. 22. But whatsoever Creature it was, Princes and great Men were wont to be compared to it, as appears from Isa. xxxiv. 7. where the Grandees (as we now speak) of Edom are called Unicorns, as in the following Words they are compared to Bullocks and Bulls.

With them he shall push the People together.] Throw down all that oppose him, particularly the Canaanites. For these (saith the Hierusalem Targum) are the great Men of the Amorites, whom Joshua, the Son of Nun, slew; who was of the Tribe of Ephraim; and the Captains which Gideon, the Son of Joash, slew, who was of the Tribe of Manasseh.

To the Ends of the Earth.] Of the Land of Canaan.

And they are the Ten-thousands of Ephraim, and they are the Thousands of Manasseh.] These Things shall be performed by the numerous Armies of Ephraim and Manasseh. Or these are the Benedictions of these two Tribes; the younger of which, he signifies, should be more powerful than the elder, according to the Prophecy of Jacob, Gen. xlviii. 19.

Ver. 18. And of Zebulun, he said, Rejoice Zebulun in thy going out.] About their Business, as the Hierusalem Targum expounds it, that is, their Merchandize; which they exercised upon the Sea of Genesaret, where they were situated, and not far from the Mediterranean; in which, he prays, they might have such good Success, as to fill their Hearts with Joy. There are those who understand this of their going out to War against their Enemies, which is the Exposition of Onkelos. And so this Phrase is often used, particularly in Gen. xiv. 8. and the Valour of this Tribe is, upon one Occasion, celebrated in Judges v. 18. But Jacob's Prophecy determines us rather to the other Sense, Gen.

xliv. 13. where he represents this Tribe as Mariners rather than Soldiers. Though it must be acknowledged, that there were great Numbers among them in David's Time, who were expert Warriors, 1 Chron. xii. 33. and that the Israelites generally were not addicted to traffick, the Sea-Coast being possessed by the Philistines and the Canaanites, save only what belonged to this Tribe.

And Issachar in thy Tents.] The same Hierusalem Targum expounds, Rejoice ye House of Issachar when ye come into your Schools: For this was a learned Tribe, at least in some Ages, as appears from 1 Chron. xii. 32. But Jacob's Prophecy rather determines us to another Sense, which is, that they should grow rich by feeding Cattle, and by Husbandry: For which their Country being very proper, they chose rather that quiet Kind of Life, than Merchandize. Though they were near Neighbours to Zebulun, and for that Reason, as well as because they were Brethren by the same Mother, are here put both together in one Benediction. This seems also best to agree with the Phrase of rejoicing in their Tents; in which they are said anciently to dwell who fed Cattle, Gen. iv. 10. And perhaps the Learning that the Children of Issachar are said to have had, (in 1 Chron. xii. 32.) which consisted in the Understanding of the Times, was nothing else but their Skill in the proper Seasons for sowing and planting, and pruning, &c. to know what Israel ought to do in the Management and Improvement of their Land; which was of great Use, especially in that Country.

Ver. 19. They shall call the People unto the Mountain.] Here Moses predicts the House of God should be set upon a Mountain; unto which, he saith, Zebulun (for the latter End of the Verse shews he speaks particularly of them) should invite the rest of their Tribes, by their Forwardness and Zeal, to go up to worship God at the three great Festivals. So the Hierusalem Targum paraphrases, Behold, the People of the House of Zebulun shall be ready to go to the Mount of the holy House of the Lord. Or by the People, perhaps, he means the Gentiles their Neighbours, whom they should endeavour to bring to the Service of the true God; which was especially fulfilled when Christ came, Matth. iv. 15, 16.

There they shall offer Sacrifices of Righteousness.] Liberal Sacrifices, out of their honest Gains by Merchandize.

For they shall suck of the Abundance of the Seas.] Import Abundance of various Commodities, and grow rich by their Traffick.

And of Treasure hid in the Sand.] This is a farther Amplification of the same Thing, relating particularly to their Importation of Gold, and Silver, and precious Stones, which are digged out of the Earth. Some think it hath respect to the rich Mines which were in this Country; but of that I can find no Proof.

Ver. 20. And of Gad, he said, Blessed be he that enlargeth Gad.] That is, blessed be God, who hath allotted to him such a large Inheritance; which he afterward also farther enlarged, as we read 1 Chron. v. 18, 19, 20.

He dwelleth as a Lion.] Lives secure and fearless, though encompassed with Enemies whom the Gadites tore in Pieces, (as it here follows,) if they offered to molest them. For this was a very warlike Tribe, as we learn from 1 Chron. xii. 8. and therefore here compared to a Lioness, (so Labi signifies,) which equals a Lion, if not exceeds him in Strength and P fierceness; as Bochartus hath observed out of good Authors, in his Hierozyicon, P. I. Lib. III. Cap. 50. And so Onkelos here translates it, He dwelleth as a Lioness. And the Hierusalem Targum puts in both, after this Manner; He remains quiet, as a Lion and a Lioness; neither is there People or Kingdom that shall stand before them.

And teareth the Arm with the Crown of the Head.] Kills the Princes with their Kings, as Onkelos truly expounds it. For by Arms are meant Men of Strength and Power; and by the Crown of the Head is properly to be understood the chief Commander, Ruler, or King. And therefore the LXX. also translate Crown of the Head by Ἀρχὴν, Prince or Supream Governor.

Ver. 21. And he provided the first Part for himself.] He first received his Portion in the Land which they conquered, as Onkelos expounds it. Which he is said here to provide for himself, because this Tribe (with Reuben, and Part of Manasseh) desired to be possessed of the Country of Sibon, which was accordingly given to them, Numb. xxxii. 1, 2, 33.

Because there, in a Portion of the Lawgiver.] Which Moses (who was their Lawgiver) gave them by God's Order; whereas the other nine Tribes and a half had theirs given them by Joshua.

Was he seated.] The Word in the Hebrew signifies bid, i. e. protected, when, going to the War in Canaan, they left their Wives, and Children, and Cattle, without any Defence, but God's Providence, according to the Promise they made to Moses, Numb. xxxii. 16, 17, &c. What the Hierusalem Targum, and Onkelos, and several of the Rabbins, even Abarbinel himself, here say, of Moses being buried in this Tribe, (which they make the Sense of these Words,) I think is no more to the Purpose, than what the Cabbalists observe upon this Place, That in the Blessing of God, the whole Alphabet is found, because Moses, our Master, (saith Baal-Hatturim,) was buried in his Territory, who observed the whole Law from Alpha to Tau, i. e. from the Beginning to the End. See Theodorick Hackspan. Cab. Judaica, n. 10.

And he came.] He speaks of this as a Thing already done, because he certainly foresaw they would perform their Engagement.

With the Heads of the People.] With the chief Commanders of the rest of the Tribes of Israel. Or, as the Words may be translated more literally, He came, the Heads of the People, i. e. the Gadites, marched in the Front, before the Children of Israel. For so was the Agreement between Moses and them, as we read in Numb. xxxii. 17. that they should go ready-armed before the Children of Israel. Of which Engagement Joshua put them in mind, when they were entering into Canaan, Josh. i. 14. and they stood to it, Ver. 16, 17.

He executed the Justice of the LORD.] Upon the seven Nations of Canaan, whom God commanded them to extirpate.

And his Judgments with Israel.] Going in the foremost of the Israelites to Battle, till the whole Country was subdued to them, Numb. xxxii. 21, 22, 29. Josh. xxii. 1, 2, 3, &c.

Ver. 22. And of Dan he said, Dan is a Lion's Whelp.] Courageous as a young Lion; so Onkelos. Which was most eminently verified in Sampson, who was of this Tribe; and whom the Spirit of the LORD began to move in the Camp of Dan, Judges xiii. 25.

He shall leap from Basban.] The Tribe of Dan had no Inheritance near Basban; but he compares them to the young Lions of that Place. For Lions haunted Mountains, (Canticles iv. 8.) and this Mountain in particular was famous for them, and bred very fierce ones; which, every one knows, leap upon their Prey, when they assault it, and fasten their Nails and their Teeth in it. So Bochart observes many antient Authors describe them, P. I. Hierozyicon, L. III. Cap. 2. p. 739. And thus did the Danites on a sudden leap from one End of Judea to another, and seized on the City of Laiſh, near to the Fountain of Jordan, calling it by the Name of Dan, as we read Judg. xviii. 29.

Ver. 23. And of Naphtali he said, O Naphtali, satisfied with Favour.] That is, with the Favour of God, which is explained in the next Words.

And full with the Blessing of the LORD.] The Word full, as Maimonides observes, signifies that which is most perfect and absolute in its Kind, More Nevoch. P. I. Cap. 19. Such was the Country of Galilee, wherein this Tribe had their Possession, which was ῥῶν τε πᾶσα, καὶ εὐχολῶς, &c. (as Josephus speaks, Lib. III. de Bello Judaico, Cap. 4.) fat throughout in all its Parts, and very fertile; planted with all Manner of Trees, inſomuch that it invited him to Husbandry, who was averse to Labour; and by that means was entirely inhabited, and had no void Space in all the Country, &c.

Possess thou the West and the South.] The same Josephus makes this Tribe to have possessed the East and the North in the upper Galilee, (Lib. V. Antiq. Cap. 1. p. 142.) which is directly contrary to what Moses here saith; therefore Bochartus (in his Hierozyicon, P. I. Lib. III. Cap. 18.) judiciously expounds these Words of Moses, not with respect to the whole Land of Canaan, but to the Danites before mentioned. For the Portion of Naphtali extended from the South of the City called Dan, or Laiſh, to the Sea of Tiberias. And so the three Chaldee Paraphraſts expound the Hebrew Word ſam (which we translate West) by the Sea of Tiberias, or Genesaret, which is the same; for the Hebrews call great Lakes by the Name of Seas. And by this Sea is not meant the Mediterranean, but the Sea of Galilee, or Tiberias, or Genesaret; for by all these Names it is called, as Mr. Selden observes in his Mare Clausum, p. 21.

Ver. 24. And of Aſher he said, Let Aſher be blessed with Children.] With a numerous and beautiful Issue.

Let

Let him be acceptable to his Brethren.] All the rest of the Israelites shall court them, for their goodly Aspect; or (as some rather think) he prophesies this Tribe should win the Favour and Affection of others, by their Affability and obliging Behaviour; for which Jacob predicts they should be famous, Gen. xlv. 21.

And let him dip his Foot in Oil.] Be planted in a rich Soil, full of Olive-Trees; which should make Oil so plentiful, that they might not only wash their Faces but their Feet in it. Onkelos translates, He shall be nourished with the Delights of Kings.

Ver. 25. Thy shoes shall be Iron and Brass.] Or, as in the Margin, Under thy Feet shall be Iron; which hath made some think these Minerals were digged out of Libanus, near to which lay the Tribe of Asser; who, according to this Exposition, trod upon a Soil full of Iron and Brass. But no Author, Bochartus saith, mentions any such Thing as the Brass of Libanus; and therefore some understand by these Expressions, the barbarous People that dwelt in Galilee of the Gentiles, who pressed the Asserites, as an Iron Shoe or Fetters do the Feet. But the Arabick here by Minal, which we translate Shoe, understands a Bolt or Bar; and renders this Passage, Thy Bolts shall be Iron and Brass; that is, as Onkelos expresses it, They shall be as strong as Iron and Brass. And so Kimchi expounding the Words of Jonathan, (who interpret it, Thy Habitation shall be as strong, &c.) saith the Meaning is, Their Country shall be as well fenced, as if it had been shut up in brazen or iron Walls; and R. Solomon to the same Purpose. See Hieroicoicon, P. II. Lib. VI. Cap. 16. But I have observed, that the same Bochartus acknowledges in his Phaleg, that Sarepta, (which the Hebrews call Zarephath, 1 Kings xvii. 9.) a City of Sidon, had its Name from the Brass and Iron which was here melted; being in great Plenty in that Country, as the Hebrews gather from this Blessing of the Tribe of Asser, (who were the Inhabitants of those Places,) Iron and Brass are under thy Shoe, as he there interprets it, Lib. IV. Cap. 34. And so a very learned Man, long before him, David Chytraeus, expounds these Words, and adds this Observation; Nam Sidon & Sarepta, quæ à metallis excoquendis nomen habet, in Tribu Asser fuerunt. For Sidon and Sarepta, which had its Name from the melting of Metals there, were in the Tribe of Asser.

And as thy Days, so shall thy Strength be.] The same Chytraeus expounds it, All the Time of their Life, they should retain the same Vigour of Body and Mind. Which seems to be the Sense of Onkelos, As the Days of thy Youth, so shall thy Strength be. And the Hierusalem Targum more expressly, Such as they were in the Days of their Youth, such they should be in their old Age. Or simply, these Words signify, That this Tribe should grow stronger and stronger; which Hottinger seems to have aimed at, when he propounded this Exposition in his Smegma Orientale, Cap. 7. As are thy Days, so are thy Riches and Wealth. Masius quite contrary upon Josh. xix. 31. interprets these Words to signify, that they should have perpetual Conflicts with the old Inhabitants of the Country. All which various Interpretations proceed from the uncertain Signification of the Hebrew Word Daba, which we render Strength.

Ver. 26. There is none like unto the God of Jeshurun.] And now, having blessed every particular Tribe, he concludes with this general Demonstration of their Happiness, that their God was not like the Gods of other Nations, but supereminent in all Perfections. And therefore they must needs be blessed, (as the same Chytraeus explains it) who had him propitious to them; as their Father, their Keeper, their Defender, Avenger, and Saviour from all their Enemies.

Who rideth upon the Heavens in thy Help.] Who commandeth in the Heavens, as well as in the Earth; and sends Help and Succour to thee, from thence, by Thunder, Lightening, and Hail-Stones; as we read he did in many Places, Psal. xviii. 8, 9, &c. lxxviii. 33, 34, 35. And as he that rides upon an Horse, turns him this Way, and that Way, as he pleaseth, (they are the Words of Maimonides in his More Nevochim, P. I. Cap. 70.) so God by his Power and Pleasure commands the Heavens; and is not fixed to them, as the Soul of them, (which was the foolish Opinion of the Zabij;) but as the Rider is far more honourable and excellent than the Beast on which he sits, and of a quite different Species from it; so God is represented by this Metaphor, (though but in a weak Manner,) as separate from the Heavens, and of a more excellent Nature, far transcending them, which are but the Instruments he uses, to fulfil his Will and Pleasure."

And in his Excellency on the Sky.] Or, as it may be translated Word for Word, And in his Magnificence, the Clouds. From whence he sends such Storms and Tempests, as demonstrate his Power.

Ver. 27. The eternal God is thy Refuge.] Or, Dwelling-Place; to whom they might always betake themselves for Safety, and never fail of it, Psal. xc. 1. In the Hebrew the Words are, The eternal God is the Habitation, or Dwelling-Place; from whence the Jews have framed this Maxim, to preserve all Men from having low Thoughts of God, as if he was contained in any Thing, God is the Place wherein the World dwells, and not the World the Place where God dwells. So Maimonides observes in the Place above named, out of Berechit Rabba.

And underneath are the everlasting Arms.] To support all those, with an unwearied Power and Care, who commit themselves unto him.

And he shall thrust out the Enemy from before thee.] As he had carried them through the Wilderness with an unwearied Care, so he promises God would expel the Canaanites, and make Room for them in their Country.

And shall say, destroy them.] Give the Israelites Power, as well as Authority, to root them out. For to say here, is as much as to do, and therefore signifies executing their Destruction.

Ver. 28. Israel, thou shalt dwell in Safety alone.] Live in Quiet and Peace, separate from all other People. Or, the divine Protection shall be sufficient for their Security. This Rasi thinks was fulfilled in the Days of Solomon, 1 Kings iv. 25. But others of them think it is still to be fulfilled.

The Fountain of Jacob.] That is, his Posterity, who flowed from him as a River from a Fountain, Isaiab xlviii. 1. li. 1. Cocceius thinks these Words should be joined to the foregoing, in this Manner, Israel shall dwell in Safety alone by the Fountain of Jacob, that is, by God. But though this may have some Countenance from the ancient Interpreters, (as I shall observe presently,) yet most go the other Way; there being the like Expression in Psal. lxxviii. 26. Bless the LORD in the Congregation, from the Fountain of Israel: Or, as it is in the Margin, Ye that be of the Fountain of Israel, i. e. are derived from him as your Father.

Shall be upon a Land of Corn and Wine, also his Heavens shall drop down Dew.] In a fruitful Country, upon which the Heavens shall drop down refreshing Dews. Onkelos paraphrases the Whole thus, Israel shall dwell securely alone, according to the Blessing wherewith Jacob's Father blessed them, in a Land of Corn, &c. And so the Hierusalem Targum, (making more express Mention of the Word Fountain,) Israel shall dwell by himself securely, from the Fountain of Benediction, wherewith Jacob blessed them, in a Land producing Wine and Oil; and the Heavens above are commanded to send Dews and Rain upon them.

Ver. 29. Happy art thou, O Israel.] He was not able farther to express their Happiness, and therefore breaks out into Admiration of it; exciting them thereby to be deeply sensible of it, and affected with it.

Who is like unto thee.] Who had the LORD for their God, as he said before, Ver. 26, &c. and iv. 7, 8.

A People saved by the LORD.] Who have been redeemed by his mighty Power. So the Hierusalem Targum, Whose Redemption (I suppose he meant out of Egypt) is from the Presence of the LORD. Who had preserved them ever since, and would still protect them, as it here follows.

This R. Isaac (in Cbissuck Emuna, P. I. Cap. 18.) saith, signifies the spiritual Blessings God bestowed on them. For true Felicity, saith he, doth not consist in Victory over Enemies, and Plenty of Corn, or such like Things, of which he had spoken before in the foregoing Verse, but in the Salvation of the Soul, of which no Nation in the World was secure, but the Jews; which made Moses, saith he, break out into these Words, O happy People, saved by the LORD. As much as to say, among all People, is there any saved like to thee? This he saith, because Christians were wont to tell them, that they fixed their Minds wholly on the corporal Felicity which their Law promised them; which made him look about to find out all that he could draw to an higher Sense. And he fixes so much upon these Words, that he repeats it again, a little after, that the Salvation here promised is everlasting. And yet his Eyes could not be opened to see, that this Salvation was to be brought to them by the MESSIAH: And that our LORD Jesus is he, whose Gospel is as full of such Promises, as their Law is of the Promises of Corn and Wine, and Oil.

The Shield of thy Help.] To defend them from all the Assaults of their Enemies. He adds this, saith the same R. Isaac, to shew that they to whom he promises spiritual Blessings, are not thereby put out of Hope of temporal; for the People that are saved by the LORD, have him also for their Shield and their Sword, as it here follows.

And who is the Sword of thy Excellency.] To cut their Enemies in Pieces, so that they should glory and boast in magnificent Victories over them. Or, as Onkelos translates it, From his Presence are all the Victories of thy valiant Men.

And thine Enemies shall be found Lyars unto thee.] Find themselves deceived in all their vain Hopes of saving themselves, or hurting the Israelites. Or, should be so afraid of them, that with feigned Stories they should court their Friendship, as the Gibeonites did. Or, more simply, should submit to them, though not heartily, yet out of Fear; as this Phrase is used, Psal. xviii. 44. lxxvi. 3. and other Places.

And thou shalt tread upon their high Places.] Upon the Necks of their Kings, as both Onkelos and the Hierusalem Targum understand it, taking Bamoth here for great Men, in high Stations. And thus Joshua did, as we read Josh. x. 21. But this Word commonly signifies, either strong Holds, or Places of idolatrous Worship; which neither their great Men, nor their Gods themselves, should be able to preserve from Ruin.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Verse 1. AND Moses went up.] Having thus declared his affectionate Concern for the Happiness of every one of them, he took his Leave of the Elders and all the People, and went up whither God had commanded him, xxxii. 49, &c.

From the Plains of Moab.] In which was their last Station before they enter'd into Canaan, Numb. xxxiii. 48, 49, 50. Where God delivered several Commands to them, Numb. xxxv. 1. xxxvi. 13. and were Moses spake to them what we read in this Book, Deut. i. 5.

Unto the Mountain of Nebo.] Which was the highest Part of the Mountain of Abarim, as appears from Numb. xxvii. 12. compared with Deut. xxxii. 49. Near to which there was a City of the same Name, Numb. xxxii. 38. Isa. xv. 2.

To the Top of Pisgah.] Which was the very Top of the Mountain Nebo. See Deut. iii. 27. Numb. xxi. 20.

That is over-against Jericho.] A famous City on the other Side of Jordan, I see no Ground to believe that the People of Israel accompanied him hither, (as Josephus tells the Story,) with with so many Tears, that Moses wept also; and having beseeched them not to take his Departure so heavily, he dismissed them together with the Elders, and remained there alone.

And the LORD.] Or, as Jonathan hath it, the WORD of the LORD, who had accompanied him with his blessed Presence through the Wilderness.

Shewed him all the Land of Gilead unto Dan.] GOD had often promised him that he should see the good Land promised to their Fathers, tho' not be permitted to enter into it, Numb. xxvi. 12. Deut. iii. 27. And now fulfils his Word, and gives him a full Prospect of it; bidding him first look Northwards, through the whole Land of Gilead, (which comprehends all that was given to the two Tribes and half on this Side Jordan, where they now were,) to the Land of Naphtali, which was in the upper Galilee, beyond the Sea of Genesaret, as far as to the utmost northern Border, which was then called Laisb, and afterwards Dan, Josua xix. 47. Judg. xviii. 28. and in latter Times Cesaræa Philippi.

The Mention of Dan, which was not the Name of this Place, till after that Tribe had conquered Laisb, in the Time of the Judges, shews, That this was not written at the same Time with the rest of this Book, no more than what we read, Ver. 5, 6, 10. of his Death and Burial, &c. (unless we suppose Moses to have given an Account of his own Death and Burial by the Spirit of Prophecy, which is not probable,) but it is most likely by Samuel, who was a Prophet, and wrote by divine Authority, what he found in the Records which were left by Josua, and others who succeeded him; who gave an Account of Moses's leaving the World, and of all that was done after, till the End of the Time of the Judges.

Ver. 2. And all Naphtali, and the Land of Ephraim and Manasseb.] Having seen the northern Parts, he bad him turn his Eyes towards the Midland Country, where Ephraim and Manasseb were situated.

And all the Land of Judab.] Which lay southerly.

Unto the utmost Sea.] By which some understand the Salt Sea, which lay on the south Border of the Land of Judab, Numb. xxxiv. 3. But then there will be no Mention of the Western Part of Canaan, which lay upon the Mediterranean or Midland Sea, which is hereby meant.

Ver. 3. And the South.] And after he had seen the South, which the Tribes of Judab and Simeon inhabited, he bad him take a View of the Eastern Parts of the Country; as it here follows.

And the Plain of the Valley of Jericho.] All the Region about Jordan, especially the lovely Plain of Jericho; which is very much celebrated by other Authors, and lay in the Tribe of Benjamin.

The City of Palm-Trees.] Which is often mentioned in Scripture; sometime without, and sometime with the Name of Jericho, Judg. i. 16. iii. 13. 2 Chron. xxviii. 15. which was so called, because a Multitude of Palm-Trees grew about it, as Strabo (as well as Josephus) testifies in his Geograph. Lib. XVI. p. 763. where he describes this Plain, as πεδιον κύκλῳ περιεχόμενον ἰσχυρῇ τιμῇ, &c. as encompassed about with Mountains, after the Manner of a Theatre, abounding with Palm-Trees, and other Garden-Trees mixed with them, for the Space of an hundred Stadia. And there was also, he observes, ὁ τῆ βασιλείας Παρδείσου, the Paradise of Balsam; which is a rare aromack Plant, like to the Turpentine-Tree, whose Juice is of great Virtue and Value, &c. From which odoriferous Plant, growing here, some think this City had the Name of Jericho, signifying sweet-smelling. So R. Judas in the Gemara of Beracoth, where he mentions this Tree, as growing about Jericho, and thence derives its Name from the Hebrew Word Reach, which signifies a Sweet-Smell. This is more probable than the Conjecture of D. Chytræus, who imagines Jericho to come from Jerec, which signifies the Moon; and in their German Language, he thinks, might be called Luneburgh.

Unto Zoar.] Which lay in the Entrance of the Salt Sea.

Ver. 4. And the LORD said unto him.] After he had shewed him the Land, the WORD of the LORD (as the Hierusalem Targum hath it) spake these Words to him which follow. And GOD having been wont to speak to Moses out of the Cloud of Glory, Josephus conceives that now he was encompassed with it, and from thence heard this Voice; which the Jews fancy was so loud, that the People heard it into the Camp. Thus at our Saviour's Transfiguration upon the holy Mount, a glorious Cloud overshadowed him, and his three Apostles, who heard the Voice say to them, This is my Beloved Son, &c. The Samaritans, as Hottinger relates in his Smegma Orientale, Cap. 8, p. 456. tell the Story thus: That Josua, Eleazar the Priest, and all the Elders accompanying him to the Mount, fell into such a Passion, when they were to take their Leave, that they could not be parted from him. Whereupon the Pillar of Fire came down, which separated them from Moses, so that they saw him no more.

This is the Land which I swear unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, saying, I will give it unto thy Seed.] Gen. xii. 7. xiii. 15. xv. 18, &c.

I have caused thee to see it with thine Eyes.] Which the LORD strengthened, it is likely, with a greater Vigour than usual, that he might take a larger Prospect, than otherwise he could have done, of this Country. Or, as some of the Jews understand it, he laid a Map of it before his Eyes, wherein every Part of it was exactly described. But that might have been done in the Plains of Moab, without going up into a Mountain; therefore the other is more reasonable, that he strengthened his visive Faculty with a greater Power, to see the whole Country in its Length and Breadth, &c. And therefore some of the Rabbins have been so wise as to put both together, as J. Bened. Carpzovius observes out of several of them, (upon Schickard's Jus Regium, Cap. 5. Theor. 16. p. 285.)

who thus speak: "GOD shewed him the whole Land, as in a Garden-Plot, forty Miles in Breadth, and as many in Length; and gave his Eyes such a Power of contemplating the whole Land, from the Beginning to the End, that he saw Hills and Dales, what was open; and what was enclosed, remote, or nigh, at one View."

But thou shalt not go over thither.] This he had often said to him: And now mentions it, that he might die in a comfortable Sense, that he had been as good as his Word to him, and consequently carry this Belief along with him into the other World, that he would make good the Oath which he swore to their Fathers, of bringing them into Canaan, and there fulfil all that he had foretold.

Ver. 5. So Moses the Servant of the LORD.] So GOD himself calls him after his Death, in the next Book, Josh. i. 2, 7. as the most eminent Minister of his, that he had hitherto employed in Israel. But the Observation of R. Becbai is not well founded, that he is not called the Servant of the LORD till after he was dead, and then admitted unto the nearest Familiarity with the divine Majesty: For though these very Words are not used, yet the LORD calls him my Servant Moses, which is the same Thing, Numb. xii. 7.

Died in the Land of Moab.] For this Country was still so called, because it antiently belonged to the Moabites, (See Numb. xxi. 26.) from whom Sibon had taken it, as Israel now had taken it from him: So that he really died in the Land of Israel.

According to the Word of the LORD.] The Hierusalem Targum expounds this very soberly, According to the Sentence of the Decree of the LORD, that is, as the LORD hath determined and declared he should, xxxii. 49, 50. And so this Phrase is commonly used in this very Book, xvii. 6, 10, 11. as well as in other Places of the Pentateuch, Numb. ix. 20. xiii. 3, &c. which will warrant this Interpretation, That Moses did not die of any Disease, nor was worn out with Age, but merely because GOD the supream Governor of all Things, so ordered it. But some of the Jews, not satisfy'd with this, have far-fetch'd Conceits concerning the Death of Moses from these Words: For because it is said he died, al pi, at the Mouth (as the Words are literally in the Hebrew) of the LORD, Maimonides himself saith, that their wise Men think, (and he seems of their Opinion,) that it signifies the LORD drew his Soul out of his Body with a Kiss. And thus died Aaron and Miriam, but none besides them. Of Aaron indeed it is expressly said he died, al pi, of the LORD, but it is not said of Miriam; and yet they will have her to have had the same Favour, that is, they died, saith he, of too much Love, from the Pleasure they had in the Thoughts of GOD; which Apprehension of GOD, conjunct with the highest Love to him, he thinks is called kissing, Cant. i. 2. Let him kiss me with the Kisses of his Mouth, More Nevochim, P. III. Cap. 51. But this is not the Meaning of the Phrase, though no doubt Moses departed this Life in a most delectable Sense and Taste of the divine Love, having no Unwillingness to die, nor being surpris'd with Death; for he knew the Time, and the Place, and the Manner of it: And as he did not die of any Disease, (as we said before,) or of old Age, or by external Force, but only by the Will and Pleasure of GOD, who took his Soul out of his Body; so he did not part with it against his Will, nor with any Fear, but with a placid Mind, and composed Spirit, committed himself to GOD, in whose Embraces (as we may speak) he expired: And this it is likely the ancient Jews meant, when they said, his Soul departed with a Kiss.

As to the Time of his Death, the Scripture doth not mention the Year, the Month, and the Day; but the Jews commonly place it in the last Month of the fortieth Year after their coming out of Egypt, called ADAR, and the seventh Day of that Month. Thus they say, in Seder Olam Rabba, Cap. 10. and in their Kalendar which they now follow; and so Patricides, in Hottinger's Smeigma Orientale, p. 457. But our great Primate of Ireland in his Annals observes, that it agrees better with the following History, to place his Death in the first Day of that Month; and Tornietus makes the same Computation, that it must be either in the latter End of the eleventh Month, or in the Beginning of the twelfth.

Ver. 6. And he buried him.] This refers to the Words foregoing, viz. the LORD, who commanded his Angels to bury him. So Epiphanius, ἐνταφίσαν οἱ ἄγγελοι, &c. Hæres. IX. p. 28. and see p. 600. Though in the Scripture active Words are very often used passively, and the Meaning may be only, that he was buried, yet there is this to be said for the other Sense, that thereupon it is thought, that the Contest arose between Michael the Archangel and the Devil, (as St. Chrysostom, Theodoret, Procopius Gazeus, and others take it,) who would not have had him buried, but opposed it, that he might administer an Occasion to the Jews to commit Idolatry; though we never find that the Jews were given to the Worship of Reliques, as our most learned Usher observes in his Annals. See there.

In a Valley in the Land of Moab, over-against Beth-Peor.] This Valley was in the Land of Sibon, King of the Amorites, (iv. 46.) who had taken it from the Moabites, as I noted before, and was now possessed by the Israelites. And Beth-Peor was a Part of the Possession of Reuben, Josh. xiii. 20. which was a Place where the Temple of Peor antiently stood; from whence it had its Name: For this Idol is not only called Baal-Peor, but simply Peor, Josh. xxii. 17. and as Beth-Baal is the Temple of Baal, so Beth-Peor is the Temple of Peor, as J. Ger. Vossius observes, de Orig. & Progr. Idol. Lib. II. Cap. 7.

Now by all these Circumstances of his Burial, it appears how frivolous that Opinion of the Jew is, mentioned in Jalkut, out of Siphri, that Moses did not really die, but was translated into Heaven, where he stands and ministers before GOD; which Conceit Josephus himself follows, Lib. IV. Antiq. Cap. 8. where he saith, That he having dismissed the Elders, who went with him to Mount Abarim, and then converſing a while with Eleazer and Joſhua, while he embraced them, νέφος αἰφνίδιον ἵκται αὐτὸν εὐθείᾳ, a Cloud on a ſudden coming upon him, he was ſnatched out of their Sight into a certain Valley: Which is not only beſide, but contrary to the Scripture, which ſaith he died, and was buried in the Valley. And yet ſome of the antient Fathers, particularly St. Ambroſe and St. Hilary, have followed this Opinion, that when Mofes is ſaid to die, it doth not ſignify the Separation of his Soul from his Body, but his Tranſlation to a better Life. See Sixtus Senenſis, in his Bibliotheca, Lib. V. Annot. 61. where he obſerves, this is not only againſt Scripture, but againſt the Senſe of almoſt all Eccleſiaſtical Writers.

But no Man knoweth of his Sepulchre unto this Day.] Theſe Words unto this Day, ſhew that this Paſſage was not written by Mofes, as Joſephus and Philo imagine, who ſay he wrote this by the Spirit of Prophecy. See Ver. 1. The Reaſon why his Body was concealed, moſt think to have been, left in future Times it ſhould become an Object of their Worſhip. So R. Levi ben Gerſon: Future Generations perhaps might have made a God of him, becauſe of the Fame of his Miracles: For do we not ſee how ſome of the Iſraelites erred, in the brazen Serpent which Mofes made? And the Heresy of the Melchizedekians ſhews this was no vain Fear, (as Hermannus Witzius obſerves, Lib. I. Miſcell. Cap. 17.) if Epiphanius may be believed, who ſaith, that in Arabia Petraea, διὰ τὰ θεομήσια θεὸν νομίζουσι, &c. They thought him to be God, becauſe of his Wonders he wrought, and worſhipped his Image. What would they have done, if they had had his very Body? which he did not deſire to be carried into Canaan, and buried among his Anceſtors, as Joſeph ordered concerning his Bones: For he underſtood, it is likely, the Mind of God to be, that, as he ſhould not go over Jordan while he was alive, ſo his Body ſhould not be carried over when he was dead; which R. Chama thinks might have proved dangerous, becauſe in the Time of their Diſtreſs, eſpecially at the Captivity of the Land,) the Children of Iſrael might have been prone to run to his Sepulchre, and beg him with Tears to pray for them, whoſe Prayers had been ſo prevalent for them in his Life-Time: For ſuch a Piece of Superſtition, it ſeems, crept in among them in latter Ages; of which ſee Wagenſeil upon the Gemara of Sota, Cap. 1. Seſſ. 52. Annot. 2.

But though no Man knew where Mofes was buried, when this was written, yet ſome Maronite Shepherds, we are told, have pretended lately (M.D.C.LV.) to find out his Tomb, with this Inſcription in Hebrew, Mofes, the Servant of the LORD. A great Stir was made about it, as the ſame Witzius obſerves out of Hornius's Hiſtoria Eccleſiaſtica. But a learned Jew, he ſaith, ſo confuted the Story, ſhewing it was another Mofes whoſe Tomb they found, that the Report preſently vaniſhed; and the learned Wagenſeil makes ſome probable Gueſſes, that it was the Tomb of Mofes Maimonides. See Annot. 6. in Gemara Sota, Cap. 1. Seſſ. 51.

But Bartoloccius in his late Bibliotheca Rabbinica, Tom. III. p. 928, &c. hath made it rather probable, that Hornius was impoſed upon by ſome Body in this Naration, there being no ſuch Author known among the Jews as R. Jakum, or Jacomus ben Gad, who, he ſaith, confuted this Tale.

Ver. 7. And was an hundred and twenty Years old when he died.] A third Part of which Time, wanting one Month, he had been employed in the Government of Iſrael, as Joſephus obſerves in the Concluſion of his Fourth Book of Antiquities.

His Eye was not dim, nor his natural Force abated.] That is, he had all the Vigour of Youth remaining, there being not ſo much as a Wrinkle in his Cheeks: So ſome of the Antients interpret the laſt Clauſe: Others, he had not loſt ſo much as a Tooth out of his Mouth. See Bochartus, in his Hieroſoicon, P. I. Lib. II. Cap. 45. p. 506. Both Onkelos and the Hieruſalem Targum refer it to the Splendor of his Countenance, which continued to the laſt. From hence it was that the Heathen, who were not wholly unacquainted with this Story, but had not a perfect Knowledge of it, imagined that Mofes was troubled to die, when he was ſo vigorous: For Trebellius Pollio, in the Life of Claudius, ſaith, that the moſt learned Mathematicians were wont to ſay, that no Man lived beyond an hundred and twenty Years: For though Mofes lived an hundred and five and twenty Years, (ſo he miſtakes,) being Dei, ut Judæorum libri loquantur, familiaris, a Man familiar with God, as the Books of the Jews tell us; yet he complaining that juvenis interiret, he died when he was young, they ſay he was told by an uncertain God, that no Man ſhould ever live longer. This Miſtake aroſe from their Miſinterpretation of thoſe Words, Gen. vi. 3. Yet his Days ſhall be an hundred and twenty Years: For Huetius well obſerves, that this incertus Deus was the true God, the Creator of Heaven and Earth; whom St. Paul ſaith they called alſo the unknown God, Demonſtr. Evang. Propoſ. 4. Cap. 1. n. 57. And I cannot but add, that this Paſſage out of Trebellius was taken Notice of above an hundred Years ago, by a learned Man I have often mentioned, David Chytraeus, to ſhew that theſe ſacred Books were not unknown to the Heathen, and that they had a Reverence for them.

Ver. 8. And the Children of Iſrael wept for Mofes in the Plains of Moab thirty Days.] The Time of Mourning for the Dead was longer or ſhorter, according to the Dignity of the Perſon. And the Jews have a Tradition which diſtinguiſhes between the Days of Weeping and Mourning; the former of which never exceeded a Month, which was the Time they wept for Mofes; the latter never laſted more than a Year, as they gather from the Example of the greateſt Doctor they ever had, R. Judah, who compoſed the Miſebna; for whom they mourned twelve Months. See Schickard, in his Jus Regium, Cap. 6. Theor. 19. and upon Gen. l. 3, 10. Numb. xx. 29.

So the Days of weeping and mourning for Moses were ended.] They lamented him compleatly thirty Days, and no longer. By which it seems, that Weeping and Mourning (whatsoever Difference was between them) were antiently of the same Length, though the Jews, in the forenamed Tradition, are pleased to make the one last longer than the other.

Now by this, and what follows in the Book of Joshua, we may certainly know the Truth of what I said (on Ver. 5.) concerning the Day on which Moses died; for if we add unto these thirty Days, which followed immediately upon it, the three Days wherein the Spies lay hid in the Mountain, Josh. ii. 22. and allow three or four Days more for their going and coming back, and then add the three Days they lay by Jordan before they passed over, Josh. iii. 2. they make just a Month and ten Days, from the first Day of the last Month, when I supposed Moses died, unto the Day they got safe over Jordan, which was the tenth Day of the first Month; whereas if we reckon as the Jews do, that Moses died on the seventh Day of the last Month, it would have been the seventeenth Day of the first Month before they got over Jordan. I observe also, that though the Talmudists generally make him to have died on the seventh Day of Adar, yet there have been some who placed it on the first; for the Medrasch Rabbah, telling the Story of Haman's casting Lots to find the best Time to do Execution on the Jews, saith he pitched upon the Month ADAR, because it had been unlucky to the Jews, by the Death of their Master Moses therein. But he did not consider, saith that Medrasch, that as Moses died on the first Day of this Month, so he was born on the same first Day.

Ver. 9. And Joshua the Son of Nun was full of the Spirit of Wisdom.] To take the Government upon him, and manage it prudently, as soon as Moses left them; which was necessary to be mentioned, that it might not be thought they wanted a Head to conduct them, as their Neighbours possibly might imagine, when the News came of Moses's Death; for as the Samaritans tell the Story, (in Hottinger's Smeigma Orientale, p. 462.) when they heard the Lamentations which the whole Congregation made for Moses, they began to rejoice, and gather their Forces together to set upon the Israelites, as wanting a Leader: But they soon found themselves mistaken, Joshua having taken the Charge of them, and being endued with his Spirit.

For Moses had laid his Hands upon him.] Whereby he committed to him the supreme Authority after his Departure, and implored the Spirit of God to qualify him for it; for Power to execute any Office among the Jews, was given by laying on of Hands, whereby they were ordained and appointed to it. And and this was a Rite of Prayer also, as many have observed, for the obtaining the Gifts of the Spirit, which were necessary for the Discharge of that Office. And though no Words of Prayer be mentioned, yet the very laying on of Hands denotes it, as our learned Dr. Outram observes from this very place, and from 1 Tim. v. 22. Lib. I. de Sacrif. Cap. 15. n. 8. Of Moses's laying on Hands upon Joshua, we read Numb. xxvii. 18, &c. And he was solemnly also, a little before Moses's Death, presented unto God, by his own Command, xxxi. of this Book, 14, &c.

And the Children of Israel bearkened unto him, and did as the LORD commanded Moses.] Obedied him as their supreme Governor, according to God's Command delivered to Moses, Numb. xxvii. 20. Deut. xxxi. 23. See Josh. i. 16, 17, &c.

Ver. 10. And there rose not a Prophet since in Israel like to Moses.] This is a plain Demonstration, that the Promise God makes by Moses, that he would raise up a Prophet like to him, Deut. xviii. 15, 19, &c. was not fulfilled either in Joshua or in Samuel, (who it is likely wrote this Chapter, as I said before,) and the best of the Jews confess, shall not be fulfilled till MESSIAH come. Thus the Author of Sepher Ikkarim, Lib. III. Cap. 20. "It cannot be, but that a Prophet shall at last arise like to Moses, or greater than he; for the King Messiah shall be as great or greater: Therefore these Words are not to be expounded, as if there should never be such a Prophet, but that in all the Time of the following Prophets, till the Cessation of Prophecy, none should arise like to Moses. But after that, there shall be one like him, or rather greater than he."

Whom the LORD knew Face to Face.] Or, as de Dieu thinks it should be translated, who knew the LORD Face to Face. This was one Preheminence of Moses above all the Prophets, that he conversed more familiarly with God than any of them did. See Numb. xii. 8. which Place explains this: For to know him Face to Face, was to speak familiarly to God, and to hear God speaking in like Manner unto him. And so the Hierusalem Targum expounds these Words; only instead of the LORD, he saith, Who knew the WORD of the LORD talking with him, and delivering to him most excellent Laws, for the good Government of his People. In which Laws he still lives, they all remaining upon Record to this Day, when the Laws of all the famous Lawgivers, whom the Gentiles honoured as Gods, are obliterated: But it must be observed, that in this wherein Moses excelled all the Prophets, our blessed Saviour far transcended him: For he was in the Bosom of the Father, John i. 18. and spake what he saw and heard, &c. Josh. iii. 11, 32.

Ver. 11. In all the Signs, and the Wonders which the LORD sent him to do.] The Hierusalem Targum hath it, Which the WORD of the LORD sent him to do in the Land of Egypt, to Pharaoh, and to all his Servants, and to all his Land. See iv. 34. vi. 22. vii. 19. In these Signs and Wonders Moses excelled all the Prophets, doing more Miracles than all that succeeded him, as Maimonides observes More Nevocim, P. II. Cap. 35. But our blessed Saviour excelled him in this, as well as them; doing more Wonders than all the Prophets put together had done, from the Beginning of the World;

World, and far greater also than theirs, John xxi. ult.

Ver. 12. And in all that mighty Hand, and in all that great Terror which Moses shewed.] As the former Verse relates to what he did in Egypt, so this hath respect unto their passing through the Red Sea, and to all that befel them in the Wilderness, both at the giving of the Law, and afterward till this Time: So the Hierusalem Targum expounds these Words, In that strong Hand, and in all those great Visions, which Moses managed. And Onkelos to the same Purpose.

In the Sight of all Israel.] In the Place forenamed Maimonides insists much upon this, that Moses wrought all his Miracles publicly, the whole Congregation being Witnesses of them. And so our Saviour commonly wrought his (till they sought to kill him) in their Synagogues, at their publick Feasts, when there was the greatest Concourse of the People of Israel: So that in this he was a Prophet like unto Moses, though infinitely superior; which some of the old Jews could not but discern, (as I observed upon Chap.

xviii.) when upon these Words of Isaiab, lii. 13. He shall be exalted, and extolled; and be very high, they thus gloss in Tanchuma, which is an antient Book among them, This is the King MESSIAS who shall be exalted above Abraham, extolled above Moses, and be very high above the Angels of the Ministry. Upon which Conradus Pellicanus thus glosses and concludes his Commentary, as I shall do mine with these Words: What is it to be above the Angels, let the Jews explain: We can understand nothing by it, but the very WORD of GOD, which was in the Beginning with GOD, and was GOD, by whom all Things were made, and without him nothing was made, viz. the LORD GOD of Hosts: To whom, in perfect Unity, GOD the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, be all Honour and Glory for ever. Amen.

Thus ends the Pentateuch, which, as our great Primate of Ireland computes, contains the History of two thousand five hundred and fifty-two Years and a Half, from the Beginning of the World to the Death of Moses.
